A Chair may be filled for a time by a man of Christian faith and spirit. Yet, if the same Chair should become vacant, it may be filled by some accomplished lecturer who would not hesitate to teach doctrines subversive of the Christian faith. Those who act as the agents of the State in appointment of instructors cannot interfere with the rights of conscience.

Dr. Williams, of Michigan, says: "Every Chair is liable at some time to be filled by a brilliant skeptic who will use his position and the influence of the State university to scatter his skeptical views; and, so long as he is in other respects a good and acceptable teacher, he will not be removed on account of his skepticism. * * Something else must be made the pretext for his removal. One such brilliant, genial, and popular professor, who is skeptical, will neutralize the efforts of a dozen Christian teachers. One man can sow more tares in a single day than a dozen men can root up in a month.

"* * A newspaper dispatch says, 'The Rectors of the Missouri State University have created a storm by inviting the Rev. Dr. —— to deliver the Baccalaureate Address to the students at the annual commencement. In his address, Dr. —— was more radical than ever, and told the students plainly that it was not necessary for them to believe in the divinity of Christ or the inspiration of the Bible. The ministers of the city, at their meeting Monday, denounced the action of the University authorities, and declared that it was time for the Christian people of the State to stop the preaching of infidelity to students.' It is not quite clear how the good brethren will remedy the evil. The State has never adopted any creed, and the Rectors have exercised only their legal authority.

"There are flourishing Young People's Christian Associations in connection with the State institutions, and they have appropriated to their use rooms in University halls. * * But if the Christian Associations are allowed the use of rooms in State buildings, it is difficult to see how the same privilege could consistently be denied to a Unitarian or Catholic club, if it should be requested. All these difficulties are encountered if the State undertakes to give religious instruction. Hence the belief that it can successfully do so appears to be unfounded."

In the Western States the Christian colleges are placed at great disadvantage by the larger material resources of State universities. But they have some compensation in being able to offer surroundings and influences and instruction with a bias for the Christian religion, which most of the State institutions there are not allowed to do.

If, in North Carolina, the State proposes not merely to provide secular instruction, but to provide it under distinctively Christian auspices, what need will there be for Christian colleges?

The late Prof. Mangum, of Chapel Hill, near the close of his elaborate and able discussion of "Church and State in their relations to education in North Carolina," wrote, referring to the several Christian colleges: "I not only grant that they are here, and here to stay, but I earnestly contend that they are needed, and will be needed, as long as certain facts, tendencies, and theories, continue as they now are."

His next paragraph, in which he suggests what he means by "facts, tendencies and theories," is entirely too long to be reproduced here.

The substance of it is a plea that more decided and practical recognition should be given to Christian instruction and influences in our State institutions. If, therefore, there is force in the arguments which have been advanced against Christian instruction and influence under the auspices of a State, the learned and pious writer of the article referred to would probably be among the first to admit that the State cannot furnish secular education in a safe way and in a satisfactory degree." For the "facts, tendencies and theories" to which he refers cannot, in the very nature of things, be eliminated without virtually transforming State institutions into Christian colleges.

None of the objections which have been advanced can be urged against religious instruction and influence in distinctively Christian colleges. They can, without cost to the State, do all the work in higher education that State institutions can do; they can do it as well; and they can do it under Christian auspices, yet without the slightest tendency to proselyting influences. If the burden of responsibility shall be thrown upon these, is it not far more likely that they will embrace in their teaching the whole range of human knowledge, than that State institutions can ever consistently do so? This has been the case in New England and in the Middle States. It is just as likely that adequate endowments will ultimately come to them as that State institutions, subject as they are to peculiar limitations, will have permanent success.

There is no greater mistake than to suppose that Christian colleges are essentially small or poor or narrow in their conceptions and aims. The colleges which form the universities at Oxford and Cambridge in England are connected with the State because the Church is established. But, almost without exception, they were founded and endowed in the name and for the sake of Christianity. And the same is true of all the great mediæval foundations of Continental Europe.

With reference to Christian colleges, Dr. W. H. Ruffner wrote, when Supt. of Pub. Instr. in Virginia, "I am persuaded, after careful examination, that the usefulness and popularity of a college are not necessarily diminished because it is controlled by a particular denominational influence. If properly managed, this simply secures an earnest and peaceful religious influence over young men under circumstances in which it is specially important that they should have it. Whilst, on the one hand, the home teaching and influence in religious matters may be sufficient for children whilst going to school at or near home; and whilst, on the other, the mature young man who goes to the university may be trusted to keep himself under wholesome influence, the immature youth who goes from home before his habits have been firmly established, needs to be placed under the guaranteed influence of the most healthful sort; and there is nothing better than the homogeneous habits and spirit of a denominational college."

It is sometimes said, as if it were a sufficient answer to every argument that could be urged, that some of the State universities are older than some of the colleges which are now endangered.

It may be worth while, as suggesting a reply, to enquire into the reasons which, in part, at least, justified the founding of these colleges. People do not make large sacrifice of time and money and labor on purely sentimental grounds. There must have been, in the opinion of the founders, real need of, and demand for, other colleges for the accomplishment of something which existing institutions were not accomplishing. What was this? There can be no question that one of the most potent reasons in the minds of the founders was due to the condition of the State institutions at and before that time. This condition, as is well known, has long since changed to a very great extent. Whether it may not prevail again, if the Christian colleges shall be destroyed or greatly weakened, is another question. The former condition was the outcome of logical consistency. The present condition, though better, is illogical and inconsistent.

The writer has in his possession material which furnished abundant proof that the condition of at least some of these institutions was so unfriendly to the formation of steady habits and Christian character as to cause Christian parents to fear to entrust their sons to their influence. The fear of being misunderstood prevents him from giving facts in detail. And it was the desire to furnish a safer environment, under distinctively religious influences, as well as to aid in the education of their ministry, that moved several of the religious denominations, during the first half of this century, to lay the foundations of many colleges in almost every part of the country.

That their work has been valuable, and their influence beneficent, no one who knows the facts can question. They have exerted a most salutary influence upon other educational institutions. It has been stated to the writer by an excellent authority that the tone of the religious life of a great Southern University was to a great extent changed for the better by the men who had graduated at several of the Christian colleges and took higher courses of study there. Now, if a State shall undertake to do all this work of higher education, is there not a possible danger of reversion to the former type? Is it likely that in any part of the country high standards of religious excellence can be maintained in State institutions when the stimulating influences of the Christian colleges shall have finally ceased to operate?

The following paragraph is from an article by the late Bishop McTyeire: "The best, if not the only moral safeguard of a State university, is the healthful existence of similar institutions under denominational patronage. Living men may recollect the bad moral atmosphere that infected certain State universities before denominational institutions arose to shame them into propriety. Infidelity, drunkenness, profanity, were no bar to a professorship; and the corrupting exploits of professors were a jest among students. When Dr. Cooper, eminent for science, was president of the South Carolina College, some of the choicest youth of the State were tainted with his infidelity. There was no alternative to a parent who feared to expose his son to that influence but to send him abroad."

This, however, is not the only way in which the Christian colleges have been useful. A few years ago, a very competent authority made some enquiries as to the comparative number of ministers educated in State and denominational institutions, and with interesting results. Having tabulated returns secured from thirty-four leading theological seminaries of the United States,—5 Baptist, 7 Congregational, 6 Episcopal, 3 Methodist, 11 Presbyterian, and 2 Unitarian—he found that they had received 69 students from 25 State universities, and 1,103 from 133 Christian colleges.

Since the above was written, a statement has appeared in The Independent (New York, Jan. 18th, 1894), which reveals even a greater disparity. President Fisher, of Indiana, has tabulated statements from the catalogues for '92-3 of the eleven largest theological seminaries in the United States. Sixty-one of the young ministers came from State universities, and one thousand and seventy seven from distinctively Christian colleges. Dr. Fisher, in seeking for the cause for this great contrast, says: "Religiously, * * the only basis upon which these institutions can be consistently administered is one that, as to instruction, makes no more distinction than does the State itself between Christian, Jew and infidel. It does not follow that they are 'godless,' but only that, by virtue of the conception of the neutrality of the State, and her functions as to religion, which we as a people have accepted, and are coming more and more to apply in all directions, in none of them can there be that positive, constant presentation of the Gospel that has always been so conspicuous in the distinctively Christian colleges of the land."

It is likely that if the means were at hand for making such a comparative statement concerning the ministers who have attended colleges, but have not continued their studies at seminaries, the contrast would be even greater. To weaken in any way the colleges which have done such a work as this for the uplifting of the people through the ministry would not, to say the very least, be best for the future of this country.

Dr. O. P. Eaches of New Jersey delivered an address in 1888 in Washington City in which he said: "Visitors to Milan must have observed that the wonderful cathedral of that city is adorned with numerous statuettes of saints; but he may not have noticed that, rising from them, are multitudes of lightning rods, designed to divert the dangerous electric current from the magnificent structure. * * We, too, have a sacred edifice, grounded in truth, and needed to shelter humanity from sin and sorrow. Storms roar about it; infidelity flashes its scorn about it, and pessimism and agnosticism hurl their bolts at its glory-crowned summit. And shall we be indifferent to its future? The portentous clouds can be harmlessly emptied of their wrath only by sound scholarship, by learning springing from religion. Such learning, like the images on Milan cathedral, will protect while it beautifies.

"What is thus true of Christianity as a whole is equally true of its parts,—of the various denominations which give it organic form and co-operative force in the world. Presbyterianism, Methodism, Episcopalianism, and the rest, cannot afford to hand over education to the tender mercies of the secular authorities. To do so were to assure the rapid growth of skepticism and materialism, and to jeopardise the existence of their own bodies. Under distinctively secular teaching there would be no cultivation of the religious nature. Conscience and the capacity for faith would alike be neglected, and there would, therefore, be but shallow and unfriendly soil for the reception of positive Christian truth."

These last expressions are strong, but are

WEDNESDAY, MAY 30, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

REWARDS NOW.

All men without distinction of race or color hope for another and a better world, ever dissatisfied with the present state. The Indian dreams of a happy-hunting ground, the inhabitants of the icy North have hopes of a land where the sunshine is never hid, the fire worshipers of the East have visions of wars beyond the skies and expect to fight under the banner of Ormuz the bright; "the Hebrew's heaven is a 'city of gold and precious stones;'" the Turk's, a harem; while Christians, trusting in the declaration of the Master: "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live,"—hope to rest in a home of absolute peace, where God is head and Christ the elder brother. We do not know much of the nature of that home; we could not say in what manner of apparel we will be clad, or in what tongue we will commune. The promise is sufficient: "there shall be no trouble there."

While thus it is manifest that all look for supreme happiness after death, it may be pointed out that there is a way to be happy on earth, although temporal happiness can in no wise be compared with that higher happiness of which we have been speaking.

We have so long looked upon human affairs as means of vanity and vexation of spirit, have anticipated, sought and made trouble, that the concensus of opinion is expressed in Burns' line, "man was made to mourn." It is not true. God made man with a higher design; and a mourning one is most probably out of accord with God. We were not created contented beings; but we are not innately hypocondriac. We can pursue happiness on earth; and to that end God is the guide.

It was not long before Christ would take leave of his disciples: when the devil had put it into Judas to betray him, and he was troubled in spirit, the Saviour said, "If ye know these things, happy are ye, if ye do them." That is just as fully a promise of temporal happiness as any we have relating to the future. And it lays all our unhappiness to our account; for there can be no reason for not knowing "these things," and if we know them and do not do them, we need not expect happiness. Does it not seem strange that with the Bible and the inviolable word of Jesus Christ, we should be at all unhappy? Can a Christian be weary and downcast when one knows the Bearer of all burdens, and the Comforter whom he sent to his own, and who is always at hand?

Yet it cannot be denied there are many unhappy people in our churches. We have gotten into the habit of expecting to be unhappy, and we consider those who do not anticipate trouble frivolous; and it is true there are few save the frivolous who do not let the future, if not the present, weigh heavily upon them. There can be but one reason for it—doubt and consequential negligence of duty. We have the source of knowledge and the promise; we need to do, —and be happy.

Many inducements are urged as motives to good actions. If one lived according to the Scriptures without future hope, his days would be more peaceful and his life would be sweeter and longer. If one worked with a hope of heaven in view, that hope should bear him through all trials. But these are not proper motives. The motive to Christian work is love for Christ; and what we gain on earth or in heaven by that work is secondary, unless we regard the matter selfishly. But because these latter are secondary is no reason why we should not strive for them. No one has longed as Paul did to be with Christ; but Paul was happy in doing the Saviour's will on earth.

Consciousness of duty thoroughly done is the key to happiness on earth. The Christian's duty is work for the Saviour, leading souls to him. And no man ever was unhappy while working thus. We should look forward to the New Jerusalem, but with the promise of God and the presence of the Spirit, we should not be unhappy here. There are rewards on earth; and they are not beyond the reach of the weakest of us. By doing our duty we may be happy; it is our duty to be happy.

We have not been speaking theoretically; nor have we pictured an ideal pathway. We have tried merely to make God's promise manifest, to point out the "straight and narrow," but by no means trackless, way. God's word has never failed the faithful. Trusting in the wholeness of that Word—and all Christians profess to trust in it—one can suffer no evil that is not alleviated by the assurance that "all things work together for good;" relying on self one must, sooner or later, cry out in the stress of burdens one cannot bear alone. How can we trace all things to an allwise and infinitely kind God and be sorrowful!

Unhappiness is the logical sequence of unfaith and undutifulness.

THE EDUCATIONAL AWAKENING.

It is manifest that our people, for so long comparatively oblivious to the advantages of a cultured citizenship and indifferent to the educational needs of our State, are awakening. We have long been of the opinion that North Carolina stands in need of only one thing—a higher and broader intelligence. We have everything else that the richest States have—and more. New England was never so blessed of nature as we are. But we have suffered for want of thorough intelligence; and that will be attained, if the present interest in education continues.

We need scarcely say that the admirable article by Dr. Taylor has had no small influence in this awakening. It has been discussed from one end of the State to the other, and won applause even in Michigan and Texas. The article concludes with this issue; but the discussion shall not.

Dr. Taylor sought to establish three propositions, either of which would justify his contention. If we are to believe competent judges, he established all three of them. We have heard of only two persons who desired to answer them, one a foeman worthy of their author's steel, the other a young man who knew no better. On the other hand, many thoughtful men have said that the article is logically invincible.

The difficulty now is to persuade the people that taking away public aid from State institutions of higher education will not cripple them. None of us desire to see them destroyed. We have just been congratulating ourselves that there had been an educational awakening. Upon this surely we would not seem to seek the lessening of the usefulness of any educational institution; and on the other hand, we shall not see the State cripple our denominational institutions unquestioned. The RECORDER was, we believe, the first paper in the State to make an earnest effort for the re establishment of the University after the war; we have not since concluded that its usefulness should be dispensed with. But we are persuaded that as it existed to great advantage for three quarters of a century without annual appropriations, it can do as well now. The demand for higher education is greater than ever. We have not as abundant means as we had before the war, but what we have is more equitably distributed; and higher education is within the reach of more young men and women than it was then. Institutions have multiplied and enlarged.

We hope our people will continue to discuss the topic of education as they have during the past few weeks; the subject is of more importance in any light than any question of purely political nature. It is close to religion, and concerns Baptists next to it. To be more intelligent is to know how to live better; and that is the end toward which our religion aims. To know more of material things is to be abler to appreciate God's abundant blessings. An ignorant man can love and fear God; but an education will bring one nearer heaven, if one is rightly instructed.

The results of this awakening will multiply. Our people will know more of our educational institutions, and they will take a larger interest in them. There will be more students in them next fall. We can not realize the importance of this subject too forcibly; we cannot contend too earnestly for our convictions upon it. It is our candid opinion that Dr. Taylor's principles carried out will upbuild and strengthen educational interests of the State—not of a sect, but of all sects, and the entire citizenship.

In former years scientists, with few exceptions, attempted to place Science and the Bible in antagonistic relations. It has been a cult—made so by Darwin—to hold that either the Bible was wrong, or scientific revelations and theories false. But at the present time there are Christian men as thorough scientists as any, who see God in every revelation. When a law of "Nature" is discovered, there are brilliant men, every whit as learned as the agnostics and infidels of former times, who are ready to say that another evidence of design in the creation of the world by an allwise Being has been revealed. Scientists are no longer characteristically biblical skeptics, but rather Christian men who are scientists are in the majority.

The significance is hopeful. It is no longer necessary that one be a skeptic to hold a chair in a great scientific institution. The greatest scholars are Christians.

All true science can be reconciled to the Scriptures; and if it were left to us, we would reconcile them without one word that would compromise the latter.

If there has been any inclination to oppose the rearing of a monument at the public expense to our Confederate soldiers, there can hardly be any now.

On the 22d inst. in the presence of a great throng—none too worthy of those whom they had gathered to honor—the cornerstone of the first North Carolina monument to those heroes, "first at the front at Bethel, last to salute the fallen flag," was laid with memorable ceremonies. The oration of the occasion by Hon. T. W. Mason can be compared favorably with classic funeral orations. It is seldom that our heroes have eulogists capable of honoring them; oratory is dead, it is said: but it lived on the 22d inst.

No one could have attended these exercises without a sense of regret that our heroes had slept so long without material testimony to the love and reverence in which we hold them; and we rejoice that this occasion has been observed, and that a monument that will remind our children of their honorable lineage, already begins to look aloft.

North Carolina is slow to action; but her sensibilities have not been lethargic. We are poor, although one of the richest sections of the land is our portion. We might have waited longer and built a more costly monument to our heroes, when we had become more wealthy; but we can never so honor them as by self sacrifice, for they sacrificed themselves. Thousands of small contributions from every part of the State are a higher testimonial than the princely gifts of those whose coffers are overflowing.

ROMAN CATHOLICS of all people who make pretension to civilization do the most blatantly foolish things. Sensible people can barely abide their rites and forms. No one who reads the Bible can reconcile their mockeries to Christianity. And yet the Roman Catholic church has some sensible people in it. True, it flourishes most in semi-barbarous countries, but it is not without very able followers in our country. In fact it is quite the fashion in some Northern cities to be a Catholic. Their splendid cathedrals attract the world-loving; and their forms are a perpetual inducement to that reputed cultured part of society, whose profession is social forms.

The latest blasphemous action of Roman Catholics is the beatification of Joan of Arc, —that young woman around whom superstition threw such a halo that armies fled before her. She will now appear in the Roman Catholic calendar amongst the saints; and true Romanists may pray to her to solicit for them in the courts of heaven. Imagine a civilized being praying in the name of the Maid of Orleans! Wherefore may she have more influence on High than any one else who has been saved? Is not every one whom God has saved through his Son a saint? Are not all Christians saints? And yet, if it were left to Catholics there would have to be great ceremonies before one could become a saint; and probably the ceremonies would not occur until we had been dead several centuries. It is another outgrowth of the "good-works" theory, which Luther destroyed for a time. The Catholic church can make a saint about as well as it can make a man. God makes both. Joan of Arc can no more save a soul than any other person can.

When will all this foolishness, all this blasphemy against God, cease? When will people cease to approve a set of ecclesiastics who have not only arrogated the rights of human beings, but have assumed God's own almighty power!

A MORE despicable body of men than a liquor dealers' association never gathered together. One will gather in our State next month. How these men can stand unabashed before respectable people is past our understanding. They cannot be human and be callous to the woe of which they are instruments.

In a recent sermon Dr. Carter took occasion to denounce an effort to establish a brewery here. Some "enterprising" men, who claim to have the interests of our good city at heart, are said to be engaged in this undertaking. They say it will add an imposing structure to our city, and will increase our population. It may do the former, but never the latter. It will take more money from our laborers than it will pay out; it will ruin more men than it gives employment to.

No Christian man, no man who has the real interest of Raleigh at heart, will aid in this movement. None are more anxious than we to have our city prosper; but we would prefer a conflagration to the establishment of a brewery.

In this connection we desire to endorse the efforts of the North Carolina Christian Advocate to effect more stringent anti-liquor laws. It is a good work. Our State cannot afford to fall behind her sisters, many of whom have taken decided steps towards ridding themselves of this agency of the devil. And we earnestly hope the matter will be brought before our next Legislature; and we hope the latter will be composed of Christian men.

THE death of Dr. Edward Bright, editor of the Examiner (New York) since 1855, removes an eminent figure from the ranks of living Baptists. He was the greatest of Baptist editors, and a great Baptist leader in the North. His services to the cause of Christ cannot be measured. The high standard of his paper, the excellent character of his work, and his able conservative leadership, have been important instruments in the upbuilding of the Baptist denomination.

Dr. Bright was born in 1808, and died May 17th, 1894. It is seldom that a man so able and useful lives and is able to work as long as this man has. It is more seldom that one lives before the public so long and dies so honored. He wrote a truth in 1885 when he said, "Surely goodness and mercy have followed me all the days of my life." He was a great man, and an able defender of the faith.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

Rev. A. C. Jenkins is assisting Bro. R. T. Vann in a series of meetings at Scotland Neck. Bro. Jenkins held a meeting here about six months ago, and the church was so pleased with his preaching that they were unanimous in their desire to have him again. We could wish to see this the case with some of our evangelistic brethren, but it is rarely so.

I stopped at

for the first time last week. Bro. Edwards is nicely fixed up in a neat parsonage. He was away, but the brethren told me he had good congregations and was pushing on with his work in a manner which characterizes his work wherever it may be. Brethren Simmons and Biggs did much to make the day pleasant as well as profitable to me.

Dr. Knight is doing a fine practice, he is on the go most of the time, yet he found an opportunity to put me over the town and helped me much in getting some subscribers for the RECORDER.

Capt. Powell, who is so well known to the travelling public for his uniform kindness to the passengers on his boat, has recently been married to Miss Pierce who for several years taught in Murfreesboro Institute. The Captain is interested in all of our denominational interests, and has clear and positive notions about how things ought to be done. He said: "At first I was not with Dr. Taylor in his position on the question of higher education, but now I see the matter in a new light altogether, and don't see how any fair minded, intelligent man can differ from the position he takes." The same is true of hundreds of others in every part of North Carolina. Those who think this matter is to "fall still-born" "reckon without their host," as time will fully show. The brethren at are not sailing anymore at "half mast." "Jack" Bryant, Dr. Cheers and Bro. E. Ludford have grown more in the last year than any three I know.

Bro. A. K. Pittman held a most successful meeting with the church recently, and some twenty additions were made. It will not be long till the work here will be self-sustaining, and helpful to other points now in need of help.

I heard very little complaint of hard times. The catch of fish has been good in this section; a great quantity of fish is now being shipped, and prices are unusually good. The lumber interest in all this section is simply immense, almost every year some new source of wealth and prosperity is shown, and any observing man who passes through this section of the State will be impressed with the splendid future which is only awaiting the development of what the Lord has so abundantly provided. People here, as elsewhere, complain much at the way things are done at the capitol of the nation. It may be they have just cause for all they say in criticism of the conduct of public affairs, but after admitting that the tariff is full of iniquity, that the panic has entailed suffering and disappointment in business, that the apparent legislation against silver has been a direct thrust at the interests of the masses, admit all of this and more besides, and they all together have not done the harm that comes daily from the dram-shops which fill the towns in all this fair land.

Think of it: a little town with scarcely 500 people in its corporation, running in full blast ten bar rooms. And the issue in the last town election was not whether they should sell whiskey, but whether the doors of the bar rooms should remain open on Sunday.

One Monday morning about 7 o'clock an explosion was heard which shook the earth for miles around. The doctors were sent for and when they reached the spot where the accident had happened, found more than a dozen men, some dead, some with arms and legs broken, others with their eyes blown out and otherwise hopelessly mangled. What was the cause of all this suffering and distress? Nothing except the owners of a large saw-mill were the owners of some liquor saloon, and on Sunday the hands were allowed to drink whiskey and Monday morning found them unfit to run the machinery and everything blown to atoms.

I never saw

when it looked so lovely as it did last week. It appeared as if fresh from the hand of the dresser. Hardly any body would fail to be impressed with the loveliness of the town, but if any one should do so the good people there will be very certain to prompt you in this particular. I think most good people love their own town and community just as much as the nature of the case will allow. Evidently there is nothing wanting on the part of the Edenton people.

It may be a question with some people where the Garden of Eden was located, but from W. D. Pruden down to the humblest fisherman would make affidavit, that to the best of their belief, here was the very spot where Adam and Eve first stepped around in their short clothes. I felt no disposition to appear on the other side of the question, and my indisposition grew as long as I remained.

Since last year a large number of the old wood houses have been burned and in their place a block of handsome brick stores have been built up. The Methodists are just completing a handsome brick church.

The largest lumber plant in the State has just been put in, and is turning out 150,000 feet of lumber per day.

Bro. White is nicely situated. I know of no preacher in the State who has a more pleasant pastorate, his people love him and seem anxious to work on all his plans for the good of the church and the cause generally. The brethren are subscribing liberally to build a new church which they estimate will cost some $10,000. The church now does not accommodate the congregations, and besides, they have no facilities for doing Sunday-school work.

Bro. White was very kind to me in my work, and as a result I put on quite a number of new subscribers to the RECORDER. With fifty subscribers to the RECORDER, a large number of prosperous business men in the church, and a host of splendid sisters who think they have the best pastor in the world why not build a new church? Whoever goes to Edenton and fails to get acquainted with Earnest Woodard will miss a sail on the bay, that is elegant beyond description. He has a new boat and is expecting to carry on her first trip to Nag's Head, Dr. Taylor, Dick Vann and other distinguished guests as may want shipping with him.

CHOWAN ASSOCIATION.

This large body of Baptists, containing more than fifty churches, and a membership of over eight hundred, met in its eighty-ninth session with the church at Shady Grove in Currituck county, May 23d—24th, 1894. This was far over on one side of the territory, yet the delegation was good, most of the churches being represented. The brethren seemed to be in fine humor, extending from one to another the most cordial greetings.

The Association was organized by re-electing Bro. E. F. Aydlett, Moderator, and as we anticipated he made the Association a most excellent officer, combining patience, fairness, promptness and impartiality in all his actions.

Many of the brethren had not before realized so sensibly the death of Bro. T. J. Riddick, till it was announced that the Association must elect a new Secretary. The minds of the brethren apparently without exception seemed to turn to Bro. L. Hofler of Gatesville, who was unanimously elected to fill this position. Bro. Hofler is the Register of Deeds for Gates county, is a most excellent business man, and his courtesy and kindly bearing made a fine impression on the Association.

The introductory sermon was preached by Rev. Josiah Elliott from the text, "For me to live is Christ." The sermon was good from first to last and showed that honest and faithful preparation which has so signally characterized Bro. Elliott in all of his work.

Sandy Cross church, which for seven years has been out of the Association, came back to the body, and was duly received by the Moderator and most heartily welcomed by all the brethren.

The report on C. B. F. Institute was read by Dr. C. S. Blackwell of Elizabeth City. The report was one of the finest to which we ever listened, and in itself was a most excellent plea for better support and more enthusiastic effort on the part of the Association in behalf of the Institute. Dr. Blackwell spoke to the report in his usually felicitous and earnest manner, and was followed by Bro. R. T. Vann, who never allows an opportunity to pass for saying a good word for Murfreesboro. A few brief statements by President Brewer closed the best discussion it has ever been our privilege to hear at any Association on the Institute.

Bro. A. W. Burfoot read the report on Periodicals, and the report was ably discussed by brethren Burfoot, Overby, T. T. and J. A. Speight and Dr. C. S. Blackwell. The RECORDER was never so highly esteemed by our brethren as it is now, and although there was not so large a crowd present as we have seen at other meetings of this body, yet we had the very best success we have ever had at the Chowan Association. For this we feel especially indebted to brethren Overby, Burfoot, Woodson (who, though himself sick and unable to be present, sent us a nice club by Bro. Hofler), W. G. Ferebee, Wood, Waff and many others who were so kind and helpful to us in our work.

Bro. Mills was present for the Orphanage. The brethren, as is always their pleasure, gave a most favorable hour for the discussion of this work. My work kept me out of the house at this hour; but if Bro. Mills did as he usually does, his speech was listened to with interest by all who heard it. We hope he did well in the collection for the Orphanage.

North Carolina Baptists will be sure to ratify the statement made in last RECORDER, attesting the faithful and efficient service of Bro. Van Deventer, the Vice President of the Foreign Board for North Carolina. His presence at the Chowan Association, and the splendid effort he made for this department of our work, was one among the many evidences he has shown of his love for and interest in this work.

The brethren regretted exceedingly to withdraw support from Miss Fannie Knight, who has been supported by this Association; but inasmuch as she has seen fit to change her plans of work, there was nothing else left for the Association to do. She is greatly loved by the churches which have heretofore supported her, and they would gladly continue this support if they could do so through the organized methods of the denomination; but not a single church, not a single individual, so far as we learned, felt any disposition to follow the plan which she proposed in a letter addressed to the Association.

The report on Ministerial Education was read by Rev. W. V. Savage. Like Brother Savage's speeches, it was strong, concise and to the point. Bro. Mitchell followed in a speech in which he heartily commended what was set out in the report, and made a special appeal for the present pressing needs of the Board. He is making a fine success of his work and he hopes soon to see the Board freed from debt and put on a cash basis for the future.

Many of the brethren expected to see Dr. Taylor, and were anxious to hear him on the subject of General Education.

There is no subject about which our people are so much interested. This has been born largely of the articles which have recently appeared from Dr. Taylor in the RECORDER on this subject.

The speeches of Brethren Vann and Durham were clear, conservative, and most convincing to every one who heard them. The house was packed to its utmost capacity. The attention of every man and woman present was riveted on the speakers from first to last.

At the close of the discussion the following resolutions were adopted by a standing vote, not a single individual voting in the negative.

"WHEREAS, Dr. C. E. Taylor has published in the BIBLICAL RECORDER a series of articles on "How far Ought a State to Undertake to Educate;" and whereas, these articles discuss questions of great and vital interest and of practical importance to all of our people, therefore be it

"Resolved, 1. That, in the opinion of the Chowan Baptist Association—representing fifty-one churches—located in Camden, Chowan, Currituck, Dare, Gates, Perquimons, Pasquotank, Tyrell and Washington counties, with a total of about eight thousand members, these articles are timely, important and wise.

"Resolved, 2. That in our opinion, the next Legislature ought to obey fully the Constitutional requirement to provide, at least, for a four months' public school in every school district in every county in the State.

"Resolved, 3. That, in our opinion, no public funds, which can be appropriated by the Legislature for education, should be appropriated other than for the public school."

The report on State Missions was read by Bro. W. P. Jordan who made a good speech on the subject. Bro. Durham had in addition to his usual power on this subject, the pleasure of stating to the Association that the State Mission Board had paid the debt which was reported at our last Convention. This was received with evident delight by the Association. The pledges of the churches were largely in excess of last year for this work; in fact, we think the churches pledged more liberally for objects than they have heretofore done.

Early Friday morning we take our leave of the brethren, with nothing remaining for the Association except the discussion on Home Missions and some routine work which was to be done by the standing committees.

Bro. J. E. White attended the Association for the first time. The brethren gave him a cordial welcome. He will preach the introductory sermon at the next meeting at Gatesville, N. C.

The program of business which Bro. T. G. Wood prepared, and which was adopted by the Association, did much to secure the prompt and rapid discharge of the business.

Bro. N. P. Stallings, the pastor of the church and the brethren who served on the committee on hospitality, deserve the thanks of the Association for their efforts to entertain all who attended the Association.

....Brethren R. H. Marsh and F. P. Hobgood of Oxford and I. L. Howard of Beren made us pleasant visits last week.

....We were glad to see Prof. J. B. Carlyle and Brother and Sister Johnson of Wake Forest in Raleigh last week.

....Prof. W. J. Ferrell of Wake Forest College delivered the address at the closing exercises of Pinnacle High School, near Winston, on the 24th. Rev. H. A. Brown preached the annual sermon.

....We would be glad to have the post-office addresses of Miss Dora Duffy and Bro. D. Clodfelter.

....Rev. J. T. Jenkins, evangelist, is preaching every night this week in Brother Hight C. Moore's Broad St. Church, Winston.

....Dr. John Mitchell stopped over at Murfreesboro to attend the commencement there on his way from the Chowan Association.

....We regret to hear that Rev. C. S. Cashwell has been quite sick, suffering with internal hemorrhoids. At last accounts he was improving.

....Rev. A. D. Hunter began a protracted meeting at the Swain Street Mission (East) Raleigh last Sunday night. The prospect is for a good meeting.

...."Cashie" church and the church at Windsor, Bro. Boone, pastor, is one and the same. A note in a recent issue would lead one to believe otherwise.

....Rev. D. P. Bridges writes from Louisville, Ky.: "I will soon be home from the Seminary and ready for work; my address will be Catawba, N. C."

....Read Bro. S. F. Conrad's appeal in this issue. He is greatly burdened, and wants to get free again. He has done a good and lasting work in his field.

....Revs. J. M. White of Apex and W. M. Sorrell of Cary and Prof. A. M. Yates of Apex were in to see us last week. Brother White reports his field in good condition.

....The Leaksville Herald says that the Baptist church at Greensboro has passed resolutions withdrawing from the Beulah Association looking to a new Association.

....Two fine congregations greeted Rev. A. M. Simms on last Sunday at the first day's service since his return from Texas. One candidate was received for baptism.

....The very sad news reached us on Monday last that that venerable servant of the Lord, Dr. Whitfield of Richmond, Va., is thought to be dying. God comfort Richmond.

....We are glad to learn that Rev. J. K. Fant, who suffered a slight stroke of paralysis recently, has so far recovered that he expects to resume his regular work immediately.

....Revs. W. F. Watson and C. W. Matthews, two Norfolk pastors from North Carolina, have been holding successful revival meetings in the latter's church, South Norfolk.

....The Sunday-school of the First Baptist church, Raleigh, have their annual picnic to-day (Wednesday) at Mebane, and will have access to the beautiful grounds of Mrs. Bingham.

....In a recent obituary notice, the date of the death of Sister China Holland was omitted, and might lead to misapprehension. She died June 29, 1890, having lived to a green old age.

....Late accounts inform us that there have been about seventy professions of religion in the First Baptist church, Asheville, in which Rev. L. G. Broughton is aiding Pastor White.

....Dr. J. J. Hall of Virginia attended the Chowan Association. It was in this section that he did his first work in the State. Many of his old friends were glad to see him among them again.

....We are glad to learn from the Atlantic Baptist that Dr. M. B. Wharton is again well. We hope he may be secured for that lecture for the First Baptist church of this city in the near future.

....The consensus of opinion of our brethren of the Southern Baptist press is that the Dallas Convention was a great meeting, and that it was quite as fortunate in what it did not do as in what it did.

....We were glad to have a pleasant visit from Bro. M. R. Shaw, and Bro. Connor of the Patron and Gleaner, and other brethren of the Northampton county delegation to the corner-stone laying last week.

....Rev. T. J. Taylor of Warrenton has been assisting Rev. W. B. Morton in a series of meetings at Louisburg. The Franklin Times says "a number were converted and much good was done in the church."

....Dr. R. S. MacArthur has been pastor of Calvary church, New York City, twenty-four years, during which time more than three thousand members have been received, and two million dollars contributed.

....Forty-five additions have been made to the Baptist church at Elizabeth City, Dr. Calvin S. Blackwell pastor, as a result of a recent revival held there, in which Rev. J. W. Daugherty of Norfolk, Va., assisted.

....Bro. J. H. Lamberth is assisting Bro. W. S. Ballard in a series of meetings at Hobgood. The brethren here have a nice comfortable building, and we hope to see the interest grow and become strong as the years go by.

....Rev. G. M. Tolson of Lancaster, S. C., says the Baptist and Reflector, has accepted a call to the Crisfield Baptist church, Maryland. Bro. Tolson is a grandson of the late Rev. Thos. Meredith, formerly editor of this paper.

....We are gratified to learn that our Baptist friends have decided to finish up some portions of the main church building, and complete the Sunday-school room and to worship in it until the completion of the main building.—Oxford Ledger.

....President Samuel D. Jones has our acknowledgments for a handsome invitation to the closing exercises—we admire that phrase—of Southwest Virginia Institute. Dr. A. E. Owen preaches the Baccalaureate sermon June 3rd, and Rev. F. C. McConnell delivers the address.

....Rev. J. A. Stradley writes us that pastor J. S. Hardaway baptized nine children of the Oxford Orphan Asylum, "and one of Oxford's best men," on the 23d, into the fellowship of Oxford Baptist church.

....A brother wrote us some weeks ago to send him some literature on the custom of "feet-washing." We have at hand an excellent tract on the subject, which we will send him with pleasure, if his name can be secured.

....Rev. L. R. Pruitt begins his work with the Olivet church, Charlotte, this week. The work done by Bro. Pruitt at Mt. Airy will last through years to come. He is capable of doing a great work in Charlotte, and we ask God's blessings on his labors there.

....That is a worthy appeal which the Morganton brethren make for their new church building in this issue. Our readers will recall that the former house was destroyed by fire; and now the Morganton people are engaged in the erection of a brick structure.

....Rev. P. S. C. Davis, who is well known in the eastern part of our State, but who is now claimed by Virginia, is pastor of five churches, serves two mission stations, and is agent for the Religious Herald and the Atlantic Baptist! What capacity he he must have!

....Rev. M. L. Kesler was in a meeting at Hope Mills, No. 2, recently with Rev. R. A. Moore. There were a number who professed conversion, and nearly all of them have united with the church. Bro. Kesler writes: "The meeting was still going on when I left."

....Dr. E. H. McCullers of St. Louis, Mo., began an extended trip to Europe on the 23d inst. Dr. McCullers, who is now a prominent physician in the State of his residence, will be remembered by many friends at Raleigh and Clayton, the latter having been his home.

....Prof. J. C. Clifford of Wakefield Academy has our thanks for a tasteful invitation to the closing exercises of Wakefield Academy, June 7th. Hon. Fred. L. Merritt of Raleigh will deliver the literary address at 7 o'clock on the evening of that date, the regular exercises by the school occurring in the morning.

....The last payment has been made on the building of the Fayetteville Street Baptist church in Raleigh. Bro. Pullen informs us that $3,500 have been paid out on this property, but the lot has not been completely paid for. Brother Pullen has also commenced the erection of a mission station at Caraleigh Mills.

....We can promise those who attend the Wake Forest commencement June 12th next something excellent in the address of Bro. F. C. McConnell of Atlanta, Ga., on Wednesday morning of commencement week. We have heard him on several occasions, and he was always the same original, earnest and magnetic speaker.

....The courtesy of a tasteful invitation to the commencement exercises of the well known Salem Female Academy, which occurred May 25th—31st, is acknowledged. There were thirty-seven graduates, this being the largest number in any institution in North Carolina this year so far as we know. Dr. Pritchard preached the baccalaureate sermon.

....The Foreign Mission Board, having concluded that it is "penny-wise and pound-foolish" to attempt to do without an Assistant Secretary, one will probably be chosen in the near future. An exchange mentions Rev. E. Y. Mullins of Maryland in connection with this position; and Rev. B. D. Gray of Alabama with the position which Bro. McConnell recently resigned.

....Rev. R. L. Patton writes May 24th: "We have just closed a meeting of fifteen days. Bro. E. F. Jones of Gastonia preached the first seven days. After he left we could get no help, but continued. We relied upon the Word attended by the Holy Spirit. God greatly blessed us. Thirty-eight were added to the church, and our membership was much revived."

....We deeply regret to hear of the very serious condition of our estimable sister, Mrs. F. F. Cohoon of Elizabeth City. At the last Baptist State Convention no one did more to make the meeting one of great pleasure than her husband and she. And now sorrow hangs over their home. May the Master of whom they are worthy servants give them his grace in this day.

....If there is an organization of Baptists in our State that is more blessed with consecrated and intelligent men than the "Old Chowan" Association, we have not heard of it. It is a very representative body; and we cast no reflection by saying so. The resolutions relative to education which were passed by this body last week are indices of a public sentiment that will make itself felt throughout the State this fall.

....There are no truer or more loyal brethren than those in the Chowan Association. They have always led in the planning as well as in the work of all important interests of the denomination. They were greatly attached to Miss Fannie Knight, their missionary to China, and the refusal of the churches to support her in her new plans for doing mission work is another evidence of the wisdom and conservatism which have made its history so full of glorious results.

....Dr. Max Krahmann, editor of the Zeitschrift fur praktische Geologie, published at Berlin, has written to the Mitchell Scientific Society at Chapel Hill for a copy of a paper by Prof. Collier Cobb on the deflective influence of the earth's rotation as shown in streams, for publication in that journal. This is a remarkably high compliment to a sterling North Carolinian and a good Baptist. It is very seldom that German scientists are persuaded that there is any science without them.

....The following highly complimentary paragraph in the Lenoir Topic regading a graduate of Wake Forest College and promising young Baptist lawyer will be read with pleasure by his many friends: "Danbury is the home of a young man who is destined to make his mark in this world. Mr. T. W. Bickett, the polished and gifted junior member of the law firm of Stack & Bickett, already ranks among the leading orators of the State. Since his sojourn at this place he has won the confidence and esteem of all our people."

....An exchange of the 24th inst. rises to ask, if the friends of denominational colleges are opposing State aid, "why not include the Agricultural College and the Normal and Industrial School?" Just such perverse ignorance on the part of newspaper publishers as prompted this paper to ask that question is one reason for the unenlightened state of many of our people. An editor is the last person on earth to talk about matters of which he knows nothing. If an editor is ignorant, and prejudiced besides, how can one expect him to elevate his readers?

....Rev. A. A. Newhall, who has been serving in Baptist work at Southern Pines for sometime past, writes us from Saratoga, where he is attending the Northern Baptist Anniversaries, to address him for the present at 21 Kilby St., Woburn, Mass., where he will reside during the coming summer. He desires also six copies of "the pamphlet on education by Dr. Taylor." Bro. Newhall first came South for his health; and while we rejoice that he is able to live in colder climes again, we hope to hear of his return to North Carolina this fall.

....No regular Baptist preacher of the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina will invite Pedobaptists to the Lord's Supper. We have heard that one preacher in the western portion of this State has disrupted his church by inviting "all Christians to communion." This would not be unusual in the North. If any one, after all that has been said on this subject for decades, thinks "close" observance of the Lord's Supper unscriptural or narrow, we can direct them to a book that will persuade them otherwise. "Close Communition," or Baptism as a Prerequisite to the Lord's Supper by Dr. J. T. Christian has settled the question to the satisfaction of thousands.

....Rev. F. H. Jones of Chatham, Va., completes the ninth year of his pastorate in Virginia this month. Since he has been at Chatham his people have erected a church edifice and bought a lot, the total cost being $9,100; and a house and lot for a parsonage has been secured. The membership of his church has increased from eighty to one hundred and forty-five; and Bro. Jones has baptized about 250 candidates into the fellowship of two country churches in addition. There are six Sunday-schools in connection with the three churches. Bro. Jones closes a personal letter as follows: "While I have not accomplished all I hoped to do, I am glad and thankful that the Master has used me to do this much." Bro. Jones will probably attend the commencement exercises of Wake Forest College, where his son, W. H., graduates this year.

Peace Institute.

The closing exercises of Peace Institute, Raleigh, N. C., of the session '93–'94, occurred on the 25th—29th inst.

The occasion was such a one as this admirable institution has become notable for. The young ladies, without exception, acquitted themselves excellently. Prof. Dinwiddie is to be congratulated on the many evidences of thorough and extensive work. We are glad to know that despite obvious disadvantages, this institution has enjoyed a fair degree of prosperity this year.

From Bro. Moore of Winston.

Dear Recorder:—We have just begun a meeting at Broad Street church. Bro. J. T. Jenkins is doing the preaching, and a fluent, forceful, faithful man he is. Prospects are good for a glorious revival and a great religious awakening. I trust we shall soon be up the Hill of Difficulty at the Porter's Lodge where we can get enchanting glimpses of the Celestial City.

Dr. Pritchard arrived here this morning to deliver a sermon to-morrow at Salem Academy commencement. He will also address the Y. M. C. A. at four o'clock, and on Monday evening speak to the young people of the First church. The Twin-City delights to honor the genial Doctor. Pray for our meeting. Faithfully yours,

HIGHT C. MOORE.

Winston, May 26, 1894.

Wake Forest for the Girls: and the Girls for Wake Forest.

I have carefully read Prof. Hobgood's article in the RECORDER, favoring the admission of women to the classes of Wake Forest College; and I write to say that I am heartily in favor of it.

By all means, let the plan be adopted and put into operation at once; and we shall very soon be relieved of all complaints about ruinous competition in higher education. At least, this is my faith—a faith which I hope may soon become fruition.

BAYLUS CADE.

Suggestion Seconded.

Dear Recorder:—I heartily second Doctor Durham's suggestion in regard to Dr. Taylor's articles on the question of State education. Truly "the man, the question and the occasion have met." I know not which to admire most in Dr. Taylor's articles—his lovely spirit, his convincing logic, or his Addisonian English. Such a masterly handling of an important question can but do good. Turn on the light.

Affectionately, C. A. WOODSON.

Brookneal, Va., April 30, 1894.

Rev. S. F. Conrad's Appeal to the Reconciliation.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—As some of you know, I have been for several years burdened with the debts resting on me for the building of the churches at Walnut Cove and Ruffin. When they were completed, there was a debt of about a thousand dollars on each, which was partly covered by subscription, a part of which has been collected and paid. I have kept the interest paid and have debts on both reduced to about $1,350. Last fall I started a special subscription list of one dollar per year for six years to pay out through a building and loan association. I have on this list sixty names. A number of these have failed to meet their subscriptions, which but makes my burden the heavier to carry. As I see that there is but one way to meet the difficulties and get released from a constant worry and trouble, I have decided to enter upon a general canvass of the State until I have raised the entire amount in arrearage. I have not allowed a mortgage to be placed upon these churches but for part of the money, am carrying the debt on my own responsibility, and part of it by security from others. Had it not been from loss to crops and the general financial depression of last year, I had hoped to have been out and ready for some other enterprise. I am sorry to be compelled to take this step, but I hope in getting a little from a great many to be able to pay out in the near future. Much that I counted as good subscriptions when these houses were built, has proven to be worthless. There are at both places good young churches with a good prospect for the future, but I have not thought it proper to burden them with debts which would but hamper and cripple their usefulness. As a missionary, I have assumed obligations before, and was able to pull through. Don't criticise but help me out, and then I think I will not get so deep in again.

Those who have promised to help me, please send it to me at your earliest convenience. In this general canvass I will aid in protracted meetings where my services may be needed. So if any should desire my assistance, they will notify some few weeks before hand.

To those brethren who have promised to aid me on my building and loan association plan, will address a personal proposition. What has been paid in, and what they will pay me, will be applied directly on the debts.

S. F. CONRAD.

A Church Burned.

Dear Brethren:—During the disastrous fire which occurred in Morganton, December 13, 1893, our church house was entirely destroyed. We are now making brick to build at once. We shall build a substantial brick house, and in a much more suitable place. Morganton's rapid growth in population, especially "common people," and the increasing interest in all our services, demand that the church be finished this summer. This we are not able to do within ourselves. We have only eighty members, and all have to work for a living. Our church and its individual members have helped to build a number of churches in North Carolina, and even now we are paying $350 to missions and the orphanage.

Who will help us? Funds can be sent to Bro. M. P. Hilderbrand, Morganton, N. C., who will acknowledge the same in the RECORDER.

This appeal was authorized by the church, April 26, 1894.

A Gracious Meeting.

Dear Recorder:—Believing our people are always rejoiced to hear of the advancement of the Lord's kingdom, it is a pleasure to write that for more than a week our church has been in the midst of a very gracious outpouring of the Spirit.

Rev. J. R. Jones of Milton, N. C., came and preached for about eight days. It was an abiding joy to sit under his faithful and loving ministry, a man approved of God, not refraining from declaring the whole counsel of God in plain and unmistakable terms, giving no uncertain sound. He fed our souls as only a faithful messenger of God could from the divine storehouse. We will ever remember his coming and faithful work among us.

On Monday night I buried eleven precious souls in baptism.

I have continued the services since Bro. Jones left last Saturday, and the Lord's blessings are still coming upon us. There were two professions last night. I will have several others to baptize at the close of our meeting.

The Divine approval seems to rest upon our cause here. We have had nearly fifty additions to our church within eight months. I am now in the last part of a four years' pastorate among the Salisbury Baptists, and perhaps there are few brethren who have greater cause for rejoicing in the advancement of the Master's cause than myself. Through Divine help we as a denomination have achieved wonderful victories upon this battlefield. "All things are possible to him that believeth." Our hope is in God.

Yours in Christ, N. S. JONES.

Salisbury, May 28, 1894.

The attention of our readers is called to the advertisement of Messrs. Kramer Bros. & Co., Elizabeth City, N. C. We know these gentlemen personally, and can assure the public that there is no more reliable firm in this or any other State. They possess special advantages for the manufacture of the goods which they offer, and we most cheerfully recommend them to our readers and to the public generally.

they at all too strong? Not a few of the friends of the State colleges understand the situation and foresee the dangers. Some, like Dr. Ely, would have the influences which are now in operation in the Christian colleges clustered in close propinquity around the State institutions. Others would convert State institutions into full fledged Christian colleges. But this cannot be done until both State and Federal Constitutions are radically changed. At every announcement of such action the friends of religious liberty may cry with amazement, "Is Saul also among the prophets?" And they believe that they have the right to demand his credentials.

Bishop Atticus G. Haygood, in Methodist Quarterly Review, July, 1893, says: "It is now settled that the church must engage in the work of education. The church school is in no sense a luxury; it is a prime necessity. The church cannot get on without it.

"The State does well if it secures the elementary education of the people. In a republican form of government the State has nothing to do with college or university education. As to higher education, whatever the State may attempt or achieve, it cannot do the work of the church. If the church should close her schools, and leave moral with religious instruction and training to the State schools, she would suffer a loss fatal to her efficiency. Education, it is now agreed, is a normal function of the church. * *

"Christian education is vital to the efficiency of the church. The State cannot give, if it tried, the educational furnishing, in training and knowledge, absolutely necessary for the work of the church. If the State gave every boy and girl a university education, the religious schools and Christian education would still be necessary to the church; so necessary that, after a few generations, if we had only State schools, we would have no church worth living and working for."

And when it is remembered that many thousands of men trained in Christian colleges have gone out into every part of the country, and into every profession and calling, can it be doubted that this is a better country to day because of the existence of these colleges? These colleges, also, have their traditions; they can point with maternal pride to hundreds, living and dead, of their alumni who have filled with honor every position of trust which a people could bestow, and they know that they have the affections of multitudes of all sorts and conditions of men. Yet their usefulness is clearly imperilled. It is not wise to wait till too late before sounding the note of warning. The tendencies are evident.

The decision must ultimately be with the people. Their will, when they shall have clearly understood the issues, and secured recognition of its expression, will be the end of complaint and controversy. But, if they shall say that is right and expedient for the State to occupy the whole field of higher as well as lower education at the present time, and that they believe that the State is competent to do so adequately, then the occupation of many of the colleges will soon be gone, and upon their portals will be written "Ichabod,—their glory is departed."

Several objections, of a general nature, have been brought to the notice of the writer. It may, perhaps, not be out of place, before concluding, to subject them to a brief examination.

First. One sometimes hears the remark made,—and made as if it were a full and final answer to all possible objections to higher education by the State, that "the cost of it is very small to the individual taxpayer."

Several rejoinders might be made.

1. The same argument was used against Madison's argument for Religious Liberty. Tax-payers were assured that the amount which they would have to pay to an "establishment" would be "moderate."

2. The principle involved is entirely independent of the amount expended. If it be right, expedient, and possible for the State to provide higher education, then "a great State like North Carolina" ought to spend far more than it does upon its young women and young men. If not right, or expedient, or possible, the State ought not to spend a single cent in this direction, even though the tax-payers do not feel the burden at all.

3. The amount expended on higher education may be small to the individual taxpayer, but in the aggregate it is enough to pay teachers to keep open at least a thousand more common schools in North Carolina for the length of time that these schools are now kept open. For the general expenses of the system are already provided for.

4. The amount may not be large now for the individual tax-payer. What guarantee is there that it will continue to be small? The tendency is toward large increase.

5. The suggestion of the Superintendent of Public Instruction to the last General Assembly that the general tax for public schools be increased ten cents on each $100 of property in order that the schools might be kept open four months, involved the same principle. This tax would have been very small in the case of each individual tax payer. Yet the legislature would not vote for this increase.

6. Granting that each citizen is required, for the present, to pay only a few cents (on an average) for the support of higher education by taxation, it is claimed that the way will still be open to each citizen to pay the same amount, if he wishes to do so, for the same purposes under the Voluntary plan.

The above considerations seem to be not without some real weight.

Second. "Inasmuch as wealthy citizens pay a large proportion of the taxes collected, ought not the State to make provision for the higher education of their sons and daughters as well as for the public school system?"

This question seems to imply a total misconception of the objects of taxation. A rich man pays no more than a poor man, in proportion to the amount of property protected by the State. The State is under no obligation to give back anything to either. A rich man may pay more for insurance for protection from fire than a poor man does. This is because he has more to protect. The company is under no obligation, if it fulfils its contract, to give back anything to either; certainly no more to one than to the other. And is it not true that, though the wealthy man pays more taxes (absolutely, not relatively) than the poor man, he does not feel it as much?

Third. "Shall, then, a great State like North Carolina refuse to give higher education to its sons and daughters?"

There is a sentimental element in this appeal which gives to it whatever of force it has. When this has been eliminated, the answer is not far to seek.

The question is not whether young men and women shall have higher education or not, but whether it shall be provided by taxation or on the Voluntary system.

North Carolina is a great State, and, if it will educate the children, is probably destined to surpass in her future greatness the wildest dreams of our imaginations. But, great or small, (for it is a matter of principle, not of magnitude,) the State is under no obligation to "give" higher education to any of its citizens.

Fourth. "But are not the views presented in this paper very radical and revolutionary?"

If by "radical" the objector means that the discussion aims to go to the root of the matter, the writer will gladly accept the term.

The "revolutionary" views are not those held by the writer, but are advanced by those who within the last few years have secured large State grants from the treasury of the State for higher education,—a thing unknown in North Carolina until after the close of the civil war. The Voluntary system in higher education is, in its very nature, the more conservative method.

Quibbling questions may, of course, be raised as to the point where common school instruction should end, and the higher education begin. The writer believes that the shrewd common sense of the people will need no assistance in meeting all such objections.

For the views advanced in this paper, which is now concluded, the writer assumes all responsibility. He has not asked, and does not desire formal endorsement from any individual, institution, political party, or Christian denomination. Truth needs no external buttresses. Error is usually already well supplied with them. If the argument in this discussion is valid, it will, sooner or later, cut its own way. If it can be shown to be unsound, it ought to fall to the ground, and the writer hopes that, in that case, it will speedily do so. His only object is to help, and not to hurt, the cause of education,—of all education in North Carolina.

As a matter of accident, this series of articles has been published in a religious newspaper. To this fact are probably due the references to "narrow denominational bigotry" which have appeared in connection with it. It may not be out of place, therefore, to express the opinion that, if the articles had appeared in a secular paper, and if the authorship were unknown, no one, from any internal evidence, could even guess what religious views or political tenets (in the partisan sense) happen to be held by the writer.

There is absolutely nothing personal in these articles. Some of the best friends whom the writer has ever had, have been connected with State institutions. And there are many others who hold similar positions whom he warmly admires, and whose friendship he would highly value. He has only sought to establish some fundamental principles, and to question the wisdom and equity of some manifest tendencies.

It would be, perhaps, too much to hope that a discussion of so wide a scope, written during hours redeemed from a very busy life, will be found entirely free from errors. An honest effort has been made to be accurate in statement and logical in inference. Very gratefully will the writer accept from any source the information or suggestion which may enable him to make a needed correction. For the number and length of the quotations which have been incorporated into this paper, no apology is needed. They present either the opinions of experts or statements of facts.

Incidental matters in this discussion may, and doubtless will be, criticised. But the writer ventures to hope that his three main contentions will prove to be true, and that they will abide the results of criticism. But if any one of them should prove untrue, the other two would still hold. And even if any two strands of the triple cord should be broken, the third, if it remains intact, will be strong enough to support the general conclusion.

This conclusion, and it is important that we should recognize its importance as, in this transition era, we are shaping the future educational policy of our State,—the conclusion is, that we should rely on voluntary beneficence for the endowment and equipment of all institutions for higher education, and that we should aim for the establishment, at the earliest possible day, by wise taxation, of a six months' public school within reach of every child in North Carolina.

The religion of Christ admits of no improvement, but there is an unlimited range of improvement in our apprehension and application of it. The morning stars were as perfect and beautiful when they first sped from God's hand as they are now, but we view them with a wider range and a fuller appreciation than our fathers did.—The Interior.

Revelation, 3: 5, 12, 21, 22.

THE REWARDS—THEIR CERTAINTY AND CONDITIONS.

1. To him that overcomes are the promises. To the angel of the church at Sardis, et al., write. I want to make a personal application of these Scriptures. To him, by the help of grace, there must be an overcoming, if he should ever be saved. To all there must be the same surmounting of all that condemns. The world of sinful influences and attractions and soul-damning errors must be overcome by us. In other words, these things must not rule our minds and hearts. The carnal appetites of the flesh must be subdued. Every wicked lust of the flesh must be checked and curbed until it loses its predominating power. The spirituality and power of the Devil has to be spurned to that extent in which his works are no longer of an abiding sweetness in our souls. But to him that overcomes are the sureties of the rewards.

2. To him, etc., will I grant; in all the strength of the legal authority of divinity, in all the inflexibility of heaven's law, and the power of the Trinity, and the world of mankind, solicited as witnesses to intensify it to us. To the overcoming one, "will I grant," &c.; and to follow out the legal thought, would say, will grant, convey, bequeath and assign, in fee simple, or forever. As it is the law to have all great conveyances witnessed, and so it ever has been, as did the patriarchs of old. So saith the Scriptures in verse 22, "He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear,' &c. We are left without one single doubt on which to stand, so far as God's part is—so sure, so unfailing are the rewards, if we overcome.

3. Shall grant to him to be clothed in white raiment, which is significant of a justified character, and the only suitable robe in which to appear before the Father—honorable and loyal garment. His name shall remain of record among the noble of heaven. Shall grant him an all important place—"a pillar in the temple of my God." Shall grant him infinite safety; "he shall go no more out." Shall grant him a significant appearance, a badge of his adoption—a "new name," and the "name of my God, and the name of the city of my God"—a recommendatory, yea, a legalizing and introductory name to all the company of the paradise of God. And that you may know all these things and heirship with me, "I grant to sit down with me in my throne." Thus read: All that hath ears to hear let him hear what sure and noble things await the finally faithful, the overcoming ones.

What rewards are here symbolized by robes, temple pillars, written in everlasting records, name of the Father, and a new name, and distinguished company and an honorable place! Let us strive to overcome.

Christ's Attitude Toward Sin.

Christ's attitude toward the sins and shams of his age was that of exposure and stern rebuke. This was the spirit and temper of his harbinger, John, and of his servants, the apostles. Shall we conclude, therefore, that every man who exposes the sins of this age, rebukes its follies, and denounces its vices, is necessarily of the spirit of Christ? One might do this from a spirit of cynicism, or for notoriety, or even for the money which the ill disposed are ready to pay to have their fellow-men ably and eloquently abused. There is a constituency which relishes the moral pommeling of humanity in the pulpit and on the platform, just as there is one that relishes the physical pommeling of it in the prize-ring; and the relish in neither case comes from a Christ-like spirit, but the very opposite. It may be that some are at this business, even in the pulpit, who follow it simply because the crowd pays for and applauds it; but their speech betrays them. In rebuking and denouncing sin and folly, neither Jesus, nor Peter nor Paul used a single word or phrase calculated to provoke the applause of the vulgar. There was no attempt at wit or humor—not a vestige of ridicule. Sin and folly were held up in no ludicrous aspect. Jesus would no more have set a crowd laughing at the moral deformity of a man than he would at his physical deformity. What would be thought of a physician who should hold up to the public gaze the halt, the lame, the blind, as proper objects of jeers and mocking? What if he should provoke the merriment of the unfeeling by pointing out the ludicrous gropings and stumblings of the blind, and by coarse and indelicate jests at the expense of the deformed? Such a man would receive general execration. But why should that spirit find more tolerance which turns to mockery and ridicule the moral deformities and frailties of men? The spirit of Christ seeks to arouse only indignation and opposition to sin—only sorrow and pity for its victim.—Christian Standard.

The Fire of Sorrow.

In this cruel fire of sorrow
Cast thy heart. Nor faint, nor wail;
Let thy hand be firm and steady,
Do not let thy spirit quail.
Wait thou till the trial passes,
Take thou then thy heart again,
For as gold is tried by fire,
So a heart is tried by pain.

TALKS WITH MOTHERS.—No. 3.

HAPPY BABYHOOD.

Every mother wants her baby to thrive, because a healthy child is a happy child. The question of how the baby shall be fed is demanding the attention, as never before, not only of the mothers in the land, but of the entire medical profession also, because it is now realized how much the health of a child can be influenced by proper nutrition during the years of babyhood. As the result of the improper feeding of the infant, the vitality of the child is impaired, and he grows up weak and puny. In these days when artificial food is being so generally resorted to for infants, the demand for a substitute for mother's milk has brought out many foods for which great claims are made. Gustav Mellin, an English chemist, was the first to discover and combine the requisite properties necessary for an artificial food, and with his discovery the rational feeding of infants commenced.

Mellin's Food is the only perfect substitute for mother's milk, and it has done more to make babies strong and healthy than anything else that has ever been invented. Mellin's Food possesses all the requisite heat and flesh producing and bone-forming constituents necessary to give a child health, vigor and vitality. Infants are exceedingly fond of it and thrive upon it when nothing else can be retained upon the stomach. If they have been weak, fretful and troublesome they become happy, healthy and active; bright eyes, rosy cheeks, firm muscles and a strong constitution are the inevitable results of using this excellent preparation. Mellin's Food, being highly nutritious and easily digested, is also perfectly adapted to the wants of invalids and convalescents.

"For Years,"

Says CARRIE E. STOCKWELL, of Chesterfield, N. H., "I was afflicted with an extremely severe pain in the lower part of the chest. The feeling was as if a ton weight was laid on a spot the size of my hand. During the attacks, the perspiration would stand in drops on my face, and it was agony for me to make sufficient effort even to whisper. They came suddenly, at any hour of the day or night, lasting from thirty minutes to half a day, leaving as suddenly; but, for several days after, I was quite prostrated and sore. Sometimes the attacks were almost daily, then less frequent. After about four years of this suffering, I was taken down with bilious typhoid fever, and when I began to recover, I had the worst attack of my old trouble I ever experienced. At the first of the fever, my mother gave me Ayer's Pills, my doctor recommending them as being better than anything he could prepare. I continued taking these Pills, and so great was the benefit derived that during nearly thirty years I have had but one attack of my former trouble, which yielded readily to the same remedy."

Ostracism.

BY B. P. ROBERTSON.

A common sin among us to-day is ostracism. The Scriptures enjoin upon all people to "be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honor preferring one another." But we try to become more and more estranged from one another in every imaginable direction. This evil manifests itself in three different spheres as follows: (1) Political ostracism; (2) social ostracism; and (3) religious ostracism. Let us consider each of these for a few minutes:

I. POLITICAL OSTRACISM.

I do not think that it is the place of a minister of the gospel to take the field as a regular politician and become intoxicated with the party spirit, and biased by the party lines, and colored with the political vices. But I do consider it to be the unbounded duty of every minister of Jesus Christ to take his stand on the moral side of every political question and to advocate that side with all the powers with which God has endowed him.

It is generally considered that every individual has a right to his own political opinions; but this liberty which our fathers have handed down to us has become very much abused. Many persons have turned this liberty into a license, and have held and propagated opinions which have proven to be detrimental to our people at large. Of course every person has a right to his own opinions; but God expects each one to hold only such opinions which accord with his will and which may result in good for the people at large.

But this liberty which our fathers have handed down to us is being denied us at the present day, and this denial has assumed a very peculiar form in modern times. In olden times people were persecuted for holding independent opinions with banishment and execution. But in these days it has stepped forth into our midst in the form of political ostracism. If you have the manhood to hold a political opinion, and you express it, those who disagree with you will cast you out of their favor and have but little to do with you and even hate you.

This manner of treatment which political parties have exercised toward each other has produced a gulf between them and many times the truth on questions of vital importance is kept hid from those who have it not. There is only one remedy for all this, and that is for all to be kind to each other and help each other. In this way every one can become open to the truth and receive the truth and comply with the truth.

II. SOCIAL OSTRACISM.

Another form of this evil may be termed social ostracism; and this is perhaps the most common among us now. This form manifests itself in four different channels which I desire to consider separately.

First, there is a form of ostracism which exists between the ignorant and the educated. Those who have been so fortunate as to be able to obtain an education have often made a blunder in the use of it; for, instead of employing it to lift up and benefit those who have no education, they have used it in such a way as to repel the ignorant from them. So then by this means they have ostracised the ignorant, and the ignorant have retaliated and ostracised the educated. So then here is a great chasm formed between the two which seems sometimes to be almost impassable, and the only remedy for this state of affairs is for them to be kindly affectioned one to another.

Second, there is another form of this evil which exists between the rich and the poor. Providence has been very good to many people in permitting them to accumulate wealth, while to others it seems that the hand that rules the world and controls the affairs of men has not deemed it best for them to possess great riches; and it appears that many of those who possess great riches have cast a cold shoulder to those who have seemingly been less fortunate in this world. This coldness toward the poor has caused them to retaliate and return the ostracism which they have received. This evil has of late years assumed the name which is known among us as the fight between capital and labor, and this controversy has increased till it is very great at the present day. So then here is fixed another great gulf between two classes of people. The only thing that can change it is that which our Lord himself has prescribed, "be kindly affectioned one to another," and why should they not be thus toward each other and stop this evil?

Third, there is still another form of this evil which exists between the high and the low in our country. I do not mean by the term "high" what is commonly called modern society. It has come to pass that the best and most cultured society of our country have forgotten their mission in the world and have run to seed on culture. Even some churches have become so much absorbed in this matter that it seems that their whole object is to become cultivated. This position which our cultivated people have assumed has virtually ostracised the low and degraded classes of people, so that they have retaliated and returned the coldness which they have received. In consequence of this an almost impassable gulf has been formed between the classes; and the only way to remove this is found in the special direction which God has given us. Let both classes strive to love each other and to benefit each other.

Fourth, there is also one other form of this evil which exists between the different races. Of course, we all admit that the Caucasian race is superior in some way and by some means to the other four races. The realization of this fact on the part of the Caucasian race has caused it to become elated over the matter, and consequently it has somewhat practically ignored the other races and ostracised them; and, as we would naturally expect, these other races, especially the Mongolian and Negro, have returned what they have been receiving, and consequently we have another breach formed between two other classes of people which seems to be enormous in our eyes. But those who are connected in this matter can bridge over it by observing the commandment of the Lord to be kind to each other and try to benefit each other. Let the Caucasian race help the others to better themselves.

III. RELIGIOUS OSTRACISM.

This form of the evil seems to be the most aggravating of all the three which I mention, and this one, like the second, appears in several different phases, which I wish to notice separately.

First, there is that form of ostracism which exists between the different religions of the world. Of course, among all the religions of the world there cannot be but one true religion. For there is only one God who had only one Son who came into the world to save only one human race. Then if this be true, all the other religions are false. But because they are false does not show that the true religion should ostracise them, yet such has been the case in many instances. The Christian religion has been shown to be the only true religion, and hence the only true religion in the world; consequently some have become elated over this and have placed themselves aloof from the other religions and practically ostracised them. So the advocates of the other religions have retaliated and turned a cold shoulder to the Christian religion. Thus the breach has become so great in times past that the true religion could not reach the advocates of the false religions and do good by leading them out of their errors. It will not hurt the true religion to be compared with the other religions in the proper way. So then the work of comparing the religions ought to continue until the true religion has been made known to all the advocates of the false religions of the world. Let the false and the true be kindly affectioned one to another, and the true religions will always prevail.

Second, there is another form of this evil which exists between the different denominations. It is utterly impossible for all the denominations to be correct on the same doctrine when each of them holds a different view from all the others on this doctrine. For instance, all the denominations cannot possibly be correct on the ordinance of baptism unless the Holy Spirit makes different impressions about the same thing, and from these differences which exist between the denominations has sprung up a coldness toward each other, and hence in many places they have entirely ostracised each other. This ostracism has caused them to study only their creed and that part of the Bible which supports their view; and hence the truth is shut out many times from many minds and hearts. Instead of this state of affairs the different denominations should be kind to each other, and help each other to find the truth as it is revealed in God's Word. Only this can bring about that final state of being of one mind, and there will soon be professed "one Lord, one faith, and one baptism."

Third, there is also another form of this evil which exists between the different congregations in the same town. Of course, every man has a right to his own opinion on religious questions. This liberty is the pride of the American people. But sometimes liberty is abused in two ways in the same locality as elsewhere. Some people will take occasion to hold erroneous opinions and lead many astray from the truth. While others will abuse you for having the manhood to hold an opinion of your own. So the different denominations will ostracise each other and build up a great wall of prejudice between them, and many persons are debarred from finding the truth. The only remedy for this is the passage which says for them to be kind to each other. If all would be kind and unprejudiced toward each other and search for the truth, it would not be long till there would be "one Lord, one faith, and one baptism." This is based on the fact that truth is mighty and will prevail.

Fourth, another form of this ostracism exists between pastor and people. The preacher's business is to preach the Word, reprove, rebuke, and exhort, and to be faithful to his charge, he must do all of these. But sometimes the faithful performance of these duties on the part of the preacher causes the people to become cold toward him and not care to hear him preach any more. Sometimes this coldness goes so far that even the children of the parents will treat the preacher with contempt. This manner of conduct is a shame on any community, and there is only one way of stopping such, and that is for the people to be kind toward the preacher who faithfully performs his duties. If the people were as faithful in hearing and heeding as the preacher is in declaring the message, there would be no more of such conduct. The influence of many servants of God is destroyed by the conduct of a few people, who always ostracise the preacher who proclaims truths which they do not wish to hear.

It seems to me that all people, instead of ostracising each other in any way, ought to be earnestly endeavoring to find the truth and to be on the right side of all questions. If they should get on the right side here and should learn the truth here, they will certainly be on that side at the end of time, and the same is true vice versa. We ought to be like one of the noble statesmen of our country who said, "I had rather be right than to be President." Let us seek to be right.

Gaffney, S. C.

Co-education and the Greenville Woman's College.

The following educational note taken from the Examiner expresses views upon the subject of co education that are soon to prevail generally throughout the South:

"For two years Georgetown College, Kentucky, has been trying the experiment of co-education, and the new policy has proved itself entirely satisfactory to all concerned. Professor Rucker writes us that while the young ladies have kept up with the young men in all college work, they give no indication of impaired health from hard study. The conservative Baptists of the South, he says, are gracefully yielding to the inevitable, and placing their daughters beside their sons in the same plane of higher education. Owing to their inability properly to endow and equip separate colleges for women on a par with those already provided for men, they are placing them in the same institutions, realizing that the problem of equal education for the two sexes must be worked out, for the present at least, upon the line of co-education."

Furman University has the honor of leading in this matter in South Carolina; South Carolina College has just recently opened its doors to women. Other institutions of higher learning will in due time follow the example of these two colleges. Some of our people are not "graciously yielding," through the South, but they are yielding, and the "grace" will come afterwards. There are few that will not submit to the inevitable. Some like to say that they do not submit even while they are submitting. But the world knows that they submit all the same.—Baptist Courier.

The words of Sir Henry Thompson, the famous medical practitioner, who wrote so long ago, are as true now as when first written: "I have long had the conviction that there is no greater cause of evil, physical, moral, and spiritual, than the use of alcoholic beverages. I do not mean by this that extreme indulgence which produces drunkenness. The habitual use of fermented liquors to an extent far short of what is necessary to produce that condition, and such as is quite common in all ranks of society, injures the body and diminishes the mental powers to an extent which, I think, few people are aware of."

For Over-Indulgence

Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Think of your head in the morning after a night's hard labor, and take Horsford's Acid Phosphate for speedy relief.

John Jarrett gives this advice to laboring men; "Workmen must stand up against the evil of intemperance. The manufacturer of intoxicating liquor represents but little of productive labor, and its consumption does nothing but clog the wheels of commerce and progress. Remove the curse of drink, and the workmen and all the people are raised to a higher level in which all men are thinkers and workers. The sequel is clear, and prohibition will do more to adjust the differences between labor and capital than all the strikes and conflicts of past years."

Hall's Hair Renewer contains the natural food and color-matter for the hair, and medicinal herbs for the scalp, curing grayness, baldness, dandruff, and scalp sores.

Nothing is essential to the success of a church social which is damaging to spiritual life. Nothing is advantageous to a church treasury which is obtained by methods that lower the dignity of the Christian name. Be consistent in all things. Guard the honor of the church, the bride of Christ. Keep the Saviour always before you. Let your deportment be such as becometh godly lives. —Michigan Advocate.

From Bro. Love in Suffolk, Va.

Dear Recorder:—My promise, while in Raleigh recently, to write something for the RECORDER has not been fulfilled because of an abundance of work and a paucity of ideas. There is one thing about which I might write much—those fifteen days of rich enjoyment in the home of Bro. Hunter and in labor for the Lord with him, and in seeing again the faces of many of the Lord's toilers in the dear old State. In all the world there are no more faithful or fraternal men than are to be found among Raleigh Baptists, including those whom God and the churches have called to be leaders of the hosts of the State.

I doubt whether there has ever been in North Carolina a more wisely planned or wisely manned work than the West End church. In the broad influence which it is to exert over the State, if is surpassed by few pastorates in North Carolina. The young men of the A. & M. College are to influence the State by close contact with her people. This church is the only one in the vicinity of the College, and has already set the moral and religious key to the institution. Few men could have so soon won such favor with those young men as Bro. Hunter has. The mutual understanding and good feeling existing is rarely seen between a preacher and college students.

The work done in the community has already pre-empted the territory which in a few years will be the center of a large West Raleigh population.

OBSCENE LITERATURE.

On a recent Sunday morning we offered to our congregation for signatures the following: "Desirous of promoting the highest moral sentiment in the community, and convinced that the Police Gazette, published by Richard K. Fox, N. Y., is a most fruitful source of vice and impurity, we the undersigned make the request of newsdealers and barbers, and all our purity-loving citizens, that they co operate with us in suppressing the further circulation in the community of this and all publications of like immoral character published by the said Fox and others." The congregation responded heartily. We then took the paper to the newsdealers and barbers and got their signatures, and now have no more of this vile literature in our town. There is no instrument of the Devil so dangerous to the purity of the young men who read it as this class of publications. By the means we have used, it can be suppressed in any town in Virginia.

BASE-BALL.

We are beginning to reap the harvest of this game "gone to seed." An umpire of our town the other day mauled the face of another young man until it was bloodshot. On Saturday in our neighboring town of Franklin, a promising young man died from the effects of a game. A few days ago in Kentucky a batter killed an umpire. A gentleman, one of the foremost business men of our town said, a few days ago, that base-ball had cost him five thousand dollars and two sons. On a North Carolina train we saw a college student, a member of the "team," board the train, and heard him in conversation with one of his professors who was on the train. The conversation was base-ball and the amount of slang poured into that professor's ears, without correction, did not, to say the least, make flattering impressions on passengers of the work done at that school. The cause of Jesus Christ will not soon be elevated by Y. M. C. A. base ball teams, and twenty five cents admission fees to see their brutal performances. What is the difference in the payment of money to see a horse race and a game of base-ball interspersed by profane contradictions, defiant gestures, occasional blows and savage howls? There is a legitimate place in college training for athletic sports, but the "match game" is a problem which requires speedy solution at the hands of those who are entrusted with the management of our religious colleges. J. F. LOVE

Commendatory Resolution.

Lee's Chapel church, in conference Saturday before the third Sunday in May, 1894, do adopt the following:

WHEREAS, Elder W. C. Nowell of Smithfield, N. C., but now of Nashville, N. C., has served us so faithfully for the past six years, and has so much endeared himself to us that we part with him reluctantly, yet we think a change may be for the best, and cheerfully submit and say the Lord's will be done, and take pleasure in recommending him to the brethren and sisters as a faithful and efficient and worthy minister of the Lord, and pray that God's blessing may rest upon him and choose for him fields of labor and give him many souls for his hire.

Resolved, That a copy of the foregoing preamble and this resolution be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication, and the same be spread on our church record.

Done in conference May 19th, 1894.

Beaufort Revival.

Dear Bro. Baileys:—It is with the highest joy that I am permitted to make to the RECORDER a good report of the meetings recently held in our town. Rev. J. T. Jenkins was with us for two weeks and did the most of the preaching.

The results are about as follows: Fifty conversions, with forty additions to the Baptist church, and several to the Methodist and Episcopal churches.

For a week prior to Bro. Jenkins' coming, Prof. Leonard trained a choir for the meeting. His music was a great help. He used the "Life Line"—a collection of songs used by Bro. Jenkins in his work. Bro. Leonard is a songster of thirty years experience, and has a wide reputation as an instructor. He well deserves it.

Bro. Jenkins preached with the Spirit and men and women by the hundreds flocked to hear the Word of Life. His denunciation of evil in all forms was keen, and yet commendable—he did not fail to tell men of their faults. Like the faithful Nathan, his words went home: "Thou art the man!"

I wish to speak a word of approval to a suggestion that has been very strongly expressed by some, and it is this: That Bro. Jenkins be supported by the Board in his evangelistic work. There is no doubt as to his fitness to fill such a position. And the question arises, do the brethren of the Board think that such a worker is needed in the State?

There are destitute places to which such a man as Bro. Jenkins could not get a support. And they need the pure gospel as much as anybody. Now, at other places to which the Lord may call him, the amount of collections taken would, if he were supported by the Board, be sent to the Board's treasury. Thus the Board would, no doubt, be called upon to bear a very light expense and could insure the best work to the places of greatest destitution.

I hope that the brethren may discuss the matter and that the Board may consider it, if they regard it worthy of their attention. It is the Lord's work that they do.

Dr. J. C. Hiden of Richmond aided his son, Rev. Jos. Hiden, in meetings at Morehead City recently. I heard favorable reports from them. Bro. Hiden will baptize two candidates next Sunday.

I find my work at Beaufort pleasant indeed. I feel like I am truly amid lovable surrounding. The Beaufort saints are very kind and appreciative.

May the work begun be kept up and carried on to the glory of God.

J. D. MOORE.

Beaufort, May 20, 1894.

A New Church Organized at Walkertown.

On Monday, May 21st, 1894, a presbytery, composed of Revs. H. A. Brown, Robert Gourley, N. J. Matthews and S. F. Conrad, met at Walkertown in Forsyth county, to consider the propriety of organizing a church at that place.

A meeting of days had recently been held by Bro. Matthews, from which he baptized five; these with two others who presented letters were duly constituted into a regular Baptist church.

The outlook here is very promising for a good work. One man proposes to head the list with a hundred dollars for a house of worship, and it is thought that the brother recently baptized will give a beautiful lot.

This point has been neglected by the Baptists for a long time and is now ready for the truth as we preach it. The Methodists have occupied this point for a hundred years or more, but there is a necessity for a Baptist church here. The baptism on Sunday last was something new to many persons and was witnessed by an audience of 600 or 800 people. It was very solemn and impressive, and I think will result in others doing likewise.

A good Sunday school of about fifty scholars has been started, and many others could be added if we only had a house with more room. S. F. CONRAD.

Children's Day.

More than last year at this time, Baptist Sunday-schools are preparing to observe Children's Day, June 10th, (second Sunday), and the prospects are that more than five thousand schools will participate. Each church ought also to make an offering directly and by itself, and aid the great and needy missionary work of the Publication Society. There are many urgent calls now and many of these cannot be met for want of funds. The needy are everywhere and the demands pressing. This is the time and the call for special effort and large contributions. Programs for this day, or some other day convenient for the schools, may be had on the usual conditions. A half million of these have been issued. Send at once to the Missionary Secretary, C. C. Bitting, 1420 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

From Morehead City.

Dear Recorder:—Though quiet, we are not asleep at Morehead City. We have struggled along stubbornly against the severest financial embarrassments the town has experienced since the late war. And in the last eight months, the Baptists here, I believe, have raised more money for Christian purposes than they have done (in the same length of time) for years. In addition to this, they are attempting what they have only suggested before, namely, to build a handsome parsonage near the church. Lately we have had four addition to the church, all of whom are very promising material.

Success to you and our paper.

Pray for us. Yours fraternally,

JOSEPH HIDEN.

A Pious Governor.

A pleasing incident was brought to my attention while on the trip to the Convention at Dallas. Some time ago a brother had occasion to see Gov. Northen of Georgia, and called at rather an early hour. A servant met him at the door in response to his touch of the bell. With his hand raised in a deprecatory way, and in a subdued tone of voice asked him to be quietly seated a little while, as the Governor was holding family prayers.

When I heard the story I could not help saying what a blessed thing it would be for our country if all our rulers were men of that sort, and if every executive mansion in the land were a house of prayer. "When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice; but when the wicked beareth rule, the people mourn." Prov. 29: 2.

HELPLESS INVALID.

"About 18 months or two years ago my wife's health gave way, and she grew steadily worse. She could not retain scarcely anything she ate and the case finally assumed the worst form of

and she became a helpless invalid at the age of 18. I had her under the treatment of a good physician, but his efforts to relieve her were of no avail. Oak Ridge Institute Commencement.

Commencement week here has just closed and with it the most successful year in the history of Oak Ridge Institute. Vast crowds of visitors have been here from all over this and other States, numbering amongst the thousands. Diplomas have been granted to twenty-six young men of the several departments.

On the 23d an able sermon was preached to the students by Rev. T. J. Ogburn. Orations were delivered by twelve representatives of the Literary Societies, and they were gems of oratory, too. The medal was awarded to A. S. Dixon of Reidsville; subject, "Public Virtue is not Declining." The contest was a close one, C. G. Sherrill of Bantistville, S. C., contesting the honors with him, his subject being "The Present Crisis."

An excellent address was delivered by Hon. G. S. Bradshaw of Asheboro. Medals were presented by Hon. Jno. R. Webster, Reidsville, who made an eloquent address. Music was furnished by the celebrated Lexington band.

The usual reception and reunion were held in the Institute buildings at night.

Corrections.

There are some typographical errors, due probably to my careless penmanship, in my article on "Co-education at Wake Forest," that made me say what I did not intend to say. "Now is there valid objection to co-education in academies that have altogether local or day patronage." Read Nor in place of Now.

"But for the purports of this article these decisions are exact," &c. Read purposes instead of purports, and divisions instead of decisions.

"It unify our educational system." Insert will.

There is an imaginary line called "Mason and Dixon's line," not "Mason's".

There are some other errors, but you have not the space for their correction.

F. P. HOBGOOD.

From Baltimore.

Dear Recorder:—Please find enclosed payment to renew my subscription, which I see with regret is now more than a month overdue. It is a good rule to pay all debts promptly, and especially to religious newspapers. If this rule should be as universally adopted as possible, the result would be better times all around. We as a denomination—and perhaps the same may be said of other denominations—do not realize how largely our prosperity is due to our religious newspapers, otherwise they would be better sustained. That the National Baptist has been obliged to suspend publication and sell out to the Examiner shows a sad lack of appreciation on the part of the thousands of Baptists in Pennsylvania and south New Jersey, who, it seems to me, ought to have made that enterprising newspaper one of the strongest financially in all the land. I am disposed to feel thankful at this time that I do not live in Philadelphia or thereabout, and also to wonder if the Baptists of that section feel as humiliated as they ought to be. And it is enough to make a Maryland Baptist a little proud to see the Baptist, our excellent one-dollar paper, riding the waves with sails all set and colors flying while the big Philadelphia ship goes under; for what a striking contrast there is in the number of Baptists in and around Philadelphia and the number in and around Baltimore! But on the other hand, right-thinking Baptists cannot help feeling shame and humiliation when any of the same faith and order are in that condition, though they may be separated by State border lines. "Whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it."

It is really too bad that you, Mr. RECORDER, and all the rest of your fraternity, so far as I see, find it necessary so continually to remind delinquent subscribers that it costs something to run a newspaper. A large majority of these subscribers profess to be Christians and loyal Baptists, and you are giving them far more than they give you even when they pay subscriptions strictly in advance. Shall we not all take for a motto the apostolic advice, "Owe no man anything, but to love one another."

My intention, Mr. RECORDER, was to give you some Baltimore items as to what Baptists are doing, but have inadvertently run too far on that newspaper line of thought to justify many more words.

The Ministers' Conference, at their meeting yesterday, voted in favor of Washington, D. C., as the place of holding the Convention next year, after brethren Mullins and Ellis had told us what they saw and heard at the Dallas meeting and what they thought of things said and done there, and of things left unsaid and undone.

In local church matters at this time, the most interesting thing to my mind is the removal of the Fuller Memorial church into another and a far better house, two blocks further north. This new church-home cost another denomination a few years ago from $35,000 to $30,000: it was recently bought in fee by our Church Extension Society for $12,000; has since been beautifully refitted and refurnished, and last Sunday was rededicated by the above-named church.

Another interesting fact in this connection is, the Patterson Avenue Baptist church (colored) has bought and taken possession of the excellent house vacated by the Fuller Memorial church. Both these moves are in the right direction and eminently wise.

Your Warrenton pastor, Rev. T. J. Taylor, was with me ten days last month in extra meetings. I thought him a good preacher all along, but he preached this time even better than I ever heard him before. We enjoyed his visit and services immensely, and he did us good. If the Lord should open to him a door of pastoral settlement in these parts, it would give me real satisfaction to have him nearer.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

Hail storms in various parts of the State did much damage last week.

In Concord, N. C., dogs are muzzled five months in the year. This is a wholesome law.

$500,000 has been appropriated for the erection of a light house at Diamond Shoals on our eastern coast.

A cotton mill will be erected near Albermarle. Quite a large amount of gold has been found in that vicinity recently.

Pendergast, the assassin of Mayor Harrison of Chicago, has secured another stay of proceedings. A final hearing will occur on the 11th of June.

The town of Gastonia is much exercised as to whether mails should be opened and distributed on Sunday. A mass meeting has been held; and sentiment is divided.

The recent General Methodist Conference at Memphis added six counties to the North Carolina Conference. They formerly were under the jurisdiction of the Virginia Methodists.

Rutherford College conferred the degree of Bachelor of Arts on two female and one male student last week. D. D. was conferred on Rev. F. H. Wood of the Methodist Conference.

Jno. Brock, charged with the murder of his wife last February, was put on trial for his life last Saturday at Wilmington. His six year old son is the principal witness against him. The jury brought in a verdict of murder in the second degree.

W. T. R. Bell, Jr., son of Capt. W. T. R. Bell, both of our State, and more recently residents of Texas, took by mistake a dose of morphine in the presence of his father last week, just on the eve of their return to North Carolina, and died from the effects. The family has every one's sympathy.

The commencement exercises of the State Normal and Industrial School were held at Greensboro last week. A great to do was made by Congressman Bryan, Senator Gordon, and Bishop Rondthaler of North Carolina, but we have not heard of the students doing anything. Aliens made a good impression on North Carolina; but what sort of impression did we make on the aliens. Commencements are more than speeches by celebrated people,—the greater part should be done by the class which is "commencing," if we know anything about it.

MARRIED.

JONES—JONES—On May 23d, 1894, near Mt. Vernon Mineral Springs, by Rev. R. R. Moore, Mr. Ensley Jones and Miss M. M. Jones.

DIED.

SMITH—Nannie J. Smith, wife of W. P. Smith, died of typhoid fever May 14th, 1894, in the thirty-third year of her age. She became a member of Jersey Baptist church about eighteen years ago, but has had her membership at Lexington for the last five years. She died in the full triumphs of the gospel faith. She was quiet, modest and unassuming. She was a pious church member, a good wife, and a fond mother, and will be sadly missed by all who knew her. She leaves a husband, two bright little boys, a widowed mother, brothers and sisters, and a large circle of friends to mourn their loss. Her body now sleeps in the grave at old Jersey church, awaiting the morning of the resurrection, while her soul is with the Saviour whom she loved and served.

THOS. CARRICK.

WHITE—Brother A. D. White departed this life May 7th, aged fifty-six years, eleven months and twenty-six days. For months he suffered more than tongue can describe. His dear wife was ever at his side, yet she never heard him murmur nor complain. But as the physical man grew weak, and the departure drew nearer, like a brave warrior his faith increased. Very often these words were uttered in a low tone, "O Lord, how long; I am only waiting for thee to call." The writer visited the home, saw the sufferings and heard the groans, but never a word of complaint was heard. As a husband, father and neighbor, Bro. White was unsurpassed. He was a true man as a citizen and as a church member. Over twenty years ago he joined Whiteville Grove church, and as a deacon performed faithfully his duty. Six years ago he, with others, took letters and organized a church, Sinai. He bore large expenses in the completion of the neat house of worship. How the church will miss this liberal-hearted man! The preachers will miss him, as his house was their home; but the kind wife and children, we can never know their loss.

Bro. White was much beloved by his neighbors. This was seen on the day of his burial. By his own request, Bro. Burfoot, a favorite of his, and the writer conducted the service in Sinai church, the house being full of brethren and friends.

He leaves a noble-hearted, true Christian wife, with four children, two sisters, two brothers, and a host of friends to mourn their loss. We pray God's blessings upon the children and their dear mother, and to bring them at last together, husband and wife, father and children, where parting will never come.

Tributes of Respect.

WHEREAS, The angel of death, executing the commands of an Allwise God, has made inroads into four of the homes of Tyson's Creek Baptist church, and claimed for its victims Mahala Hilliard, wife of Deacon William Hilliard, Elizabeth J. Kidd, wife of J. H. Kidd, Josephine Phillips, wife of A. R. Phillips, and Malinda A. Moon, wife of Presley Moon, who all were worthy members of said church; therefore be it Resolved 1. That the church sustains a great loss in the death of these four sisters, and that we strive to emulate the Christian examples of our departed sisters so as to be ready for the summons when it comes to us.

2. That while we deeply feel and mourn the loss of each one of these, our sisters, we bow with humble submission to the will of him who doeth all things well, believing our loss is their eternal gain.

3. That our heartfelt sympathies are hereby extended to the bereaved families, and we commend to them the promises of him who is a strong hold in the day of trouble, and that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our church record, a copy sent to each one of the families, and also a copy sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

WHEREAS, God in his providence saw fit to remove from our midst on Feb. 19th, 1894, Bro. A. L. Phillips, in the twentieth year of his age, a consistent member of Tyson's Creek Baptist church and Sunday-school, be it, therefore,

Resolved by the Sunday-school 1. That we mourn his seemingly untimely death, and that we hold in grateful remembrance his example as worthy of imitation.

2. That we hereby tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family, and especially to the afflicted mother in this deep and sore trouble, and while we with them do mourn the loss of one who had by a Christian and upright character won our love and esteem, we bow with humble submission to the will of him who does all things well, and hope so great a loss may be sanctified to our spiritual growth.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our church record, one be sent to the bereaved family as a token of our esteem, and also one sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

"Luck."

The boy who's always wishing
That this or that might be,
But never tries his mettle,
Is the boy that's bound to see
His plans all come to failure,
His hopes end in defeat,
For that's what comes when wishing
And working fail to meet.

The boy who wishes this thing
Or that thing with a will
That spurs him on to action,
And keeps him trying still
When efforts meet with failure,
Will some day surely win,
For he works out what he wishes,
And that's where "luck" comes in!

The "luck" that I believe in
Is that which comes with work,
And no one ever finds it
Who's content to wish and shirk.
The men the world calls "lucky"
Will tell you, every one,
That success comes not by wishing,
But by hard work, bravely done.
—Congregationalist.

A Test of Character.

The use which one makes of money is a touch-stone of character. On this point Dr. J. H. Worcester remarks in his book on "The Power and Weakness of Money:"

"Tell me how a man spends his money, and I will tell you what the man is. Is he a miser, is he a sensualist, is he controlled by his domestic affections, is the love of display his ruling passion, is he a worshiper of art, is he a philanthropist, a reformer, is his soul on fire with the love of Christ! His cash book, if only it be truthful and minute enough, will tell the story. Money is simply opportunity, and character is always shown by the use of opportunity. Money is raw material for any fabric at the pleasure of the owner. In the things to which he converts it he reveals himself, as the sculptor reveals himself in the shapes he impresses upon the plastic clay.

"We sometimes test our children at Christmas time by a present of money in lieu of other gifts, watching to see what they will do with it, and, according as it goes for candy or for books or for tools or to the savings-bank or to the mission-box, we not only forecast their future, but regulate our own subsequent liberality to them, trusting them with more or less as they thus reveal their fitness or unfitness to be trusted. And do we never reflect that this is precisely what our heavenly Father is doing with us—trying us with a little of the unrighteous that we may show whether we are fit to receive the true riches?"—Anonymous.

An Elephant's Good Sense.

In India domesticated elephants are usually given drink from large wooden troughs filled with well water by means of a pump, and it is commonly an elephant that fills this trough. Every morning he goes regularly to his task. While visiting a friend at his fine residence in India, a correspondent of a paper saw a large elephant engaged in pumping such a trough full of water. He continues: "In passing I noticed that one of the two tree trunks which supported the trough at each end had rolled from its place, so that the trough, still elevated at one extremity, would begin to empty as soon as the water reached the level of the top at the other end, which lay on the ground. I stopped to see if the animal would discover anything wrong. Soon the water began to run off at the end which had lost its support. The animal showed signs of perplexity when he saw this, but as the end near him lacked much of being full, he continued to pump. Finally, seeing that the water continued to pass off, he left the pump handle and began to consider the phenomenon. He seemed to find it difficult to explain. Three times he turned to his pumping, and three times he examined the trough.

"I was an absorbed looker on, impatient to see what would be done. Soon a lively flapping of the ears indicated the dawning of light. He went and smelled the tree-trunk, which had rolled under the trough. I thought for a moment that he was going to put it in its place again. But it was not, as I soon understood, the end that ran over that disturbed his mind, but the end which he found it impossible to fill. Raising the trough, which he then allowed to rest for an instant on one of his huge feet, he rolled away the second supporting log with his trunk, and then set the trough down, so that it rested at both ends on the ground. He then returned to the pump and completed his task."—Baltimorean.

A Good Wife.

A good wife is to a man, wisdom, strength and courage; a bad one is confusion, weakness and despair. No condition is hopeless to a man where the wife possesses firmness, decision and economy. There is no outward propriety which can counteract indolence, extravagance and folly at home. No spirit can long endure bad influence. Man is strong but his heart is not adamant. He needs a tranquil mind, and especially if he is an intelligent man with a whole head, he needs its moral force in the conflict of life. To recover his composure, home must be a place of peace and comfort. There his soul soul renews its strength and goes forth with renewed vigor to encounter the labor and trouble of life. But if at home he finds no rest, and is there met with bad temper, jealousy and gloom, or assailed with complaints and censure, hope vanishes and he sinks into despair.—Exchange.

Faithful Rex.

THE TWO LITTLE GIRLS HE WATCHED OVER ARE AT REST IN FOREST HILLS.

The Prince school on Newbury street has lost a strange visitor.

During last fall and winter a regular caller was a big bull terrier, which appeared at the school every morning, escorting two little children.

Not content with seeing the children in the school yard, Rex would follow them into the school building and down to their very seats; then he would turn gravely round and march out again, with a pace as dignified as a drum major's. When it was time for the closing of the school for the day he would again be on hand to escort his charges back to their home.

This attention he continued day after day, and seemed to find the task a pleasure instead of a burden. It all came to an end, however, shortly after the new year. Rex is the property of Mr. S. A. Wetmore, city editor of the Herald, and the two children to whom he played escort duty were Mr. Wetmore's little daughters, Florence and Edith.

In the latter part of January Florence died, and the daily tramps to the school were interrupted. Curious to relate, the dog never would go near the place afterward. He seemed to be affected with a grief almost human for his little playmate, and now his loneliness has increased more than ever because his remaining companion has been taken from him.

Little Edith died last Monday night. She was buried on Thursday from her home, 140 Massachusetts Avenue, and laid beside her little sisters at Forest Hills. This was the only child left in the family, two others having died within a year. Mr. and Mrs. Wetmore have the heartfelt sympathy of a host of friends in this especially sad bereavement.—Our Dumb Animals.

The Future American Farm.

The so called bonanza wheat farms of the Northwest and the big farms of the California valleys grew out of the transient conditions that no longer prevail—the California farms out of the old Spanish land grants, and the Minnesota and Dakota farms out of the congressional grants to railroads, says Mr. E. S. Smalley in the Forum. The history of the Northwestern big farms is that the land was purchased from the railroad companies with depreciated stock, and cost originally about one dollar per acre. The low price of wheat and the higher price of land have changed the whole aspect of large farming. There is no bonanza in the farm now; it makes but a moderate profit on the capital it represents in average crop years, and with a bad crop it barely pays running expenses. It requires as careful management as a factory. I believe that we are in a transition period in agriculture. The influence of machinery has been fully exerted. There are no more fertile lands on the globe to be conqured by civilization and to increase the food supply. With growth of population will come better prices for farm products. Farm life will become more attractive. The tendency to large farms will be checked. A hundred acres, even with exclusive grain farming, will afford a good living to a family. Better times for American agriculture are not far off.

A Sympathetic Boy.

Young Hopeful.—"Papa, it worries me to think how much trouble I give mamma."

Papa.—"She hasn't complained."

"No she's real patient. But she often sends me to the store for things, and the store is a good ways off sometimes, and I know she gets most sick waitin' when she's in a hurry."

"Not often, I guess."

"Oh, she's most always in a hurry. She gets everything all ready for bread, an' finds at the last minute she hasn't any yeast; or she gets a pudding all fixed, and finds she hasn't any nutmegs or something; an' then she's in an awful stew 'cause the oven is all ready, an' maybe company coming'; and I can't run a very long distance, you know, and I feel awful sorry for poor mamma."

"Humph! Well, what can we do about it?"

"I was thinking you might get me a bicycle."—Selected

A Skeleton in the Closet.

How often do we hear of this in domestic life at this day. But what is more appalling than the living body made repulsive with scrofulous sores and swellings. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the positive cure for all of these diseases. If taken in time, it also cures lung scrofula, commonly known as pulmonary consumption. By druggists.

Keyser, N. C.

Dr. R. V. Pierce: Dear Sir:—When about three years old I was taken with mumps, also had fever, finally I had that dreaded disease scrofula. The most eminent physians in this section treated me to no avail. I had running scrofulous sores on left side of neck and face. I was small and weakly when eight or nine years old, and in fact was nearly a skeleton. Six bottles of Dr. Pc. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery wrought marvelous changes. Although the sores were healed in eight months, I did not quit taking it until I was sure it had been entirely routed from my system. The only signs left of the dreadful disease are the scars which ever remind me of how near death's door I was until rescued by the "Discovery." I am now eighteen years old and weigh 147 pounds; and have not been sick in five years.

Yours respectfully,

Rules for the Journey of Life.

The following rules, from the papers of Dr. West, according to his memorandum, are thrown together as general waymarks in the journey of life:

Never to ridicule sacred things, or what others may esteem as much, however absurd they appear to be.

Never show levity when people are engaged at worship.

Never to resent a supposed injury till I know the views and motives of the author of it. Not any occasion to relate it.

Always to take the part of an absent person, who is censured in company, so far as truth and propriety will allow.

Never to think the worse of another on account of his differing from me in political and religious opinions.

Not to affect to be witty, or jest so as to wound the feelings of another.

To say as little as possible of myself and those who are near me.

To aim at cheerfulness without levity.

Never to court the favor of the rich by flattering either their vanities or their vices.

To speak with calmness and deliberation on all occasions, especially in circumstances which tend to irritate.

Frequently to review my conduct and note my feelings.—Christian Standard.

True Gentlemen.

"I beg your pardon!" and, with a smile and a touch of his hat, Harry Edmund handed to an old man against whom he had accidentally stumbled, the cane which he had knocked from his hand. "I hope I did not hurt you! We were playing too roughly."

"Not a bit," said the old man. "Boys will be boys, and it is best they should be. You didn't harm me."

"I'm glad to hear it," and lifting his hat again Harry turned to join his playmates, with whom he had been frolicking at the time of the accident.

"What do you raise your hat to that old fellow for?" asked his companion, Charlie Gray. "He is only old Giles!"

"That makes no difference," said Harry. "The question is not whether he is a gentleman, but whether I am one, and no true gentleman will be less polite to a man because he wears a shabby coat or sells vegetables through the streets."—Selected.

THERE'S DANGER

in a cough—more than ever when your blood is "bad." It makes things easy for Consumption. But there's a cure for it in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. A positive cure—not only for Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma and all lingering Coughs, but for Consumption itself in all its earlier stages. It's reasonable. All these diseases depend on tainted blood.

WE honor those institutions of learning which invited us to "closing exercises" in recent weeks; we have thanked the others for their courtesy.

It has been observed that institutions which are capable of the least work send out the most pretensious invitations to "Commencement Exercises," while the institutions whose superintendents are honest and practicable use a neat and plain and modestly-worded card to inform their friends that the occasion of closing the current session will be fittingly observed. We abhor those gaudy cards, protected by two envelopes, a colored cord and tissue paper, and embellished with pictures of an owl or two, several monstrously impressive looking books and a vase of smoking incense, with occasionally a travesty on the Creator in the shape of a picture of a supposed member of the human species in the act of delivering an oration or an essay. What an effect such cards may have on impressible youth! And we are sure they attract the patronage of only those whose taste is vulgar.

There was a time when an invitation to "Commencement Exercises" was appropriate; but it was very long ago. There was a time, we have no doubt, when the final exercises of the school year were in honor of the students who had passed the required test and were standing "where the brook and river meet." They were, indeed, commencing to live and work and learn; and the exercises in that day were confined entirely to the class which so stood. How different now! Some Honorable, severally titled Congressman, Governor or Senator, is the feature of the occasion; the select of the entire school enrollment take part, in order that the advertisement may be more effective; and the "commencing" class stands mainly in the back ground until the hour of delivering diplomas. The occasion is now not to such a degree in honor of the graduating class as for the sake of attracting a large crowd by a program of famous names for advertising purposes.

Is there any one who would have an idea of the attainments of graduates by witnessing "Commencement Exercises?"

THE closing season of educational institutions is a very interesting one—to those who are closing their student career, at least. It is an occasion that is fondly anticipated; it marks a day that is hallowed of memory. Some graduates know more and are more famous on that day than they ever are again. It is really remarkable how easily common people forget graduates; but they are inexorable in the matter, and we are not sufficient to elevate them to that luminous plane from which graduates are accustomed to honor themselves in lone appreciation. Some of them have been known to die just in that state of mind, unhonored and unsung; for the only voice that praised them in life is silenced with their death.

Such a jubilantly proud day as that in which one may even disdain to lift the flowers, cast at one's feet, to one's brow so recently pronounced worthy of the garland of Minerva, is not repeated in one's career. It might come when the sound of bells and the perfume of flowers commingle, but for the awful responsibility; and truly awful responsibility is never absent from one after the diploma has been awarded. When joy comes again it is that subdued complaisance that accompanies a consciousness of having done one's best. Yes, college graduates must step down from the platform where honors but lately fell thick upon them; must store away the "larks" and the visions of student life to be rehearsed at alumni banquets and again to their children,—and take a place in the never-too-crowded hives of toilers, many of whose voices never echoed in college walls, yet who dare dispute the superiority even of once-garlanded graduates. And be sure the unlearned toilers are not weakly disputants, for whatsoever of scholarship they may lack will be off set by determined persistancy of character. There is no short cut to success for honest folks, albeit they are graduates of the greatest institutions. College graduates must work, and must "keep everlastingly at it," and must be honest if they would command success, howsoever deserving of it learning may make them.

We would not insinuate that a higher education is not greatly to one's advantage; and, on the other hand, we prefer such an insinuation to having one think that all the learning in the world will command success. There is advantage. But the fundamental requisite of success is in the person and not in the degree of one's scholarship. To know that Italy lies beyond the Alps is an advantage; but to have the courage to "make a way or find one" across the heights, to brook disappointment, is the one thing needful. To know the way across the Alps is a great advantage; but there is more in the crossing than in the knowledge of the path. And we think it quite timely to remark that disappointments have never daunted an honest and determined soul. Without them there can be no success worth the having; they are stepping stones, and the more surmounted, the higher is the traveler. College graduates must work as hard and as persistently as their fellows who have not a higher education. They begin with higher ideals set by public opinion, they have a higher vocation, they have a higher duty.

And to him or her of whom Cowper's lines are not true, success will never come honestly:—

> "Absence of occupation is not rest,
> A mind quite vacant is a mind distressed."

THE Giant Bell of Peking was molten metal once. To-day its tone is nearer perfection than that of any bell. The Chinese tell a beautiful tradition of its making—as beautiful as any with which Greece has draped her history. The moulder had spent many years in a vain effort to secure the tone which he desired. He had made two failures, and now, the moulds prepared, the metals mixed and molten, he was about to make the third effort, and anticipated failure. His daughter alone knew the secret. The bell lacked only a soul! And before her father knew it,

> "As on the crane the cauldron swings
> Into its jaws the maiden springs,
> * * * * *
> And the arduous task is done.
> To save her father from failure's shame,
> To win for her father a deathless fame,
> She drowns herself in that sea of flame:
> But the bell her soul retains."

And the "Giant Bell of Peking" rings out a soulful appealing that has not been known of other bells.

Education is no more than a smelting process. The instructor may wield "a master's cunning hand," but failure is his portion unless the student puts his or her soul in the lessons before they become cold and unimpressible. And, man or maiden, whoever you or your instructors be, if you have not put your soul in your education, it is as "sounding brass and tinkling cymbals." Your education may have been "printed and carved and polished well," but you are alike soulless bells, and your life will be as hollow as it would have been had you never sat at the feet of scholarship. Human beings, from infancy, are more than passive objects to be printed and carved and polished, however masterful the hand that directs the process. Your soul and your education must be wedded, and the twain devoted to your vocation.

WE are reminded that a few end of the century teachers are making efforts to evolve a process whereby one may be impressed with the necessity of imbuing students with this idea of receiving education as more than a process, of making them realize what they are trying to do. A new science, Child-study, has arisen, the promising offspring of Psychology and Pedagogics that will be the mainstay of its dignified parents in years to come.

We heard two young teachers discussing their work quite recently. It is fortunate that they were young, for had they been elderly, as ours were, we apprehend they would have long since resigned themselves to the old "pathways of knowledge;" and their conversation would have been of books and rules and tables and discipline, and not of the development of children's minds as it was. They had become to regard their work not as a process of measuring out knowledge at $40 or less a month, but had realized that their mission is primarily to develop human minds, to make children independent thinkers as their Maker intended them, and, secondarily, to lead them into a knowledge of things to which their independent minds incline. This is the teacher's proper sphere; and one's vocation, often lauded as the noblest of callings, is not more noble than that of him who makes a profession of sharpening pruning hooks, if one has any other conception of one's work. "Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers," has become an adage because teachers formerly confined themselves to the inculcation of knowledge, because they were not wise enough to know that wisdom is the chief object of their labor.

Some personal experiences may be enlightening, though, we have no doubt, ours have not been unusual. We "were in" Grammar many years—mercifully we do not know how many. We never knew what "Grammar" meant, despite a very large and full and roundly-sounding definition in the beginning of the text book, until we were placed under a real instructor in Latin and Greek grammar. A conjugation was something to be committed to memory, for no other purpose, so far as we then knew, than torture; and we never did know one for more than ten minutes. All rules were to be kept in mind or happily hidden on a fly-leaf until recitation hour was passed,—and then joyfully consigned to imposed on oblivion. We suffered the tortures of Arithmetic even longer than those of Grammar. We remember now how expert we became in "working fractions" by the rules in italics at the beginning of each chapter. We did not know, nor were we led to desire to know, what fractions were good for; and in our ignorance we classed them amongst the heated irons of mediæval history. We were not taught to think. Our teachers would have developed in us a memory and a passively indifferent spirit to a marvelous degree, had we been kept under the same teacher and in the same book long enough. But this is all they would have done; and it is a marvel to us that more stinted-brained boys and girls have not come from our primary schools in which such conditions prevail.

But this "teaching," which, though it be teaching, is not instructing nor elevating, is now being abandoned—has been abandoned by two teachers, we know. Child study has become a branch of science that all teachers must master, if they would be true instructors—inner builders, builders of minds and characters, soul-elevators, the word means; and not mere dealers in stereotyped knowledge.

The Seven Stars in the Lord's Right Hand.

[Outline of a sermon preached by Dr. J. L. Carroll at Bethel church, in Orange county, on the occasion of the ordination of Rev. George V. Tilley, March 25th, 1894, and furnished by request.]

Text—"And he had in his right hand seven stars."—Rev. 1: 16.

The text suggests two reflections:—

1. Christian ministers are like stars. Verse 20, "The seven stars are the angels of the seven churches." We are not to understand by the term "angels" that spiritual beings are meant. The word literally means messengers, or persons sent to the churches as pastors. The term "seven" here, as in relation to the churches, is to be taken, as often used in Scripture, as an indefinite number. Ministers are properly called stars because

(1) Their office is to give light to the world. The stars give light and thereby aid in lifting the darkness which veils the earth at night. David exhorts them—Ps. 148: 3—"praise him all ye stars of light." Every star helps to enlighten the world. And so of Christian ministers. They belong to the body of whom our Lord said—Matt. 6: 14—"Ye are the light of the world." Jesus said of John the Baptist—John 5: 35—"he was a burning and a shining light." He sought to enlighten man in regard to God and themselves, and the relation subsisting between them, and the plan of salvation through Christ. And this is the work of every true minister.

(2) And to act as spiritual guides to men. The stars for a long time have served this purpose to travellers by land and sea. They not only give them light, but direct them on their way. So Christian ministers are to be spiritual guides for the people. They are not only to "lure to brighter worlds," but to "lead the way" as well. The Lord said to Paul—Acts 13: 47—"I have set thee to be a light to the Gentiles, and thou shalt be for salvation unto the ends of the earth." And how wonderfully has he fulfilled this purpose of God. How many eyes have been turned to Paul in the past, how many are turned to him now, and how many will be turned to him in the future. Hence he said in 1 Cor. 11: 1, "Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ." And so of all true ministers. They are to lead the great spiritual flock as they follow Christ.

(3) They differ in size and lustre. Astronomers speak of "stars of the first magnitude," and "stars of the second magnitude," and so on. And when we look up into the firmament we can see that some are far more brilliant than others. Some seem to be with difficulty pressing above the horizon, and they are often hidden behind the mountains and hills. How true it is as spoken by Paul in 1 Cor. 15: 41, "One star differeth from another star in glory." And yet every one is a star, and seems to be doing his best to fulfill his office. There is no rivalry among them. And in the ministerial galaxy it is equally true that one star differs from another in the matter of magnitude and brilliancy. By reason of differences in natural endowments, and of the accidental and incidental circumstances of education and culture and opportunity, some are much stronger and more attractive than others. Would that there were as little rivalry among them as among the stars, and every one was as intent upon faithfully doing his work without regard to others.

(4) They have no light of their own. The stars have none. They are opaque bodies. The universe might be full of them, and if there were nothing else but stars, there would be no light. And so of Christian ministers. They are to act as lights and guides for the people, teaching them and leading them into ways of holiness and usefulness and happiness; and yet they have no light of their own. Naturally they are in darkness, even as other men. Even Jesus said—John 7: 16—"my doctrine is not mine." If this was true of him, much more is it true of his disciples. The doctrine is not theirs, the understanding of it is not of themselves, nor the power to declare it to others.

(5) They shine only as they reflect the light of the Sun of Righteousness. This is true of the stars. They shine not of themselves—but only as they reflect the light of the sun. Especially true is this of the ministry. Even Jesus said—John 12: 49—"For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak." They only reflect the light of the Sun of Righteousness. He gives the doctrines and the ability to understand them, and the power to unfold them to others. Paul says of himself—1 Cor. 11: 23—"For I received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you."

(6) Their office will cease at the coming of the Lord. The stars serve useful purposes in lighting and guiding men during the darkness of the night, but when the sun himself rises upon the earth they pale and disappear in his superior light. And so of Christian ministers. Their present useful office as teachers and guides of men will not be needed always. When the Son of Righteousness shall come in his glory upon the earth the mission of the ministry will cease and determine forever. Every one engaged in it may say with John the Baptist—John 3: 30—"He must increase; but I must decrease." Christ shall be all in all. In these several particulars Christian ministers are like the stars.

(1) They are entirely dependent upon him. They have no light of their own, and nothing else of their own. All their resources are in the hand that sustains them. Even Jesus said—John 5: 19—"Verily, verily, I say unto you, the son can do nothing of himself;" and 6: 57—"I live by the Father." Much more then is it true of his ministers. So Paul taught—1 Cor. 3: 7—"So then, neither is he that planteth anything, neither he that watereth: but God that giveth the increase." Speaking of the responsibilities of the ministry he inquired—2 Cor. 2: 16—"And who is sufficient for these things?" In the fifth verse of the next chapter he answered—"But our sufficiency is of God." All for body, and for mind, and for soul, he must bestow. More appropriately than any other may a Christian minister sing with Watts—

> "My God, my portion and my love,
> My everlasting all,
> I've none but thee in heaven above,
> Or on this earthly ball."

(2) They are dear to him. Would he thus carefully keep them if they were not? Had he not special regard for them would he not withdraw his hand and suffer them to fall? It is a strong proof of his love that he continues to hold them up and supply the wants of body, mind and soul. That is beautiful testimony to his regard for his prophets under the Old Dispensation which we find in Ps. 105: 13-15—reproduced from 1 Chron. 16: 20-22—"When they went from one nation to another, from one kingdom to another people, he suffered no man to do them wrong: yea, he reproved kings for their sakes, saying, Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm." And may we not be quite certain that he does not love them less under the New?

(3) They are at his disposal. The stars are. He made them, and gave them their places and keeps them in them. Some of them are called fixed stars: but it is generally agreed among astronomers that they are not really so, but are performing their revolutions around other and distant centers. Nor are Christ's ministers fixed, except during his pleasure. He calls them to their work, gives them their places, continues them therein during his pleasure, and removes them at his will. Not only are the stars under his authority, but the sun also. Job 9: 7, "Which commandeth the sun and it riseth not, and sealeth up the stars." It is important for us all to learn that the ministry is equally under the Lord's control. These preachers would look to him alone for fields, and churches would look to him alone for pastors. He is the sovereign manager of all.

(4) They are safe in his care. Can a safer place be found for one than in the strong and tender right hand of the Almighty Saviour? No enemy can successfully assault them there. The world, the flesh and the devil are powerless to do him serious injury there. Divine power is underneath and around about him, and divine love insures the faithful use of it. What a comforting reflection it should be to every true minister of Jesus. However faithless human friends may be, he is ever faithful found. Paul loved to think of this. Near the close of his last epistle he wrote—2 Tim. 4: 16, 17—"At my first answer no man stood with me, but all forsook me; I pray God that it may not be laid to their charge. Notwithstanding, the Lord stood with me, and strengthened me: that by me the preaching might be full known, and that all the Gentiles might hear; and I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion." The promise of the same faithful Saviour, as given in the last words of Matthew's gospel, applies to all his faithful servants—"And lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Assured of his infinite faithfulness every one of them may sing with Watts—

> "How can I sink with such a prop
> As my eternal God:
> Who bears the earth's huge pillars up,
> And spreads the heavens abroad."

From Bro. Blalock in China.

Brother Bailey:—We have now had the experience of over three months among China's millions.

Some of us are engaged in the study of the language; we find it difficult but very interesting. Brethren King and Herring are now far out West preaching and in search of suitable centers of location for the Gospel Mission. These brethren are now about fifteen days' journey inland from Chefoo in a section we hope by the guiding of the Spirit to occupy soon. Dr. Crawford, Brethren Bostick and Crocker are now away on a preaching tour hoping also to be able to rent a house for Dr. and Sister Crawford temporarily if not permanently. Bro. Royall and myself have been located for some days at Kiao-Cheo where we will remain only a short while. Kiao Cheo is a city of one hundred thousand inhabitants, located about six days' journey from Chefoo and a days' journey from Pingtu. Bro. League and wife expect to move to Ching Chowfu in a few days, and Dr. Randle, an English Baptist, recently appointed by the the Foreign Mission Board will occupy the house Bro. League vacated at Pingtu. This city hitherto has been unoccupied except by a good Swedish Baptist who will leave it soon. Bro. Bostick and wife and Miss Fannie Knight will very probably remain at Pingtu till next fall. Brother Sears and family are located perhaps for life at Pingtu. Bro. Crocker expects to take up his abode with Dr. and Sister Crawford. We have found it more pleasant in the Middle Kingdom than we expected, and the people more numerous, if possible, but generally kindly disposed toward us.

During the leisure days of the Chinese New Year, Brethren Crocker, Royall and myself visited the top of one of the highest peaks of a range of mountains that lies just a few miles North of Pingtu. On this mount we had a most excellent view of the surrounding country. As far as we could see the plains were almost hidden with crowded towns and villages.

As we looked down upon the homes of millions possessing precious souls I thought of their lost condition, and remembered the bitter tears of sorrow Jesus shed over the doomed city of Jerusalem. I felt that this surging mass of humanity was not only enough to call forth tears from the Great Benefactor of men, Jesus, but enough to arouse the most negligent and careless child of God from his sleep of indifference to the command of our blessed Lord, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." How I would to God that on this mount we could kindle the signal fire and sound the trumpet alarm that would summons God's Israel from our dear Southland with all their strength to the battle of liberty for these sin-chained captives.

We returned to the city, and a good opportunity being offered to us, we visited the temples of Pingtu. These were large and looked as if they would have necessarily required much money and many years of labor for completion. How long some of them had been erected even the natives seemed not to be able to tell. The huge stone posts and pillars from twenty to forty feet hewn from solid stone were a marvel to us.

Having pushed our way through the multitude and entered within, we saw idols of all sizes representing every imaginable expression. Some looked hideous standing in a striking position as if ready to kill to the last any who dared offend. Others looked grave, dignified, meditative and defenceless. This being the time the natives flock to the temples to worship, there were thousands coming and going from every direction. In the temple some were worshiping, others revelling and gambling. It is a sad sight to see these poor people falling before the cold, helpless and lifeless creatures of their own hands. Yes, a wail, a plaintive sigh goes up constantly from millions of these blinded people to receive only the dead, dumb response that a cold, lifeless idol can give.

The dark cloud of sin and death that arose in Eden six thousand years ago has gathered and hung these thousands of years in its destructive darkness over these people till now every day that passes brings forth the dying groans of over forty thousand lost souls. How long! how long! O army of the living God shall these people continue dying in this hopeless, helpless condition?

My friends will please address us at Chefoo while we remain at Kiao-cheo. Postage five cents for each half ounce or fraction thereof.

T. L. BLALOCK.

Sunday is the core of our civilization dedicated to thought and reverence. It invites to the noblest solitude, and the noblest society.—R. W. Emerson.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 6, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

THIS being the school closing season, and the RECORDER being more prominently interested in education than any publication in the State, our readers and contributors may expect to find our columns unusually crowded with accounts of school exercises for two or three weeks. We often have occasion to write of the harvest of human souls which is never out of season; surely the devotion of considerable space to the harvest of young men and women, which represents much labor and expense, but occupies only a few short weeks in the reaping, and yet which is second only to that spiritual harvest, is not only pertinent, but deserved.

SOMETHING like the following is seen very frequently in our State exchanges just now: "Let us not have a conflict; they have no conflicts between State and private and denominational institutions in other States, why should we have one?" It is an infant's cry.

The RECORDER doesn't seek a conflict; and if our colleges are given fair play, we assure the world there will not be one. But if a conflict is necessary to attain what many of us think is right and expedient and best, be sure there will be a conflict,—and not only for a day or a month, but for decades.

Our view of the question has been set forth in a series of arguments, devoid of flings and imputations. If any differ, let them not play the whining infant; they will not do so if they can combat the matter logically. Need we add that in logical debate commencement write-ups, traditions and advertisements do not have weight?

A SAINTLY soul passed into that rest which remaineth for the people of God, when, on the 28th ult., Dr. Theodore Whitfield, pastor of the Fulton Baptist church, Richmond, Va., ceased to be in the flesh. We knew him well; and we knew nothing of him that does not remind us of the saintly character of his life. He was not a great preacher, nor a fine one; but he was a good one in every sense of the word. He was a theologian, but never displayed his theological research for fear, it may have been, that it would remove him from Christ's "common people." He was a man to whom one might confidently go for sympathetic advice; and the statement that he was greatly beloved and admired by his brother pastors in Richmond does not surprise us.

Dr. Whitfield was born in Mississippi about 1836; graduated at the University of North Carolina in 1854, after which he pursued theological studies in Massachusetts. His career has varied; principal of an institution for the blind, professor of Greek in the University, and editor of a Baptist paper in his native State; pastor at Charlotte, N. C., and Richmond, Va. Wake Forest College conferred upon him the title of Doctor of Divinity.

ACCORDING to Printers' Ink, issued by G. P. Rowell & Co., publishers of the "American Newspaper Directory" for 1894, conceded to be the most reliable of newspaper directories, there are 1,017 newspapers and periodicals in America classed as religious, having an aggregate circulation of something like 5,700,000 copies. They represent sixty-eight sects.

The number of communicants of Protestant churches is 20,618,307; the Protestant population is estimated at 49,630,000, the Roman Catholic at 6,257,617. It may be interesting to know that in our country may be found every species of religion, Pagan, Jew or Christian. In the latter one may be six kinds of an Adventist, seven kinds of a Catholic, twelve kinds of a Presbyterian, thirteen kinds of a Baptist—from the "regular missionary" to the "old two-seed-in-the-spirit predestinarian; sixteen kinds of a Lutheran, or seventeen kinds of a Methodist.

But to return to newspapers: the largest circulation in any separate and distinct sect is of Baptist papers, there being 126 journals, with an aggregate circulation of 1,540,000. Baptists are the only sects the number of whose publications is more than a million copies. We may well boast of this fact.

Two-thirds of the communicants of Baptist churches are accredited to the South. And of strictly Southern Baptist papers east of the Mississippi, the BIBLICAL RECORDER is rated by the "American Newspaper Directory" second only to one—the Western Recorder of Kentucky, which is a general and not strictly a State paper.

This speaks volumes for North Carolina Baptists.

MUCH excellent matter was crowded out of this issue, to our regret. It is in type and will appear next week.

WAKE FOREST COLLEGE CATALOGUE.

In the perspicuously arranged catalogue (1893-94) of Wake Forest College, which we received fresh from the presses last week, one may find everything of general interest relative to this institution, whose slightest work is of importance to North Carolina Baptists.

We advise all graduates of the institution to get a copy of this catalogue in order that the progress of recent years may be extensively impressed; and every young man who intends to have, or desires a higher education, should have a copy in order that it may be known how easily one may get a higher education without any objectionable disadvantages.

The present catalogue is much on the order of that which we reviewed somewhat exhaustively a year since. It reports the enrollment of one hundred and ninety seven students, and the addition to the faculty of Needham Y. Gulley, M. A., B. L., Professor of Law, during the session which closes next week. We have heard that Judge Clark and Bro. Gulley will conduct a law school at Wake Forest this summer, but definite announcements have not been made.

A brief statement of some of the changes that have been effected in the several schools may be instructive. In the schools of Latin and Greek, Seminaries have been added for advanced work. In the former, Lucretius and the Elegiac poets were studied in the past session; in the latter, works of Aeschylus, Aristophanes and Pindar were subjects of study. Lectures were given in both, and in the Greek Seminary theses were required. New Testament Greek (for the especial benefit of young ministers) was studied one hour weekly, the subject this year being the Gospel of John.

In recent years no school of the entire number has undergone more radical and extensive changes than that of English, of which the Professor of Modern Languages now has charge. From a two year's course it has been extended so as to require full three year's thorough work. Great stress is laid on directing the student to a correct and ready use of the English language; and we are in a position to know that such ability is a rarity even among college graduates in our State. Another commendable feature is the system of parallel readings, the course this year including the foremost English novelists, essayists and poets.

The school of Modern Languages, that of Pure Mathematics that of Physics, Applied Mathematics, and Astronomy, that of Chemistry, that of Biology and Geology, and that of Moral Philosophy, are on the same high plane as noted last year, with some improvements.

In the School of Political Science changes have been made that are worthy of especial note in this day when the country's great need is more political economists. The college library contains the works of the most recent authorities on this subject, which is pursued under three heads, Political History, Political Economy, and Constitutional Government. Such a course will make good citizens, and may make statesmen.

Every feature of the College is encouragingly reported. There are but two great needs: sufficient endowment to separate the School of English from that of Modern Languages, and to institute a Chair of Bible Study, and both are not only needs, but essentials to that degree of work which Wake Forest should do.

THAT Baptists have the scriptural and the best method of dealing with matters—with heresies, discipline, business, etc.—is patent to those who are sufficiently acquainted with practices of other denominations to make intelligent comparisons.

With Baptists a church in conference deliberating under God's guidance is the highest authority; and in this first and final tribunal is the secret of Baptist success in dealing with troublesome questions. Neither committee, nor council, nor union meeting, nor association, nor State nor general Convention, can declare the most heterodox a heretic, nor can they prescribe the duty of a church in any relation. A Baptist church is a throne of God.

It seems that the Baptist method would give rise to much trouble and misunderstanding. The contrary, however, has been manifested on more than one occasion; other denominations are far more exposed to dispute and disruption, and especially is this manifest in dealing with heresy.

We have no widely denounced heretics, no great and sensational heresy trials. And why? Because the "little leaven of unrighteousness" is cast out before it can leaven the lump, or even contaminate an entire church. We have no series of great bodies to try heretics, no machinery to behead them, no series of districts and conferences, nor presbyteries, local, State and general, through which "a case" may go by appeals, remaining an open question for months. One of our churches—whether great or small, it matters not—merely takes the matter in hand and disposes of it. Its letters to other churches are all that is necessary to prevent further trouble.

If there was question of our scriptural authority, we do not see how other denominations can but envy us our peacefulness, while they are in suspense for months, and their proceedings are made the topic of universal remark and the occasion of threats of dissension and diaruption.

Verily, God is with us, for the prayer of the Psalmist, "peace be within thy walls and prosperity within thy palaces," has been realized in our Zion.

SURELY more advice is now being given to graduates than many of them appreciate, for they would be unusual graduates if they were sufficiently impressible in this heyday to be brought to remember much of it. Yet if we can impress a few of them with one thing we will be content.

How many of the hundreds of young men and women now passing their last days in college walls feel their indebtedness? How many of them know to whom they are indebted?

Every college and every university student in our land, rich or poor, owes an honorable debt that can be discharged only by a life of faithful labor. One may have paid one's tuition, bought books, board and lodging and everything else with one's own earnings, and yet there is a debt that honorable men will not dishonor.

One's college expenses are after all only a very small part of the cost of education. Colleges and universities must have aid from endowments or appropriations; and neither of these come from students. Endowments come from men who have long since gone to their reward; but nevertheless one who reaps advantage from them is indebted to those men. Every graduate of Wake Forest College owes a debt to the Baptist fathers who have made his education possible; and they should know the history of the labors of these men, for they will not find more worthy exemplars.

In the same light let us regard the students of State institutions. There are some children of wealthy people among them, but they owe a debt to the humblest and the poorest tax payer in the State; and when they disregard this debt they are untrue to the highest instincts of manhood and womanhood.

What a regenerated world this would be if all college graduates realized their indebtedness! And yet there is no man nor woman among them who can deny the obligation.

Of students of institutions not connected with the public coffers we may trace the indebtedness still further. There is but one institution in our land that was founded by the beneficence of non Christians; and today that one, it is said, is conducted under Christian influences. Men and women of God have been the instruments in making the United States the most favored country in the world so far as educational facilities are concerned. And those who enjoy these facilities should render thanks to God for them. What a testimony to God are our educational institutions! What a testimony their students should be!

WE have been requested to answer each question that Bro. Lamberth presents in a letter on our third page. We hope our readers will read and think upon the statements of our brother before considering our remarks.

The teaching of the woman as reported is grievously wicked. We would not believe such a thing had happened, did we not know the writer of the letter. And rather than have our boys and girls exposed to such influences, we would keep them from all independent religious work.

Bro. Lamberth is neither narrow nor uncharitable in condemning the administration of the Lord's Supper by any one to mere members of a society. There is no end of the harm to which such a precedent would lead. To have ceased to protest against it with all his might would have been recreancy to duty. It is but natural for Baptists to object to such action. Their view of the matter is taken as the Scripture gives it, and can be expressed in a few sentences. Baptists hold that the Bible has no record of unbaptized persons partaking of the Lord's Supper; that the Bible records but one method of baptism, and therefore no other method is biblical baptism. From these doctrines it must be concluded that the Lord's Supper should be administered only to baptized persons; and sprinkling is sprinkling, not baptism. It is pertinent to remark here that the action of the King's Daughter's woman at Greenville will not be sanctioned by any church, whether its "communion" be "open" or "close."

Bro. Lamberth asks three questions: First, is there not danger that our young people will become to think that by merely joining such an order—it has a very attractive name,—and wearing a tin cross will make them "sons and daughters of the King." There is such a danger. There is more danger of hypocrites posing as "sons and daughters of the King" to the disadvantage of honest children of God. In a recent issue we quoted an ex-Catholic priest as saying that Catholics never bring Christ any nearer to them than his image or a cross will bring him. They are notorious for wearing artificial crosses and imposing real crosses on other folks.

The second question is, "Can any human being who has passed the age of accountability be a son or a daughter of the King, who has not been born again?" No. And, moreover, no being born of woman, accountable or unaccountable, can enter the kingdom of heaven—can be a son or daughter of the King—unless that being be born again.

Our foreign missionaries have great struggles in overcoming the idol-worshippers of heathendom; but never have they had to overcome such insidious influences as those which society lecturers and organizers exert to destroy churches, and disintegrate Christendom. Conceived in a sense that the Bible is not sufficient for nineteenth century civilization, their entire policy is one of disregard of the Word given to the world "once for all." Let no true Baptist affiliate with organizations which strike not only at the foundation doctrines of his church, but even at the Word of God and the ordinances of Jesus Christ.

Sons and daughters of the King, whom we recognize, are not made by human deeds, but by the King himself; and true sons and daughters of that King will keep his word.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

CLOSING EXERCISES AT MURFREESBORO.

Nothing in our denominational interests is looked forward to by Baptists in Eastern North Carolina with more interest than the annual closing of the school at Murfreesboro. Each year in the fifty years' of successful operation of the school has added strength to the institution, and inspired its friends with larger hopes and fresh inspirations for its higher and broader usefulness.

Many, comparatively strangers, love the institution, and venerate the names of those who have so well and faithfully presided over it, for the blessings which have come to their homes and churches through the lives of the many noble and consecrated women who have enjoyed its educational and refining influences.

Monday, the trustees are all present, and the condition of the institution is such as not to prevent them from enjoying a full share of the good things which had been prepared for us. At 8 o'clock p. m. the following program was rendered to a full house, and was listened to with interest as an "earnest" of what was to follow:

Processional March—Persian March, (Op. 369 Koutske)—Miss Susie L. Mitchell.

Inst. Solo—Fleur d'automne, (Mayer)—Miss Carrie Bateman.

Vocal Solo—La Zingara, (Balfe)—Miss Sallie McClenny.

Recitation—Opportunities of the Scholar, (H. W. Grady)—Miss Carrie McLean.

Class Poem—Miss Sallie McClenny.

Inst. Solo—Arabesque, (Andres)—Miss Mary Vann.

Recitation—Absolution, (E. Nesbit)—Miss Maggie Bass.

Vocal Duet—In this Hour of Softened Splendor, (Pinsuiti)—Misses E. Wiggins and M. Whitfield.

Class Prophecy—Miss Mary Whitfield.

Class Song—Una Fides, Unum Opus, Una Spes—Senior Class.

TUESDAY.

At 12 o'clock the sermon to the graduating class was preached by Rev. R. T. Bryan, missionary to China. After prayer by Rev. Mr. Edmundson of the Methodist church, the preacher announced his text: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." The introductory remarks were a beautiful and tender tribute to the women who after graduating at the college had given their lives to the work among the heathen.

The sermon would not be classed among what is sometimes termed a commencement sermon, but it was just such a one as will be acceptable on all occasions. As the speaker tenderly portrayed the various evidences of God's love for his people, the sermon seemed a fit culmination of the motto of the class of '94—"One faith, one work, one hope"—which was written on the wall above the rostrum.

EIGHT O'CLOCK P. M.

The following exercises were rendered, showing the highest proficiency of students as well as the most skilful efforts of the teachers in the School of Elocution and Delsarte:

Processional March, Miss Bruce Brewer.

Attitudes of the emotions: Courtesy, 1. Triumph, 2. Horror, 3. Listening, 4. Abhorrence, 5. Accusation, 6. Astonishment, 7. Satisfaction, 8. Faith, 9. Invitation and Rejection, 10. Mourning, 11. Blessing, 12. Meditation, 13. Scrutiny, 14. Defiance, 15. Revenge, 16. Mercy, 17. Entreaty, 18. Shame, 19. Ridicule, 20. Bashfulness, 21. Grief, 22. Resignation, 23. Curiosity, 24. Devotion, 25. Flight, 26. Parting.

Instrumental Quartette—Polonaise, (Op. 9 Schmidt)—Misses Jessie and Mary Brewer, M. Deane and B. Parker.

Recitation—Lady Wentworth—Miss Carrie McLean.

Vocal Quartette—Bridal of the Birds (Richards)—S. Mitchell, N. Powell, M. Parker, M. Whitfield, M. Wiggins.

Recitation—Daisy's Faith—Miss Jessie Brewer.

Recitation—Prince Eric's Christ Maid—Miss Addie McD. Shaw.

Vocal Duett—O Come to Me (Kucken)—Misses M. and E. Whitfield.

Recitation—The Minuet—Miss Mary Brewer.

Recitation—(Musical Accompaniment) Story of Some Bells—Miss Maggie Bass.

Vocal Trio—Life has no Power (Donizette)—O. McClenny, M. Parker, E. Wiggins.

Recitation—A Russian Christmas—Miss A. Bruce Brewer.

Inst. Solo—Grand Galop de Concert (Op. 24 Ketterer)—Miss L. White.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

We have had a most refreshing rain, the air pure, and the flowers fresh and in great abundance. It is just cold enough to make the straw hats and alpaca coats of the gentlemen, and the commencement dresses of the girls, strikingly attractive. Eleven beautiful girls who have completed their course of study take their places on the rostrum and performed their parts as indicated by the following program:

Processional March—Awakening of Love, (3 Pianos) "Haven"—Misses S. and O. McClenny, Sykes, Boushall, Long.

Chorus—Spring in the Land, (Op. 184, Raff).

Inst. Solo—Rondeau Brilliant, (Op. 62 Weber)—Miss Jessie Brewer.

Essay—Flora Macdonald—Miss Fanny Taylor, Wake Forest, N. C.

Vocal Duet—Night in Venice, (Arditi)—Misses Vann and Shaw.

Essay—True Courage—Miss Mary E. Vann, Como, N. C.

Essay—Success in Life—Miss Carrie Bateman, Creswell, N. C.

Inst. Solo—Illustration Poetique, (Belisario) Ascher—Miss Lillie White.

Essay—Practicality of Education—Miss Eleanor Wiggins, Franklin, Va.

Vocal Solo—Breaking the Ice, (Poulet)—Miss Mary Brewer.

Essay—The Geometry of Life—Miss Carrie Lee McLean, Lincolnton, N. C.

Overture to Zampa—Double Quartette—Misses Vann, Mitchell, Carlton, Bateman, Holmes, Baker, Barnes, Britton.

President Brewer here announced the degree taken by each member of the Class and also the Class standing during the course of study. After some appropriate remarks, Rev. S. M. Saunders delivered the diplomas.

Dr. R. P. Thomas, President of the Board of Trustees, made a most encouraging report on the condition of the Institute, reminding the friends of the School that, as our friends at the Capital of Virginia, as well as those at our own Capital, had shown their appreciation of the President of this Institution, it ought to remind them that in the future they ought to be more zealous for the success of their School, and hold the closer to the man who had been so persistently pressed to go elsewhere.

At the close of Dr. Thomas' remarks, President Brewer presented as the orator of the occasion, Dr. A. B. Dunaway of Churchland, Va. Those of us who had spent some time socially with the Doctor were prepared to believe that the man and the occasion had met. The character of a literary address decides largely the success or failure of an occasion of this sort. Dr. Dunaway announced as his subject, "The Wrong of Subordinating the Useful to the Ornamental." And with no formal introductory, he showed the various ways in which people take the shadow for the substance. Many people in building make high towers for show and cover up poor material and dishonest work with the paint brush. In education many invest all in the ornamentals and find when too late their inability to meet the demands of a practical world where the question is growing more and more prominent, What can you do? Let us love music and the arts as well, but we ought to constantly protest against the cultivation of a fractical part of our nature and talents. The same is true in the building of character. Plated metal shines only for a time and then reveals its true worth. Truth must be at the bottom of all character. The house on the sand, so far as we know, was as good as the one on the rock, but having no foundation, it fell. Continuing, the speaker said, "In matrimony as well as elsewhere would be seen the force and truthfulness of this subject. Alas! too often the being of a first-class dude with hair parted in the middle was a sure passport to matrimonial preferences." Speaking of dress, the Doctor said that he knew he was walking on dangerous ground, but being here to benefit as well as please, he would declare the whole truth. Many women, thoroughly sensible on all other subjects, show a weakness here that is simply appalling. These things are a violation of God's plan. He has taught us to love the beautiful by the lovely objects which with a bountiful hand he has placed around us; but look where you will, and in no case will you find that the substantial and useful are subordinated to the ornamental. The grace of the forest, the grandeur of the mountains, the beauty of the sky and the music of the streams contribute not less to the useful and the substantial than to the pleasing and ornamental.

The speaker received the highest evidences of a grateful appreciation of the audience, and at the close of the speech was presented by Miss Dora Shaw of Warrenton with a handsome buquet in behalf of the Literary Society.

WEDNESDAY, 8 O'CLOCK, P. M.

The chapel is filled to overflowing and then many who desired to be inside found no room.

The following program will be of interest to those who comprehend music:

Processional March—March Celebre, (De

La 1re suite), (Op 113 Lachner)—Misses Parker, Powers, Vaughn, Watfor, Dickerson, M. Marshburn, Early, Bowen.

Salutatory—Miss Rose Britto, Colerain, N. C.

Chorus—Reapers, (Clapisson).

Inst. Duo.—Lutzvious Wilde, Jagd, (Op, 198 Hiller)—Misses B. Brewer and L. White.

Vocal Solo—Loves Joy-Waltz Rondeau, (Gumbert)—Miss Mary Whitfield.

Vocal Trio—Whirl and Twirl, (Wagner) Miss Vaughan, E. Whitfield, E. Wiggins.

Recitation—Legend of Bregenz, (Adalide Procter)—Miss Annie Boushall.

Vocal Solo—My Love is Like a Red, Red Rose, (Brande)—Miss Eva Bowen.

Overture—Egmont-Double Quartette, (Beethoven)—Misses Homes, Powers, Mary and Minnie Parker, Mizelle, Wiggins, Earley, R. Marshburn.

Vocal Solo—What e'er Betide, (Millard) Miss Addie McD. Shaw.

Vocal Solo—Little Coquette—Miss Mamie Brewer.

Inst. Duo—Martha, (Op. 20 Alberti) Misses Carlton and Vann.

Vocal Solo—"Oh Light of Hope, (Donizetti)—Miss Mary Vann.

Recitation—Country Sleighing, (E. C. Steadman). (Musical Accompanyment) Miss Jennie Long.

Vocal Solo—Winding, (Bischoff)—Miss M. Vaughn.

Vocal Solo—Cuspino E La Comare, (Rice) (I'm no Longer Poor Annetta) Miss L. White.

Double Quartette—Guesippe Verdi, (Op. 50 Fischette)—Misses B. Brewer, Vann, White, Mitchell, Carlton, Baker, Holmes, Barnes.

Valedictory—Miss Maggie Bass, Barsaw, N. C.

This closed what the old friends of the Institute said was the best commencement in its history; and trunks are being packed, and the girls crying, kissing and laughing in the same breath. If school girls all fulfil their promises, vacation is a fine season for canceling postage stamps. The affectionate leave-taking of the girls and Mrs. Brewer was evidence of the affection between her and the pupils.

Nobody seemed to enjoy a reunion with his old friends than did Capt. N. L. Shaw, and the creditable part his daughter took of course added to the pleasures of the occasion.

....Rev. N. S. Jones of Salisbury has baptized eighteen candidates into the fellowship of his church, Salisbury, since he and Bro. J. R. Jones began a meeting there.

....Rev. C. W. Matthews of South Norfolk has baptized two candidates as a result of the recent meeting held with him by Brethren Watson and J. A. Speight.

....The Wake Forest Student for May is on our table. It is an interesting number, and contains the oration of the representative of the Euzelian Society last anniversary.

....Since the recent good meeting at Elizabeth City, Dr. Blackwell's church has decided to pay off an indebtedness of $800 and make some needed internal improvements.

....Rev. E. S. Reaves, who graduated from Wake Forest College in 1892, having closed the male academy at Aulander for vacation, should be addressed hereafter at Mullins, S. C.

....Union revival meetings are in progress in Asheville. Brethren Broughton's and White's work there in recent weeks has stirred the entire city. Bro. Broughton has returned to Roanoke, Va.

....In recent weeks a glorious revival has been in progress in the Fulton Baptist church, Richmond, Va., of which the lamented Dr. Whitfield was pastor. Ninety-six persons have been baptized.

....Dr. Carter of the First church, Raleigh, baptized two converts last Sunday morning. At night five stood for prayer. Brethren Simms and Stringfield had good congregations. Bro. Hunter's revival services in the Swain Street Mission are hopeful.

....The Young Mens' Christian Association celebrates the fiftieth year of its existence this week with an International Jubilee Convention in London Eng. Hon. Jno. Wanamaker is the delegate from America.

....In the meeting held at Aberdeen Bro. L. Johnson baptized seven persons. Perhaps, more than that number will be baptized soon. There were about forty professions of faith. The new church starts off well.

....Prof. J. B. Carlyle made us a pleasant visit on his return from Winton last week, where he delivered an address at the closing exercises of Rev. C. B. Williams' school. The Professor is enthusiastic on the subject of education.

....Those who know him will be glad to hear that under call of God Bro. B. K. Mason, who taught school at Apex this year, had decided to preach. Brother Mason is a graduate of Wake Forest College and a young man of decided talents, well-equipped for good service for the Master.

....A good and faithful pastor in the Eastern part of our State writes that he is bothered nearly to death with societies and woman preachers; and desires to know what he should do. There is but one policy: Preach the gospel as taught by Jesus Christ and leave the consequences to him.

....We were glad to see Prof. J. C. Clifford of the Wakefield Academy in Raleigh on Saturday last. Bro. Clifford informs us that Hon. Fred. L. Merritt will deliver the literary address in the morning instead of the evening as heretofore stated in the RECORDER. The exercises occur on the 7th inst.

....We are grieved to hear of the sad death of the wife of Rev. I. T. Newton at Wake Forest College on the 27th inst., and deeply sympathize with our afflicted brother. May God sustain him in this time of sorest trial. Brother and Sister Newton, who was Miss Alderman, had been married scarcely a year.

....The fifty ninth Commencement of Wake Forest College will begin with the Class Day exercises Monday night, June 11th, and will end with the social gathering Thursday night, June 14th. Ticket agents of the R. & D. and S. A. L. railroads have been instructed to sell return tickets at reduced rates.

....Many of our readers will recall Rev. Wm. Jessup Sholar, formerly of Raleigh and Wake Forest College, and they will be pleased to know that cards are out announcing the wedding of him and Miss Alice White of Kingston, N. Y., June 14th. Bro. and Sister Sholar will reside at 152 Calyer Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

....Rev. W. A. Smith of Cedar Rock Academy made us a pleasant visit last week. The session of his school just closed has been a most favorable one, and he is greatly encouraged. Last year was Bro. Smith's first at this place, but he has succeeded in building up a school that has few equals among institutions of its class.

....Elder Jno. T. Albritton, well-informed, reliable, and conservative, writes: "I heartily endorse the able articles just finished by President Taylor. If there is to be any reply I sincerely wish that it may come from a man of like spirit and ability. I have carefully read and reread, and expect to read again the series of articles."

....Rev. C. A. G. Thomas writes: "I have been very busy this month. Have delivered four commencement talks, at Summerfield, Ashboro, Pocket and Ramseur. Have had in all twenty-five services. The people wherever I have been are reading and thinking over Dr. Taylor's articles. There's going to be a mighty uprising."

....City Missionary, Hunter, of Raleigh is engaged in a protracted meeting in Swain St. Chapel (East). This is a most difficult field; and for that reason should be worked and prayed over most persistently. We were glad to have a visit from Bro. Hunter last week, during which he said he felt greatly encouraged in his work in Raleigh.

....The prospects are for an unusually enjoyable commencement at Wake Forest College next week. So far as we can ascertain there are twenty-eight graduates. Rev. E. M. Poteat of Connecticutt will preach the baccalaureate sermon; and Rev. F. C. McConnell will deliver the address before the literary societies; alumni address by E. B. Jones, Esq., of Winston. The Board of Trustees will be presented with very important business.

....The recent general session of the Methodist Conference is spoken of as the most radical since 1866. The institution of a Board of Education was authorized; and what is more significant to us, it was deemed advisable to set up a Board of Control of the Epworth League, a Methodist Society of far-reaching influence. How long will it be before Baptists confront the necessity of organizing a board of control for protection from its societies?

....Bro. Robt. E. Royall, Secretary of the Board of Trustees of Wake Forest College desires us to announce that the Board of Trustees of this institution will meet at Wake Forest College at 9 o'clock, a. m., Tuesday 12th inst. It is important that every member be present at the first meeting. "Atlanta special" arrives at Wake Forest at 6:59 p. m.; local freight at 8:50 a. m. Mail from Raleigh at 12:04 p. m.; mail from Weldon and the North at 3:00 p. m.

....In "notes and comments" in Charity and Children of the 1st inst., Dr. Pritchard says he has heard that Bro. Jno. E. Wray of Colorado Springs, Col., has been elected Superintendent of the Deaf Mute Asylum of Kentucky, situated at Danville, where Rev. J. W. Lynch is pastor. Bro. Wray has done a great work for the State of Colorado and is well situated, but we earnestly hope Dr. Pritchard has heard correctly and that Bro. Wray will come nearer home.

....Bro. Kim. W. Weathers, the genial Seaboard Air Line official of Portsmouth, Va., made us a very pleasant visit last Monday. In addition to good news from the "Raleigh colony" in that city, he brought us appreciated messages from Dr. Owen, and promised to persuade Dr. Wharton to come to Raleigh and deliver one of his notable lectures before many weeks. Dr. Hall, he said, has succeeded in raising about $8,000 toward his new church building.

....The Treasurer's Report (1893-94) of Wake Forest College has just reached us. The receipts of interest on endowment, rents, etc., for the year were $14,372 27. The income from students is not included in this report, being in the Bursar's, which we have not received. We have good authority, however, for stating that it was a little more than $4,000, being about $2,000 less than it was two years ago. The total endowment, including the Bostwick Loan Fund and the Wm. Royall chair fund, is $214,078 77. An indebtedness of $4,983 60 is reported.

....Receipt of an invitation to the second annual commencement of the North Carolina College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts is acknowledged with thanks. The exercises will occur June 17th to 20th inclusive, the program being as follows: Baccalaureate sermon, Sunday, 17th inst., Dr. W. S. Creasy; class exercises Monday evening, 18th; annual address, Hon. W. H. Hatch, Missouri, 19th. Eight graduates will be awarded diplomas on the 20th. An exhibition of practical work will occur on the 19th.

....We are very glad to publish the following with the authority of Dr. Taylor: "There are, it seems to me, many reasons why the consideration of co education at Wake Forest should be adjourned for the present. The practical question to the Baptists of North Carolina is not whether we shall have co education, but whether, after a few years, we shall have any education at Wake Forest." Nothing can be so harmful to our educational interests as a denominational discussion of secondary educational questions. We have one question which is sufficient for the consideration of the best of us; and no permanent progress in education can be made by us until that question is settled.

....President George T. Winston of the University of North Carolina has our acknowledgements for an invitation to the annual exercises of the University. An excellent program has been provided. Rev. F. J. Murdock preached the baccalaureate sermon on the 3d inst.; Rev. F. L. Reid delivered an address in memory of the late Dr. Deems on the 5th, on which day also the senior class day and orations by representatives of the literary societies occurred. On the 6th orations and theses by graduates are in order, and at noon on that day Hon. Hoke Smith delivers an address, after which diplomas will be given to twenty-nine young men, three of whom are graduates in law.

Expressions About Dr. Taylor's Articles.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I have always admired and loved Dr. Taylor as a great thinker and Christian gentleman, but now I am proud of him as a citizen of North Carolina to say nothing of our denominational relations. I believe his articles in the RECORDER on the subject, "How far Ought a State to Undertake to Educate?" will do more to promote truth and Christian education than any one thing at this time. Christians and citizens of North Carolina, let us write and talk about them until every person in our State will feel that his or her education is incomplete without reading them. What would become of our religious institutions if it were not for such fearless veterans of the truth? Thank the Lord for them.

J. R. PACE.

Whitakers, June 1, 1894.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I have been reading for a half century, and have read and studied the best authors; but for compact, cogent reasoning I am not sure I ever saw anything equal—certainly nothing superior—to Dr. Taylor's articles on the State's relation to higher education. A beautiful spirit of fairness and courtesy marks every line. He heroically stands for the interest of the people—and I shall be disappointed, if, after this, we do not have better and more "Public schools."

His argument, well braced at every point, is an impregnable bulwark, and within this is a magazine, which will, I hope and think, furnish thousands of men in North Carolina with abundant ammunition until the wrong is set right.

I congratulate you on furnishing your readers with the best series of letters on a vital topic that ever appeared in a North Carolina newspaper.

Yours, J. M. WHITE.

You invite expressions of opinion concerning the papers of Dr. Taylor on the State's right to give higher education. I have read each article as it appeared, considering it carefully; borrowing Dr. Taylor's words as applied to Dr. Madison's remonstrance, I will say these contributions are "Cogent in logic, transparent in style, felicitous in the use of language, they ought to stand forever as a breakwater between the functions of the State, and the sacred rights of conscience." I trust every voter in North Carolina may read and be influenced by them. Can an outsider get a copy when bound in tract form?

WM. HENRY STRICKLAND.

It seems to me that Dr. Taylor's articles on "How far Ought a State to Undertake to Educate," are unanswerable. He goes to the bottom of his subject. It is a masterly production, and will doubtless be of great service to the cause of education in the State. By all means let us have the whole thing in pamphlet form and then broat cast over the land.

Oxford Female Seminary.

The commencements of this famous school are always well attended by both the residents of the town and visitors from this and other States, and the large audiences who greeted the participants in the exercises of the occasion just finished, were but a repetition of the past. All who were present felt they had been well repaid for whatever time they had lost or inconvenience they had experienced.

The exercises were inaugurated on Sunday morning in the Baptist church, at which time Rev. R. T. Bryan made the annual address before the Maggie Nutt Missionary Society, which is composed of students of the Seminary. The effort was characterized by great earnestness and eloquence, as the speaker told of the holy joys of a life consecrated to the work of saving and rescuing his fellows, and as he pleaded for others to follow the examples of the noble missionaries who had gone before and whose lives had been sacrificed to the welfare of their dying brothers. He assured his hearers that while life among his friends and relatives is sweet and dear, yet the pleasure is not to be compared with the peace and satisfaction which come to the earnest worker in the vineyard of the Lord, that life in far-off China has more joys than life in dear old North Carolina. The tribute which he paid to the memory of the consecrated wife of Bro. Herring was beautiful. The readers of the RECORDER remember that his wife's maiden name was Maggie Nutt.

In the evening of the same day the Baccalaureate sermon before the graduating class was preached by the Rev. W. C. Tyree of Durham, whose reputation as a preacher of force, clearness and eloquence is so well known throughout the State. He emphasized the superior excellence of Mary's choice as compared with Martha's. There has been a time in the world's history, the dreamy, forgetful, lethargic age of Feudalism and chivalry, when to hold up Martha as an example was salutary; but now Mary's choice in all its beauty and love appeals to us most strongly. The higher attainments one possesses, the greater is the responsibility resting upon one, and the more is it his duty to do good. The sermon was characterized by great strength and brilliance and gave evidence of profound thought.

MONDAY EVENING.

On Monday at 8:30 p. m., a large and cultured audience had assembled in the Opera House for the purpose of hearing the address before the Calliopean Literary Society by the Hon. C. M. Cooke of Louisburg. After a short speech of presentation by Mr. F. P. Hobgood, Jr., he advanced amid cheers and applause, and announced as his subject, "Developing of Character in Woman." He spoke beautifully and eloquently for about thirty minutes, listened to all the while rapturously by the entire audience. By "character" he meant "an aggregation of qualities positively good," and in that exclusive sense he employed the word. He recommended, as tending to the highest development of character in woman the cultivation of certain qualities, viz, firmness, candor, self-esteem, literary attainments, knowledge of the precepts of the religion of Jesus Christ.

TUESDAY MORNING

the Class Day exercises took place in the Opera House. These exercises consisted of essays by the graduates and music. The graduates in the literary department were Miss Bessie Pritchard of Franklin county, and Miss Lilly Shanks of Granville. The essays of these young ladies were beautiful in style and contained good, substantial thought, giving evidence of minds trained to think and pens trained to express thoughts. To their other excellencies was added the admirable manner in which they were read. The music of the occasion was grand, and sustained the reputation of the music department of the Seminary as one of the best in the South. The lady who has presided over this department is an accomplished and talented instructor, and the playing of the young ladies bore testimony to careful and approved training. Especially do I wish to mention the piano solos of the graduates in music—Miss Fannie Timberlake of Oxford, Miss Edna Hudson of Apex, and Miss Carrie Hobgood of Oxford. These are particularly worthy of mention as showing perfect knowledge of the charming art and the highest degree of technical perfection.

ART EXHIBIT.

All day Tuesday and Tuesday evening the work done by the students of the Art Department was on exhibition at the Seminary, and during that time a large number of visitors and friends viewed the beautiful pictures. The exhibit consisted of crayons, water-colors, and pastels. It would be a difficult task to single out a few from the one hundred works on exhibition as preeminently worthy of praise.

The afternoon was given to a meeting of the alumnæ of the institution, and during the evening there was a social gathering in the parlors, which was very largely attended.

Thus has ended one of the most pleasant and delightful commencements in the history of the Seminary. President Hobgood says the outlook for next year is full of hope. This institution has done a great work for the girls of the State and is destined to accomplish still greater works in their behalf.

An Unprecedented Thing.

Dear Recorder:—I want to make a statement, and ask you, or any other intelligent Baptist, a question.

Mrs. J. C. Davis of New York, who says she used to be a Baptist, but joined her husband in his church (Presbyterian), came to Greenville, N. C., on Thurday, May 24, as Corresponding Secretary of the International Order of the "King's Daughters and Sons." She conducted a service in the Presbyterian church, Friday, in which reports from several circles were read. The same night she lectured on the Order in the Opera House to a big crowd, and Sunday morning in the same building. After making a talk to the Methodist Sunday-school, Mrs. Davis gave notice that at four o'clock that p. m. a consecration service would be conducted in the Episcopal church, at which time the communion would be administered to the "King's Daughters and Sons." According to announcement, on Sunday afternoon, Rev. A. Greaves, pastor of the Episcopal church, administered the Lord's Supper to the King's Daughters and Sons, who were members of any church. I asked Mr. Greaves, who is an humble, good man, and very much loved by the Greenville people, on the following morning, if he administered the communion to them as church members, or as a society of King's Daughters and Sons? He said, "I administered the communion to them as an order of King's Daughters and Sons." Some think me very narrow and uncharitable in condemning such,—first, because it is, so far as I know, an unprecedented thing to administer the Lord's Supper to a mere society. Second, because it would force the Baptist young men and women belonging to the society, to either refuse the communion, or violate the rules of, and create disturbance in their own church. And third, because such conduct is unscriptural, and there is danger of eating and drinking to their own condemnation.

Now having made these statements, for my own benefit, and for the information of other young Baptist people, who will be invited to join this Order, I want you, or any other well posted Baptist, to tell me whether or not I am right in my threefold opposition to such conduct.

Mrs. Davis made a very tender, pathetic, womanly plea for all to join the Order, wear the cross, and thus become Sons and Daughters of the King. Isn't there danger of people who do not and will not think of joining the Order, trusting in such a human institution, wearing the shining little silver cross, while behind the precious motto is an unregenerated heart? Can any human being, who has passed the age of accountability, possibly be a Son or Daughter of the King, who has not been born again?

Things Important.

It has been only a few days since the Southern Baptist Convention adjourned at Dallas, and now for distribution in North Carolina are in the hands of the Vice-Presidents of the three Boards—Home, Foreign, and Sunday-school. These are valuable records. They give much information to be found in no other publications. If you desire a copy, send your address and four cents in stamps to Rev. R. T. Vann, Scotland Neck, Vice-President of the Home Mission Board for this State, to Rev. R. Van Deventer, Henderson, Vice-President of the Foreign Mission Board for this State, or to me at Raleigh, N. C. If you desire copies for distribution in your church or churches, address me, name the number desired and your Express office, and they will cost you only the Express from this city to your office.

THE TRUSTEES OF WAKE FOREST COLLEGE

will convene at the College in annual session on Tuesday, 9 o'clock a. m., June 12th, 1894. This will be a meeting of very great importance, and it is hoped every member of the Board will be present at the hour named above. The "Atlanta Special," and all other trains, carrying passengers, will stop at the College, June 12—15.

DR. TAYLOR'S ARTICLES

are now in the hands of the printer, and the first edition of 25,000 copies, in pamphlet form, will soon be ready for distribution. Those interested in this work can now send in their orders for the number of copies desired. The distribution to the people will, of course, be free; but the cost of publication and distribution will be considerable—perhaps about $500—and the friends of the proposition can make it light on each one, if all will send at once a money order or check for some amount towards this expense.

A New Association Proposed.

The Greensboro church has sent out a letter to a number of adjacent churches asking them to withdraw from their Associations for the purpose of forming a new Association with Greensboro as a centre. I believe this to be a wise step. The passage of railroads through our country necessitates a change in many of our Associational boundaries. The time for the two days' journey over dusty highways to reach our Associations has passed. In this busy age everybody is in a hurry. The country embraced in this proposed Association is as fine as we have in the State. It has been neglected too long already. This is an opportunity to take it and plant our churches in every part of it.

It will be possible to reach any church within the bounds of the Association by means of the railroad. It will be easy to attend Union Meetings. It will soon become one of the best Associations by reason of the proximity of healthy aggressive churches.

It is the duty of churches to consider in what Associations they can best promote the glory of God in the building of the waste places. I hope the churches addressed will carefully and prayerfully consider the matter.

Young People's Societies.

BY REV. C. W. BLANCHARD.

It would seem from the manner in which the advocates of Young People's Societies discuss the question, that they esteem all who oppose the general movement as opposed to any church organization for the development of its members or youth. To make myself clear to all who are not acquainted with my plans of church work, I wish to say that I am theoretically and practically in favor of church development; and believe that the only hope of an ideal growth in the spirituality, temporality, and, I might say, doctrinal teachings of the Bible or church polity, lies in the efforts of our churches to keep their members well harnassed. I believe in having a W. M. Society in every church for the development of the female membership and for its influence on the entire interest of the Master's kingdom. I believe in organizing the youth for the purpose of teaching them the practical lessons of Christianity, "training them up" religiously "in the way they should go."

I believe every church is the loser, and its membership dwarfed, that does not sustain a well organized, enthusiastic young men's prayer meeting. (I expect in less than a decade we will be led to say the same of our young ladies). The church that is without a weekly prayer-meeting for all, only has a name to live. These are my ideas of church organizations in the way of societies, and as fast as I find any suggestions of improvement from other churches or pastors, I feel under obligations to advocate them to my churches, but these are all cloistered beneath the wings of the church. Whatever of good may come from the work of these organizations will be imputed to the church of Christ. The relation of each of these organizations is so intimately associated with the others that the gradation of development leads from one to the other without any formal initiation. The intimate watchcare of the church over these societies, permits it to correct any error or stimulate any weakness before it has carried the society and church to ruin.

Now as to the general organization, whose advocates are some of our best brethren, I oppose upon principle.

1. I believe it is a departure from Baptist principles. Every Baptist church is an independent, self-governing body. It owes its allegiance to God and knows no higher authority in organizations or men than in its self. Its fraternal obligations to other churches or to Associations or Conventions cease at the limit of Divine instruction. For this independence we have paid a great price, even the blood of our fathers. One of the proud boasts of the Baptists to day is their local independence and conscience liberty. With my mind fixed upon this principle which the advocates of a general organization for the young people do not appreciate in churches less than myself, I am puzzled to see how they can harmonize the difficulty that confronts them in a centralized power to which each local society would be subjected. Who could expect a church to endorse an effort to take from it its God-given authority to control and manipulate its own strength and train its own youth any more than they would expect a true parent to appreciate the effort of some one to take away their household privileges, or in any way to influence their children contrary to their advice?

I am not "uneasy" about this movement, as my good friend Dr. Broughton states in the last RECORDER. I think the matter will be self-regulating. Somebody may be able to show that the opposers of the Y. P. Societies have expressed "exaggerated" views, or have taken a cobweb in a persimmon bush for a ghost, but it will take a logical proof and not a tirade of censure to convince some of us. If such measures should convince us it would be against our will, and we would be unprofitable servants of the new cause, If this is "nonsense," it is abundant in these parts.

2. I am opposed to the general organization, because our Sunday-school work has proved that it is not necessary. Every church should be engaged in regular Sunday-school work. It is the only reliable hope of a church. I am glad as a rule our churches are keeping open regular Sunday-schools. These Sunday-schools are the life of the churches, and from the least to the greatest, they are developing the people in doctrine, in work, but who would advocate taking the responsibility of the Sunday-school out of the hands of the church? What Sunday-school worker, but a fanatic, would say that the church should be relieved of the burden of the Sunday-school? I for one believe that great good has come to the churches and the Master's cause every way through the Sunday-schools, but I believe that the greatest good comes where the schools are most closely allied to the churches in this work, and are fostered under the wings of the churches.

Now to make a very brief statement, I believe that every society or organization in a church should be equally subject to it, whatever the design of the organization. And I am prepared to say from my point of view that every society or organization that cannot exist under this regulation hasn't a right to live. Our Sunday-schools have annual gatherings in Association for their mutual development and to increase enthusiasm for Sunday-school work. This I most heartily endorse, and wonder that so few of our people take part in it. But when these Associations would assume to be head and authority in the Sunday-schools over the State and to dictate to them as a sovereign body, I shall renounce the Sunday-school Association. In like manner I believe there would be good in fraternal messengers from our churches, representing the different organizations, meeting together at least once a year for mutual encouragement in their respective work, but let it be for that purpose alone. All this may be but "the result of a narrow conception of the kingdom of Christ," and the argument may "need no answer," and this view of it I suppose accounts for the dogmatic shifts of the advocates of Y. P. Societies without any answers, but it will not satisfy a true Baptist. The devotees of Papal sovereignty would doubtless esteem it sufficient for his Majesty to assert, but Baptists want to be loyal to truth, and think that time is not pressing on these matters so hard that one could not take time to explain himself. If the brethren who want all the Baptists to believe in Y. P. Societies, expect us to believe it because they say it is right, they ought to be willing at least to show us who they are—why they are so peculiarly favored.

3. I am not only opposed to the effort as an innovation, but because I believe it will be against the local societies themselves. The church as a whole has a family relation. This relation, for the good of the church, must not be broken nor subdivided. Nothing can improve our ideas of church development, and bring us to a better understanding of the needs of church discipline, than a proper understanding of household relations and methods of attaining desired ends. All consent that the object in view ought to make every member of the family better and happier day by day, and to bring the intimate relations of each member of the family closer and closer each day. This is the only road that leads to ultimate happiness. But certain details of manœuvre are left to the discretion of the heads of the family for the accomplishment of this work. In family No. 1, it is decided that the best way to train children to be useful men and women, to be honorable citizens, to be humble Christians relying upon the strength of God and a knowledge of his truth for faith and practice, is to have them often around the fireside in the the family circle, and under the direct drill of father and mother. The curiosities of the young mind unembarrassed are poured out as he prats on his father's knees, and as often an interested parent takes occasion to leave a lasting impression on its plastic mind. By the knees of its mother (than which no child ever bowed at a holier shrine), it bows to lisp its first holy petition. The father at the close of each day by example learns it to reverently express homage to God for his goodness and to commit by faith the further keeping of his soul and body. The lessons of life are taught them then. The joys of life are imparted then. The cords of the family circle are drawn closer and bound with bands of steel. If any good follows in life, they wreathe a garland for a mother's brow and reverently crown her the queen and princess of all honor.

In family No. 2, the same high purposes are in view, but a different idea as to the road that leads to the goal. The parents sigh and long for the consummate end, but the training and developing of the children are referred to other agencies. In the earlier part of life they are put in a department to themselves both male and female, and with the door closed they are expected to grow wise and good, while the parents in another department are amusing themselves with the daily press or in wholesome sleep. When these juveniles are ready in matter of age, for stronger lessons, and it is desired they shall be impressed with not only the lessons of parental obligation that they have just learned in the first department, but must learn the brother to be kind and courteous to his sister, and the sister to honor and respect the claims of a brother, the sagacious parents decide they had better put a wall between them and separate the sex that they may have better opportunity to learn these lessons, and the parents will return to their slumbering. These parents are surprised when their children refuse to acknowledge them as such, and grieved to see that they are disloyal to almost every human claim upon them. The name of their children is legion to day, and perhaps nine tenths of the infractions of society are directly or indirectly due to such a cause.

So with the churches that delegate their work to some other agency. If the work in any event should be well done, the church that should be the mother of every laudable religious enterprise will be called the harlot or stranger. No one will dare say that the work of Masons and Odd Fellows is not a good work, but who that was helped by them ever praised or loved a church for it. If through the organizations, apart from the churches, the gospel was carried to the ends of the earth and souls were saved, would those souls love the church or the organization that sent them the gospel? Who would blame them for loving the society that helped them? Now it follows that we must say that the church is not sufficient for the task God gave it, and other aids of more modern conception are necessary, and consent to the death of the church, or we must accept the Divine institution as adequate to meet the Divine purpose and teach our people to respects its power and ability to do all that a visible organization can afford for humanity.

The claims of Society brethren are that our young people need educating. It seems reasonable to us that if our young people need to learn something that we know, we owe it to be with them in some way and teach them, or else how can they learn it? If it is confessed that they ought to learn something that we cannot know, whence the hope of their instruction?

Surely it cannot be possible that a few of the leaders (?) of our churches have had revelations that they wish to impart to the youth and are so selfish as to withhold it from the older ones who are anxious yet to be students.

We believe societies as such apart from church control should be relegated to those denominations whose inception and continuity are based on society work, but Baptists should steer clear of the innovation.

The Blind and the Dumb.

"There was brought unto him one possessed with a devil, blind and dumb; and he healed him, insomuch that the blind and dumb both spake and saw." Matt. 12: 22.

There is a standing enmity between Christ and Satan, between right and wrong. Christ is our friend and ever works for our good; Satan is our enemy and is always striving to ruin us. This poor man that was possessed was well nigh ruined. He was blind—he could not see to help himself; he was dumb—he could not ask others to help him. Satan had thus shut out communication and monopolized the whole soul and thoughts of this poor unfortunate. A soul, to-day led by Satan, is both blind and dumb—blind in the things of God, and dumb at a throne of grace. Satan puts out the eyes of faith, and seals the lips of prayer.

But the Son of God was manifested that he might destroy the works of the devil; and accordingly he cures this man, drives Satan from his hiding place, and gives sight to the blind, and speech to the dumb, insomuch that the blind and dumb both spake and saw." Christ's goodness is directly opposite to the hatred and evil works of Satan. When Satan's power in the soul is overthrown, the eyes of faith are opened to see the beauties of the gospel and the glories of God, and the tongue is loosened to speak his praises and tell of his great goodness.

Matters in Union County, Etc.

Dear Recorder:—Since my last letter several things have occurred in Union county and other points that may interest your readers.

It has been commencement month at almost every point where a school was located in this part of the State. Last week there were three. Prof. H. E. Copples, a Wake Forest man, closed Wednesday. Bro. J. B. Richardson of High Point preached the sermon on Sunday, May 13. Every one is very loud in their commendation of his effort. This is not to be wondered at when we remember that Bro. Richardson is one of the strongest thinkers in the State. Dr. W. S Creasy, a Methodist Bishop, Charlotte, delivered the literary address on Wednesday. Dr. Creasy is a speaker and scholar of rare ability, and it was doubtless done in superb style. The point of school interest for Union county is

UNIONVILLE

Dr. J. B Shearer preached the sermon at this point May 13th—a masterly one, they say, it was, too. On Monday evening the small children took charge. Tuesday evening the Franklin Society gave a public debate. Wednesday evening the Philomathesian did likewise. Both debates were exceptionally good. I doubt if any high school in the State pays more attention to speaking than this one. Two medals were awarded to the best debaters. Thursday evening there was a musical concert, and the concert on Friday was the day of all. The chief attraction of this day was Prof. J. B Carlyle's address. Prof. Carlyle is one of the leading orators of the Old North State. When oratory and brains are combined, we may expect a great speech. That is just what they all say they had. I have no doubt of the truthfulness of this statement, though I did not hear the speech, having a like duty to perform at with the oratory and greatness left out. Prof. W. F. Humbert has only taught one year, but has made a first class record. He has enrolled 121, and had an average of 70. His closing exercises were good. He expects to open the school again some time in August.

Besides the commencements, there has been a few small ripples along

BAPTIST LINES.

The first of this month it was my delightful privilege to aid Bro. J. B. Richardson in a meeting at Leaksville. A better meeting I have never been in. The whole church was revived, and there were some twenty-five or thirty conversions in the eight days I was with him. If there is a better village in the State than Leaksville, I do not know it. They have the most commodious, neatest, prettiest and cheapest church in the State. A good many others might learn a lesson from the Leaksville flock. But then all churches haven't a D. F. King to manage for them, nor a Maj. Morehead to purchase the material at wholesale prices.

On my way to Leaksville, I called by and preached for the Reidsville saints. Here is one of the best churches in the State awaiting some good brother with a good parsonage partly finished, and a good salary. I most earnestly hope that they may have a pastor at no far-distant day. It would have been a pleasant duty for this scribe to have served them if circumstances had been such as to have allowed him to do so. They were not, and hence I shall remain at Monroe. If any brother wishes a first class people in all respects, Reidsville is the place for him.

I am now at Albemarle aiding Bro. J. B. Suttle in a meeting. He is bishop of six churches here in Stanly and doing a first-class work. Our meeting is moving along nicely. We have only held three services and there have been three conversions. Our congregations are very large and the order is perfect. We are expecting a good meeting. I will give the results when the meeting is over.

My brethren at Monroe are doing excellent work. My congregations are steadily increasing. They raise more money every month. Our house is moderately filled on Sunday evenings now.

We hope to put a colporter in the field for the Union Association for two months. We are trying to secure a first class brother.

More anon. M. A. ADAMS.

M. Hammerly, a well-known business man of Hillsboro, Va., sends this testimony to the merits of Ayer's Sarsaparilla: "Several years ago, I hurt my leg, the injury leaving a sore which led to erysipelas. My sufferings were extreme, my leg, from the knee to the ankle, being a solid sore, which began to extend to other parts of the body. After trying various remedies, I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, before I had finished the first bottle, I experienced great relief; the second bottle effected a complete cure."

Funds Received for Cove Baptist Church.

Dear Recorder:—Please acknowledge the following contributions for the Cove Baptist church debt:

Brethren R. F. Broaddus and J. W. Whitty, $2.00 each; Revs. P. G. Elsom, Rufus Ford and Mrs. Penniel, $5.00 each; Wilmington Baptist church, $9.00; Antioch Baptist church (Pitt county), $7.00. Total, $36.00.

If we can get a little help, we will be able to remove the entire indebtedness from this little struggling church. Remember the house is not completed; it is only so we can hold service in it. We want to get this debt off so we can go ahead and finish it. I have written to several churches and Sunday-schools that I have not heard from yet. If they will all respond with a small contribution, we will be able to pay our debt and go ahead with the balance of the work we so much need on our church.

Our work is encouraging here. The attendance is good at our services. I received a very worthy candidate for baptism at our last Sunday morning service. This will give us a membership of eighteen. We organized nine months ago with seven.

Brethren and sisters, you could not help a more worthy and needy cause. Send your money to the undersigned, and it will be acknowledged in the BIBLICAL RECORDER.

Cove, May 23, 1894.

No Degrees of Happiness in Heaven.

Paul says, "By the grace of God I am what I am." 1 Cor. 16: 10. He further says, "By grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God, not of works, lest any man should boast." Eph. 2: 8. Christ is emphatically "our all and in all." Col. 3: 11. He is "the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." Rom. 10: 4. The law demands perfection, but that perfection is found only in Christ, so when the pardoned sinner appears in Christ at the judgment clothed in his justifying righteousness, the demands of the law will be fully met—the Divine justice will be satisfied. Then the Judge will say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant," enter thou into the joys of thy Lord. "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their father." Matt. 13: 43. All the children of God have the blessed assurance "that their vile bodies at the resurrection will be fashioned like unto the glorious body of Christ." Phil. 3: 21. "And it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." 1 John 3; 2. There are only a few of the great number of Scriptures, which so strongly sustain the doctrine of equality in heaven. But says the advocate for degrees of happiness in heaven, it is a reward of grace. Yes, all the happiness any saint will enjoy in glory will be a reward of grace. But let us examine the word "grace" a little in this sense. If I understand correctly, it is the bestowment of unmerited favor. Can we merit a greater degree of happiness in heaven than others by our good deeds? If we can, I must change my definition of grace; and I frankly confess I don't know what to change it to.

Now, if our salvation and all our future happiness are attributable entirely to the meritorious atonement of Christ, I confess I can't see how our deeds while in the flesh can raise or lower us in heaven, or make us happy or less happy there. Now I would not be understood to discourage good works and perseverance in the cause of Christ; far be that from me. We are under obligations inconceivably great to take up our crosses daily, sacrifice continually, and to employ all our time and talent during this short life in the precious cause of our blessed Redeemer, and all this should be done out of love to God our Saviour.

In conclusion, let me say I write these few lines, not because I am concerned about whether I will have a high or low seat in heaven, a large or small crown, a greater or less degree of happiness. No, if I can but be permitted to take my position at the feet of my blessed Saviour, my most sanguine expectations will be fully met and my highest aspirations more than realized. But this is what concerns me, and the main reason why I write these lines, I can't see but what the idea of degrees of happiness in heaven detracts from the merits of the Cross. Where is the consideration for that difference? In what does it consist? Is it in man? Or is it in Christ? If it is in man, are not his works meritorious? If in Christ, will he not bestow his sovereign grace upon all alike?

JAMES JORDAN.

"Believe Also in Me."

There is no journey of life but has its clouded days, and there are some days that our eyes are so blinded with tears that we find it hard to see our way or even read God's promises. Those days that have a bright sunrise, followed by sudden thunderclaps and bursts of unlooked for sorrows, are the ones that test certain of our graces the most severely. Yet the law of spiritual weight very closely resembles the law of physical optics. When we come suddenly out of the daylight into a room even moderately darkened, we can discern nothing; but the pupil of our eye gradually enlarges until unseen objects become visible. Even so the pupil of the eye of faith has the blessed faculty of enlarging in dark hours of bereavement, so that we discover our loving Father's hand is holding the cup of trial, and by and by the gloom becomes luminous with glory. The fourteenth chapter of John never fails with such music upon our lips so when we catch its sweet strains amid the pause of some terrific storm. "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. I will not leave you comfortless."—Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler.

Literary.

Series of portraits of Cardinal Gibbons, Lord Rosebery and Richard Harding Davis will appear in the department of "Human Documents" in the June number of McClure's Magazine.

Benjamin Griffith. Biographical sketches contributed by friends. Edited by Col. Chas. H. Banes, A. M. 12mo, 296 pp. Price, $1.00. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

It is only saying what all know, that for the past twenty-five years one of the most prominent men in the Baptist denomination was Benjamin Griffith, the honored Secretary of the American Baptist Publication Society. His counsel was always sought; his presence was valued and his judjment respected. His management of his great trust has been so conspicuous for integrity and success, and his loyalty to all the interests of the denomination with which he was connected was so marked and well understood that no one was more welcome to the platforms of its great gatherings than was he.

When in October last he suddenly laid down his work and went home, more than one thought of a worthy representation of his life and work and of the cause he served. This has been secured in the volume hereby noticed. Dr. Griffith's successor, Col. Chas. H. Banes, was fittingly requested to act as editor, and various parties were chosen by him to write different chapters, according as their acquaintance with Dr. Griffith and his work fitted them to do. Dr. Sarles, a college mate, writes of Student Life. Dr. Blackall of his great work, the Publication Society. Dr. Henson of him as an Organizer and on the platform. Prof. Williams writes of his Life in the Home and in the Church. Dr. Weston of his Denominational Relations, and Dr. Rowland of the Fruition that crowned his life, with others on themes equally important; while the editor himself writes the introduction and the story of Dr. Griffith's Boyhood.

Ray's Doctrinal Magazine, Vol. 1, No. 1, is the first of a series of doctrinal treatises, and considers "Bible Feet-washing. It is from the pen of editor D. B. Ray, D. D., of the American Baptist Flag. The entire matter is embraced in thirty two small pages; yet it is sufficiently clear, and just terse enough to be forceful. It shows that feet-washing was a social custom; that the feet-washing by the Saviour occurred two days before the Passover and the Lord's Supper; that it is in no way a church ordinance. Price, 10 cts., from F. M. Ray, 1404 Locust St., St. Louis, Mo.

The "Golden Jubilee Number" of the North Carolina University Magazine surpasses any other production of the kind we have seen. Besides an interesting sketch of the Magazine for fifty years, and a picture of the present editorial corps it contains pictures of all the members of the present faculty as well as a picture of the faculty of 1844 The reminiscent article by Dr. Battle is easily the most entertaining. Dr. Weeks brings out some quaint facts with several letters written by a University student in 1805. Pres. Winston is eloquent in "The University of To day." Mr. Busbee's sketch of Judge Gaston's historic "Carolina, Carolina," and Mr. Thompson's "The Magazine for Fifty Years" are valuable contributions to history. Of the several poems "Desdemona" and "The Day of Rest" strike our fancy.

The reproduction in this number of fragments of a "Hymn to Apollon," found on tablets unearthed at Delphi by French excavators last October, is of peculiar interest. It was probably written and sung about the middle of the third pre-Christian century; and has revealed to the world somewhat of the vocal music of ancient Greece. It was composed in the peonic metre. Of Prof. Tolman's translation of the hymn we have space only to say that in some respects it is superior to others, which have appeared in The Brown Magazine and The Independent. We prefer M. Reinach's interpretation of the opening lines, however, though, were it a matter of prose, the sheer literalness of Prof. Tolman would be preferable. We congratulate Prof. Cobb on the remarkable degree of success with which he has met in his efforts to make the Magazine a periodical of general interest; and on the establishment of "The University Press," of which Bro. Z. T. Broughton is director.

What we Owe to Others.

We owe other people service. Service goes with loving. We cannot love truely and not serve. Love without serving is but an empty sentiment, a poor mockery. God so loved the world that he gave. Love always gives....This matter of serving has multitudinous forms. Sometimes it is poverty that stands at our gate, and money help is wanted. A thousand times more frequently, however, it is not money, but something else more precious that we must give. It may be loving sympathy. Sorrow is before us. Another's heart is breaking. Money would be of no use; it would be only a bitter mockery to offer it. But we can hold to the neighbor's lips a cup of the wine of love, filled out of our own heart, which will give new strength to the sufferer. Or it is the anguish of a life struggle, a human Gethsemane, beside which we are called to watch. We can give no actual aid—the soul must fight its battles alone; but we can be as the angel that ministered to our Lord's Gethsemane, imparting strength and helping the weary struggler to win the victory.

The world is very full of sorrow and trial, and we cannot live among our fellow men and be true without sharing their loads. If we are happy, we must hold the lamp of our happiness so that its beams will fall upon the shadowed heart. If we have no burden, it is our duty to put our shoulders under the load of others. Selfishness must die, or else our own heart's life must be frozen within us. We soon learn that we cannot live for ourselves and be Christians; that the blessings that are given to us are really for other people; and that we are only God's ministers to carry them in Christ's name to those for whom they were intended. —J. R. Miller, D. D.

Beauty Out of Ugliness.

A lady who, in her girlhood, was discouraged by her lack of beauty, but lived to become a leader of society, with hosts of sincere and loving friends, told the following story of the incident which gave her hope and inspired her to usefulness: "If I have been able to accomplish anything in life, it is due to the words spoken to me in the right season, when I was a child, by an old teacher. I was the only homely, awkward girl in a class of exceptionally pretty ones, and being also dull at my books, became the butt of the school. I fell into a morose, despairing state, gave up study, withdrew into myself and grew daily more bitter and vindictive. One day the French teacher, a gray-haired old woman, with keen eyes and a kind smile, found me crying. 'What is the matter, my child?' she asked. 'O madame, I am so ugly!' I sobbed out. She soothed me, but did not contradict me. Presently, she took me to her room, and after amusing me for some time, said, 'I have a present for you,' handing me a scaly, coarse lump covered with earth. 'It is round and brown as you. "Ugly," did you say? Very well. We will call it by your name, then. It is you! Now, you shall plant it, and water it, and give it sun for a week or two.' I planted it and watched it carefully; the green leaves came first, and at last the golden Japanese lily, the first I had ever seen. Madame came to share my delight. 'Ah,' she said, significantly, 'who would believe so much beauty and fragrance were shut up in that little, rough, ugly thing? But it took heart when it came into the sun.' It was the first time that it ever occurred to me that, in spite of my ugly face, I, too, might be able to win friends, and to make myself beloved in the world." —Christian Herald.

Northern Baptist Anniversaries.

Northern Baptists met in annual session at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., May 21—30.

Sessions of the following organizations were held: Women's Baptist Home Mission Society; American Baptist Education Society, which is composed of both Northern and Southern Baptists; American Baptist Home Mission Society; American Baptist Publication Society; American Baptist Historical Society; and the Baptist Missionary Union.

The Woman's Mission Society, reported having received $64,817.19 from all sources last year, and now have a balance in the treasury of $1,465 79. The estimated value of contents of boxes is $12,765 29. The number of local societies in this organization is 2,051; and 104 missionaries were employed for either a part or the whole of the past year.

North Carolinians having had opportunity to judge of the work of the American Baptist Education Society, the proceedings of its session should be of unusual interest. This Society meets one year in the North and next in the South. At this session, Hon. W. J. Northen, the "pious Governor" of Georgia, was elected President; W. R. Rothwell of Missouri, and Andrew McLeish of Illinois, Vice Presidents; Dr. H. L. Morehouse, Corresponding Secretary; J. Levering, Treasurer; Rev. E. M. Poteat, Recording Secretary. Thirty-six States were represented at this meeting, President Charles E. Taylor reflecting great credit on North Carolina. This Society has been spoken of as a "unifying influence in our denominational life and activities," and the reason in the statement is manifest in the name of its officers and the number of States represented.

Since 1889, when this Society was organized, thirty-two institutions in twenty three States have received donations from it. As our readers know, the benevolent J. D. Rockefeller makes a great many of his educational gifts through it; and at the present writing a proposition from it is before the Trustees of Wake Forest College. The Society will give the College $5,000, provided $30,000 are raised by us. The Society now has conditional outstanding propositions to 24 institutions amounting to $142,357 72. It has helped 11 institutions during the year, amounting to $34,017.12 on conditions which promoted the raising of $93,265 70. Since its organization it has paid out $336,516 56 on conditions which, when fulfilled, will give the institutions aided $1,618,816.

The first general topic considered this year was "Constitutional Protection for our Public Schools." Various positions were held as to the function of the State in this matter; but there was no division of sentiment on the effort to keep public money out of Catholic city schools. D. E. Thompson of Canada spoke on "Common and Separate Schools in Canada," and Dr. Wayland Hoyt on "The Faribault Plan and its Failure."

Pres. A. H. Strong, D. D., Pres. C. E. Taylor, D. D, Pres. E. B. Andrews, D. D, were appointed a committee to draft resolutions embodying results of the evening's discussion, and they reported resolutions protesting against State aid for sectarian institutions, and recommended an amendment to our Constitution, which reads as follows:

"No law shall be passed respecting the establishment of religion, or, prohibiting the free exercise thereof; nor shall the state, or any county, city, town, village or other civil division of the state use its property or credit, or any money raised by taxation, or otherwise, or authorize such property, credit or money to be used for the purpose of founding, maintaining, or aiding, by appropriation, payment for services, expenses, or in any other manner, any church, religious denomination, or religious society, or any institution, society or undertaking which is wholly or in part under sectarian or ecclesiastical control."

The following is also embodied in the report:

"We hold that the right of the State to give to its youth an elementary secular education, and to cultivate the spirit of intelligent patriotism, is unquestionable, while religion is the concern of the individual, the home and the church."

It was reported in one of our daily papers that Dr. Taylor exerted almost a revolutionizing influence in this committee, and his hand is prominent in the tenor of the preceding provision of the report. We hope he may be persuaded to give our readers some of his impressions of his trip and of the meeting in general in an early issue.

The American Baptist Home Mission Society had its meeting May 23d. It was not largely attended. This is the organization that has made itself notorious in recent weeks by statements in its organ regarding the treatment of the negro at the South. The total receipts for the year were $405,213.15; expenditures, $524,155.58. The year 1893 is spoken of as the most unfortunate year, so far as collections were concerned, in half a century. The whole number of laborers supported by the Society was 1,111, being 29 more than last year.

At Wednesday evening's meeting, Prof. C. F. Meserve of Raleigh, N. C., addressed the Society on "The Equipment of Shaw University, Raleigh, N. C.," to the presidency of which he but lately succeeded Dr. Tupper. He says $400,000 are needed by this Institution, which stands pre eminent among institutions of its kind the world over.

Foreign population was discussed on the day following.

Rev. A. J. S. Thomas of the South Carolina Baptist Courier, chairman of the committee appointed by the Southern Baptist Convention to confer with a similar committee of this organization looking to the promotion of co-operation between the Southern Home Board and the Northern Society in work among the Negroes, made a good speech. In the reports of our exchanges, no results of this coming together are mentioned.

The American Baptist Publication Society came next in order, and its meetings were the most enthusiastic of all. In the business department of this organization, last year's sales amounted to nearly half a million dollars. Forty-nine new publications have been issued, of which 737,000 copies were distributed. "The entire number of books, pamphlets, periodicals and tracts printed during the year is 35,762,950 copies." Work has been done in every section, and notwithstanding a debt, the Society is in an encouraging condition. It is one of the largest of Baptist enterprises.

Several papers were read before the Historical Society on May 26th. Nothing in this work is more worthy of note than the effort of Mr. Samuel Colgate to collect every minute and every publication of Baptist associations as far backward as possible. A splendid new fire proof library has been erected; and it will shortly contain more nearly complete denominational records than any similar institution.

The American Baptist Missionary Union met on Monday, May 28th. Like our Southern Board, it reported a great debt. The debt has been recently reduced by a bequest of $100,000, and the indebtedness now is about $100,000. This will not greatly hinder the work of this powerful institution.

From Bro. C. W. Matthews.

MEETING AT SOUTH NORFOLK.

We have just closed an eight-nights' meeting with our church at South Norfolk. Rev. W. F. Watson of the Spurgeon Memorial church preached for us four nights. Bro. Watson impressed me as a man of wonderful piety and fine preaching ability. The pastor preached every night for the remainder of the time. There have been to date four accessions to the church. There are others whom we confidently expect to cast their lots with us. Bro. Pruett is to aid us in the early fall in another meeting.

The prospects for a strong church in the future are favorable. Scarcely a Sunday passes that I do not receive one or more into our little fold. I love my work and am happy in it.

NORTH CAROLINIANS IN THE TIDE-WATER SECTION OF VIRGINIA

Rev. W. S. Leake, pastor of the Third church, Norfolk, is a North Carolina boy. His church has found it a difficult thing to stop that "Leake." I am not sure that they desire to stop him. His church has recently made some great improvements on their house of worship, and souls are being saved in that section constantly under Bro. Leake.

Rev. Wm. F. Watson had the celebration of the second anniversary of the existence of his church a few Sundays ago. The growth of this church seems almost miraculous, especially since Bro. Watson took the oversight of the work. Truly God sent Bro. Frank Watson to Spurgeon Memorial church, and now he is standing by him.

Rev. P. S. C. Davis is indeed a wonderful man. He is pastor of five large country churches, and finds time to preach at two or three mission points. He thinks a church ought to be organized between St. John's and Oak Grove in Princess Anne county, and Bro. Davis will do it if they don't stop him. Some brother at the Ministers' Conference last Monday moved that we try and find some work for Bro. Davis to do. But if there is any to be found, Bro. P. S. C. D. will find it and that without any help.

In his report some time since, Rev. Dr. J. J. Hall of Park Avenue church said they had eight thousand dollars on hand with which to begin their new church edifice. Possibly a still larger amount is on hand now.

Rev. Robert Van Deventer of Henderson, N. C., has been on a visit here (Berkley) to see his relatives.

Rev. H. N Quisenbury, Rev. E. B Hatcher and Rev. Dr. J. A Speight returned from the Dallas meetings a few days ago much delighted with what they heard and saw.

C. W. MATTHEWS.

From Rev. D. W. Herring in China.

Dear Recorder:—I have seen from a Shanghai paper that Mrs. Yates is dead. A great and good woman, she was a real mother in Israel. As I think of her departure, I think of the meeting on the other shore. Bravely did she endure the short separation from her husband. It is remarkable how she withstood her grief for his sake, for she seemed to feel that he was near enough to see her. The lamented pastor Wang who knew well her strength of character, remarked the day Dr. Yates died: "It is well it is he and not she, for she can stand it better without him than he could have done without her." Great is the loss of us all, but I sympathize most of all with the dear little church at Shanghai.

HELPLESS INVALID.

"About 18 months or two years ago my wife's health gave way, and she grew steadily worse. She could not retain scarcely anything she ate and the case finally assumed the worst form of

and she became a helpless invalid at the age of 18. I had her under the treatment of a good physician, but his efforts to relieve her were of no avail. So, after matters had continued thus for 8 or 10 months, and my wife had given up to die, I took the case in my own hands and purchased a bottle of Dr. King's began giving it to her in water as hot as she could drink it, before and after each meal, using a mild purgative occasionally on retiring at night.

Suffice it to say in less than a week there was

A WONDERFUL CHANGE.

See could eat a little of anything she desired, and today is a well woman. She used altogether possibly 4 or 6 bottles. In my opinion

GERMETUER HAS NO EQUAL."

Run Down by a Loaded Handcar.

D. T. ALLYN MEETS WITH A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

HIS ESCAPE, SICKNESS AND RECOVERY. PLUCK, PARALYSIS—A RAILROAD'S INGRATITUDE.

(From the Wallace, Neb., Herald.)

Last summer Mr. D. T. Ally of this place, worked for the B. & M. R. R., as a section hand on the section extending east from Tecumseh, the county seat of Johnson county, Nebraska. On the 2d day of July he met with an accident that nearly cost him his life. He and five other men were working a hand-car in front of which was a push car. Mr. Allyn was standing on the front part of the car, with his back towards the direction in which the car was being run. Just as the two cars came together, the foreman ordered him to step from the car on which they were riding on to the push car, and at the same time signaled another of the men to apply the brake, which slackened their speed enough to cause a gap of a few feet between the cars.

In stepping back to comply with the order he fell upon his back in the middle of the railroad track and the car, with its load of five men, tools and water keg, in all weighing fully a ton, passing over him. A rod on the underside of the car caught his feet and doubled him up so that his feet struck his face. As he rolled over, the bull-wheel struck his back and inflicted the injury that came so near proving fatal. The car was raised from the rails and thrown off the track.

He was carried to town and Dr. Snyder, the B. & M. R. R. surgeon at Tecumseh, was summoned. Afterwards Dr. C. C. Gafford, Dr. Yoden and Dr. Waters, all of Waymore, Neb., were called in consultation but they could afford no relief. About the 1st of October he became paralyzed from his waist down. The sense of feeling entirely left his legs, which became drawn one across the other. Dr. Livingston of Plattsmouth, Neb., the head physician of the B. & M. R. R. system was summoned to treat the case, but finally informed his patient that he could not live to see July, 1893. He had not the means to pay the expenses of a law suit against the railroad company, but the company's attorneys very willingly compromise the claim for damages by paying him $2,000. He continued to grow worse, the excruciating pain in his back never ceasing, until upon the recommendation and by the request of a lady friend, Mrs. W. G. Swan of Tecumseh, Neb., he began taking Pink Pills for Pale People. To the Herald reporter he said, "I had no more faith in them than I would have had in eating a handful of dirt." He commenced taking the pills on the 2d day of February, taking one after each meal, and in ten days' time, to his surprise and intense delight, the pain began to leave him. For seven months he had suffered continuously, and his joy when relief came can be imagined but not described. He continued taking the Pink Pills until the forepart of May. About the middle of March he could go about his ordinary work without any inconvenience. He considers himself entirely cured and feels as well as he ever did, except that his back is not as strong as it was before he was hurt.

This spring he moved to a farm twelve miles southwest of Wallace, where he has planted a good crop of corn and is doing all his work without any hired help. Should anyone doubt the statements herein made, they are invited to see him personally or write to him, and address him at Wallace, Neb. He is thankful for what Pink Pills have done for him, and is willing to go to some trouble to let others know of their wonderful curative properties.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, it seems, contain in a condensed form all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood, and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after affects of the grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale sallow complexions, that tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration; all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood and restore the glow of health to pale or sallow cheeks. In men the affect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature.

These Pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and Brockville, Ont., and are sold in boxes at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and are never sold in bulk.

Cedar Rock Closing Exercises.

The first annual closing exercises of Cedar Rock Academy and Business Institute took place May 28 and 29. It was a complete success.

The honors of the occasion were awarded as follows:

Scholarship Medal to Miss Mary Cheek, Chapel Hill, N. C., having made an average of 99.9 in her studies during the session. Declamation Medal to W. H. Smith, Hadley's Mills, N. C. Recitation Medal to Miss Pearl Pearce, Cedar Rock, N. C.

Prof. Carlyle of Wake Forest, N. C., delivered the literary address which was, indeed, an excellent one. He stirred the hearts of youths and set ablaze the fire of a holy ambition to be noble. Several young men, after the address, expressed themselves as being more determined than ever before to complete their education. Such an oration begets within the soul of youth noble aspirations. Prof. Carlyle will make friends for himself and for Wake Forest College wherever he goes. And may God bless him in his work in and for that grand old institution.

Commencement exercises of Washington and Lee University of Virginia occur June 17—20. Rev. F. H. Kerfoot of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary will preach the Baccalaureate sermon; Hon. Roger Q. Mills delivers the address before the Literary Societies; Hon. Jno. Goode of Virginia, the address before the Law Class; and Rev. Jno. A. Preston, D. D., of North Carolina, the Alumni address.

MARRIED.

JOHNSON—DREWETT — On May 23d, 1894, at the Mount Carmel Baptist church, Northampton county, N. C., near Seaboard, by Rev. M. L. Green, Mr. J. J. Johnson and Miss M. J. Drewett.

DIED.

HARMAN—On the 27th day of April, 1894, the angel of God's perfect love, the angel that men call death, entered the home of our dear brother, Rev. G. W. Harman, at Weldon, N. C., and took therefrom Mrs. Maggie L. Harman, the devoted wife, affectionate mother and faithful child of God, leaving the bereaved husband and three daughters to fight the stern battles of life unsupported by her whose presence, prayers and counsels had hitherto been such an inspiration to them; yet they should not sorrow as those who have no hope, for she left behind her the most conclusive evidence of her preparation for the transition from time to eternity. In her youth she professed faith in Christ and was baptized into the fellowship of the Rutherfordton Baptist church, of which she remained a consistent member until her marriage to Bro. Harman, by the late Rev. T. B. Justice.

She was one of the noble women whom the Lord has given to this church whose example and influence have been far-reaching in their effects. The church at Rutherfordton will ever feel the impetus of her life which led to greater and more earnest efforts, for God's glory and the salvation of the world, by the church. I have never known a more consecrated and efficient Sunday-school teacher, nor a more faithful attendant on all church services than was this sister. She has passed from earth to heaven. She rests from her labors and her works do follow her. Her remains were brought back to the home of her childhood, and on the 29th of April, after services in the church, were followed to the cemetery by a large procession, and there laid to rest to await the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ to receive her into his glory.

May her God, in whom she expressed such unbounded confidence in her last hours, take the bereaved husband and those motherless children under the shadow of his wings, and comfort and keep them to everlasting life, and sanctify this dispensation of his providence to the good of all her fellow laborers in the vineyard, and to the salvation of her father's entire family, is the prayer of her former pastor who knew her for years.

C. B. JUSTICE.

Rutherfordton, N. C.

HARRIS—Mrs. Ella Kerr Harris departed this life, in the fortieth year of her age, at her home in Reidsville, Rockingham county, N. C., at 3 o'clock p. m. May 14th, 1894. She was born and reared at a pleasant home in the southern part of Caswell county, and was the daughter of Alvis G. and Nancy Lea.

On the 19th of December, 1872, she was happily married by the writer to Mr. Robert Harris, to whom she was ever a faithful helpmeet and devoted wife. At the early age of ten, little Ella was found in the parlor, all alone, praying. When her Christian mother returned from a visit to a sick neighbor, at sun set of the same day, she met her at the front door and said, "Mother, God has forgiven my sins: I trust in Jesus; I love Jesus; I am happy." Some months after, she was baptized into the fellowship of Kerr's Chapel Baptist church, of which she remained an honored member until her death. As a friend she was kind, sympathetic and steadfast. As a mother, affectionate and self-sacrificing, ever willing to deny herself for the comfort and happiness of her children. As a wife she was, true, devoted and faithful. Her Christian life was of a quiet, unobtrusive nature. The poor, the sick and the family at home knew more of it than any one else. One who knew much of her every-day-life said to the writer, "She lived her religion at home." Could the lips of others speak they would tell of many benefactions by this now sainted woman of God, who held as a sacred principle, "Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth." This accorded with the modest and humble spirit which was a prominent feature in her character.

There was something a little remarkable about her sickness and death. Just before her sickness came she said to a very dear friend of hers, "Call to see me often; I have a presentiment I shall not live long. I am not afraid to die; I only regret leaving my dear husband and children behind." While sick she was patient and resigned, and talked freely with her family and friends about the beautiful home which Jesus has prepared for his people and in which she would soon meet many of her loved ones who have preceded her to the home beyond the skies. She said to her husband, "I have already seen in a dream what will soon come to pass. You and I were traveling together. Three angels came and took me out of your hands through death to my home in heaven." As she quietly and peacefully breathed her last her husband said, "Her prophecy is fulfilled." Her end was calm, peaceful and triumphant. The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. Messrs. Ware and Craig, after which a very large concourse of friends and relatives followed her remains to the town cemetery, where kind hands tenderly laid her away to rest till Christ shall come to receive his own.

She leaves a devoted husband, a daughter, three sons, three sisters, a brother and other relatives to mourn their loss. Dear bereaved and heart-stricken ones, look up, trust in Jesus, press on, follow her as she followed the Saviour, and you will meet her again. She is not dead, but sleepeth.

"It is not dying when our friends
In Jesus fall asleep;
Their better being never ends—
Then why dejected weep.

As Jesus died, and rose again,
Victorious from the dead,
So his disciples rise and reign
With their triumphant head."

F. H. JONES.

Tributes of Respect.

[The Women's Baptist Missionary Society] Weldon, N. C., met May 21st and passed the following resolutions:—

That whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst our beloved sister Maggie Logan Harman, the wife of our beloved pastor, and president of our Society,

Resolved, That while we mourn our loss, and offer our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family, and grieve that we shall see her face no more, that we bow in submission to our Allwise Father, and pray that her godly life and pious example may be cherished as a heritage to us that will bring forth good in our own lives and redound to his glory. We feel that it can be truthfully said of her, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be placed on the minutes of our Society, and a copy sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER and Roanoke News for publication.

Cedar Rock Academy & Business Institute.
(MALE AND FEMALE,)
is located in Franklin Co., N. C., 12 miles east of Louisburg. Unsurpassed for health and refinement. Situated in the country, it is free from the objectionable features of city and town schools. Good board in 300 yds. of the Academy at $7 per month (28 days) There are two regular boarding houses, one for young men, the other for young ladies, besides a number of private homes in which board can be had. Girls who board are required to board with the principal, unless otherwise requested by parent or guardian.
A FULL CORPSE OF EFFICIENT TEACHERS. Commercial instruction is a specialty. Diplomas are awarded to those who complete the commercial course as prescribed in catalogue. There is a great demand for young men of a business education.
MUSIC, both instrumental and vocal, also holds a prominent place in our school. We keep posted as to the requirements for matriculation in the different colleges of the State, and so direct the courses of those who expect to attend college that they may take good stands in their classes. For those who wish to prepare for teaching in public schools we arrange a special course looking towards that end. Our school is not for young men who wish to play the dude, nor for young ladies who wish to be society belles and pass their time in idleness, but for those who are earnestly desirous of a practical business education, or of sufficient preparation to enter colleges.
Session 1894-95 opens Aug. 21, 1894, and continues nine months. For catalogue and particulars, apply to JNO. A. COPPEDGE, Secy., Cedar Rock, N. C

Death's Protest.

Why dost thou shrink from my approach, oh, man
Why dost thou ever flee in fear, and cling
To my false rival Life? I do but bring Thee rest and calm. Then wherefore dost thou ban
And curse me? Since the forming of God's plan
I have not hurt or harmed a mortal thing,
I have bestowed sweet balm for every sting,
And peace eternal for earth's stormy span.

The wild, mad prayers for comfort, sent in vain
To knock at the indifferent heart of Life
I, Death, have answered. Knowest thou not 'tis he,
My cruel rival, who sends all thy pain
And wears thy soul out in unmeaning strife!
Why dost thou hold to him them, shunning me!
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in Independent.

Be Still.

Be still, O heart! Why fear and tremble!
What harm, what evil, can betide!
Though foes in mighty hosts assemble,
Fear not, for God is on thy side.

Be still, O heart! The Lord of Glory
Was once a man acquainted with grief.
He bends to hear—tell all thy story—
He loves, He cares, He'll send relief.

Be still, O Heart! Cease fearing, fretting
About the future, all unknown.
Ne'er think the Master is forgetting
About His own—His purchased one.

Be still, O heart! Thy King will send thee
The clouds or sunshine as is best;
His own right hand shall e'er defend thee,
Then trust His love, and know his rest.
—Jean H. Watson, in London Christian.

It Came to Pass.

George Stephenson, the celebrated engineer, used to speak with indignation of how the "Parliament men" badgered and baffled him with their book learning when he proposed to build a railroad from Liverpool to Manchester.

"The smoke from the engine," said these book learned men, "will kill all the birds, and the sparks will set fire to the fields and houses. The passengers will be made seasick; the noise will frighten away the game, and thousands of coachmen and innkeepers will be thrown out of employment."

The fast mail coaches were driven at the rate of ten miles an hour. When Stephenson asserted that the steam coaches would attain to a much more rapid rate of speed, he was laughed at and hooted as a crackbrain enthusiast.

"You must not claim a speed of over fifteen miles an hour," said the nervous counsel of the promoters of the railroad, to Stephenson, just as he was about to appear before a parliamentary committee.

A member of the committee, opposed to the proposed railroad, thought he could make the simple hearted engineer assert an absurdity that would kill the project.

"Well, Mr. Stephenson," he asked, "perhaps you could go seventeen miles an hour!"

"Yes."

"Perhaps twenty miles an hour!"

"Certainly."

"Twenty five, I dare say. You do not think it impossible!"

"Not at all impossible!"

"Dangerous, though!"

"Certainly not."

"Now tell me, Mr. Stephenson, will you say that you can go thirty miles an hour!"

"Certainly."

The fish was hooked to an absurdity, so every member of the committee thought, and they all leaned back in their chairs and roared with laughter.

But we now ride sixty miles in sixty minutes in full safety.—Exchange.

Raggles.

Raggles was only a scrubby little Indian pony. His owner had evidently considered him of no use, and had cruelly turned him loose on the bare prairie to shift for himself.

He was a sorry looking little fellow, as he stood one morning at the gate to Mr. Hudson's large cattle ranch, in Western Kansas, shivering in the wind, and looking with a wistful gaze at the sleek, fat ponies inside.

Mr. Hudson noticed him, and started to drive him away. But his little daughter Lillian said, "Let him in papa; he looks so hungry." Mr. Hudson opened the gate, and the pony walked in, just as if it were his home.

Mr. Hudson made inquiries, but no one knew anything about him; and as no owner ever came to claim him, Lillian claimed him as her special property, and named him Raggles, on account of his long tangled mane and tail.

He was a docile little creature, unlike the rest of the ponies on the farm. He soon came to regard Lillian as his mistress. She learned to ride him, and could often be seen cantering over the praries with her father.

But Raggles seemed to consider that she was not much of a rider, for he would carefully avoid all the dangerous looking places and holes in the ground, made by coyotes and prairie dogs, which are very plentiful in Western Kansas.

When the next spring came, Raggles did not look like the same little scrub. His rusty brown coat had all come off, and a new black one had taken its place.

By the next fall, the neighborhood could boast of a public school, and when Lillian began to go Raggles found he had regular duty every day.

Lillian would saddle him and ride to the school-house and send him home. At about half-past three Mr. Hudson would saddle him again and send him for Lillian.

He always arrived on time, and if he was a little early, would wait patiently by the door until school closed.

Some of my readers will remember the blizzard that struck Western Kansas in 1885, when so many people lost their lives and thousands of cattle were frozen to death. The storm commenced about noon, and the weather grew steadily colder.

The snow blew so thick and fast that Mrs. Hudson was afraid to trust Raggles to go for Lillian, but Mr. Hudson was sick and there was no one else.

She went to the barn, put the saddle on him, and tied plenty of warm wraps on. Then she threw her arms around his shaggy neck, and told him to be sure to bring Lillian home.

He seemed to understand, and started out with his shambling trot in the direction of the school house.

One hour passed slowly to the anxious parents. When two had passed their anxiety was terrible, as they strained their eyes to see through the blinding snow his shaggy form bringing their darling safely home. At last he came with Lillian on his back, bundled up from head to foot.

The teacher had fastened her on the pony and given him the rein; and so he had brought her safely home, none the worst for her ride except being thoroughly chilled.—Our Dumb Animals.

The Story of a Grain of Wheat.

IN THE FLOUR MILL

The noises on the inside of the mill are deafening. One who has never been in a flouring-mill of the largest size cannot realize what a peculiar lot of noises are made by the machinery. As soon as the wheat enters the machine from the long spout which brings it down from the upper floors, it falls between two rollers of iron, "chilled" iron they call it, and very hard iron it is, too. One of these rollers revolves rapidly, the other moves slowly, in order that the separation of the coat, or bran, from the kernel may be more easily accomplished. The wheat first passes between rollers separated just enough to allow the coat to be crushed. It is then carried away up to the top of the mill again, to a room where the sun vainly tries to shine in through the flour-coated windows far above the city's roofs. It next passes over a wire sieve which separates the bran from the kernel proper.

This bran, which contains much of the flour material, again passes down and is ground once more, this process being repeated four times, making five grindings, each one finer than the one preceeding it. Each time the fibrous or bran portions are more completely separated, and at last the bran comes out a clear, brownish husk with every particle of flour removed.

The inside part of the kernel has meanwhile been going through a very interesting process. After the first grinding or breaking, it passes to a big six-sided revolving reel covered with a fine wire netting or sieve. Through this reel the finer portions of the kernel pass, coming out in what is called "middlings," a granulated mess which goes back to the rollers for another crushing. This process is repeated through five reels, all but the first being of silk. The last one has one hundred and twenty threads to the lingal inch. The flour which comes out of the fifth reel, while white in hue, is yet not of the finest or "patent" grade, but is classed as "baker's" or second grade flour.

The middlings above referred to are purified by an interesting process. They are passed over a fine wire sieve, through the upper part of which a strong current of air is passed. This holds in suspense the tiny portions of fibrous matter which may have been in the flour, and at last, after this process of middlings purifying has been very carefully carried out, the flour appears spotless, snowy white,—the "patent" flour, as it is called. In the process of grinding in this gradual and repeated way, the germ of the wheat, a tiny particle about the size of a mustard seed, is separated from the white flour. It is what one might call the life-part of the wheat. If it were ground up, it would not leave the patent flour so white and powdery, so it is separated in one of the sievings, and passes into the darker or lower-grade flour.—It contains, however, the best and most nutritious part of the wheat.

The last thing that happens to the pulverized kernel, before it is ready for market, is the filling of barrels or sacks. Down many stories through a smooth tube comes the white or "patent" flour. Under the tube is the barrel or the sack, as the case may be, and, as it begins to fill, a steel auger, just the size of the barrel, bores down into the flour, packing it carefully and solidly beneath the broad blades.—St. Nicholas.

A Piece of Her Mind

A lady correspondent has this to say:

"I want to give a piece of my mind to a certain class who object to advertising, when it costs them anything—this won't cost them a cent.

I suffered a living death for nearly two years with headaches, backache, in pain standing or walking, was being literally dragged out of existence, my misery increased by drugging.

At last, in despair, I committed the sin of trying an advertised medicine, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and it restored me to the blessedness of sound health. I honor the physician who, when he knows he can cure, has the moral courage to advertise the fact."

The medicine mentioned is guaranteed to cure the delicate diseases peculiar to females, as "female weakness," periodical pains, irregularities, nervous prostration, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus' Dance, sleeplessness, threatened insanity.

To permanently cure constipation, biliousness, indigestion or dyspepsia, use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

Woman Should be Natural.

A woman never loses anything by being real. For a woman to be natural is for her to be an object of respect and love. She was created to sway, not as men sway, by strong physical powers, but in her own way and by her more gentle qualities. A natural woman is the greatest power in the world. By her very nature she conquers, whether she be the humble clerk or a ten-time millionaire.

"She is always so lovable because she is so natural," was the graceful tribute I heard a group of women a few evenings ago pay to a young woman who had just left them.

"Men are so fond of her," said another woman in the group, "and yet no one would call her pretty."

Let artifice, sham or pretention enter into the nature of such a woman and she would become at once an unwelcome guest where now she is bidden and eagerly sought for.

Someone may say: "Yes, the one you speak of is probably a rich woman, and she can afford to be lovable."

Not at all, my friend. She is the daughter of a man whose salary is too meagre for him to give his wife a servant, and this daughter helps the mother in her housework. She is the very sunshine of that home, simply because she never tries to appear what she is not.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Good Character Important.

Besides the happy satisfaction that a clear conscience and good character bring to every heart, it has a commercial value that it is well to take into consideration. For instance, B. F. Johnson & Co. of Richmond, Va., are advertising in this paper, and offer specially good business opportunities to men of character and standing in their respective communities. They want parties to work all or part of their time, as may suit their convenience.

WOMEN IN SOCIETY

—often need the strengthening support of a general tonic and nervine.

Are you weak, nervous, or ailing? Then Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription brings you special help. For delicate women, for all the derangements, disorders, and diseases of the sex, it lessenes pain and relieves sleeplessness, backache and bearing-down sensations. The success of "Favorite Prescription" in curing all the functional derangements, painful disorders, and chronic weaknesses of women, warrant its makers in guaranteeing it. Your money is returned if no benefit is received.

"SHOULD capital punishment be abolished?" is not a living question in these parts save within the walls of debating societies, which latter, by the way, have become homes for infirm and worn-out queries. In the opinion of serious men there is no reason why our State should lessen its number of capital crimes, not to mention other States which have only one to our four. Yet in the light of statistics—which will presently be submitted—it appears that the death penalty may even now be catalogued as a thing of a law enforcing Past. And such being the case, in the name of respectability and conscience we should legalize its abolition; for it is as shameful for officers of the law to allow the law to be disregarded as it is to break the law, and the fact that many laws are not upheld by those whom we pay and honor to uphold them is no argument against our proposition.

Some weeks since one John Brock murdered his wife—and no one has said, so far as we know, that she was not better as a wife than he could hope to be as a husband,—near Wilmington, N. C., in circumstances that bespoke the work of a fiend. John Brock is now in the penitentiary, a charge on our hands, and for only thirty years. Circumstantial evidence was never stronger than in this case. The scene, the marks, the man, his actions, his lies, his son—everything cried out against him. And John Brock dwells in a palatial residence prepared by his predecessors, and smiles as he recalls his law perverting lawyer's words when the verdict was returned, "they didn't break your neck anyway." It should have been broken—and every bone in his body besides. The more we contemplate the result of this trial, the more shameful it appears. No evidence—not one jot—was submitted to show that John Brock committed the crime when unaccountable or without premeditation: his defence was an unqualified denial. If he was guilty, he was guilty without palliation; and he was guilty of a most brutal murder. The jury calls his testimony a lie, saying that he did commit murder, and chicken-hearted or chicken-minded, or biased by some unknown influence, protects him with a lie from the condign end—the halter. Shame on New Hanover, that such a jury could be selected from her population, shame on her prosecuting officers! If John Brock can go unhung, capital punishment may as well be abolished. If a jury can be secured that will thus pronounce a murderer's only evidence a lie and in the face of entirely disinterested testimony of loud crying circumstances, which lacked not a link nor a letter, put him in a penitentiary for a few years, murderers may never again fear the gallows. The action in this case is an incentive to lynchings; and we do not hesitate to say that it would have been none the worse for New Hanover's honor, had this man been lynched. As it is, the law has been disregarded; and lynchers are incapable of doing more.

We might write a great deal in these premises. A murderer, convicted and sentenced, escaped from the Wake county jail not many days ago. A small effort was made to recapture him, but it was half-hearted. Orange Page, red handed, laughs at the law. Shame on Wake that such a jail and such jailers are here, that ignorant negroes make sport of them! Better have no law than have such executors of the law. Better leave penalties to open eyed men than to blind and decrepit "Justice!"

IT IS a repulsive subject, but as some statistics have recently been obtained relative to this law, and as it is very desirable that it be shown that our State is not more remiss in this particular than the average State, a few facts may be added.

There were 2,566 murders in this country in 1893; there were 7,790 in 1892! Such an increase is sufficient to startle the most complaisant. As a sequence of conditions as shown in the preceding article it is not unnatural. Further statistics are more deplorable: in four years, from 1889 through 1892, there were 20,000 murders in this country. (By "murders" is meant the taking of human life in any way save by accident or in self-defence.) And the courts hanged 831 people of these 20,000 charged with "capital crimes." Is the reader at all shocked to learn now that in those four years there were 558 lynchings! Is not capital punishment well nigh abolished when one murderer in each sixty suffers death according to law! Or will a few more politicians in public office be required to abolish it. Surely they would enforce a law abolishing capital punishment no better than they enforce the present law; and, in consequence, there would be more lynchings, more murderers would "feel the halter draw," and crime, with the exception of lynchings would decrease, if the death penalty often and quickly administered will prevent crime.

There must be reform somewhere, and where is not unknown. We need better executors of the law. If any one doubts that we have good and sufficient laws, let him read the statutes. However, we have restricting liquor laws, anti-trust laws as well; and we pay men to uphold and enforce these laws, but for some reason they are not enforced in many instances. Should we be asked that reason, there could be but one answer: officers have been elected for having served parties and ability to serve them again when needful, but with no consideration of their ability to serve the State. The remedy is obvious.

WE are heartily glad that there are agreeable things to think about; and there is nothing more agreeable than education, especially when there are evidences of advance.

At the request of its school superintendents, New York State has enacted a compulsory education law. Hereafter in that State—provided its officers are better than ours—children between eight and twelve years of age must be under instruction in some approved school or under approved instructors at home during each entire school year; between the years of twelve and fourteen they must be under instruction through one half the school period. Those between fourteen and sixteen must attend school unless "lawfully and regularly employed." We have not heard of a more salutary enactment in many months; and we would move immediately to effect such a law in our State, were we not grievously aware that our present school laws, wise in provision and unmistakable in terminology, are not upheld. Until the present law is enforced, we may not hope to effect a strong and stringent one. But some one has declared that a compulsory education law is undemocratic, and, therefore, should not be enacted. If "democratic" is understood as signifying every one having one's own way, the law is undemocratic; if the word means the people ruling for the best interests of the body politic, then the law is democratic. If the people rule, it matters not whether by means of a king or not, they compose a democracy; and no party nor country has an exclusive right to that term. England is nearly as democratic as the United States. All political parties in our country are democratic in the sense that any one of them must be composed of a plurality of the people before it can obtain victory. By the same reasoning all parties must be people's parties; and every party that believes in a republican form of government is republican.

We do not deny that parents should control and direct their children; but we do hold that their authority should be so limited as to conduce to the best interests of the country at large. Whom the State does not own is unworthy of citizenship. Parents have no more right to rear ignorant and viceful children than they have to throw filth into the streets. Either menaces the public weal, and of the two the former is the greater menace. The law is especially wholesome in New York, where many children are ruined every year by being forced to drastic work or reduced to crime by inhuman parents when they should be in schools. The law protects children, protects parents, protects the State, and insures intelligent citizenship. Is it not enough to make us tremble for our State to think that within its borders children are growing up in conditions that prevent mental or moral development, and that in years to come, when ours shall have become a manufacturing section (a consummation not beyond our sight), a section in which unintelligent foreigners live, we will have no means whereby we may insure them the opportunity of educating their children, not to mention protecting the children from ignorant parents and saving them from unwholesome, yea, viceful environment two-thirds of the year as the Empire State has begun to do! Would that Solomon's words, "The simple inherit folly, but the prudent are crowned with knowledge," would awaken a desire in every person in the State to have education rendered within the reach of every human being within our borders. Need we add that we would have better executors of the law, better people, better times, if every man and woman in the State had an elementary education! We have inherited folly; let us be prudent.

A CONTAGION of faultfinding is abroad in the land. We have yet to meet a person who has escaped it; and we know we haven't. However, there are hopeful things of which none should lose sight; and here is one in which there is reason for several "worlds of hope." There are in American libraries 20,000,000 more volumes than there are in all the libraries of Great Britain, Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Russia and Italy combined. We publish more papers, and they are read by more people, than any other nation. Surely the remark of the hypocondriac, "If every one who would write a book would be content to keep the dust off books already written, we would have a better world," seems applicable at least to America. But we are not concerned with hypocondriacs' opinions just now. A multiplicity of books and publications is the most hopeful sign of which we know. Where people read—and they will read wherever they have opportunity—intelligence will rule sooner or later. Here is another fact of which we should be proud: Our country has four hundred colleges and universities, in which are at least 100,000 students. No other country boasts of such a fact. And that is by no means all: one person in each five of our population is in school. At the beginning of this year we had 14,512,778 attendants on schools, and, mark you, 12,755,950 of these were in public schools. What a fortunate generation is rising! Of course, North Carolina falls below the average. But we fondly anticipate the day when she will not; it must come if we would keep in touch with the Nation, of which we are a worthy part so far as possibilities count.

One more hopeful fact: There are 350,000 school-teachers in our country; and they are paid each year an average salary of $351. When we consider that we have only 63,000 postmasters in our land, the real significance of the number appears. And the pay—well, it is not meagre, when we reflect that many teachers are occupied not more than five months, and none more than ten. We wish each of them might have one hundred dollars a month, and that each were worthy of the hire.

When we feel out of sorts, politics "going wrong," criminals escaping Justice, or taxation becoming burdensome, let us recall these facts and thank God for the hope that is in them. They signify that the time will not be long in coming when vice and ignorance and politics—which latter often unites the former—shall be reduced to a minimum. What a blessing is now hanging over us to fall ripe and timely when not one illiterate person can be found among us! And it will come quickly if we hearken unto Solomon and become "prudent."

The statistics cited in the preceding editorial were quoted by Dr. Kerr B. Tupper in a recent address on "Public Schools."

The Everlasting Gospel Ought to be Supported.

BY REV. J. A. SMITH.

PART ONE.

It has been in my mind for a long time to write an article upon this subject, and I can resist the inclination no longer. I scarcely know where to begin, and I am sure that I do not know how this article is going to end, for I am going to write just as the Spirit moves me.

I am a Baptist from positive conviction, and I honestly believe that Baptist principles are the hope of the world. If it is a positive fact that the Bible is our only rule of faith, there is no more doubt about the apostolic character of the truths we hold than the fact of our own personal existence. Therefore, if we hold the truth as it was once delivered unto the saints, one of the most fearful errors and terrible sins in the sight of God is a failure to support this truth and preach it at home and in heathen lands. The Divine plan of presenting this truth is through the instrumentality of men. "We hold this treasure in earthen vessels that the excellency of the power may be of God and not of us." If the facts of Christianity are true—and we know that they are—the attitude of the church towards the extension of the gospel is truly alarming. We make spread eagle speeches in regard to modern progress and the world's evangelization, but the sober-minded Christian must acknowledge that we fall far short of the honor and glory of God. The celebrated Dr. Chalmers once wrote in his journal this item of experience: "I have all my life viewed the truths of Christianity too much in the way of speculation, and as if at a distance. I have not closed with them; I have not apprehended them. I have been persuaded of the truth of the promises, but have not embraced them." And precisely this terrible record might modern Christendom write against itself with reference to the cordial support and extension of the gospel. A living faith in the Word of God and a precious faith that the Lord will appear again on earth will certainly lead men not only to embrace the gospel, but support it with loving hearts and willing minds.

From the writer's own personal experience and observation, he is convinced of the fact that many of our churches are far below the standard of Christian duty and responsibility in supporting the gospel at home and in heathen lands. I honestly believe that the time has come when a powerful reaction should take place all along the lines. If the gospel is not cordially supported and appreciated at home, as a logical and necessary sequence, the gospel is not going to be sent to heathen lands. If that illustrious day ever dawns when the gospel is properly supported and appreciated at home, then may we confidently look for a most vigorous effort to evangelize the nations. If the average church-member will not cheerfully support the man of God who stands in the home pulpit, is it reasonable to suppose that he will aid in the support of the man who preaches in China or Japan? It is a fact that the brethren and sisters who are supporting the gospel at home are the selfsame band who are sending the glad tidings across the deep blue seas. If reports are true, noble, self-sacrificing men of God all over the country are to day suffering unjustly from the terrible sin and fearful neglect of the churches in failing to support the everlasting gospel. And in these perilous financial times, there is such a want of faith in God as to the future that so called Christians for prudential reasons are holding back the Lord's money while God's Word thunders in their ears, "Bring forward the tithes, and your barns shall be filled with plenty, and your wine presses shall burst forth with new wine." But few seem to fully realize and appreciate the fact that the gospel ministry is one of the glorious ascension gifts of Jesus Christ to his blood-bought church and a lost and ruined world. "And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ; till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." If it were not for the power of the pulpit and the voice of the living ministry, this world would soon become a veritable hell, and moral and spiritual darkness would reign supreme; the Bible itself would soon be laid aside, and gross darkness would cover the earth. Not only are all true ministers a sacred gift direct from Christ, but they are very precious in his sight. The seven stars in the right hand of the glorified Christ ought to convince both the church and the world that it means something to be an ambassador of God, and that fearful and terrible in the sight of a pure and holy God must be that false and lifeless church that will not sustain the ambassadors sent forth by the King of kings and Lord of lords to save and to warn the children of men. That individual or set of individuals who will look upon a servant of God as an object of charity, or a mere hireling, will never stand in the courts of everlasting day, but will surely fall before the angry blasts of Jehovah's wrath. All the Baptist church covenants I have ever read contain essentially the same thing in regard to the support of the gospel. I have before me one of these solemn and binding covenants as I write this article, and I find this special clause: "That we will cheerfully contribute of our substance as God has prospered us, for the maintenance of a faithful and evangelical ministry among us." A baptized infidel, a Judas Iscariot or a magician like Simon might promise to obey such a covenant as this, and then openly violate the same; but how a sinner saved by grace and illuminated by the Holy Ghost could wilfully break this solemn pledge, is more than this writer can understand. Oh ye men and women of North Carolina, who have been planted in the likeness of his death, think just for one moment what you are doing in failing to comply with this single clause in your church covenant! If you are not aiding in the support of God's servants at home and the heralds of the Cross in heathen lands, and thus aiding in bringing in everlasting righteousness, you are not going to stand the fiery ordeal of the last day. Not until the earth and sea give up their dead will you know the positive injustice and cruel wrong inflicted by the constant violation of the Word of God and even your own church covenants in regard to maintaining the gospel.

It is a fearful indictment of the church of God to say that a great debt hangs over our Board in regard to supporting the noble men who have crossed tempestuous seas and gone to strange lands to declare the unsearchable riches of Christ. It is a terrible crime to fail in supporting the gospel at home. Men do not realise it now, but they will when Christ comes to examine these earthly records. A failure to support the man of God at home is a violation of a solemn pledge made to God and man. I used to say when I was a young preacher that if I were rich I would preach to churches for nothing. This was a mistake with a church covenant lying before my eyes. If I were worth millions, I would just have one big talent for which God would hold me responsible at the last day, and I would be equally responsible for not teaching my fellowmen to use the talents God has given them for his own glory and the extension of his cause and kingdom in the world.

A failure to support the gospel at home is a positive violation of a business contract made with a man in his official capacity who holds one of the highest positions of honor and trust on earth. If the United States did not pay the President his salary and keep him above want and suffering, our government would be disgraced in the eyes of all civilized nations. And yet the position of the President of this Republic sinks into utter insignificance in comparison with the position of the humblest minister of Jesus Christ, who has been called by the Holy Ghost to preach the gospel and represent Jesus Christ before men. Shame and everlasting contempt will certainly fall upon those who fail to do their duty towards the Lord's anointed. A failure to support the gospel is oftentimes crucifying to a man of refined feelings and noble impulses of soul, and treating him worse than any citizen of North Carolina would dare treat his hewer of wood and drawer of water.

A failure to support the gospel brings shame and confusion upon the house of God, and produces schism and bitterness among its members, and makes the church itself a moral stench in the nostrils of men. The dear Lord said unto his disciples, "Ye are the salt of the earth and the light of the world"; and if the church of God, which is the pillar and ground of the truth, does not set an example of honesty and square dealing, to whom must the wicked and ungodly world look for instruction and example? There is no excuse on earth for the non payment of a pastor's salary unless some unforeseen providence or unexpected calamity prevents the people from fulfilling a sacred pledge. A church is very responsible for making a contract it cannot comply with. If I hire a washerwoman or woodchopper, and at the same time know that I am not going to pay them, I am positively guilty of a very great crime in the sight of God, and the Epistle of James tells me that the cries of the disappointed laborers are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabbaoth. In this period of the world's history, every kind of business is a system of contracts. Nearly every act of mercantile life is either the making or the fulfilling of some agreement. Thus every sale of goods, and every note, draft or endorsement is a contract; every act done by a clerk or other agent in his business is but the carrying out of the contract originally made with his employers; every act of a partner is only a fulfilling of the contract made between the partners when the firm was formed. A fundamental rule of law in regard to contracts is that every one must fulfil every agreement one makes unless some new agreement has changed or abrogated it; i. e., a person must keep one's promises. So important is this rule considered that the United States Constitution forbids any State to pass any law which shall release any person from the obligation to perform any contract one has made. Its justice is obvious; for if one were at liberty to refuse to do exactly what one had promised, no reliance could be placed on any promise. Thus no one would work or do any act for another, because the other could refuse to pay for it, and so one would pay in advance because the other could then refuse to do the act. If human law is so justly binding in regard to contracts what ought to be the attitude of the church of God towards the solemn and binding contracts which it makes in the presence of angels and of men?

God Loveth the Cheerful Giver.

God delights in spiritual spontaneity. The penny pushed from the open hand by the impulse of the Holy Ghost is worth more to him than the pound wrung from the reluctant grip by the dunning of church beggars. I am so much impressed with the importance which God attaches to sweet voluntariness in Scripture, that I am often tempted to resolve never to get a cent for God again, but rather spend my energy in getting Christians spiritualized, assured that they will certainly become liberalised. As I was reading my Greek Testament the other day, I was delighted with a discovery concerning a well known text: "God loveth a cheerful giver." The word "cheerful" is our word for "hilarious." And I have to imagine the word put into action. "Will you give me a thousand dollars to missions?" "Ha! ha! ha! I should be delighted to, since God has so wonderfully blessed and prospered me." "Will you contribute a hundred dollars toward our evangelistic work this winter?" "Ha! ha! ha! I am only too glad for the opportunity to give, since I have so abundantly received." How much better that sounds than the doleful "O, dear; I am tired with the never-ending calls for money, money, money." But the hilarious giving is not possible except the Spirit is dwelling richly within it. For only the Spirit shows the greatness of that salvation which we received through Christ, and the greatness of our consequent obligations.—Dr. A. J. Gordon.

The loneliest of all human experiences is that of dying. We cannot die in clusters, not even two and two; we must die alone. Human hands must unclasp ours as we enter the valley of shadows. Human faces must fade from our vision as we pass into the mists. "I cannot see you," said one dying, as the loved ones stood about his bed. So it will be with each one of us in turn. Human love cannot go beyond the edge of the valley. But we need not be alone even in the deepest of all loneliness, for if we are Christ's we can say, "Yet I am not alone, for my Saviour is with me." When human hands unclasp, his will clasp ours the more firmly. When human loved faces fade out, his will shine above us in all its glorious brightness. When we must creep out of the bosom of human affection, it will be only into the clasp of the Everlasting Arms, into the bosom of Christ. Death's loneliness will thus be filled with Divine companionship.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 13, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

THE great need of this day and all days is FAITH. It is the foundation of Hope and Charity; and as surely as we have it we will have them, as surely as we have it not we will not know them. But some say they cannot become faithful; they do not know how. There is but one way: wish it, pray for it, and God will not fail. The great question is, DO you desire faith? and that determined, there is no reason for lack of faith.

A BETTER article than that which Brother Smith begins on our first page has seldom been our privilege to read; and we have read it more than once. Bro. Smith strikes from the shoulder, and he stands on a ground—the Bible—from which he cannot be repulsed. The article will increase the reader's missionary spirit, at home and abroad. May God use it as an instrument to arouse that spirit where it is now dormant.

IF you are fearful—uncertain—know that the infectious taint of unfaith is near the door of your heart. Do not flee from your fears, for like ghosts they follow close upon a fleeing one. Face them, and like ghosts they will become invisible and harmless. We have many weak ones among us who are weak from fear of nothings, which, were they faced for a moment, would lose their awful aspect. Persistent refusal to face doubt more than anything else promotes doubt.

THE University of North Carolina did a graceful thing in conferring the degree of Doctor of Divinity on Bro. R. T. Bryan; and we doubt not he will wear it gracefully. Bro. Bryan went to the University "a poor country boy," but his talents soon determined a place for him above the average; and he graduated much more quickly than many who entered with him. His career at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary was even more brilliant. He is too well known to our readers as an able yet humble servant of God for us to speak of him in that particular. The degree is the more appropriate for the fact that Bro. Bryan will devote his energies to study and investigation of the Chinese dialects with a view to interpreting and translating the Word of God when he returns to China.

SOMETIME since it was stated in these columns that a number of young men from our colleges and seminaries desired to enter the Master's work in North Carolina, either permanently or for the summer. We hoped that vacant and needy fields would be pointed out to us, but so far we have heard of none. Surely we may not conclude, therefore, that sufficient work is being done in our boundaries. Surely there is need for every young man whom God will send us; and we do not know of a section that is better adapted to young laborers. Its ruggedness will make them strong; its simplicity will make them gentle. After training at the Seminary practical experience is most desirable.

If any one knows of a vacant and needy field, or if any pastor desires a supply, we will do what we may to help them. We do, indeed, dislike to have such opportunities pass for helping the Cause, helping ourselves, and helping worthy young men.

ONE of the wise men among the many "would-bes" at the recent Convention urged that hereafter an effort be made to have our churches contribute regularly to missions. Special calls just before the Convention are very troublesome; and, moreover, we do not see that the end of the year is a better season for giving any way. We doubt not more money would be raised and more interest, and more lasting interest, would be aroused, were earnest efforts begun now for all the objects of the Convention and persisted in till the end. We do not mean cries of distress, but simple doctrinal teachings in pulpit and press; and we believe the former will become obsolete if the latter policy is adopted. If every pastor will preach on the great commission now as well as Bro. Smith speaks for the support of the gospel in this paper, we will not anticipate a debt next year. Let us keep evenly and "everlastingly at it," and not pull by jerks. Remember the motto of the three ropes by which some one has said we must pull—Knowing, Praying, Giving,—and try to wear them out before the next Convention.

THE payment of a part or the whole of the subscriptions of those who have let the time expire, will be appreciated. We have waited very patiently so many UPLIFTING.

A recent editorial upon the critic-preacher may well be supplemented with another on the need of uplifting Christians whatsoever their relation. A preacher should edify; but should a flock be pardoned, therefore, for criticising? No, indeed. The Christian religion is a help-giving, uplifting one; and to give help and uplift with word as well as deed is the duty of every church member.

It is rather a new term—uplifting—that well expresses what should be the motive of every Christian's actions, at once inspiring others to greater earnestness and higher aims and lifting the uplifter nearer to God. We cannot do the one and not experience the other. To seek to help others helps us, for it implies that love which Christ emphasized in the new commandment, and observance of that commandment cannot fail to bring us into the love of him who so loved the world that he gave his son a sacrifice for it. What an example we have in that gift which has uplifted millions of lives, and without which all uplifting efforts would be temporal at best!

We often think that God sends his weary servants messages through servants who once were wearied but have found peace. No one but a discouraged pastor knows the consolation of uplifting members. Others may criticise, barriers to the hoped for advance may appear one after another, but if only one of the children of God is near to sympathize, encourage and inspire, a pastor cannot but regard such a one as a messenger from him who showed the world how God can be served through suffering, how progress can be made in the presence of unmeasurable opposition.

We have heard complaints that God does not make his presence manifest as of old by awful demonstrations. Perhaps if we would look for him in his children, it would be as manifest and less awful. When Christ went to prepare a place for us he promised to send the Comforter in his stead. And that Comforter—the Holy Spirit—is within every Christian, ready to comfort all who would be comforted. The pagans looked for their spirits in the winds; we have the promise of God that ours can always be found on earth; and a regenerated heart is the dwelling place of our Spirit. Pagans sought their comforter in the wind shaken oaks; we may seek ours in the peaceful hearts of men. Perfect peace is the most significant demonstration of the presence of the Spirit; for in itself it is supernatural.

Fault-finding is the easiest occupation of which we know. And we would respectfully inform those who are given to criticising their brethren and sisters or the sermons of their pastor that it is no sign of superiority to find a fault. A black spot on a white back-ground is the first object that engages the vision. So imperfections of character and in work are most easily seen. But to remove the imperfection with an imperceptible touch requires an artist clear of vision and steady of nerve. Is not the relevancy of the figure of the "moat in thy brother's eye" and the beam in your own quite evident? There are men who can remove imperfections in their fellows so gently that the process is imperceptible; but they are more than men; and neither beam nor moat obscures their vision. They are God's artists; and by such alone may uplifting criticisms be made; for when they are made by these no one is offended.

One can so live that one's life will be a prolonged uplifting and a criticism. There is such a thing as "contagion of character." A good and holy man is a help to an entire community. His life leads others to desire to be as he is; his peaceful spirit points out to those who know not peace the reason therefor. Such a one is a living uplifting criticism upon all mankind. How much more blessed is it to criticise thus than to speak vain words of depreciation, which some one may as justly apply to us!

We should make more manifest the Spirit of God within our hearts; we should criticise, but ourselves should be the first object; and we should not criticise until we can do so without giving offence. If the Spirit is in us our desire will be more to comfort than to criticise, for the Spirit is the comforter sent unto us.

DR. Charles E. Taylor, President of Wake Forest College, has completed his series of articles in the BIBLICAL RECORDER on "How Far Ought a State to Undertake to Educate?" They take the ground that the State should provide for six months public schools by taxation, and that all higher education should be provided for by donations, whether it be done under the control of Church or State. Dr. Taylor has made a strong argument. We suppose it will be published in pamphlet form, and that it will be still more widely read. We advise all who are interested in this question to read it.——If the Baptists and Methodists are true to the best interests of our State * * —— the liquor traffic will go!—North Carolina Christian Advocate.

Which latter may be said of State aid.

WE were in a city Baptist church not long ago, which was nearer "up to date" than any we have seen. Fortunately, we had been in opera houses before; and were not overcome. A more luxurious appearing place is seldom seen. Finished in beautiful wood-work, walls frescoed, windows gorgeously decorated, the choir-loft ornate in graceful tapestry, the carpet noiseless beneath the feet, and the seats most inviting, but intolerably uncomfortable.

We may not be competent to pass positive opinion, but it required very close inspection to discover evidences of the religion of Jesus Christ in those environments. True, there was a Bible, and some unfathomable hymns were sung and a sermon was preached; but these things are not warranties of spirituality. The church building and the audience were decidedly of the world. And the services were scarcely less so.

Preceding the sermon a man came forth from curtain-like drapery above the pulpit, and with all the grace of a master of his art flourished a cornet, squared himself, and blew a solo! To judge by appearances one would have thought that he was capable of no greater condescension; and we are sure Gabriel will not assume such airs on the last day. We endured this performance, saw the soloist pause a moment in apparent expectancy of applause, which was not forthcoming, and take his seat with the same consequential air with which he made his appearance. We do not hesitate to say that the man could not have been playing upon his instrument to God's glory. We might base our judgment on the instrument and the tone; but, to be sure, we can base it on the air of the man. No being worships God with a sense of his own importance. Christ did not; the angels do not. The publican's prayer fell lifeless to earth. Yet these fashionable forms and customs—inducements or attractions, their fathers prefer to call them—threaten to become frequent in larger churches of our denomination as they have of other denominations. As our cities grow, as inter denominational rivalry increases, the threat will grow toward reality. We must discountenance them now.

But we have not done telling of the services in this fashionable church. The pastor introduced a preacher, who was received with applause! The preacher preached, and was occasionally applauded,—not with "amens," but in the vulgar manner. Finally a hymn was sung which was familiar as read by the preacher, but quite past our understanding as rendered. The tune was new, and seemed adapted only to the gorgeous surroundings of the choir whence it came.

We are ashamed to know that Baptists are becoming so worldly. Worldliness is bad enough in worldly affairs, but in a house of God, how can one abide it! In no city have our churches sufficient money to throw it away in ornaments. We admire comfortable houses of worship, but ornamentation and comfort and convenience are seldom found together. Our religion is simple; it has nothing in it for name or show; why cannot our lives be so; and surely God's churches must be so, before he will accept them for his service.

"SEARCH the Scriptures" saith the Lord; but he did not say prove the Scriptures by pagan inscriptions on pyramids, nor seek divine testimony in earthquake buried ruins. His word is sufficient; that faith once delivered to the saints should not be even momentarily shaken by a foolish effort to substantiate it through human investigation. Christ proves God and himself and the Spirit by his works; but our works will never prove them. Surely if the Bible is not the testimony, men cannot make one. Our religion is one of faith.

Some years ago investigations found the mumified remains of a Pharoah,—the Pharoah who was overthrown in the Red Sea, said some; and immediately they began to think that the Bible must be wrong, at least, here. How could Pharaoh's body have been rescued from those turbulent waters? And yet here it was in a pyramid! And thus they began to doubt; but some good faithful searcher of the Scriptures informed them that the Bible never said that Pharaoh was caught in the converging columns of water. His forces were; but the record says merely that he was overthrown. And we doubt not these men were disappointed because they no longer had ground for doubt.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—All the Baptists in this section don't agree with Bro. Durham in regard to our State University; nor are they prepared as a denomination to enter into politics. J. M. CURRIN.

Oxford, June 4, 1894.

[While we, along with some thousands of others, agree with Bro. Durham in his effort to effect the principles of Dr. Taylor's article, we would have no one think that any Baptist in the State is prepared "as a denomination to enter into politics." It is not a Baptist affair; but it is a grave question of public policy, in which all citizens should be interested.—EDITOR.]

....A State contemporary has asked what paper in the State has been subscribed for by one party the longest. We enter Bro. J. A. Vann who has been one of our readers forty-five years. We are certain, however, there are others who have taken it longer, and we would be glad to hear from them.

....A double number of the Seminary Magazine (April, May) has been received. We have seldom seen so many good articles by well-known men in a religious monthly. Dr. Ford, Dr. Lofton, Dr. Gambrell, Dr. Manly, Dr. Hovey, Dr. Forrester, and Rev. G. W. Greene are among the contributors.

....The General Assembly of North Carolina has appropriated, from the taxes of the people, to the University at Chapel Hill, for the years 1891, 1892, 1893, 1894—four years—one hundred and five thousand dollars, but the public schools have been left with only about a three months' session. Wherefore?

....We can understand just as well how water was made wine at the marriage feast at Cana as we can how it is made in the vineyards of France or California. The only difference we can note is one of time. But this difference has its ground, not in any necessity of the case, but in the divine choice.—Dr. N. S. Burton.

....Bro. Watson of the Sunday-school Supply Store, Raleigh, N. C., informs us that the Sunday-school of the First Baptist church, colored, this city, is his largest purchaser. Bro. Jas. H. Young is superintendent of this school, and we congratulate him and his school on this evidence of their zeal and interest.

....We are sincerely grateful to Rev. J. W. Millard for an account of the closing exercises of the Louisville Seminary. We announced in our last issue that he would report the occasion for our readers, but in the mean time Bro. W. M. Gilmore sent us an account which we inserted, and for which we thank him.

....We were glad to see Prof. B. K. Mason, late of Apex Academy, in Raleigh last Monday, on the way to his home, Fork church, Davie county, where he addresses a school this week. We announced last week that Bro. Mason had decided to enter the Baptist ministry; and we wish again to express our gratification thereat.

....Bro. M. N. Harshaw, Collettaville, June 1, 1894, writes: "Have just read Dr. Taylor's last article on 'How Far Ought a State to Undertake to Educate,' and think his position invincible. He has clearly proven each of the three propositions submitted, either of which would establish his conclusion. If his argument could be placed in the hands of the people of North Carolina, State aid would cease."

....Dr. J. W. Carter, Raleigh, went to Dunn, Harnett county, and on the 6th inst. preached the sermon at the closing exercises of Progressive Institute, of which Prof. D. B. Parker is the Principal. Dr. W. B. Harrell, in a note to us, says of the sermon: "It was considered by all who heard it a masterful effort of a great mind—a treat indeed; unique, and worthy of the man and brother. Of course Baptists were pleased; and Pedobaptists, present, declared it was the grandest discourse ever heard hereabout."

....We learn from The Baptist (Baltimore) that Rev. H. M. Wharton has purchased a frame building built near Luray, Va., when that locality was on a boom. His idea is to convert this building into a tabernacle and have a camp ground and annual Chatauqua, if the Virginia brethren will help him. We suppose the idea was suggested by the Moody summer work at Northfield, Mass.

....Virginia is being awakened to her interests as well as North Carolina. Dr. Taylor's work will not end in one State. Prof. Boatwright of Richmond College, who read Dr. Taylor's article, recently wrote for the Religious Herald in a similar tone. And in the last issue of that journal another vigorous writer comes forth. It may be interesting to know that Virginia gives annually $40,000 to the University, $22,000 to the Military Institute, and $20,000 to the institution at Blacksburg.

....In the William Jewell College (Mo.) Student for May we note an excellent article on "The Study of English: Its Place in our Educational System,"—by Prof. J. H. Simmons, son of the lamented Dr. W. G. Simmons of Wake Forest College. Dr. Chas. Lee Smith has been delivering University Extension lectures on Finance; and has been engaged for another series next fall. We have read also several interesting contributions on social and economic principles in the Central Baptist by Bro. Smith.

....After a pastorate of six months, Rev. Hight C. Moore has resigned the care of Broad Street Baptist church, to take effect July 1st. We regretted to hear of the action, though it seems to have been wise. Since Bro. Moore left Wake Forest College, he has attained remarkable success for a young minister. His work at Morehead City was manifestly blessed of God. His articles in the RECORDER have proved him a painstaking Bible student, and his literary efforts have won him a name outside the denomination. We hope that the Broad Street church will not be long without a pastor, and that Bro. Moore will have a pastorate immediately.

....Rev. M. A. Adams has, after deliberation, accepted a call to the pastorate at Reidsville. We rejoice that this important Baptist point has chosen a pastor; and we feel assured they have chosen well. It was only a few days since that a prominent professor in a leading institution was speaking to us of the remarkable work which God had wrought through Bro. Adams at Monroe. His people no doubt find it hard to give him up; but at the same time it may be that God will use him for larger purposes at Reidsville. Bro. Adams, having been our Monroe correspondent, will, we hope, continue to write us from Reidsville.

....Bro. W. W. Bridges of Shawnee, N. C., writes us that Rev. J. H. Booth, at one time a regular Missionary Baptist preacher, but since excluded from a Baptist church and disapproved by a Union Meeting of the South Yadkin Association, and then uniting with "the United Brethren" and serving them for some years, now desires to preach in regular Baptist churches without being restored, claiming to belong to no church. The files of the RECORDER for 1888 now before us contain resolutions of both the New Bethany church and a Union Meeting, one excluding him for heresy, the other publishing him as a heretic, and, moreover, accusing him of falsehood. It is irregular, inadvisable and dangerous to have this man preach in Baptist churches without reinstatement.

....Bro. Bailey in last week's issue of the RECORDER says that a Baptist preacher in the western part of North Carolina invited all Christians to the communion table causing a disturbance in his church. The brother has it wrong as the brethren often have things wrong about Western North Carolina. The Baptist preacher invited Baptists to commune, and some Methodists partook also, when the bread and wine were passed around. They communed but without any invitation. A Methodist preacher raised a howl about it, saying "the Baptists have been having open communion." I think I should have howled if I had been him, but it would have been at my Methodist brethren for intruding themselves upon people who wanted them not, and not at those on whom they had intruded.—Western N. C. Baptist. We are not positive that our contemporary refers to the instance which we had in mind when writing the note. However, the clipping is good reading any way.

From Bro. R. T. Vann.

Dear Recorder:—Bro. C. A. Jenkins did some excellent preaching for us during his recent meeting here. A dozen or so made profession of faith, of whom we have baptized four. Our people always enjoy Jenkins.

The recent Chowan Association was marked by three special features: First, intense interest in the present educational discussion. I never saw a promiscuous crowd listen so eagerly to speeches on education, or vote so decidedly and so warmly on the resolutions printed in this week's RECORDER.

Second, faithfulness to duty in the matter of supporting Sister Fannie Knight. Perhaps no missionary in the field is at once so generally and so warmly loved in his own Association as is Miss Fannie. And yet, when duty seemed to require a separation from her, these brethren with many tears voted to stand by their convictions. The passage of the resolutions of separation was one of the most pathetic scenes I ever witnessed on the floor of the Association.

Third. A marked awakening on the subject of Home Missions. Several leaders confessed that they had never had the matter on their hearts before; and having never informed themselves about the work, had given it only a nominal support. Although a third of the delegates had left, about twice the amount actually given last year for Home Missions was pledged for the coming year. Let the other Associations take notice and move up accordingly.

May 31, 1894. R. T. VANN.

To My Baptist Brethren.

In a series of articles recently published in the RECORDER, I have sought to defend Christian education from aggression, to commend the Voluntary System in higher education, and to urge the improvement of our Common School System. They contained nothing, however, which applied or appealed to Baptists any more than to other friends of education.

I now desire to address the Baptists of North Carolina with special reference to the defence of their own educational institutions.

Do they need to be defended?

An effort has been made to make it appear that they are in no danger. An advocate of State control of higher education has recently said:—

"There seems to be a feeling in some quarters that the success of the University means the failure of Wake Forest College. Such a result has not been produced in other States, nor does it seem likely in North Carolina."

I do not anticipate "the failure of Wake Forest College," but I do fear, if the present policy of the Chapel Hill Trustees is to be continued, a great diminution in the patronage, resources, and usefulness of the College.

In regard to the statement quoted, I desire to make three remarks.

1. The peculiar policy inaugurated within the last two or three years by the Trustees of Chapel Hill is unique, and has, so far as I am aware, no parallel in any other State. For any antagonisms which may have arisen the friends of the colleges are in no sense responsible. There was a growing feeling of cordiality between all the institutions for higher learning in the State when the colleges suddenly found themselves placed upon the defensive. These new relations have led not a few to investigate the whole question of the relations of the State to education. This investigation has revealed, among other things, that

2. The policy of State control and support of higher education has hurt the North Carolina colleges.

The advocate of this policy has said: "From 1868 to 1875 the University was practically closed. But Wake Forest did not flourish during this period. With the reopening of the University in 1875 began an educational revival. Since then Wake Forest has not decayed in proportion as the University has grown."

The fact is that Wake Forest was more prosperous from 1868 to 1875 than for years before the war. When the University reopened in 1875 there was a sudden drop in the enrollment at Wake Forest of eighteen students from the average of the seven years before. Davidson College had more students between 1868 and 1875 than were ever there before. When the University opened, the number dropped suddenly from 122 to 88. Here was a loss of fifty-two students from two colleges with, probably, a corresponding loss of income.

The session after the trustees of Chapel Hill inaugurated their new policy, three years ago, Wake Forest lost 43 students at once. The income of the College from students fees is about $2,000 less this session than it was in 1891–2. It is reasonable to believe that the great majority of students who go to Chapel Hill from Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist families, would go to their own colleges, if not encouraged by the State to go elsewhere.

It is absurd to attempt to make it appear that the friends of the Christian colleges are actuated by small or unworthy motives in assuming the defensive against methods which have produced such actual results as those last mentioned.

That the loss in patronage and income is no greater is probably due to the attitude of resistance assumed by some, at least, of the colleges. I hope for more students at Wake Forest next session than have ever been in the institution. If this expectation is realized, it will be the result of the protests made and re echoed all over the State by the friends of Wake Forest. The policy of the State is the occasion for the protest, but it will in no sense be the cause of any prosperity of the colleges.

3. State control and support of higher education has been hurtful to the colleges in every State in which it has been adopted.

More than a year ago, alarmed by what seemed to me to be the natural and necessary results of the aggressive policy inaugurated at Chapel Hill, I began to study the question in all its bearings. For years I had entertained a high ambition for Wake Forest College, and had hoped that it might, in the course of time, develop into a very great and useful institution, with ample endowment and generous patronage. It became evident that these hopes were doomed to disappointment, unless some successful resistance could be made to the new policy. And I became persuaded that I was in honor bound either to defend the trust committed to me, or else to resign, that some one else might defend it. I began to make enquiries in several directions. I asked the Presidents of four Virginia colleges how their institutions had been affected. I have room only for brief extracts from their replies. They are all dated Feb. 13th—17th, 1893.

One wrote: "The injustice to the colleges is manifest. To say that the colleges are not damaged is an absurdity. * * How we can stand it at all, in such an unequal contest, is a marvel. The fact is, our condition is critical. The prospect before us is gloomy."

Another, after a full discussion of the causes of the discontent, wrote: "You may be assured that the colleges of Virginia are greatly dissatisfied with such injustice."

Another said: "The course of our University in competing for every student whom we receive at Randolph Macon, or Richmond, or Hampden Sidney, &c., has, of course, put the University before us as a competitor and rival, rather than as the head of our educational work. We honestly believe that we can do much of that work better than the University can and that we have a field. The State University plan seems to ignore our Christian colleges and seeks to connect directly with academies. There is no place nor use in the minds of its managers, apparently, for our institutions. * * Hoping that you may prevent what we would like to remedy, I am," &c.

And the last of the four replied: "I am strongly under the impression that the authorities of the colleges in Virginia entirely disapprove of the low age and standard on which youth are received at our State University, and also of the degradation of the A. B. degree, lately inaugurated."

These gentlemen represent four religious denominations.

Here is what the Presidents of some of the most important colleges in the West have had to say:

One from Michigan wrote: "The presence of the State University is, of course, the greatest obstacle to private beneficence. Givers point to the State University and ask, 'Why are Christian colleges needed?' And yet the churches here are beginning to find out that the Christian colleges are absolutely essential to their very existence. Our State University does nothing for the churches and the ministry. She sent out 270 lawyers last year, which is 100 more than all the ministers she has sent forth during the forty-six years of her existence. She has no right to give any religious instruction."

Another wrote from Wisconsin: "The ultimate effect of State control of higher education in Wisconsin will doubtless be to limit to a considerable extent the growth and influence of the Christian and other private colleges. Some of the more enthusiastic partisans of the University freely predict that the ultimate effect of its influence will be the extinction of the distinctively Christian colleges or their degradation to the rank of academies."

Another in Michigan wrote: "The State University draws to it very many young people who would otherwise attend the Christian Colleges."

Another wrote from Wisconsin: "The relation of education to church and State is a subject about which there will have to be some hard fighting. It seems unfortunate that in the separation between church and State which obtained in our American theory of government, there was no express understanding as to the part which each should take in the work of education. But that is the question about which the battle already begun is to be fought. I believe that the settlement of the question cannot be much longer deferred.

"The State schools are claiming and seeking to occupy the ground heretofore occupied by the church schools. The latter must either resist the encroachment or be driven from the field,—not through the survival of the fittest but through the triumph of might over right."

Another wrote from Michigan: "The ultimate effect of State control of higher education must be detrimental to Christian and other private colleges of our State. It diminishes their patronage and revenues, and is not stimulating to private beneficence."

But for its length, I should like to insert here the vigorous protest to the General Assembly of Virginia which was signed by the Presidents of the five most important Virginia colleges. It would perhaps indicate more clearly than any of the above quotations the real situation in that State.

I may perhaps ask the indulgence of my brethren in the presentation of some additional facts, and deductions from them, in the next number of the RECORDER.

CHAS. E. TAYLOR.

From Edenton.

Dear Recorder:—We closed on Monday night a most helpful and interesting meeting in our church. We would have continued at least a week longer but for the serious illness of my wife.

Rev. W. V. Savage preached for us. Avoiding the fulsomeness which often mars the reports given of meetings, I want only to say that stronger, plainer, tenderer preaching I have never heard. Savage may sometimes be misconstrued, but he will never be misunderstood. His sermon "Peace by Faith" has a place in my estimation along with Dixon's sermon at Wake Forest and McConnell's at the Convention. We received as result at the close of the meeting ten for baptism and one by letter. There are others yet to be baptized. During the meeting we were greatly strengthened in prayer by Bro. Josiah Elliott, who, notwithstanding six churches of his own is assistant pastor to all of us. Thirty-six have been added to the church since my pastorate began here last September. I do not know that the Lord has for me in the future. But wherever I go, I know I shall never find a kinder people nor pleasanter surroundings.

I did have something to say about Dr. Taylor's articles, but I postpone that till next week.

My wife is still very sick with typhoid fever. But God helping us we will pull through it safely. I think I know what the Canaanitish woman meant and felt when she said, "Lord have mercy on me—my daughter is vexed."

Closing Exercises.

Mr. Editor:—The Academy at this place held closing exercises, June 18, 1894, and the addresses were made by Rev. J. N. Stallings of Mocksville, N. C. Prof. R. K. Mason of Apex, N. C., and others. The first mentioned spoke at 10 a. m., and the last named at 3 p. m., and were followed by other speakers from the school; also entertaining exercises were held by the school at night.

The marshals were Jesse C. Pack, Chief, Frank M. Carter, Holt C. Thompson and Jno. W. McCrush.

Rev. J. B. Newton says he will open school again at this place in August.

JOHN PAGE.

Fork Church, May 29, 1894.

From Lincolnton, N. C.

Dear Recorder:—So many brethren have asked me to write for your columns, I have been thinking for some time of doing so, and send in a few news items from this Piedmont section.

This is a land of stirring people, and changes are often taking place, "some for better and some for worse"; but perhaps no "change for the better" has recently taken place that equals the coming of Dr. J. D. Hufham to Shelby. During the inter-pastorate there, some of us were wishing and praying for this, and now we wish to give expression to our pent up joy through the pen and press. It seems that he came when everything was ripe for his coming and pastor and people for work. If we may believe the reports along the railroad—and surely we can from so many good witnesses—they are at it. As laborers together with God, there are bright prospects ahead. "What will the harvest be"?

Bro. E. F. Jones is not an old accession at Gastonia, for his brother pastors keep him away from home so much preaching for them, that he is often just coming in at Gastonia—ever new, fresh and sweeping clean.

Bro. C. S Cashwell at Hickory, before he got sick, was preaching to all his church building would hold. These, and others if they were near the house, heard "the pure Word of God" coming from a heart yearning for the salvation of the lost. I trust he will soon be reaping the harvest on all his field.

At Lincolnton Bro. D. M. Austin is tenderly, and, we hope, tellingly, preaching the gospel to growing congregations. He seems to be the right man in the right place. Those who have the privilege of hearing him are "much given" to him.

But so many in this Piedmont section through which I travel are faithful and blessed, time and space will not allow the mention of the many names. Thank God, he is rapidly giving this country to the Baptists.

For some time I have been trying to spread over several counties—have appointments now in five, and large congregations at all—and so I can pick up the news before it gets in the papers. Can report many additions to churches in this big field. To my own, I'm thankful to say, God has not failed to give us accessions every month for many months past. This is true of nearly all the months since coming here four years ago, both of the compact work and the spread-out field. To God be all the praise.

Now it begins to look like your reporter is getting together again, as in April he gave up the church at Glen Alpine, and then took double the work for the same time nearer home. Truly "man proposes but God disposes." How sweet to know and say, "Whate'er I do, where'er I be," "my times are in thy hand," and look about us and see that God is blessing his word and people, and making "all things work together for good to them that love God."

Greensboro and the New Association.

Last week Bro. Brown called attention to the proposed formation of a new Association with Greensboro as a center. I wish to say that it is to be hoped that such an organization will be effected. Before leaving Greensboro in 1890, I saw the need of it, and for nearly two years had been studying and discussing plans by which to bring it about. Get on the train at Greensboro and start south and you will go fifteen miles to High Point before you come to a Baptist church. Go north and you travel twenty-four miles to Reidsville before you pass one. Take the train to Raleigh and the first Baptist church you reach is at Burlington twenty miles distant, except the very small church at Buchanan five miles away and a little off from the railroad. Start to Winston and not till you arrive at Kernersville will you find a Baptist church, which is eighteen miles from Greensboro. Take a train on the C. F. & Y. V. Railroad and go to Mt. Airy, and you will pass by the first Baptist church at Summerfield, twelve miles away. Take a trip over the same railroad to Fayetteville and you go twenty five miles to Liberty before you pass a church of our faith. Take the Branch road and you go twenty-five miles to Randleman before you will find one of our churches, and perhaps not one individual of our faith. Start out from this center in any direction away from the railroads and you will find similar destitution.

In some instances mistakes have been made by cutting up large associations into county associations. But instances where only a few churches have been taken off of large bodies and formed into an organization in and around destitute sections, the best of results have always followed. In 1878 a few churches taken from the old Yadkin were formed into the South Yadkin Association. The new body was very small, but it was formed of churches in and near the borders of a very large section of country almost entirely destitute of Baptist preaching. This, from its very beginning, has been one of our best associations. The great prosperity which attended it is due largely to the fact that it was organized for the purpose of planting churches in the great destitution which lay all around it, and they went at once to work to accomplish the end before them. As some of the fruits we see the churches in Salisbury, Statesville, Cleveland, Mooresville, South River and many other places.

I hope that all the churches in that portion of the county mentioned by Brother Thomas and Brother Brown will consider well the great destitution surrounding them, and be guided not by any local attachments or old ties that bind so strongly and tenderly, but by what seems to be the highest claims of the cause upon them now in the present condition of the whole section of country. W. R. GWALTNEY.

A Correction.

Dear Recorder:—In your report of the proceedings of the Southern Baptist Convention at Dallas, I notice you say that "Dr. Cranfill tries to retaliate on Dr. Hawthorne and Gov. Northen with anti Romanist resolutions."

Please let me say to your many readers that Dr. Cranfill's resolutions against Romanism was not seasoned with anything like retaliation on anybody. It is a pity for Dr. Hawthorne and Gov. Northen that anti-Romanist resolutions should be presumably thrust at them, and we Baptists here in Texas, most of us, are sorry that the resolutions were dropped in the committee room. The re-election of Gov. Northen to the Vice Presidency of the Convention might possibly have been construed by some as an endorsement of his course in appointing Walsh, the Roman Catholic, as Senator, and one of Dr. Cranfill's resolutions read as follows: "That no action of this Convention shall be construed as an endorsement of Romanism in any of its phases." Was not this reasonably sufficient to put the Convention as a great body of Baptists in a right attitude before the world? In other words, to show exactly the attitude of the Convention? I know Dr. Cranfill personally, and to know him is to love him and admire his gentle Christian spirit, and I for one want to protest against the idea that he wrote any of the resolutions in a spirit of retaliation.

J. P. JORDAN.

Troy, Texas, June 1, 1894.

[Bro. Jordan may have it his way: there are differences of opinion. But it seems to us insanely absurd that any one should think that any action of a Baptist Convention could be interpreted by a reasonable world as an endorsement of Romanism. Have we labored so long for nothing?—EDITOR.]

From Onslow County.

Dear Recorder:—We have just passed through one of the sweetest meetings at Salem Baptist church in Onslow county, that it has ever been my privilege to attend.

Rev. S. D. Swaim commenced the meeting on Thursday the 17th ult., with Deacon J. S. Canaday of Wilmington, N. C., as an assistant. On Sunday he was joined by Rev. J. R. Marshall, and on Monday by Rev. R. E. Poole. The meeting promised to be a success from the very first. Sinners began to cry unto the Lord for mercy, and to inquire for the way of life.

Brethren Swaim and Poole did all the pulpit preaching, which was done with great power and effectiveness, but we must not ignore the fireside and cottage preaching which were done by other brethren.

The meeting was closed Monday the 28th ult. and with an addition of thirty-one souls and the church greatly revived.

This church was started in the very heart of "Hardshellism" seventeen years ago by Rev. J. K. Marshall, who commenced preaching in a school-house. It was organized with nine members, two of whom have been spared and have stood firm against all opposition, and are now rejoicing with a membership of ninety-four.

It is exceedingly pleasant to know that the backbone of "Hardshellism" has been broken under the wise management of our beloved pastor, S. D. Swaim, under God.

Some of our worst enemies and strongest opponents are now rejoicing with us in the hope of eternal salvation through our dear Lord Jesus, and many almost persuaded that they have been deluded all of these many years of opposition against the people of God. I have no doubt but they will soon join with us in the good work of spreading the gospel among the heathen.

Closing Exercises of Yadkin Valley Institute.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I want you to know how "our boys" acquitted themselves on this occasion. Bro. W. R. Bradshaw came on the scene Tuesday at 8 p. m. The people seemed surprised when he appeared on the stage. He looked to be no more than twenty, and very small to his age, exceedingly "boyish" in appearance; so they expected something very common, and from mere curiosity, every eye was fixed on him, and then for nearly one hour he held them "spell bound," and by his clear and simple yet forcible logic and fitting illustration he made an impression that will be remembered in years to come. All that we heard express an opinion, said it was the best sermon that had ever been preached here on such an occasion. His subject was, "What shall I do with Jesus"?

On Wednesday, Rev. Hight C. Moore, North Carolina's youngest poet, simply charmed the people. His address was just grand. His subject was, "The True Goal, or, What to Win," and he proved himself master of the subject. We were reminded so much of the eloquent Wilson of West Virginia.

The Cartright String Band acquitted themselves well, and everything seemed to be a complete success.

I am now taking my rest so pleasantly situated on the banks of the romantic Yadkin river, where from my room I can look upon three miles of its beautiful waters.

Dr. Taylor's Article.

Dear Recorder:—I cannot refrain from expressing my delight in Dr. Taylor's articles on education, which appeared in your columns. They bristle with points and power in showing up the fallacy and ruinous policy of State aid, almost ad libitum, to higher 'University' education, while doling out but meager assistance and wofully neglecting that which is so necessary to our State's present and future well being—the education of the masses.

The common people and schools have for years needed just such a friend, and the State just such an able and scholarly expounder of great fundamental truths to expose error and let in light. In these articles we have clear, convincing, ringing truth throughout. Cannot our whole people, who make the State and government, rise to a level with the situation and right these wrongs by the ballot? How refreshing these articles! Like gentle showers, they fall from the writer's polished pen, reviving our almost withered hopes. Look up! The lightnings from high Olympus flash into every crevice and fissure, and alike into the dark caves of favoritism and money power. The people see—they are not blind! Then descends, ever and anon, a thunderbolt into the very camps of error as if hurled by Jupiter from his very citadel to convince a people that the yeomanry constitute the bulwark of a State or nation's strength, and must not be neglected in their rights of education! How very like let us briefly see. Dr. Taylor flashed his clear, vivid light all along the line of State aid to education—its undue munificence to higher and stinted allowance to common school education; its blunders in heavy appropriations to the wealthy, who could educate themselves, to the great neglect of the masses, who could not—piling Pelion upon Ossa of evidence of great statesmen and scholars, Jefferson in the number that this was not the right policy; showing poorly paid teachers and short terms taught, owing to scant State aid; how bright minds among the common people were doomed to waste and blight for want of aid to take a start in knowledge, from which without further help they could "mount up like eagles," while the well to do, able to educate their children, got aid, and here Dr. Taylor hurls a thunderbolt, whose truths none can deny. He says:—

"The gradual increase of appropriations from the State Treasury for higher education is one indication of the tendency referred to in the first article. Those who may discredit the existence of such a tendency are invited to compare the ten thousand dollars voted from the State Treasury between 1789 and 1866 (seventy seven years) with the two hundred and forty-five thousand dollars granted from the State Treasury during the last fourteen years, (including 1894). And if we count in the income from the land-scrip bonds (which, having been accepted by the State were properly used till the A. & M. College was founded), the State has paid the University since 1866 three hundred and forty thousand dollars."

This great sum, too, mostly out of the pockets of the farmers and "common people," with their bright children thirsting for a start in education, yet "perishing for the lack of knowledge."

Thus throughout Dr. Taylor's glowing articles are the gentle showers and sunshine of reason—the flashes of convincing, penetrating, scathing light—followed by thunderbolts tearing to atoms the strong trees of fallacy and favoritism that have been, and are, more and more sapping the life out of the State's fruition in her vast fields of sturdy yeomen, her wealth and revenue producers, as well as her gardens of common schools and unaided colleges! Shall we heed him and live, thrive, prosper and glory in our State redeemed from thraldom by the votes of the people? Or shall we shut our eyes and ears and go on blindly, with shaking, sycophantic knees, giving our children's patrimony to "higher" folks? Which shall it be? The people are to decide.

In Dr. Taylor the "common people" have a true and able friend—like our lamented Vance, a lover of our State and people. Those who placed him in his high position chose wisely and well. They might have (as is the manner of some colleges) "gone farther and fared worse." The writer knows and loves him well, not only for his Christian graces and scholarly power, but also, as Burns would say, that he is "a man for a' that." Long has he admired the Doctor's sterling qualities and care for the common people—has himself felt the warmth and cheer his true heart could give. Heartily the writer congratulates our whole people on the "feast of fat things" placed before us in these peerless articles. Let us hope, too, that in book form we will again enjoy in them "a feast of reason and flow of soul," and from every center table in the land will go forth from them that clear light that enable us to "shoot folly as it flies," and have that even justice so necessary to the well being of our State and people.

D. McNEILL.

From Pingtu, China.

Dear Recorder:—The smell of spring is in the air over here, the nicely cultivated wheat fields spread beautiful carpets of green, while the village trees are beginning to bud. Some of us have just been out among the towns and villages, living in inns and preaching. We visited a beautiful country about sixty miles from here, a valley, with a blue line of mountains beyond and green wheat fields between clusters of trees under which we could see the low houses and mud walls of the villages. A clear river runs through this valley and empties into the North sea. Passing along we saw the signs of an ancient city, where now is cultivated land, and were told that in this region once lived one of the ancient feudal kings. Only the mud mounds of the dead remained to tell the story of ancient glory. We spent several days at a place (Lai) in the midst of this lovely country, which is noted for its whiskey manufactories. Crowds visited us at the inn all the time when we would allow them to come in. My companion preached till he could talk no more without rest. Now and then I would try my very limited supply of words on them. I was assured of one thing, I could do no harm. I found that constant association with the Chinese and the constant hearing of the language helped very much. They say the way to learn to preach is to preach, and it is also true that the way to learn to talk is to talk. I do not believe high scholarship is necessary in the acquisition of a spoken language. A trained, quick mind and ear with a receptive disposition is a great help. It seems to me that the nearer one can come to the child's way of learning a spoken language the better it is.

One day we took a walk through the town. As soon as we got on the streets, boys, beggars, and gazers began to follow us. The streets were narrow and filthy, the houses low and shabby, and a general smell of malt pervaded everything. Presently, as we proceeded, we had after us a howling, hooting crowd of half naked boys, jeering and laughing, and calling us devils. One fellow about grown, and almost without clothing, ran up to me and thrust his face right into mine. The others jeered, and running before us, would stop and gaze back into our faces. Somehow I felt that the fiends of darkness were following us. We were glad to get back to our inn. A few days later as we were stopping at a town on the bank of the river, Bostick brought word that we were wanted to go back to Pingtu for a consultation as to whether we should go to a field further west which Herring and King had selected. This is a large V-shaped valley in the western part of this province more than three hundred miles inland from Chefoo, and beyond a range of mountains. This valley is filled with towns and cities and opens up towards the heart of the empire. Vast multitudes are there that have never heard the gospel. It has been decided that we shall try to open this field. Brethren League and King go to Mung Yiu, Herring and Blalock to the great city of Lai-Au-Fee, and Dr. Crawford and I to Lai Woo. The others remain on this side the mountains awhile yet till the way further opens. Pray for us.

Truly yours,

W. E. CROCKER.

From Louisiana.

Dear Recorder:—About the most unalloyed pleasure we have, excepting the letters from the dear ones in the Old North State, is the careful reading of the RECORDER. We do not believe in model newspapers, never having seen one; but the RECORDER is in some editions nearly up to our ideal of journalistic perfection.

Some one frequently says, "Keep politics out of religious papers." We have not time to read all we see in newspapers concerning the much discussed financial and economic questions of the day. Much of the stuff in the political papers when it is not biased by prejudice or a desire to deceive, is either transparently ignorant and absolutely worthless, or set forth in such peculiarly abstruse language as to be worthless to the average man. After trying to gain information from some of these, we frequently feel like one of the characters, a labor agitator, in one of Dicken's novels, who, when about to die, exclaimed, "It is all a tangle." But in the editorials on the first page of the RECORDER there is no uncertain sound, and we have yet to find a single sentence we are not willing to endorse. In these troubled times they are just what is needful. Give us more, and let other religious papers do likewise.

How much good Dr. Taylor's articles will accomplish when they shall have been published and distributed in book form, cannot now be estimated. We hope he will live to be at least four-score, and like the Grand Old Man of England, grow better and more forceful as he grows older. We all ought to and do look on him as a leader under God in this and other good works. But there is no need of my praising each department in detail—every part of the paper is good, very good.

There is quite a colony of Carolinians in and around this little village. Nearly all of us gathered to see the Convention specials go by. They were early in the evening, reported twenty minutes late, delayed by the Donaldsonville drawbridge about fifty miles south of here. The schedule was a very fast one, for there was a great race between this road, the Texas and Pacific, and the Kansas Cy., Memphis and Birmingham, notwithstanding the twenty minutes lost, promptly at 8:05 p. m., the schedule time, number 137, engineman Chris. Link at the throttle, came in sight; there was a roar, rattle, ringing of the bell and a flash of lights, and the first section was passed. Engineman Tafey, with the second section pulled by number 136, was just as close as the time would permit, and we saw no more of this than the first. That is about all we saw of the Convention.

The Baptists of Louisiana are rather weak numerically and financially; but we have here many men "valiant for the Lord." Recently while in New Orleans, it was our pleasure to attend the First and the Valence Street Baptist churches under the pastoral care of those consecrated brothers, Revs. Jno. and David Purser respectively. They are indeed a power for good in this poor "sin-sick" Crescent City; and there are many noble men and women helping—helping how well we can never know; but it will not be forgotten. The First church has been wonderfully aroused during the last year, and by the well timed help of such men as Gov. Northen of Georgia, has been enabled to move from the upper story of an ordinary store-building into the splendid Garden District Theater, which building has now been bought and turned into a church. There is only a light skirmish line where all the Baptists in New Orleans, or even the entire State, are counted; but may not the "mountains be full of horses and chariots of fire."

This State, specially the central and southern portions, is very wicked. Sunday is not generally respected; on the contrary, people hunt, fish, picnic, and attend balls to a greater extent than on any other day. Nearly all the stores are open and do even a larger business than on Saturday. Nearly every post-office, except those in the towns, is located in a bar-room, and it has been no unusual thing to see a sign at the post-office door, "Come in, get your mail and whiskey, and try your luck." Of course, this is the dark side of affairs. All the State is not so bad, and even in the most benighted portions the people are kind and hospitable to a fault. The country is rich; how rich only those who have lived here can imagine. All it needs is proper development. As for health, we have lived here three years, and have not been seriously ill. The soil and climate is adapted to almost any crop that will grow in any Southern State, and specially to cotton, rice and sugar. These latter three are the principal crops here.

We feel sure this country has a great future before it. Just how great will depend largely upon how well our Baptist people here and elsewhere do their duty.

Dr. Broughton in Asheville.

Rev. L. G. Broughton came to the First Baptist church on Monday, May 21st, and remained twelve days. The results of the meeting have been gracious and far reaching. There have been added to the church fifty-nine. There were at least two hundred professions. Many of these will yet join our church, while other churches will receive additions. It was a great meeting.

Dr. Broughton preaches with power. He honors the Word and exalts the office of the Holy Spirit. He has unusual gifts as an evangelist. However, this is no reason why he or any other man so endowed should give up the pastorate. Paul exhorted Timothy to do the work of an evangelist. While I believe in evangelists, I do not think it wise to urge every brother who can hold a successful meeting, to devote himself wholly to such work. We need more evangelistic pastors.

It was a joy to the writer to have Dr. Broughton with him. We were friends while schoolboys at college. I had watched his success as a physician, and rejoiced when I heard that he had decided to preach. I never heard him preach until in this meeting. Now I am profoundly thankful that the church has such an one wise to win souls.

NOTES.

So great is the religious interest among the citizens generally that meetings will be continued, beginning next week, conducted by four of the resident pastors—Revs. J. A. Brunson, Baptist; H. F. Chintzburg, Methodist; R. F. Campbell, Presbyterian, and J. L. White.

Rev. J. A. Brunson, pastor of the French Broad Avenue church, is forging ahead. He is a strong addition to our Convention. Rev. W. P. Southern is pastor of West End, and also city missionary. He is untiring and successful. The old First is still here. We have a debt upon us, but our shoulders are broad and our hearts are willing. It is the best church in the land and will always belong to the Baptists. We expect in the near future to ask the hosts of the Southern Baptist Convention to visit us.

Asheville as a city is standing square on both feet. Real estate is exchanging hands. New houses are being erected and the population is still increasing. It has a promising future.

When asked how our hair has retained its color and fullness, we reply, 'By the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor—nothing else.'"

"In 1883, my affianced was nearly bald, and the hair kept falling out every day. I induced her to use Ayer's Hair Vigor, and very soon, it not only checked any further loss of hair, but produced an entirely new growth, which has remained luxuriant and glossy to this day. Selma And Surroundings.

Rev. F. H. Martin of Lumberton came to Johnson county to hold a meeting with Rev. F. H. Poston's church in Smithfield on Monday after the second Sunday in April, and some of the Selmaites went over to Smithfield to make a new acquaintance, and hear the strange preacher. How natural! Well, we returned from the first service saying: "Thank the Lord for our new friend, and the privilege of having heard the old, old story again after such a plain and affectionmanner." Surely, the Lord always has something good in store for those who want a blessing. Having received a taste, we went again, and again, even until Brother Martin said he could remain with us no longer; or we should have been going to and from Smithfield yet. We also had the pleasure of forming the acquaintance of the woman Brother Martin pleasantly called his "better two-thirds." We were not long in concluding that the Lord made sister Martin for a preacher's wife, and did not allow her to make a mistake in marrying. We hope to meet Brother and Sister Martin again, as our first meeting proved so agreeable and profitable. May the Lord fill their lives with usefulness, and bring them to rest with him by and by.

Our late Union meeting at Blackman's Grove church, from 27th to 29th of April, was an enjoyable occasion. This is another of Brother Poston's churches, and the outgrowth of our recent mission work. This church has taken the place of an old grog-shop, and is doing quite a different and better work, we believe.

The brethren looked at our first coming among them with some fear, as though there might be too heavy a tax upon the hospitality of the church and community; but they began opening their hearts and homes, and the conduct of the delegates said "fear not—we are brethren, and can enjoy the company of our brethren," and it was not long before every delegate to the Union had a good home, and each brother seemed to get the best home—according to his report. Friday's congregation was comparatively large—Saturday's larger—and Sunday brought out more people that we could find room for. The house, though large, failed to seat more than two thirds of the people present.

The discussions ran smoothly, and we left the brethren on Sunday afternoon saying, "we would like have this thing repeated at your earliest convenience." There is a good outlook here for a self sustaining church in the near future—so we were impressed. The next Union will be held at Princeton in July next. Rev. Worley Creech to preach the opening sermon on Friday, and Rev. A. M. Simms of Raleigh Baptist Tabernacle to preach the missionary sermon on Sunday.

Brother E. S. Moore of Selma church lives nearly six miles in the country, but his church and Sunday-school will not release him from filling the offices of deacon, Sunday school superintendent and teacher of the Bible class; and his love for his church and Sunday-school makes him obedient to their requests, and brings him to Selma on time for each service of church and Sunday-school. When Brother Moore lived in town he did not miss a single rehersal or what not—he was always there. Now he cannot attend at night. Our Sunday-school is in a prosperous condition.

Brother D. H. Graves is away from us now at Goldsboro, but says he cannot sever his connection with the old home church in Selma. The Lord has been calling Brother Graves through a very trying experience this year, but has also given him grace sufficient to sustain it. He comes up to Selma each month to the regular services of his church, and fills his place as deacon, as faithfully as he can under the circumstances.

Brother S. H. Hood, our eldest deacon, has borne the heat and burden of many a day, and now his health is poor and his body feeble; but he seems to love Jesus better than ever, and this is evidenced by his works whenever able to do anything. As a church we are praying that his life may be prolonged many days to us, if the Lord is willing.

Brother J. M. Tisdale is our conveniently located deacon and treasurer, and we are sometimes almost compelled to tax him with considerable responsibility and work as an officer in his church, but he seems rather glad that he can serve the Lord, and cheerfully executes each duty imposed by his brethren.

I baptized one young man for Selma church on Wednesday evening before the second Sunday in this month.

Had a good day at Clyde's Chapel and White Oak churches on the second Sunday. Baptized three for Clyde's Chapel and one came back into fellowship by restoration. Had large congregations at both churches.

Wilson's Mills church said, about four weeks ago, "our pastor ought to attend the Southern Baptist Convention in Dallas, this year, and we will raise ten dollars of his expenses, if his other churches will co operate with us, and see that the remainder is made up." We thought this very kind and liberal for a little church of twenty-eight members, and it drew from the heart "a thank you, brethren." Perhaps my other churches were as willing as Wilson's Mills, but not so practical.

The Sunday school at Bethesda is doing well under the management of brother M. C. Smith. Their picnic of one month ago helped the School in numbers and otherwise, because so well conducted.

Must close, lest I go in the waste basket, or try the patience of my readers.

O. C. HORTON.

We are not our own; we are bought with a price; and nothing short of an unreserved surrender of self-interest to God's interest in humanity is moral and just. Not to be self-sacrificing in others' service is injustice. To be unloving, even to the unlovable, is to be ungodly.—Rev. George D. Herron.

Seminary Letter.

Dear Recorder:—The hurry and bustle of commencement is now over, and many homes are being made glad by the return of loved ones. The first of the commencement exercises was the annual address before the Broadus Literary Society, Tuesday night, May 29, by Rev. C. G. Jones of Chattanooga on "The Preacher and the Preaching." His address was chock full of pure unadulterated gospel and did us all good. We felt all the prouder of him because of his being a Wake Forest man. On Wednesday morning Dr. Chas. R. Hemphill, pastor Second Presbyterian church and professor in the Presbyterian Seminary this city, preached a sermon before the students. His subject was, "Some of the Temptations to which Ministers are Exposed." Chief among these temptations are self-indulgence, indolence, pride, love of applause, envy and jealousy, partisan spirit, and hypocrisy.

After the delivery of diplomas in the separate schools Thursday morning, Dr. J. P. Green, President of William Jewel College, Missouri, made a very able address, "Baptist Preachers,—the Supply and the Demand." At the close of his address he made a very earnest appeal for the country churches, which, if they cannot furnish money, can furnish preachers. Ninety per cent. of our preachers are from rural districts. Thursday night diplomas to the graduates were delivered, and addresses by seventeen full graduates. Bro. James I. Kendrick of Charlotte, N. C., was one of the speakers, subject: "The Difficulties of Unbelief."

The degree of Th. D., Doctor of Theology, was conferred upon four, who have spent a full year here after taking the degree of Master of Theology. This is the first year this degree has been conferred. Twelve, one of whom was Bro. J. S. Corpening of North Carolina, received the degree of Th. G., English Graduates. The degree of Th. B., Bachelor of Theology, was conferred upon twelve, of whom were two North Carolinians, Bro. D. P. Bridges and myself.

North Carolina has made a fine record at the Seminary this year, every man of the thirteen has stood and successfully passed every one of his examinations,—something not every State can boast of. One-fourth of the Senior Greek class this year were men who had been trained by Prof. W. B. Royall. Of course they passed, for who would want a better guarantee?

Bro. J. G. Blalock will have charge of the gymnasium again next year. He will spend the summer in North Carolina. Bro. D. P. Bridges will also return to North Carolina. Bro. J. S. Corpening has accepted a call to Union City, Tenn. This is one of the best fields in Tennessee and we feel sure Bro. Corpening will do a fine work there. Bro. T. J. Hudson will do mission work in Kentucky. Brethren J. W. Millard, W. R. Cullom, and C. J. Thompson will spend the summer with their churches. Brethren R. D. Cross and T. H. Plemmons will remain in the city, at least a part of the time. Bro. R. G. Kendrick will have charge of Seventeenth and Main Mission, this city. He has already proven himself an efficient worker, and we predict for him good success. Bro. B. W. Spilman has engagements for a few weeks to lecture in Kentucky. He expects then to enter the pastorate and not return to the Seminary. We trust Providence will lead him back to North Carolina, for she can ill afford to spare him. The writer will go to the State Convention at Carlyle this afternoon.

From High Point.

Editor of Recorder:—At a meeting of the church at this place the last week in April it was decided to raise $500 to improve the church building. Notwithstanding the cry of hard times, about $700 has been pledged, and work is going on on the interior, which when completed, will make it one of the most attractive houses of worship to be found.

The pastor, Rev. Rufus Weaver, and the other members of the committee deserve much credit for the untiring energy manifested in raising the money, and the sacrificing spirit shown by the members of the church is, we think, a hopeful sign.

After the sermon Sunday night, which was one of unusual power and pathos, one young lady was baptized into the fellowship of the church.

Rev. Thomas Hume gave one of his famous lectures for the benefit of the Ladies Aid Society, in the College chapel, Tuesday night, May 22, to an appreciative audience. His subject was "Woman, Poet, Prophet—Mrs. Browning," and those who have heard him need not be told that he handled it with a master hand.

The thanks of the Society, and also of the literary people of the place, are due him for his kindness. Long may he live and go on, inspiring men and women to purer thoughts and nobler lives. ONE OF THE SOCIETY.

The Greensboro Church's Withdrawal From the Beulah.

Dear Brethren:—In a conference held May 13th the following was unanimously adopted by the Greensboro Baptist church:

WHEREAS, We have for several years been impressed with the importance of an Associational organization composed of churches within a radius of twenty or thirty miles of Greensboro, and whereas, the natural advantages (compactness, accessibility, &c.) and the great spiritual destitution in this section seem to demand such an organization; and whereas, Greensboro is an educational, business and railroad centre from which radiates great influence, be it therefore Resolved 1. That in our judgment the time has come for the organization of a new Association.

2. That we withdraw from the Beulah Association at its next Association.

3. That we request you at your next conference to thoroughly and prayerfully consider this matter of a new Association. Its advantages physically and spiritually, and in all its bearings upon the Master's kingdom.

4. That if you think favorably of this movement, you will please take prompt action with reference of a withdrawal from your association at its next meeting.

5. That you will please notify us as soon as possible of said action and whether you will meet with us in October for the formation of said association.

REMARKS.

After consultation with Elder H. A. Brown and others we believe that God is calling his churches to enter into this organization. It will give us compactness and accessibility of all parts of the territory as few other Associations have. It will combine into this body a number of towns and churches which would make, in a few years, one of the best and strongest working forces in the State. It embraces a territory of destitution which has long been neglected. We believe that with these conditions we have an opportunity superior to any other section of the State. Such an organization will develop rapidly the churches and promptly supply the destitution in this country. Such an organization with its Union Meetings would give the Association, practically, four or five great Associational meetings every year, besides the annual meeting. We cordially invite you to join with us in this organization, which in importance is great and prophesies great things for our churches and section of the country.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

The University Commencement.

We have just had the grandest commencement ever seen in Chapel Hill, and the most glorious thing about it is that the biggest honors and most of the honors of all sorts have been taken by Baptist boys.

In the contest Tuesday night between the orators of the Dialectic and Philanthropic Societies the medal was won by Herman Harrell Horne of Johnson county and his closest competitor was John C. Eller of Ashe county, both Baptists. Mr. Horne also won the prize for the best essay contributed to the University Magazine during the year. He also won the essayists medal in the Philanthropic Society, and last year he won the Declaimer's medal in the same Society.

He and another Baptist boy were the only two students in the University that received the award of "Highest Honors" for scholarship during the year. The other notable scholar was Darius Eatman of Oxford, the son of a painter, himself a painter, who by hard word earned the money to come to the University, and by talent, character and gentlemanly qualities so won the esteem of his fellow students as to be elected the President of his class. Mr. Horne has been elected instructor in Modern Languages for the next year and he will be a substantial addition to the Faculty of the University.

The commencement exercises began on Sunday with the baccalaureate sermon by the Rev. Dr. Murdock of Salisbury. He preached a very appropriate, powerful, yet plain and simple sermon from the texts "What shall I do Lord?" and "I have finished my course." Rev. Dr. Carroll pronounced it one of the best sermons he ever heard, and praise from him is praise indeed.

Monday night the Literary Societies held their annual meetings, and greeted old members.

Tuesday morning Dr. Frank L. Reid delievered before the Alumni Association a masterly oration on the life and character of Dr. Charles F. Deems. Dr. Deems was Professor in the University for many years. He founded the Deems fund for the aid of poor students, which starting at three hundred dollars and now amounts to sixteen hundred dollars. The Alumni Association made arrangements to celebrate next year the centennial of the opening of the University in 1795. President Winston hopes to see 500 alumni present on that occasion, to be greeted by 500 students.

Tuesday night the Literary Society orators had their annual contest. As said above the medal was awarded to H. H. Horne. Immediately afterwards the Faculty gave a reception in the gymnasium with music by the Richmond band and refreshments by Dughi. About 700 people were present and the scene surpassed any ever witnessed at the University. The Hon. Secretary of the Interior, Hoke Smith, and his lovely and accomplished wife were presented by President Winston to each visitor. The delightful entertainment lasted many hours.

Wednesday was Commencement Day. The six best speakers of the Senior Class delivered orations in Memorial Hall before an audience of over 3,500 people. Rarely has such a scene been witnessed anywhere. The stage was occupied by men eminent in State and Nation. The Mangum medal for the best oration was won by C. L. VanNoppen of Durham.

Thirty graduates received diplomas; there were eight Bachelors of Arts, eight of Phi[illegible] and two of Laws, one of whom was Claudius Dockery a most brilliant and promising scholar. The honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon our own beloved missionary Robt. T. Bryan also upon Rev. I. McK. Pittenger of Raleigh. LL. D. was conferred upon the Hon. Hoke Smith.

The commencement exercises were opened with prayer by the Rev. Dr. Pritchard.

Secretary Smith's oration is considered the best ever delivered here. He spoke of the possibilities and responsibilities of North Carolina speaking one hour with power, wisdom, feeling and eloquence. Secretary Smith was a lad living in Chapel Hill when President Winston was a Freshman.

The alumni banquet on Wednesday was enjoyed by 300 alumni and guests. It was the scence of much humor, wit, eloquence and goodly fellowship. The Glee Club concert Wednesday night was heard by a packed house. The boys were frequently encored, about $200 were taken in. Here, as elsewhere, the Baptists boys are in the lead. Chas. Roberson is the manager and director and Darius Eatman is a lovable member. I wish our Baptist people could only know what a great work the University is doing for them, and what a noble stand their boys are taking in this institution.

B.

Closing Exercises at Peace Institute.

"Peace" has had closing exercises of a charming character this year. They began on Friday evening, May 25th, 1894, with "Class Night." During the evening the President, Miss Eudora Vick of Selma, delivered a pleasant address; and Miss Bessie Belvin of Raleigh read an excellent original class poem. The classes in Elocution and Physical Culture filled out the program with great credit to themselves and to their teacher. There was choice music after each piece on the program, every number being well executed.

On Saturday evening, the Alumnæ had a reunion in which a very large number participated. Some fine talks were made over their tea; and afterwards they enjoyed refreshments in the library.

On Sunday, May 27th, the Baccalaureate sermon was preached at the Presbyterian church by Rev. R. S. Caldwell of Winston, N. C. from Ps. 139 17—"How precious also are thy thoughts unto me, O God! How great is the sum of them." It was a noble sermon and worthy of such a text.

On Monday evening, commencing at 8:30 p. m., the regular exercises were held. The Distinctions announced, the Certificates of Proficiency awarded, and the prizes presented gave evidence of diligence and successful work during the school year.

There were four graduates in Literature and Science—Misses Charlotte Brown, Zula Elmore, Mary McNair, and Eunice Worth; and two full graduates—Misses Bessie Belvin and Eudora Vick. Rev. Mr. Caldwell presented diplomas to the graduates in a very graceful manner, and made a most excellent and timely address before the Graduating Class.

There were quite a number of beautiful prizes and medals given for painting, drawing, penmanship, French, English Essay, Deportment and Scholarship, Latin, and Mathematics, &c.

The Art Exhibit, after the exercises Monday evening and during the forenoon of Tuesday, was one of the most beautiful ever made by the Institute. There was a fine display of finished work in every department of fine art. Some of the china painting was unusually good, exhibiting fine taste and skilful execution.

The exercises came to a close on Tuesday evening after one of the finest concerts which has ever been enjoyed by the people of Raleigh.

The outlook of "Peace" for the coming year is better than usual. The courses in Art and Music have been enlarged and a new degree added in the Literary Department. The Institute proposes to establish here next year a regular Conservatory of Music with two finished Professors, one a graduate of Leipzig and the other from Boston, with four assistants, all specialists. The Institute proposes to make this department equal to any demand which can be made upon it. New catalogues are out, giving full particulars.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., March 30, 1894

Electrolibration Co.

Gentlemen:—Inclosed I hand you some correspondence from Elder Sylvester Hassell, A. M., a great preacher and author of a valuable "Church History." The contents will doubtless prove gratifying to you.

Yours truly, D. BARTLEY.

WILLIAMSTON, N. C., March 12, 1894

DR. D. BARTLEY,

Crawfordsville, Ind.

Dear Brother:—I herewith enclose you two testimonials in regard to the Electropoise, the first, after a few months' and the second, after nearly three years' use of the instrument. I know nothing equal to it in Materia Medica.

Yours sincerely,

SYLVESTER HASSELL

WILLIAMSTON, N. C., March 12, 1894

During my recent tour in Texas, Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina, while traveling about five thousand miles and preaching day and night, I was blessed of the Lord to receive wonderful strength and ease and sleep, great relief for my kidneys, heart and nerves from the Electropoise. I have taken no medicine, and I am far better off than when I took twelve doses of doctor's medicine, and half a gallon of Lithia water a day. I weigh one hundred and twenty-five pounds, and my complexion is that of perfect health.

Physicians owe it to the high demand of their noble calling, and to the cause of suffering humanity to test [illegible] virtues of the Electropoise with carefulness and impartiality. I wish that every family owned, and would properly use the instrument.

I am not an agent and have no connection with the Electropoise Company, and have no other motive in writing these testimonials than a desire to relieve suffering.

SYLVESTER HASSELL.

Closing Exercises of Littleton High School.

The closing exercises of Littleton High School and Business Institute were held on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of the last week in May.

The address by Mr. Henry Blount was listened to by a large and appreciative audience on Wednesday. Henry Blount is an orator; no man could give utterance to sweeter sentiments and more ennobling phrases than he. He held his audience spell bound, and the applause continued throughout the address.

He ended with "Beyond the Alps Lies Italy." No one but a past master of the intricacies of the mind and the emotions of the heart could have conceived it. The peroration in which the speaker points us to the Italy of the soul's dreams beyond the steep and difficult Alps of life is one of the finest pieces of word painting I have ever seen or heard, and compares favorably with Ruskin's most exquisite gems; and pregnant as the words are with lofty sentiments and thoughts and blend with the strong personality of the speaker its peroration is a marvel of eloquence.

The crowning success came Thursday night. Long before the appointed hour for the exercises to begin the people commenced to fill the hall at the school.

The exercises were opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. John Mitchell of Wake Forest College. The opening song was announced promptly on time by Prof. Bagley, Mrs. Bagley presided at the piano. Then followed the orations, declamations and recitations. Prof. Bagley requested Rev. Mr. Thompson, Messrs. J. C. Caddell and S. Moss to act as judges. The prize was presented to Mr. John Brower Bagley, for his rendition of "The Polish Boy." He rendered it with much pathos and power. He was called on the platform and was presented with the prize by Mr. J. C. Caddell, who did not fail to pay a high compliment to the young man's talent and genius.

All the speakers did well. The oration, "Southern Chivalry," by Mr. G. A. Northington was a fine effort. The oration by Mr. H. S. Joyner was highly complimented. He seemed thoroughly at ease, self-possessed, and spoke in a clear and distinct manner.

The oration, "The South Faithful to her Duties," by Mr. R. G. Wood, and the Valedictory by Mr. J. R. Tarkenton, were fine efforts and the speakers acquitted themselves handsomely.

"Independence Bell," by G. W. Shepard; "Little Boy's Trouble," by S. Walt Bagley; "The Fun that Adam missed," by Polk McCraw; "Schoolboy's Lament," C. Myrick, Sam. J. Harriss; "Murphy's Irish Stew," Horace Pullen; "Two Roads," S. J. Dixon; "Stump Speech," S. A. Williams; "Farmer Thornbush on Fools," H. A. Harriss, were all good and deserve mention.

The humorous recitations by N. Macon Shearin and W. H. Applewhite, in negro character, were very funny, and they acquitted themselves like old-time minstrels.

The declamations, "North Carolina Independence," L. A. Sykes; "A Glorious Country," J. W. Johns; "Ambitions of a Statesman," J. W. Bell; "Tribute to the South," T. O. Tuttle, were very good and reflected much credit upon the young men.

The music by the Glee club was very enjoyable, under the leadership of Mrs. L. W. Bagley.

Prof. Bagley was overloaded with compliments and kind words about the manner in which the young men acquitted themselves, and upon his management of the institution.

Notice to Churches.

At the late meeting of the Convention the question of place of meeting next year was left to be decided by the three Boards, Foreign, Home and Sunday school. On conference of the Secretaries of the Boards, it was decided that all communications from churches bearing on this subject should be addressed to the Secretary of the Sunday-school Board, who will arrange all applications and present them to the other Boards. It has also been decided that the final decision as to place will be left open until the first of October next. Churches desiring that the meeting of the Convention be held with them will therefore present their applications to the undersigned, between now and that time. It would be well that such applications should give full information as to what accommodations can be offered to the body as to meeting place, etc.

T. P. BELL, Cor. Sec S. S. Board.

HELPLESS INVALID.

"About 18 months or two years ago my wife's health gave way, and she grew steadily worse. She could not retain scarcely anything she ate and the case finally assumed the worst form of

DYSPEPSIA and CHRONIC DIARRHŒA,

and she became a helpless invalid at the age of 18. I had her under the treatment of a good physician, but his efforts to relieve her were of no avail. So, after matters had continued thus for 8 or 10 months, and my wife had given up to die, I took the case in my own hands and purchased a bottle of Dr. King's began giving it to her in water as hot as she could drink it, before and after each meal, using a mild purgative occasionally on retiring at night.

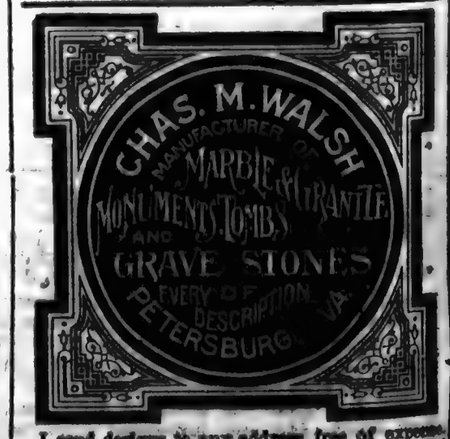
Suffice it to say in less than a week there was

A WONDERFUL CHANGE.



She could eat a little of anything she desired, and today is a well woman. She used altogether possibly 4 or 6 bottles. In my opinion

GERMETUER HAS NO EQUAL."

A Church Organized at Aberdeen.

On the fourth Sunday in May, a presbytery, consisting of Rev. C. Durham, L. Johnston and C. V. Brooks, was called to organize a church at this place. Dr. Durham was chosen Moderator, and E. V. Brooks, Clerk.

Twenty-two persons with letters from other churches were organized into a church, electing brethren W. L. Hunter and H. L. Holland, Deacons, and James W. Fagan, Treasurer and Clerk. They call themselves the Aberdeen Baptist church.

The doors of the church were opened and three were received for baptism.

Bro. L. Johnston began a series of meetings here on Monday preceding the organization, and already much good has been accomplished. The meeting is still growing in interest under his ministry. It was a glorious meeting last night when young men—noble, manly, brave—came forward with tearful eyes, and declared themselves on the Lord's side. May this meeting and the church planted here be of lasting good to the entire community.

C. V. BROOKS.

Aberdeen, May 29, 1894.

Called to Preach.

We are gratified to know that Prof. B. K. Mason, a brother and member of this church, has, after much prayer and meditation for Divine guidance, decided to give his life to the work of the gospel ministry.

We regard a call to this work as second to no other call that can be given in this life; and with such appreciation of its importance, we, the Apex Baptist church in conference, Sunday evening, May 27th, 1894, do most heartily endorse Bro. Mason in his chosen service, and do hereby commend him to the brethren and to the public wherever he may go, as a Christian brother and gentleman worthy of their confidence, support and esteem—true and faithful to all his professions, consecrated and devoted in Christian work, gentle and kind in his bearing to all, and governing well his tongue.

Resolved, That the prayers of this church shall follow Bro. Mason in his efforts to fill his great commission.

Resolved, That a copy of these proceedings be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER and N. C. Baptist with request to publish, and that they be spread upon our minutes.

A. J. WOOD, Clerk.

J. W. F. ROGERS, Mod.

From Salisbury, N. C.

Dear Recorder:—Our meeting here continued about two weeks, and closed on Sunday night, May 27th. As a result, I have baptised seventeen persons. On the closing night our church was filled to its utmost capacity, and numbers of people were turned away. Seven persons were baptised before the large audience, most of whom were Pedobaptists. The ordinance seemed to have been impressive in the fullest degree, as all were as quiet and orderly as at a funeral service—indeed the baptism did symbolize the believer's death to sin, and his resurrection to a life of holiness by the glory of the Father. This beautiful ordinance will never cease to be impressive to humanity as long as time shall last; inasmuch as it is but obeying the command and following the example of our blessed Master. He was buried in baptism, and so should all his followers be. "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice." I have had more than one person to say to me within the last few days, "I never saw any one baptized in my life." These were grown people. What did they mean? There must be a vast difference between sprinkling and baptizing, when such expressions are heard.

The Baptist work in this part of the State is making its impression upon the minds and hearts of the people. Give us men and women who think for themselves, and are willing to take the New Testament for their guide, and we ask for nothing more.

I am rejoiced at the glorious work that is going on throughout the State among our churches, and we are sharing these blessings.

You are giving us a paper filled with invaluable matter, and I shall expect an abundant harvest from such sowing.

DIED.

FOUSHEE—Died on May 16th, at Sanford, N. C., J. S. Foushee, aged fifty-eight years. He leaves a devoted wife and five children to mourn their loss, but they sorrow not as those without hope, as their loved one had been a consistent member of the Baptist church for twenty years, and was a kind, devoted and loving husband and father. May he who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb comfort the sorrowing ones in this their sad hour of bereavement. B.

WATERS—Died in Sampson county, near Turkey, May 11th, Alexander Waters, aged twenty. He died of lung trouble, and his sufferings were very great, but he did not murmur, but appeared resigned to the will of God. He had been a consistent member of Beulah Baptist church for three years, and has shown by his walk and conversation that he was a Christian. Mourn not for him, father and loved ones, for your loss is his gain. PASTOR.

BLOUNT—Died in Sampson county, near Turkey, May 12th, Jimmie Blount, in his twentieth year. He connected himself with Beulah Baptist church eight years ago, and continued an exemplary member until his death. He bore his long suffering with Christian patience, and had no fears of death. He was a pious, intellectual young man, and had by his gentle disposition endeared himself to all who knew him. May the God of all grace comfort the bereaved family. PASTOR.

PRATT—Died in Edenton, May 14th, 1894, Sister Elizabeth F. Pratt, in the fifty-second year of her age.

Our deceased sister had been a member of the Baptist church for over thirty years. In her walk and conduct she carefully abstained from everything that could jeopardize her Christian integrity. She always looked upon her church as one of the leading objects of her affection. She leaves a son and daughter, two brothers, and a large circle of friends to mourn their loss.

KING—Our Sister King, widow of Washington King, departed this life April 17th, 1894, aged seventy-five years. Sister King was a consistent member of Bethel Baptist church for many years, and we believe that she lived in a faithful discharge of her duty. She was not called on to pass weary months of suffering, having been confined to her bed but a short time before death came to her relief. She was a kind mother, and was loved by all who knew her. She leaves six children and many friends to mourn their loss. May the Lord bless the bereaved.

W. M. BRISSON.

Bladen county, N. C.

NEWTON—At Wake Forest, on May 27th, Mrs. Hettie A. Newton, wife of Rev. I. T. Newton. The deceased professed faith in Christ and joined the church when quite young, and through all her life the influence of her piety was felt by all about her. Her daily walk was a real benediction to all her friends. No one ever possessed a sweeter spirit nor a greater desire to be useful—to do good to all. Just entering the sphere of great usefulness as the wife of a devoted minister of the gospel, God called her to a higher work for which he saw she was fully prepared. He who gave and took away will give grace to the sorrowing. W. R. G.

EATON—Died in Cleveland, February 23d, 1894, of pneumonia, Mrs. Susan Hunt Eaton, wife of E. F. Eaton. She had been in very bad health for five months, and was taken with la grippe on Feb. 9th, which was soon followed by pneumonia, and died on the above date. The deceased had been a consistent member of the Presbyterian church for many years, and exemplied the Christian character in her home, in society, and in the church.

She sustained the different relations in life in a most worthy manner; was a loving daughter, a devoted wife, an affectionate sister, a kind and tender mother. She was a special friend to the poor and needy, and delighted in acts of kindness and deeds of charity. S. W. E.

MORTON—Died at Morehead City, N. C., Sunday evening, May 27th, 1894, Frank Davis, the infant son of Laura T. and James B. Morton, aged two months and twenty-eight days. He was a lovely child, the darling of the household and pet of the neighbors. Oh, how he is missed from the home which his brief stay made so happy. May this providence of God add one more link to the chain that binds us to God and heaven. Our loss is his eternal gain. We can see in our imagination his little bright eyes watching at the "beautiful gate" for us. May we so live in this life that we may be one united family around the throne of God, where we can join little Frank in singing and praising God and the Lamb forevermore, is the earnest prayer of a grief-stricken soul. T. C. D.

CARMICHAEL—Prof. Timothy L. Carmichael of Franklin county, N. C., was born Oct. 19th, 1837, and died May 6th, 1894, aged fifty-six years, seven months and twenty-three days. His life was one of purity and religious beauty. He was happily converted in early life and connected himself with the church, and remained a devoted and faithful member until his death. His end was peace. He was a member of Harriss' Chapel and a clerk of the same. He is greatly mourned by all who knew him. He knew that he was going, and resigned himself to the will of the Father, for the battle had been fought, the victory won, and it was easy for him to enter into that undiscovered country from whose borders no traveler returns. He was a member of the order of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and faithfully wore his badge of honor till death. May God comfort and console those who are bereft on account of his departure, and by his battle constrain us to live better Christians and be drawn closer to God. M. R. PERNELL.

NEWTON—Carlton Newton was fourteen years old. He was born Dec. 9th, 1879, and died of typhoid fever Nov. 30th, 1893. To enumerate his virtues would require volumes from a gifted author's pen. Suffice it to say his sweet, unassuming and quiet demeanor under all circumstances won the hearts of those who were his playmates at both day and Sunday-school alike, and those whose good fortune it was to know him. Like the little violet, he must be sought to be found, and when found the beauty and excellence of his spotless character shed that sweet influence so gloriously elevating in refined beings. As the days of his calm, happy boyhood came and went, we saw his virtues and amiable qualities expand and widen far beyond his years, and we could but note his purity of soul in his various avocations of life. When the "grim monster" set its seal upon his lovely brow we knew full well and felt the force of the old adage, "Death loves a shining mark." All that his skilful physician could do, all that many faithful friends could administer with fond, anxious prayers, availed nothing. Carlton died. His funeral was preached from Rev. 22: 5, "And there shall be no night there," by Bro. Crumpler, followed by a touching eulogy at the grave by Bro. Harrell, and that faithful follower of Christ, Bro. James H. Moore. His faithful teacher, Bro. O. V. Peterson, spoke tenderly of his moral character; but alas, Carlton is gone. His pure soul is in heaven, transplanted from this beautiful world of ours to a far more beautiful home beyond the skies, yet his memory lives in our hearts. Often in his last days he spoke affectionately of his schoolmates. Yes, he is gone; but only waiting on the other side—waiting to welcome his loved ones. A FRIEND.

FREE! 11 YEARS WITHOUT HEARING.

The following is worthy of careful perusal:

I suffered intensely from Catarrh for 11 years; nose stopped up, continually dripping down in the throat, especially in the morning, accompanied by a dry hacking cough; I took cold on the least exposure, and had a continuous dull headache, a roaring, buzzing, cracking and singing in my ears. My hearing began to fail, and for eleven years I was almost entirely deaf—which was continually becoming worse. Every remedy I tried failed. Without much hope I commenced the use of the Home Etherealizing Medication; the first application was simply wonderful. My hearing rapidly returned, and now I can hear a conversation without the least difficulty, and I suffer no inconvenience in any way from the disease. A few months treatment has entirely cured my Catarrh.

Good board in 300 yds. of the Academy at $7 per month (28 days). There are two regular boarding houses, one for young men, the other for young ladies, besides a number of private homes in which board can be had. Girls who board are required to board with the principal, unless otherwise requested by parent or guardian.

A FULL CORPS OF EFFICIENT TEACHERS. Commercial instruction is a specialty. Diplomas are awarded to those who complete the commercial course as prescribed in catalogue. There is a great demand for young men of a business education.

MUSIC, both instrumental and vocal, holds a prominent place in our school. We keep posted as to the requirements for matriculation in the different colleges of the State, and so direct the courses of those who expect to attend college that they may take good stands in their classes. For those who wish to prepare for teaching in public schools we arrange a special course looking towards that end. Our school is not for young men who wish to play the dude, nor for young ladies who wish to be society belles and pass their time in idleness, but for those who are earnestly desirous of a practical business education, or of sufficient preparation to enter colleges.

A Song for To-Day.

Groweth the morning from gray to gold:
  Up, my heart, and greet the sun!
Yesterday's cares are a tale that is told,
  Yesterday's tasks are a work that is done;
Yesterday's failures are all forgot,
  Buried beneath the billows of sleep;
Yesterday's burdens are as they were not,—
  Lay them low in the soundless deep.

Share thy crust and ask no dole,
  Offer the cup thou wouldst never drain;
Only he who saveth his soul
  Loseth all that he fain would gain.
Smile with him who has gained his day;
  Smile the gladder, if at thy cost.
It was his to win and thine to aspire,
  It is his to day who loved the most.

Pluck the flower that blooms at thy door;
  Cherish the love that the day may send;
Cometh an hour when all thy store
  Vainly were offered for flower or friend.
Gratefully take what life offereth,
  Looking to heaven nor seeking reward.
So shalt thou find, come life, come death,
  Earth and the sky are in sweet accord.
—Louise Manning Hodgkins.

Three Paths.

The wild old Hassan sat in his door when three young men passed eagerly by.

"Are ye following after any one, my sons?" he said.

"I follow after Pleasure," said the eldest.

"And I after Riches," said the second. "Pleasure is only to be found with riches."

"And you my little one?" he asked of the third.

"I follow after Duty," he modestly said.

And each went his way.

The aged Hassan in his journey came upon three men.

"My son," he said to the eldest, "methinks thou wert the youth who was following after Pleasure. Didst thou overtake her?"

"No, father," answered the man, "Pleasure is but a phantom that flies as one approaches."

"Thou didst not follow the right way, my son."

"How didst thou fare?" he asked of the second.

"Pleasure is not with riches," he answered.

"And thou," continued Hassan, addressing the youngest.

"As I walked with Duty," he replied, "Pleasure walked ever by my side."

"It is always thus," replied the old man. "Pleasure pursued is not overtaken. Only her shadow is caught by him who pursues. She herself goes hand in hand with Duty, and they who make Duty their companion, have also the companionship of Pleasure."—Selected.

Temperance.

In those sanctuaries of affection and virtue, the Christian homes of our people, let the sophistries of the advocates of alcohol be exposed by sound reasoning, the temptations and dangers of the saloon be carefully explained, and let fathers and mothers merit for themselves the reward and consolation of sober sons and daughters by showing a noble example of self-control and sobriety. Let there be a general and a generous distribution of temperance literature, tracts, lectures, statistics, and good reading among our people. And this work of agitation in favor of sobriety and temperance must be constant and active. The allurements of drink are ever thrusting themselves in the pathway of men. Near to the house of prayer the workingman finds the drinking saloon, cheerful, enticing, and hospitable, as he goes to worship God on Sunday morning. Close to the gates of the factory or mill the agents of alcohol ply their trade and tempt the weary toiler to spend for a moment's gratification his hard-earned money that is much needed in his humble home. Surrounded thus by attractive temptations, men need constant warnings, repeated admonitions, and such wholesome influence as will strengthen and safeguard them against the overpowering spell of drink.—Rev. J. M. Cleary.

Points About Pins.

Thorns were originally used in fastening garments together. Pins did not immediately succeed thorns as fasteners, but different appliances were used, such as hooks, buckles and laces. It was the latter half of the fifteenth century before pins were used in Great Britain. When first manufactured in England the iron wire, of the proper length, was filed to a point, and the other extremity twisted into a head. This was a slow process, and four or five hundred pins were a good day's work for an expert hand. The United States has the credit of inventing the first machine for making pins. This was in 1824. The inventor was one Lemuel Wellman Wright.—Ladies' Home Journal.

can never rest on a body frail from disease any more than the lovely lily can grow in the sterile soil. When consumption fastens its hold upon a victim, the whole physical structure commences its decay. At such a period, before the disease is too far advanced, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will arrest and cure it. So certain is this, that an offer is made to refund the money paid for it when a failure can be found under the condition of a fair trial.

To the Next Thing.

Vagueness is one of the worst curses of life. Either men look upon the great principles of duty through a glass darkly, or they miss in putting them to practice through failing sharply to discern the right time and fit place of application. So it comes to pass that many men whose general intentions are of the best actually make their concrete performances to be of the worst, simply because—to use a phrase which is expressive, if it be slightly alloyed with slang—they do not "catch on" to their proper and waiting work.

Usually what a man ought to do is what he can do. When, under Nehemiah, the walls of the holy city were rebuilding, the priests repaired "every one over and against his own house;" and when the restored metropolis of Israel was to be guarded against invasion, every one in his watch was "to be over against his house." That was handy. It was economical, because it wasted the least possible time, while it quietly enlisted a special vigilance, proportioned to the individual anxiety of each householder that he and his might be safe.

There is this to be considered, too: that great things usually so lie—so to speak—with their little ends toward us, that we are constantly exposed to danger of misapprehending their relative size and value. He, consequently, who waits for "an eligible opportunity," and passes by many outlying possibilities lest they prove to be beneath him, will be almost sure to waste himself upon long waiting with scant results. If a boy wants to make a merchant of himself, his best way is to begin wherever and however he can, and by the energy and honesty and fidelity of his service in the lowest place demonstrate his fitness for a higher—a fitness toward which employers are seldom blind.

And so, if a Christian desires to be useful in the Master's name and for the Master's sake, he must avoid the mistake of idly waiting for some first class opportunity to offer itself.—Moravian.

A New Dainty.

A new vegetable is about to be introduced to the people of the United States, through the Department of Agriculture. It is the root of the calla lily, which resembles somewhat in appearance the ordinary Irish tuber. It is more elongated, and when cut the interior is a trifle more viscid. But a section of it is so potato-like one would not be likely to distinguish any difference. In cooking, it has first to be boiled in order to destroy certain acrid properties, after which it may be fried, roasted, baked, or what not, according to taste. Farmers in Florida have begun to raise these calla roots for market. The plants grow readily in swamps and so thickly that the yield of a single flooded acre is enormous. They reproduce themselves by the multiplication of their bulbs under ground, so that the grower has simply to dig up the offshoots and leave the parents to propagate anew. For centuries Egyptians have cultivated a similar crop during the seasons of the Nile overflow, and at the present time calla lily bulbs are a common vegetable in Japanese markets. So prolific and palatable are they that their propagation in many parts of the United States, where conditions are favorable, may reasonably be looked forward to as an agricultural industry of the future.—Watchman.

How to Cleanse Blankets.

When the blankets are ready for washing pour into the bottom of the dry tub half a pint of the usual household ammonia water, and over it lay the blanket lightly. Then immediately pour over sufficient warm water to entirely cover the article. This sends the fumes of the ammonia through the fibres of the blanket, and loosens the dirt in a wonderful manner. The cloth should be pressed and stirred about in the liquid for a time, then removed to another tub containing simply warm water, of about the same temperature as that first employed, and again soused about for a time; after which it is to be lightly run through a wringer and directly hung to dry. The same method of treatment is to be pursued with each blanket, and the suds ought not to be used a second time. Probably this is one of the most economical methods which can be employed, and the least taxing to the physical strength. Unless the blanket is very dirty this treatment will give a perfectly satisfactory result. If there are spots, a gentle rubbing between the hands will usually free them from dirt.—Good Housekeeping.

Gingerbread Barometer.

A clever Frenchmen who has original ideas on most subjects employs a kind of barometer which may safely be called unique. It is nothing more nor less than the figure of a general made of gingerbread. He buys it every year at the Place du Trone, takes it home, and hangs it by a string on a nail.

Gingerbread, as everyone knows, is easily affected by changes in the atmosphere. The slightest moisture renders it soft; in dry weather, on the contrary, it grows hard and tough.

Every morning on going out, the Frenchman asks his servant, "What does the general say?" and the man applies his thumb to the gingerbread figure.

Sometimes he replies, "The general feels flabby about the chest; he would advise your taking an umbrella." On the other hand, when the general's symptoms are "hard and unyielding," the Frenchman sallies forth arrayed in his best, with no fears for his spotless suit or his new hat. He says the general has, so far, never proved unworthy of the confidence placed in his prognostications.—Youth's Companion.

Woman's Love and Man's.

How does a woman love! Once and no more.
Through life forever its loss deplore,
Deep in sorrow, or want, or sin,
One king reigneth her heart within;
One alone, by night and day,
Moves her spirit to curse or pray;
One voice only can call her soul
Back from the grasp of death's control;
Though loves beset her and friends deride,
Yea, when she smileth another's bride,
Still for her master her life makes moan,
Once is forever; and once alone.

How does a man love? Once for all;
The sweetest voices of life may call,
Sorrow daunt him or death dismay;
Joy's red roses bedeck his way,
Fortune smile or jest or frown,
The cruel thumb of the world turn down,
Loss betray him or gain delight,
Through storm and sunshine, by day or night,
Wandering, toiling, asleep, awake,
Though souls may madden or frail hearts break;
Better than wife, or child, or pelf.

O sad one, be hopeful!
  God's love is so strong
That nothing can hinder.
  It beareth along
As on wings the glad time
  When by justice and love
God's will shall be done
  On the earth as above.
Fear not, for no wrong
  In His presence can stand,
And "the night is far spent,
  The day is at hand."

As has been often observed, our sovereign commonwealth cannot complain of a lack of law nor a scanty supply of law-makers and executors of the law. And it has been the observation of centuries that the Anglo-Saxon race holds it to be disgraceful to have a law and not enforce it. For not to do so is a step towards lawlessness—anarchy. A venerable aged man told us once upon a time that we should observe law because it is law, whether the particular law is in itself worthy or not. And the man spoke wisely. Now North Carolina has an anti-trust law—which is worthy of the regard of all of us because it has been incorporated into the statutes of our State, if for no other reason; but to all appearances that law is null and void, for none doubts that a trust operates in our State,—which is criminal. We have upholders of the law,—Gov. Carr and Attorney General Frank I. Osborne, for instance. What do we lack? Shall the answer be "Power!" We hope not; and yet we hesitate to ascribe evil things to State officers.

Does it not seem passing strange that North Carolina should say no word while another State, not half so concerned as it is, is attempting to throttle the American Tobacco Company, which comes within the definition of trusts as written in our laws. It is somebody's business; and somebody is either very busy or very careless of their business.

This much is beyond question: If the American Tobacco Company cannot be reached by the laws of our State relating to trusts, etc., we may better, for the conscience of our officers of the law and our own self-respect, at least, have no such law.

Perhaps it is advisable to say something of Congress to those of our readers who still hope for favorable action from that body. Something has not been done, at least, and that may be interesting. The State bank tax has not been repealed; and the tariff bill has not passed. The former will not be repealed; the latter will pass. Another thing has been half-done and will probably be finished some happy day: the Senate has passed a stringent anti-lottery bill, which will come before the House in the fulness of time.

Those who look to legislation for relief may as well cease looking. We have never read of a time in the history of this or other countries when it was possible for legislation to bring relief. The tariff bill will lessen tariffs on imported goods something less than twenty per cent.; but if it lessened them thirty per cent., prosperity—in the now common sense of that word—would not return. The South does not use enough imported goods, nor goods in the sale of which foreign countries compete with native manufacturers, to feel a lessening of the burden. If all tariffs were abolished, we would feel the results; but a small percentage is scarcely felt. The passage of the tariff bill, however, is desirable, first because it is a step in the right direction; second, because it includes an income tax; third, because it will remove a cause of uncertainty; fourth, because it will hasten the adjournment of a Congress which seems to us out of accord with a majority of the people.

If others wish to know still more of this topic, we respectfully refer them to a recent book, whose author has shown a fine appreciation of the public mind, and whose satire is worthy of Thackery—"What Congress has Done." And between its attractive covers there is not a word,—not even a disgraceful spot, which, indeed, we fancy, is withheld because the work is a satire; and, too, the book was issued before the sugar schedule manipulations were divulged.

And now, if any one has been discouraged by the preceding remarks, and is fearful that prosperity will not return, we assure that one that prosperity to a good degree will return, whether Congress adjourns to-day or continues in session through summer. The latter, however, is scarcely to be anticipated, as Washington City is a very uncomfortable place in summer; and most legislators prefer to talk politics at seashore and mountain resorts in this season. Who would not with five thousand dollars, perquisites, honor and a clerk? This is merely by the way: we were speaking of prosperity generally, not specifically.

Our country and our government is better than that of England—not a great deal, yet better. And England is prosperous. Prosperity depends not so much upon conditions as upon adjustment of a country to conditions. There is not half the despair in our land that existed a year ago; we are adjusting ourselves. We will be more nearly adjusted this fall; we will not be suspicious of our money, nor will we anticipate more grievous times as we did last fall. In consequence we will be more prosperous—not richer, but less apprehensive of evil times. And we believe the incomes of those who labor now will be larger than they were last year. It is too early to speak of crops; but we anticipate better prices. We are certain that the people of North Carolina will be better provided with the necessaries of life, because, from all reports, they are returning to the old system of beginning charity at home—providing for themselves. Still we will not be prosperous to a proper degree until every man who works faithfully ten hours a day can support a family well, furnish himself with books, and send his children to school half the year, and "lay by a little" for whatsoever may come. We hope this prosperity is not afar off, though we would tolerate the other kind some weeks, if no better will come.

Of all the mean measures to which disputants resort, none is comparable to the cowardly way of accusing some one of evil things and adding thereto the statement that "the hit dog hollers." We never see it but that our respect of its user is destroyed. If one has a just accusation against another it is cowardly to make the accusation without naming him against whom it is held. And to further attempt to protect oneself by any means, not to mention the base usage just mentioned, is infamous beyond our power to express. Hints are half lies and betray a want of moral strength. A truth need never be half told, and who half tells one is unworthy of truth.

Next in senselessness to one who attempts to protect oneself by this means is one who begins an answer to another's accusations by saying that one's accuser is really quite beneath one's contempt, but that, in consideration of thus and so, just this one time will one condescend to reply. If an accuser is really beneath one's contempt, it need not be stated; and in no wise should one so debase oneself as to lend force to such accusations by noticing them. Such a course is, at least, inconsistent. If a reply is needful an apology is out of place. And counter-accusations are always entirely irrelevant. It does not clear one of accusations to show that they emanate from baseness; the object is to prove one's self guiltless, not to incriminate another. For instance, Breckenridge of Kentucky is trying to keep his seat in Congress not by clearing himself of well-proven charges, but by attempting to defame his opponents. We would rather have no representative at all than to have Breckenridge, or any one whose character can be injured by him.

We have heard the complaint that inasmuch as certain weekly papers issued by great dailies are sold for a very small price, that all weeklies which come higher are charging exorbitantly. It may seem so to people who have had no practical experience in newspaper offices. The great cheap papers have distinguished editors, five times as much space as the country weeklies, and are filled with matter of a certain sort. And they make more money, too, for we have often heard it said that daily newspapers make their profits upon weekly editions. But the thing is not inexplicable. The composition of a weekly issue of a daily paper costs nothing, and composition is the chief cost of other weeklies. It is done in this way: the matter for weekly papers is selected from the dailies, and the daily type is used on the weekly, thus one setting of type serves two publications. And the weekly edition of a daily paper pays for nothing save paper, press-work, ink and mailing, all the cost of editorials, proof reading, gathering of matter and composition, having been paid by the daily.

In addition to this, it may be said that a country weekly is peculiar to itself. No other paper on earth can do its work. And, moreover, since its field is limited it cannot aspire to a circulation that will attract enough advertising to enable it to be sold as cheaply as the weekly papers that circulate over many States. While we would not contend that every county should have a paper, we are sure that every county that can give one a respectable support should. A good paper is a people's highest testimonial; and poor papers are exponents of poverty, intellectual as well as all other kinds.

A paragraph in these columns last week did undeserved injury to the character of an officer of Wake county. Speaking of the shamefully meagre proportion of executions to the number of murders, we mentioned the escape of Orange Page from Wake county jail to strengthen our contention for reform. Orange Page should not have escaped; and that he is now out of jail is the fault of the grand juries, the sheriffs and the jailers who approved the structure; it is the fault particularly of the sheriff who allowed Page and the petty criminals to stay together at night without a watchman. He is blamable, also, for permitting them to spend the night in great noise, or, if he is not, the county commissioners are, for not empowering him to prevent such behaviour.

Our statement that a half-hearted effort had been made to recapture Page is unjust, as we have been informed that the sheriff has, in addition to offering a reward, sent out several deputies, employed local detectives, and telegraphed to sheriffs of many counties. This is not half hearted, though we are free to say the sheriff of Wake cannot do too much to recapture this criminal.

We do not know the sheriff of Wake county personally, but we have esteemed and honorable friends who disinterestedly say that he is as good a Christian gentleman and as conscientious an officer as Wake county has ever had. In this instance he was not less careful than his predecessors; but he was less fortunate. We cannot be persuaded that every criminal's escape is not someone's fault.

The Everlasting Gospel Ought to be Supported.

BY REV. J. A. SMITH.

PART TWO.

The author of this article is well aware that he is using plain language, but if he knows his own heart he is doing the same for the purpose of putting all his brethren to thinking upon a matter of serious and vital importance which equally concerns every man and woman in North Carolina. We read not long ago a business circular issued by a firm composed of Christian men, and at the bottom of it we noticed the following: "Please don't ask goods to be charged; we cannot do it at these prices." As we read these words, the question was quickly presented: If the business world, as conducted even by Christian men, is so exacting that it cannot afford to sell goods and run an earthly business without the money, how can a man of God without real estate—a farm, or merchandise, preach the gospel and serve churches without immediate financial aid? He cannot live on wind, and any one of ordinary intelligence knows that if he feeds his family out of "paper bags" and runs "on crop time," he will fall a victim to high prices, and if the church should fail to pay him the last cent in the fall, he will be unjustly branded "a man who will not pay his honest debts." It is written in the law of Moses, "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. Doth God take care for oxen, or saith he it altogether for our sakes? For our sakes, no doubt, this is written that he that ploweth should plow in hope, and he that thresheth should be partaker of his hope. If we have sown unto you in spiritual things, is it a great thing if we reap your carnal things? * * Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live by the gospel."

The Word of God does most emphatically declare that the gospel must be supported by the liberality of God's people, and those who fail to recognize this fact are not in harmony with the plans and purposes of God. There is one very grievous error among the churches which should be eliminated from them in almost the twinkling of an eye. The error is simply this: a church calls a pastor and promises to pay him, say, five hundred dollars a year, and the contract is so recorded on the minutes of the church. After the call has been made and a given salary promised, a subscription list is taken and signed by members, say to the amount of three hundred dollars. At the end of the year, perhaps the greater portion of the three hundred dollars is paid, but a balance still remains unpaid, much to the discomfort of the pastor. The members who have already paid think they are entirely free from all moral obligation in regard to this matter. It is a sad and fatal mistake, for the entire church as an organized and responsible body calls the pastor and promises to pay him the salary. Therefore, the whole church is responsible and should see that his salary is promptly paid. It is cruel and unjust, yea, it is dishonest that a pastor should suffer indefinitely and have his credit and reputation injured simply from the fact that a portion of the church had failed to pay. If a fractional portion of the church were to keep the salary out of the pastor's hands, that fact should have been ascertained at the beginning of the pastoral career, or the call withdrawn, or so modified as to prevent disappointment. It is a sin and shame for a church to discover its importance after the workman has done his work.

This matter of supporting the gospel should claim the serious attention of the people. And all the New Testament churches should withdraw fellowship from the so-called Missionary churches that will not support the gospel at home or in heathen lands. It would in a great measure separate the sheep from the goats (an old deacon said this a week ago), and put many good but afflicted and burdened brethren in gospel churches where all wear the yoke together and bear the heat and burden of the day.

Now how are we ever to find a remedy for this state of affairs?

In the first place, all our churches ought to enforce their respective church covenants and withdraw fellowship from those who walk disorderly.

But it may be said that nearly all of our churches have members who are not able to pay one cent to support the gospel of Christ. If there is a Baptist church in North Carolina that has a single member unable to contribute one cent for that gospel which saves and sanctifies, then it is the duty of that church to put the name of this member upon the list of God's poor, and the deacons of the church ought to look after the interests of that suffering and afflicted member. If this is not gospel then I have utterly failed to comprehend what seems to me the plain teachings of the Word of God. It makes me feel uneasy to hear some brethren and even sisters claim poverty as a reason for a failure to discharge duty. I always think of a touching and pathetic scene in the temple. Jesus sat over against the treasury and beheld how the people cast money into the treasury, and many that were rich cast in much. And there came a certain poor widow and threw in two mites which make a farthing. And he called unto him his disciples and said unto them, "Of a truth I say unto you, that this poor widow hath cast in more than they all: for all these have of their abundance cast in unto the offerings of God: but she of her penury hath cast in all the living that she had." If the members of our churches in North Carolina had but half the grace and consecration possessed by this poor woman, there would not be one unpaid pastor in North Carolina, and our own State would furnish by September 1st the thousands of dollars wanted by our Board at Richmond.

A want not only of grace, but a want of system is the reason why so many of our churches are behind on the subject of finances. We once heard Dr. Durham say in a grand speech that he "always found the Baptists of North Carolina willing and ready to perform duty when it was plainly pointed out to them." I do honestly believe that our deacons could do more than any one else in this particular direction (if they would only try). It is to be greatly feared that we have too many "short horned deacons" who, from incapacity or a want of grace fail to do their duty. The men first chosen to look after the temporalities of the church were men full of the Holy Ghost. And we need just such men to-day to regulate the finances of the church. We have deacons in many of our churches who are very particular and careful with their own ledgers and book accounts, and they will do all in their power to collect the last cent due them, but they will not collect for the Lord. Making flowery and pathetic speeches to the brethren on Sunday is not by any manner of means feeding the pastor and his family on Monday. The deacon is like the pastor. He is not his own, and it is his solemn and bounden duty to leave sometimes at least his office, his farm, his merchandise, and attend to the Lord's business, collect for the poor and raise the money for all church purposes. Brethren of the Diaconate of North Carolina, if my church had called a presbytery and laid hands on me, and thus inducted me into the responsible office of deacon, if I know my own heart and mind, I would in the spirit of the Lord and armed with his authority go in and out among the people, and I would get their offerings for the Lord. I would also endeavor, by personal exhortation and influence, to convert the covetous man, and if I could not convert him, I would report him to the church as a covetous man, who is an idolator.

Another trouble with our churches in regard to pastor's salary and all other benevolent objects, is the fact that many of them do not raise money in God's own appointed way. I do not believe that God ever intended one of his churches to make an assignment or go into bankruptcy. Paul told the church at Galatia how to raise money, and if all our churches would come down to apostolic methods, we would have no trouble. Brethren, let us have a glorious revival of pure and undefiled religion on the subject of finance. Let all our churches renew their covenant pledges to be the Lord's. I would suggest that at a stated time every Baptist church in North Carolina have its covenant read and thereby re-confirmed, and that we all endeavor by the grace of God to get each member to contribute something for the Lord. The hard times are upon us because Christian duty is sadly neglected, and let us banish hard times by gaining God's favor. We have churches all over North Carolina which can support a pastor for all of his time, and yet they barely support preaching for once a month. Many of our country churches could purchase small farms and settle pastors in their midst for all their time.

We have men in North Carolina and South Carolina, who are traveling all their time and serving churches, and they are unjustly blamed for not visiting all the members of a vast flock scattered almost from the mountains to the sea shore. It is impossible for them to visit under such adverse and distressing circumstances.

If our churches will come to the front and support the gospel and increase the amount of preaching, Bro. Durham will speak as he has never done before when he rises to tell the people of Baptist progress in the Old North State.

The Rice Christian.

BY REV. L. N. CHAPPELL.

(Concluded.)

Resuming the consideration of one of the most important questions affecting our work as missionaries and pastors in China, let us briefly glance at a few of those causes which unite in producing the Chinese Christian's environment, and over which the missionary has no control save as he may alleviate it by Christian charity, brotherly counsel and gospel teaching, leaving the power of gospel truths, like that of leaven, to do its work in the mass, until the whole social fabric of China shall become Christianized, ennobled, and freed from her many curses, and thus made strong in all of God's blessings, spiritual and temporal.

(1) One is poverty. It is the being "poor in this world's goods, yet rich in faith;" but that poverty which is grinding, degrading and crushing. This is the condition of the masses of the people. China's poverty—what pen can describe it! All nations have their poor; but what nation has such poverty-stricken people as China! The condition of Russia's serfs may be comparable; but I doubt whether there are so many, or such extremely poor people there as in China. And this people's patience, under the bitter sufferings, entailed by their lot, of hunger, cold and filth is wonderful. But it has degraded the people. Graphic pictures are often given of China's poverty, filth and social degradation; but they cannot portray all the truth.

Most of our native Christians come from this poverty-stricken mass. Many come to us because of their very poverty, in the hope of material help, and prompted by the missionary's sympathy, are quite willing to hear the gospel; and not knowing the nature of gospel truth, offer themselves as candidates for church membership, saying they are willing to do anything if they can only eat the church's rice. How difficult for us to appeal to their souls, when this people's whole nature is incessantly crying, in hunger and poverty, for bread. And those who really do come to a knowledge of the truth cannot be freed from the shackles of poverty entirely; so that oftentimes what they shall eat and wear almost crowds all other considerations out of sight. They see the missionary living in the enjoyment of all he needs for food, clothing and the other necessaries of life; and he must often sadly compare his own lot with that of the foreigner, and think, "Yes, if I had all I needed, and had no fear of hunger for the future, I, too, could take and think more about the doctrines of Jesus."

(2) Another cause, closely allied to the preceding, and in a measure growing out of it, is their national parasitism. I do not mean that all the people are parasites; but that this condition of social life may be found everywhere and in all classes of society. Manifestly the beggar is a parasite, either by reason of necessity or from choice. But the attitude of many of the attendants on those families which have servants; the hangers-on, as various kinds of employees hangs about on business houses; the hundreds of followers, men, women and children, that become, in some way which is inexplicable to us, attached to a single official's yamen or court:—they all, everywhere, stick on, by virtue of their parasitic qualities, the great majority having no clearly-defined relations or duties, nor is it expected, in the nature of things, that they should have. The only reason why this state of things exists is because it cannot be avoided. The family needs servants, and the servants employed, no matter who they are, will have many near relations, besides the members of their own households, all of whom confidently expect to be provided for, and while not to be seen at the time of the servants' employment, begin soon, by degrees, to appear, and to carry on a process of material extraction of fragments of all available things, from every crevice of the home, by an effective system of breakage, leakage, waste, and extended division of labor where no labor seems required. Consequently it might seem unfortunate that our native Christians should ever become attached to us either as servants or employers, as they make no distinction between serving the missionary and serving the church; so that with their previous ideas of the parasitic relation of the servant to his employer, they come to feel that they, in becoming attached to the church, ought to draw or extract from the church all they can of material support. This being the case, and the ever anxious eye which poverty compels them to cast towards the future in quest of bread, makes this the vital question, and oftentimes sinks his spiritual interests quite out of sight.

(3) Another effective cause at work is the social and business, as well as the religious estracism which the native Christian is ob-

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 20, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, ASSIST AND CORRESPONDENT.

THE Independent, undenominational, says that "the South needs the North and the two Baptist bodies ought to unite." We do not know what the North thinks, but the South is doing as well under the present arrangement as it otherwise could. We do not perceive how two bodies can unite when representatives of one of them are forever presuming that the other is barbarous and criminal. Perhaps the North would elevate us, educate us up to women-preachers, variegated societies, etc., for instance. Or, perhaps, it might show us how to rival minstrel shows in our revival meetings. Yes, this might be done; but if this is what the Independent thinks the South needs of the North, we imagine the South can do without them a while longer.

DURING the last Conventional year Southern Baptists—of whom there are more than 1,850,000—gave to Home Missions $55,440.56, an average of about four cents a member; in the same length of time, the same people gave something less than $100,000 to Foreign Missions, averaging about eight cents each. We are not complaining; but we cannot but feel that an outsider would think that the Lord had prospered us very meagerly. Of course a great deal of money has gone to pastors' salaries, church buildings and improvements; but we should find a way to give more or spare more to preaching the gospel to every creature, if we would be the Lord's agents in reclaiming his own.

We are Missionary Baptists as entirely as we are Baptists, and we should be more worthy of the name. Only twelve cents each member to both Home and Foreign Missions last year! Let us do better. Let us begin now and here in North Carolina. How? If every pastor who reads this will see to it that his church averages ten cents a member for Home Missions and ten cents for Foreign Missions in the year before us—what a long time to save so small an amount!—North Carolina will no longer be one of the small-giving States. We believe that the cause must be advanced by small gifts. And we do not anticipate a better time for small gifts than the present. The watchword for the year and for all years is "go or send." To be Missionary Baptists we must do one or the other.

NO ONE denies but that it would be better for the world at large and the cause of Christ, were all Christians more united, were there no barriers between them, no bars against that fraternal feeling which Christ enjoins among his children. But a general union is, to all appearances, at least, not as possible to-day as it was a century ago. We drift apart, new times beget new sects, and old sects become more firmly established in their particular tents and prejudices as the years pass; and instead of removing barriers, they are multiplied. Denominationalism will characterize Christianity until the Great Head of the church sees fit to remove it and make us all one.

The Bible attaches much importance to the fulness of time; and the term has no small meaning. God ordains and awaits his time, and then his hand becomes manifest. The "fulness of time" may be when denominationalism has been perfected.

As it is now, we dishonor those people who boast such looseness of faith and creed that they can adjust themselves to all faiths and creeds. That is a step that leads to disregard, thence to agnosticism. Missionary Baptists interpret God's Word according to their knowledge; and they act thereby. If they do otherwise, they sin against themselves and dishonor God, for God speaks no vain words. It is only natural for us to think that all will be Baptists. But that is no reason why we should despise all others. There is need for brotherliness in all things. We can hold to our belief, we can push it and preach it in the name of God with all our power—that is our duty; but it is our duty at the same time to preach by example as well as by precept; and the example for us all was one of peacefulness passing human. It was Christ who said "resist not evil," and he showed us what he meant: making all the disciples he could, saving all the souls that would be saved, but neither hating, nor despising, nor envying any man. He resisted evil more mightily than any being on earth, but he resisted it by doing good; and thus he showed us how to be mighty.

We have several postoffices on our list at which only one paper is taken. If our subscribers will promise to distribute them, we will always be glad to send extra copies to such postoffices.

UNDENOMINATIONAL SOCIETIES.

We desire to present several propositions to those of our readers who purpose joining or are members of undenominational societies; and we may in all frankness state that the recent Mrs. Davis-King's Daughters and Sons episode is the immediate occasion of these words.

One joins a charitable organization for one purpose: to serve the Lord by helping mankind. Whatever of pleasure such work may afford is pleasure in serving the Lord. To seek other pleasure is carnal; to do so is identical with the action of one who gives money to charity with the purpose of calling on the Lord for interest in money after many days. It is carnal—selfish—and not charitable. So it is presumed that the pleasure sought is the pleasure of self-sacrifice.

If this is one's view—and we do not know of a denomination that takes a different view of charitable work,—why not work in your church? Surely one can serve the Lord in one's church as well as in a small body of members of various churches—if not a great deal better.

But the church is not organized, one says. There is no greater misapprehension. A Baptist church is the most thorough organization of which we know. Perhaps the fact that it has no highly-paid presidents, secretaries, lecturers, etc., no badges to sell, no membership fees, leads some to think it unorganized. But on reflection one cannot but conclude that not one of these is essential to organization. A biblical Baptist church is unsurpassed as an organization. Surely there is more of unity, more of the spirit of co-operation in a body of people among whom there is no contrariety of religious opinion than there can be in one in which are fundamental differences.

But a Baptist church lacks "the social feature," says another. In the carnal sense it does. Baptist churches do not assemble to gossip upon other people's affairs. In the real it is a social organization. Its members are bound by ties of Christian love. If they are not, they are not Christians, and should seek other society, where rivalry and envy and vanity are permissible. We fear that many of the children of Baptists have been led off by this social inducement. If they have, they need only to read the Bible to see their error. And, as we have remarked, to seek membership in a putative charitable organization for social inducements is carnal, and not Christian. Society—in the vulgar sense—and charity can have nothing in common.

Another inducement to membership in these societies is the amount of free advertising that the daily papers feel it their duty to give. The King's Daughters of Raleigh, for instance, have occupied columns of free space in the daily papers where churches have asked for inches. Yet no one would be so presumptuous as to compare the amount of charity work done by one church with that of the entire series of "circles" in Raleigh. It is not the newspaper's fault; for they cannot refuse requests for charity advertisements. And churches do not care to ask for so much. Need we add that one who seeks to serve the Lord with a purpose of becoming prominent thereby—to have one's works lauded—is carnal-minded?

We doubt not that those who have forsaken church work for undenominational work have either been induced by the above-mentioned "rewards," or have never tried to work with their fellow-servants in the Lord. We prefer to believe the latter; and advise any who have not so worked to begin now, and we promise them to say never a word more if they not find more work than they can do.

Work with one's church is more economical, if less conspicuous. You need not pay your church more than you now pay; and the dues which are going to support presidents and other officials may go to the poor.

In view of these things we do not see why any one who is working in true charity should care to work under other auspices than one's church. Church work possesses every legitimate advantage and inducement and does not expose the worker to the disadvantages of looseness of belief, and consequent disrespect for the Bible, nor to the danger of worldliness mistaken for charity.

There is no reason why one should leave one's church to serve the Lord; and yet a prominent and vigorous lady-worker in one of our Raleigh churches recently informed us that she had met with difficulty in securing some young people's co-operation, because they had been led into this undenominational work; and what is more, these young people were ingenuously working for a society that is no more nor less than an agency of another denomination. And this accounts for the interrogation point in our head line. We have known but few interdenominational orders that were not in a sense denominational. The organ of the King's Daughters would impress one as a publication of the Episcopal church. And while it cannot afford to incline to any sect, it does not hesitate to lend strength to one in particular.

Baptists have a society of their own; and it is the best society for all purposes of which we know.

THE WAKE FOREST TRUSTEES' MEETING.

The actions of the Board of Trustees of Wake Forest College last week seem commendable only to those who appreciate the conditions with which it had to contend.

The Board met knowing that there was indisputable need for enlargement. The institution should have a Professor of Modern Languages, a school of Bible Study, a school of Political Economy and one of Law; and each of these schools should have the attention of at least one professor. But the Board wisely refrained from an attempt to equip these schools now, for their maintenance is impossible. Until the income of the institution is increased, its directors cannot advance, cannot make it what it should be; and more tuition-paying students and more endowment are the essentials to this essential increase of income.

The resolution to put in a system of water works is wise and timely. The reasons are obvious, and have been for years. The cost—about $1,600, we believe—is small, compared with the convenience and wholesomeness insured.

We regret the reduction in the salaries of the professors, though they will not lack for experienced sympathizers in every department of work. The exigences of the times made this retrenchment the only wise solution of the problem of adjustment to deplorable conditions. A professor that is worthy to take part in the higher education of our young men is worthy the salary heretofore paid; and we have no doubt but that this is the sentiment of the trustees. Conditions and not preferences shaped their decision.

The election of Prof. B. F. Sledd to the Chair of English Language and Literature meets with our thorough approval. He is able, scholarly and experienced, and will elevate this school to a plane unexcelled in the South. Prof. Royall and Prof. Sledd will share the Modern Languages school, we think, until conditions permit a re-establishment of the Chair. Prof. Sikes' having resigned, Dr. Taylor will resume charge of the school of Political Economy.

Considering the circumstances, the unusual requirement of the faculty that they spend six week of each vacation canvassing in the interest of the College, is wise. It is a hope of ours, however, that the time may come when neither students nor endowment will have to be sought by worthy institutions. They must be vigorously pursued to-day, however; and we are glad Wake Forest has laid such good plans.

An adjustment to circumstances is, next to overcoming them, most desirable. And it is apparent that the effort of the Board was adjustment with a minimum of friction. We do not know how else it could have been accomplished.

We rejoice that the attendance at Wake Forest last week was so large and that the entire occasion was so enthusiastic.

Dr. Taylor expects more students next fall than ever before, despite State competition. And we believe he will not be disappointed. He sent out last week nearly thirty potential living advertisements. As such they are worth all the commencement orators on earth, if they only do their duty. We have talked with several Wake Forest alumni in the last few days, and every one of them, from a graduate of the '50's to those of last week, expressed determination to work for the institution this summer. If all its sons would do this, more professors and more buildings and more endowment would be forthcoming. The institution cannot move forward save through the work of its sons.

There are five hundred Baptist boys in North Carolina who should be at Wake Forest in September, and the proper work will bring them.

IT is said that Dr. Jonson, famous for abrupt pungency of speech, was once in attendance upon what would now be called a high class concert. He was not long in expressing hearty disapproval of a selection that had just been executed on the piano to the apparent enjoyment of the audience, which caused a friend to remark, "Why, Doctor, you show your ignorance: that was a remarkably excellent rendition of a very difficult piece." Quickly the sarcastic philosopher remarked, "I wish it had been impossible!"

We do not care to try to imagine what the philosopher would say of modern "musicales;" but there are many of us who would repeat his repartee on hearing some present-day "difficult renderings." We would gladly have them impossible.

We do not know a great deal about music; we know no more of anatomy; yet we know good music from bad just as well as we know good from bad health. We have heard hymns in which not a word would be recognized. And while we do not deny that it may have been very difficult to render them unintelligibly, we are quite sure they were badly rendered, if our idea of the purposes of church hymns is correct. People can sing so that anyone can understand them; they can sing so as to make one understand and be moved by a song; and we are sure that songs so rendered are best, both for singers and hearers. And if one cannot sing them thus, why have them at all?

At the Southern Baptist Convention there was singing at times that stirred thousands of souls, and we believe it found echo in the heavenly choir. This singing was not of solos nor new hymns, nor was it accompanied by organs as large as houses. It was three thousand voices of godly men singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" and other old familiar songs of praise, thanks and faith, which all knew and into which Christians could not but put their feelings.

We need more of such singing, more congregational song-worship. Of the entire number of religious hymns we could select fifty that would serve all the purposes of song for the rest of our days. One cause of the small part that our congregations now take in church services is that so few hymns are committed to memory, as one is seldom used twice in a month. The congregation can give song-praise only in the doxology.

The combined voices of a congregation filled with a sense of indebtedness to God and faith in his Son is as inspiring as the eloquence of orators. Such singing has been used towards the saving of souls. But the fast and slow, the ornamental, the foreign-seeming, sounding brass and tinkling symbal music is not only uninspiring but nigh unto blasphemy.

Slow and lifeless singing is to be deplored but little less than the affected Italian opera variety. In neither do the singers seem to appreciate the words of their mouths.

Let us have more of the blessed old hymns that have helped generations to worship God, that all know, and in which all may join in full appreciation.

COMMENCEMENT AT WAKE FOREST COLLEGE.

This is always a joyful occasion to the friends of the College. We see with great pleasure in their places on this occasion men who have attended commencements here for the past thirty years. They are still hopeful of and zealous in all the interests of the College. The ranks, as they are thinned out by the passing of the older ones, are filled by the best and most loyal manhood of the State.

M. H. Justice of Rutherford county, H. B. Carter of Asheville, and E. F. Aydlett of Elizabeth City were elected to fill vacancies in the Board of Trustees. These are three of the very best lawyers in North Carolina, and have the qualifications to make valuable men in their positions.

There have never been so many present on Monday of Commencement as are present now. The only exercises for the day was the celebration of "Class Day" at eight o'clock Monday night.

The audience was welcomed in a graceful and modest way by the President, W. L. Poushee of Person county.

The proceedings of the last meeting in June, 1893, were read by H. H. Carter.

The orator, J. D. Robertson of Iredell county, delivered the oration, and evidently had the good opinion of the audience both for himself and the Class.

Then followed an original poem by Roland Beasley, who dispensed poetry and rhyme in such a lively and humorous style that even the Professor of English could not pass upon the correctness of his meters.

The history by Haywood and the prophecy by Yates were faithful (?) portrayals of what had been and what was to be in the history of the Class of 1894.

At the conclusion, Dr. and Mrs. Taylor, as has been their custom for years, gave a pleasant sociable to the members of the Class.

TUESDAY.—At nine o'clock the Board of Trustees met with the fullest attendance for several years.

At night, the address before the Alumni Association was delivered by E. B. Jones, Esq., of Winston, N. C. His subject, "The Boy of the Old Field School," was briefly and pointedly dealt with. The speaker was full of his theme, but our observation has been that a lawyer does not generally speak well from manuscript. We know Mr. Jones as a student. He is a close, logical reasoner, spirited in debate, and if he had worn the old harness, he would have made a far better speech.

WEDNESDAY.—At 11 o'clock a. m., the College chapel is full to overflowing to hear the address before the literary societies by Dr. F. C. McConnell of Virginia. Those who had heard the Doctor on a former occasion were the most eager to hear him again. The speaker was at his best. His eloquence, wit and pathos were so happily blended that for an hour he held the audience as only a great speaker can. At the close of the address people were asking on all sides that the address be printed for the readers of the RECORDER. [Bro. McConnell's address will appear in our next issue.]

At night the sermon before the Graduating Class was preached by Rev. E. M. Poteat of Connecticut from 1 Cor. 3: 11, and Matt. 7: 23—"For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." "And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me ye that work iniquity." The subject of the discourse was "Jesus the Only Foundation." The following brief extract of the line of thought of the preacher will indicate the depth of study, the careful and thorough preparation which characterized the sermon from first to last:

Paul makes this assertion about Christ in view of his conception of the Person of Christ—a conception which was fully stated only in later epistles—Colossians, Ephesians, Philippians.

I. The Person of Christ.

1. He is the Creator and Bond and End of the universe. Col. 1: 16, 17. He who as the Word became flesh made the world. When he appeared on earth, he did not come as an arbitrary importation, a foreigner. Rather was he the great Artificer standing in the midst of his tools and the things he had made.

In the creation of the world by Christ is furnished the ground of the unity of all things in Christ. In him all things consist. We are growing familiar with the conception of the unity of things. It is confirmed by recent science, as e. g., in the law of the conservation of energy, evolution, spectrum analysis, and by the testimony of music.

Paul adds the great thought that this unity is in Christ. He is its bond. Here is the explanation of the accord of Christ and Nature, an accord evinced in the wonders that dropped from his hand, and asserted in a thousand similes in his discourses. Indeed, Christ is the interpretation of Nature.

But he is also the end of the universe. "All things were created by him and unto him." This is Paul's answer to that question so full of intelligence, so full of religious perplexity—the question of the goal of things. What he says is that Christ is the anticipation of the last thing God is going to do—the last term in the process of the unfolding of the perfected world. God is bringing the world to Christ—all men to the beauty of the universal Man. We are to be transformed into his image. And Nature (Rom. 8: 19) sentient of her infinite divine possibilities awaits with travail and groaning the appearing of these younger sons of God.

2. So much for Christ's natural relation to the universe. In his moral relation to it he is the embodiment and revelation in humanity of the Fulness of God, of his purpose of redemption, and his power to save. In a word, the cross of Christ is not a local phenomenon in the universe, but the center of it. It is in cosmical relations (Col. 1: 20–23). And the appropriation by faith of the significance and benefit of the cross is for man the condition of his entrance into the absolute life, when the universe from being a prison becomes his home in which he is absolutely at large.

3. Christ is also the Key to the Philosophy of History (Eph. 1: 10 and 3: 9–11). In him more distinctly than anywhere else the purpose of God in his administration of the ages emerged to view. And thus the greatest intellectual want of great minds—viz., a theodicy, a justification of the ways of God to man—is supplied in Christ.

It was in view of this conception of Christ which was already taking shape in Paul's mind during the Corinthian correspondence that he made the assertion:

II. Jesus Christ the only Foundation.

1. Of the church. Compare Historic Episcopate and the great creeds as the foundation of a triumphant Christian church.

2. Of a permanent social state. Society as at present organized is not founded on Christ; and because not so founded, it may go to pieces in any crisis at any moment. The industrial war through which we are passing, with its almost daily tidings of bloodshed, is but the premonitory quaking of a fabric which is built on inadequate foundations.

To the task of founding modern society on Jesus Christ—the only foundation sufficient for so vast and complex a structure, the moral and educated manhood of the race is called. In a word, we are called to organize and build the kingdom of God on earth, to answer the prayer of all the Christian centuries: Our Father, which art in heaven, hallowed be thy Name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done ON EARTH as it is in heaven.

3. Christ is the only foundation of individual character and usefulness. Found on culture and you go to pieces. Found on force or personal prowess or policy, and you go to pieces. Found on Christ, and the total movement of the universe is with you. Out of Christ, and the storms of an outraged universe gather to your destruction. This universe is Christ's and its laws will tolerate no indignity done to him. Or as he himself said: He that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, shall be likened to a wise man that built his house upon a rock; and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house, and it fell not; for it was founded upon a rock. And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand. And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house, and it fell; and great was the fall of it.

THURSDAY.—This morning the air is pure and bracing, having been sweetened by a grateful shower. There were never so many people here at a commencement before, the boys seem to have no trouble to find the very girls they are looking for—the music is sweet, and flowers are lovely and in great abundance.

At 11 o'clock twenty-eight Seniors take their place on the rostrum amid the applause of the audience and satisfaction of their friends. After prayer by Rev. E. M. Poteat the following orations were listened to with an interest that must have been an inspiration to the members of the class:

ORATIONS.

1. Salutatory address, William L. Foushee, Person county.
2. Shifting, Marshall O. Carpenter, Lincoln county.
3. The South Carolina Dispensary Law, Robert L. Freeman, Marlboro county, South Carolina.
4. A Parliament of Religions, Julian E. Yates, Wake county.
5. Wooing Sirens, Rowland Beasley, Union county.
6. A Patriot, John D. Robertson, Iredell county.
7. Valedictory Address, Robert W. Haywood, Jones county.

THESES.

1. Development of Electrical Science, Chas. N. Beebe, Concndaga county, New York.
2. The Evolution of Mind, Chas. M. Billings, Pittsylvania county, Virginia.
3. The South and Its Literature, D. Roy Britton, Bertie county.
4. House of Representatives vs. House of Commons, Rufus H. Carter, Wake county.
5. The Papacy, John E. M. Davenport, Tyrrell county.
6. Freedom of the Will, Nathaniel A. Dunn, Wake county.
7. Athletics as a Science and an Art, Walters Durham, Wake county.
8. Aristocracy in America, Thomas W. Elliott, Chowan county.
9. Lavoisier, Jay P. Felt, Cameron county, Pa.
10. Oliver Cromwell, Solomon P. Holding, Wake county.
11. Cromwell and England, William H. Jones, Pittsylvania county.
12. Static Electricity, Thomas B. Lambeth, Chatham county.
13. Horrors of the French Revolution, John Minor, Davie county.
14. Feelings and Their Functions, John J. Payseur, Gaston county.
15. Economic Wastes of War, Thomas J. Pence, Wake county.
16. Fairy Tales and Folk-Lore, Sidney L. Settlemyer, Cleveland county.
17. Should the President be Elected by Direct Vote? William H. Sledge, Rockingham county.
18. The Atomic Theory, John W. Smith, Jr., Wake county.
19. The Religion of the Greeks, J. Edgar Spainhour, Wilkes county.
20. John Greenleaf Whittier, Frank G. Taylor, Hertford county.
21. Literature, its Tolls and Rewards, Chas. E. Taylor, Jr., Wake county.

Of the twenty-eight graduates, two take the degree of M. A., one B. S. and the other twenty-five take B. A.

At the close of the speeches and delivering of Diplomas, Dr. Taylor made the following address to the graduating class:

BACCALAUREATE ADDRESS.

Young Gentlemen:—I desire, before we part, to put into your hands three keys. They are master keys. Rightly used, they will open the doors which stand closed and locked in the way of a young man who is seeking the highest usefulness and the truest success. I had almost added that they would open the way to renown also; but of that I am not so sure. But in the long run, as compared with other things, this amounts to little. I leave it out.

The first key is self-control. You are persons, not things. And because you have this high endowment of personality, you are put into your own hands. Before we can ever move or help or govern others, we must control ourselves. You are to learn to postpone the pleasure of to-day for the greater good of to-morrow. Bit and bridle must be put on passion and appetite and every sordid ambition. No fellow-creature can possibly do this for you. Unless your own hand is steady on the helm, the craft will drift awry. This is not easy. No, it is hard. But therein lies the dignity of manhood. The young Macedonian overran the East and the West. And an age of inadequate standards laid its little footrule over against him, and called him "Great." We know better how to measure. The bloodless victory of real self-mastery is more worthy of renown than those celebrated by triumphal march or recorded in the epitaphs of Westminster. Greater than the man who taketh a city is he who ruleth his own spirit. This is the empire—even your own selves—over which you are placed with supreme control. See that you keep strict, wise discipline therein. Repress every mutiny in the lower nature. The tiger and the ape and the serpent within us must be subordinate to reason, and reason to conscience, and conscience to moral law. Then the brute will dwindle. The man will grow.

The second key is self-reliance. To-morrow you will begin to face the realities of life as you have never done before. You have your own paths to clear, your own living to make. Times are hard. All occupations are crowded. Employment was never so difficult to find. If any of you imagine that, because you are college graduates, people are going to beg for your services at big salaries, you will soon discover your mistake. You now enter a field of competition where, if you mean to be honest men, nothing will tell but your own industry, your own enterprise, your own brains, and your own brawn. And I am glad that it is so. This also will help to develop manliness. Self-indulgence, morning slumbers, lily hands, day-dreams of unearned fortunes will never develop a hero. For there are heroes still. They are, for the most part, the patient, silent toilers. When the story of the world is told at last, its brightest pages will be starred with the names of unknown workers whose toil and sacrifice and mutual helpfulness will make us wonder that we did not know how much of heaven there was on earth—perhaps where we least expected it. But God knew all the time.

Success, if at all honest, is like true liberty:

* * Not a fair young maid, with light and delicate limbs,
And golden tresses, flowing from her cap; but
A bearded man armed to the teeth.

Young men, go to work—anywhere, so it be honest work. If you wish to reach the top, be willing to begin at the bottom. Earn something. Be proud, not of birth or fortune or kindred, but of your own manly independence.

And do not be afraid to be brave, self-reliant thinkers, as well as actors. Call no man master, except the Son of Man. All things about us are fairly saturated with truth and are vocal with divine messages. That man who is a coward or who blindly follows precedent will never hear the whisper nor behold the vision. You and I have learned together that there are solid foundations on which to build safe thinking. You have been encouraged to use the intellects which God has given you. And you have also learned, I trust, that this self-reliance is not incompatible with the deepest humility, nay more, that in distrust of human authority, it leads of itself to reliance upon the Spirit of God.

The third key is self respect. Not self-esteem or vanity. Far be it. The conceited man does not respect himself. He only admires an imaginary being which he thinks bears his resemblance. We must take our own real measure and learn to make wise and true estimates of our own abilities and character. And mark this; there can be no real self respect in the absence of genuine moral soundness. A man who will cheat or lie or flatter, or be a slave to drink and unholy passion, may make sport of it all, but it is impossible that he respect himself. It is true that, with the help of divine surgery, the unsoundness may be cut out. Then he can respect his better self, as he becomes conscious of a love of integrity and a hatred of a lie.

Self-respect is quite independent of the place you may hold. Henry Clay must have felt it when he said, "I had rather be right than to be President." A temptation which has been and which will be is to buy position and honors at the cost of self-respect. The price is too high. We cannot afford it. The post of honor will often be the private station. Do not let the Devil fool you with enticing baits. He knows well, and will whisper to you the secret of short cuts for the getting of bread, for immunity from danger and for realizing visions of the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them. Blessed is that young man who has learned to say, though hungry or in danger or ambitious, "Get thee behind me, Satan." But self respect will abide with him.

These three keys—self-control, self-reliance, self-respect—I would fain commend to your daily use. Without them, you will surely lose your way in the labyrinths of life. With them, "your own hands will be laid on your own goals."

Dr. C. Durham, President of the Board of Trustees, made his annual report, which was received with great enthusiasm by the audience. He said the College was never in a more hopeful condition, its friends never more determined to stand close to it and work for its advancement. Water works will be put in the College buildings by the opening of next session.

At a meeting of the Alumni the articles of Dr. Taylor which appeared in the RECORDER, and which have now been printed in pamphlet form, were enthusiastically endorsed, and their consideration earnestly urged by our people.

Every one leaves with the highest satisfaction with the exercises, many declaring their purpose to work more than ever for the greater success of the College in the future.

....Rev. M. A. Adams will begin his work at Reidsville July 1st. We spoke last week of the gratifying success of his Monroe pastorate; and we do not see why he cannot be as blessed in his labors at Reidsville.

....The Charlotte Observer speaks in high terms of commendation of Bro. R. F. Beasly, who graduated at Wake Forest last week, and who has edited the Monroe Journal, and assisted on the Wake Forest Student this year.

....Rev. T. W. Ebeltoft of Shelby writes: “Bro. Hufham's presence and preaching is doing us good. Nevertheless it is proposed to pound him to-morrow night (June 15th), when he is expected to arrive with his family.

....Rev. Pinckney Oliver of Dalton writes: “It was my privilege to baptize three persons at Bethel on the 2d inst.; also received one into the church and one for baptism. Our progress there is slow, but I trust it is safe.”

....We were not at the North Carolina Press Convention, but we really thought better of those who were than to anticipate the reading of an essay and speech-making by two women of the W. C. T. U. We are glad we escaped.

....We note with pleasure an announcement in the Patron and Gleaner that Hon. W. P. Shaw of Winton will deliver the literary address at the closing exercises of Pendleton School, Prof. J. G. Joyner principal, on the 22d inst.

....Rev. L. N. Chappell tells our readers of some of the practical difficulties of China missions in this issue. The article is of general interest, and should have the especial attention of all who intend becoming missionaries in China.

....We were glad to have a visit from Rev. J. A. McKaughan, late of Wake Forest College, on his way to his home at Rockford, last week. He asks that his friends note that his address is now Rockford instead of Wake Forest.

....Our brother, County Treasurer L. O. Lougee, and Miss Kate E. Rogers, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's father, in Durham county, June 13th, Rev. A. M. Simms officiating. We extend congratulations and good wishes.

....Sister Adaline Upchurch, wife of Bro. W. C. Upchurch, died Monday, the 18th, at 5 p. m., aged near seventy-four years. The deceased was a highly-esteemed member of the Raleigh First Baptist church. Nine children and many grandchildren survive her. We sympathize with our aged brother in his great loss.

....Mrs. Mary J. Garrett, sister of the editor of the RECORDER, died at her home in Williamsburg, Va., on the morning of the 14th inst. She had been a member of a Baptist church many years and died in full assurance of heaven. Her daily conduct was modest and unassuming, but it may be said of her, “She hath done what she could.”

....Rev. Henry Harrell, Wakefield, N. C., member of Mt. Vernon church, informs us that he has been reading the RECORDER since the second year of its establishment—fifty-seven years. This, we think, will take the record for the State.

....Rev. Hight C. Moore preached his last sermon as pastor of Broad St. Church, Winston, last Sunday. He left Winston Monday for Goldsboro, and will occupy the pulpit of the Monroe church the fourth Sunday in this month.

....Of the six honorary scholarships offered by Johns Hopkins University to graduates in North Carolina, Wake Forest boys obtained three last year and will retain the number next year. A higher testimonial to Wake Forest scholarship cannot be asked.

....Rev. L. R. Pruett writes from Charlotte: “We are in Charlotte. The brethren and sisters gave us a warm welcome. Dr. Pritchard and his congregation united with us in a recent night service. I think we are going to like Charlotte and our new field.”

....Rev. Dr. Hufham and family passed through Raleigh Friday. They will take permanent residence in Shelby hereafter. Dr. Hufham says that while God could have made a more beautiful country than Shelby and vicinity he is certain that he never tried.

....Rev. J. A. Hoyle sends us a subscriber and writes: “I am glad to say that our little church at King's Mountain is moving on very well. Members are being added at every meeting. Although we have a good-sized house, it is too small for the congregations.”

....The following statistics taken from The Baptist (Baltimore) are suggestive: “There are 37,000 Christian ministers at work in this country, and their support costs $20,000,000; $900,000,000 is spent for intoxicating liquors, and $150,000,000 for tobacco.”

....The Charlotte Observer says the Ebenezer (colored) Baptist church building, Charlotte, was dedicated last Sunday. Dr. Pritchard, Dr. Shepherd, Dr. Crosby and Dr. Whitted took parts in the exercises. This is one of the handsomest colored church edifices in the South.

....Brethren F. S. Jones, Chatham, Va., S. F. Conrad, Winston, C. J. Thompson, Louisville, Ky., J. J. Hall, Norfolk, H. T. Williams, Roxboro, O. J. Peterson, Sampson county, A. W. Early and W. Mitchell, Aulander, called on the RECORDER on their way to Wake Forest last week.

....Rev. O. L. Stringfield started out last Tuesday on a trip over the State in the interest of higher female education. We bespeak for him the co-operation of brethren and sisters everywhere. We must have the Baptist Female University, and the longer we delay the more will we regret it.

....Rev. Jasper Howell, Jr., has been granted a vacation by his Jonesboro, Tenn., church, which he will spend aiding Rev. P. G. Elsom in revival work in Botetourt county, Va., and later in resting with relatives at Roanoke, Va. We expect Brother Howell to return to Wake Forest next year.

....The Atlanta Journal speaks in gratifying terms of the address before the Shorter College, Rome, Ga., by Rev. H. W. Battle, D. D., of Petersburg, Va.; and those who heard him in an impromptu effort at Wake Forest two years ago, and at the College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts last year, would not be surprised to hear him praised by any authority.

....Rev. R. T. Bryan's many friends will be glad to read the following from him: “I have given up work for a time at least. I have a lovely and quiet little mountain home overlooking Asheville.” He is still burdened with thought of the debt on the Foreign Mission Board and anxious for North Carolina to do a greater work for China. He promises to let our readers hear from him.

....We have received the report of the Woman's Missionary Union Auxiliary to Southern Baptist Convention for 1894. The figures embraced in this report were given in our reports of the Convention. Just now, however, the sisters are making a determined effort to raise $5,000 toward the debt on our Foreign Mission Board; and it is desired that we call the attention of the North Carolina sisters to this matters. The women of our Convention are asked to raise only $300 by August 1st. We do not see why they cannot do this easily and sooner than expected.

....We have received from Bro. Willingham a communication stating that it will be necessary to raise $150,000 for Foreign Missions this year, $120,000 for actual expenses, and $30,000 for the debt. North Carolina is called on for $9,000. This is more than we gave last year, but it should not be put down as our limit. If every white Missionary Baptist in North Carolina will give ten cents for this object the total would be $16,000. And we know there are many who can, should and will give more. We will publish Bro. Willingham's letter in our next issue.

....The W. N. C. Baptist says the Southern Baptist Convention is laboring under a misapprehension due to a mistake in the report of the Foreign Mission Board. It adds in testimony thereof: The Western N. C. Convention has the receipt of the Foreign Board for $648.63. The report of the Foreign Mission Board has it that that Convention contributed only $348.61 to Foreign Missions last year, and of that $183.58 were “retained by the State official,” leaving a net contribution to the Board of $61.06. There is room between $600 and $900 for considerable of a mistake; and we are as anxious to know who has made it as we are to do justly by our Western brethren. Our contemporary states moreover that seventy per cent. of the money raised is not retained by the State official. There is more in this than appears on the surface; and we await explanations.

....Our bookkeeper and cashier, Geo. White R. Pell, Jr., died after a lingering illness early Tuesday morning, the 19th. He entered our office several years ago, and we felt a strong attachment to him, not only on account of his faithfulness and efficiency in duty, but for his many excellent traits of character. He possessed a bright and ready mind, and was a very valuable assistant in our office. He was a grandson of the late Rev. W. R. Pell, the well-known preacher and editor, and a son of the late Mr. Wm. R. Pell. “Willie” was the stay of a widowed mother and a little brother, and we deeply sympathize with them in their great bereavement. The deceased was a devout communicant of the Methodist church.

Rev. P. G. Elsom in Jonesboro, Tenn.

Dear Recorder.—Rev. P. G. Elsom began a meeting in my church at Jonesboro, Tenn., May 20, and continued ten days. The church and congregation by a rising vote requested him after a two days' visit to Virginia to return and continue another week. There were over thirty professions of repentance toward God and faith in Jesus. I baptized twenty-two converts. But it was a glorious meeting in the restoration of the joy of salvation to the church. It is the best meeting the town has witnessed since Dr. Willingham was there a few years ago. Bro. Elsom has a message and he delivers it as one called of God. He stands in conscious power. He has great power in showing the sinner his helplessness. He lays the sinner low by the law, but invites him to mercy and grace. He is a practical, pungent, pathetic preacher. The memory of his sermons and visit to our town will linger long with our people.

A Request.

Dr. J. M. Pilcher, Moderator of the Portsmouth (Va.) Association, stated in his centennial address before that body, that he possessed “the minutes of three sessions of the Baptist Philanthropic Missionary Society held in North Carolina in 1810 and 1811.”

Benedict barely mentions the existence of this Society in his old work published in 1814. He didn't think much of it.

Now, I request that Dr. Pilcher furnish to the RECORDER readers a copy of the minutes, or so much of them as, in his judgment, will be of interest to us.

JNO. T. ALBRITTON.

Southern Union, Eastern Association.

Dear Recorder:—This Union was appointed to meet with Shiloh church in July, but owing to the Western meeting at the same time with Wells' chapel, and owing to both churches having the same pastor and their nearness to each other, it seems impossible for Shiloh to entertain it—the Southern—in July, but will gladly take it next time. What church will ask for it? Let us hear from you, brethren.

Yours, &c., F. T. WOOTEN.

Keith, June 11, 1894.

Sundries.

Dear Recorder:—This will probably be my last letter from Union. I go to Reidsville next week. My pastorate here has been pleasant and the favor of our Heavenly Father has rested on the work. Additions have been frequent, the congregations have steadily grown, and the contributions have increased all the time. The most pleasant relations existed between pastor and people from the beginning and they continue to the end. I have tried to be a faithful pastor, and they have been a loyal and true people. It is hard for me to leave them, but the path of duty seems plain, and I am entering it after the greatest struggle of my life to settle any question.

I go to Reidsville hopeful and expectant of God's blessing on our work. I shall give my time and energies to Reidsville as I have to Monroe.

They will call a good, efficient brother here soon, and the work will move steadily onward.

My main reason for changing is that the salary is larger, and that will enable me to settle some bills I had to contract to complete my education. After a hard struggle to secure an education and a harder one with debt incurred while so doing, I have come to two conclusions:

First. That every preacher ought, by all means, to secure an education to aid him in his life's work.

Second. That every honest man ought to settle his bills at the earliest possible date, and that it is a duty he owes his calling, church, family and fellowmen to do this for the good of each. I speak from an experience, by no means pleasant, and would not advise any man to contract any more bills than he can possibly avoid.

I am very deeply interested in our educational problem and the success of Wake Forest. Let me say that I am in fullest accord with Dr. Taylor's article. I do not object to a University in reality, but I do protest against being taxed to support an institution that only does College work. If the State will give us a University in fact, I am willing to be taxed to support it, and I am quite sure others are. I do not see that it materially aids matters for Baptist boys to take the highest honors at the University, so far as the principle is concerned. If it shows anything, it shows the value of Baptist stock. But those who so invidiously parade this by no means intend to pay the highest tribute to Baptist people for simple manhood in an halt for more Baptist boys. I have no objection to Baptist boys taking these honors and of their attending the University likewise. It is the principle I am looking at, and not at those who take honors or those who do not. M. A. AVERY.

most sure to suffer in some degree. To become a Christian, he must oftentimes renounce all family ties, and is quite as fully renounced by family and friends. To be deserted by one's family means practically social ostracism since the family is the unit and source of social as well as political life. So that a man has no social relations, as a rule, save such as he enjoys through family connection and origin. This is one reason why the family relations are deemed so important: they are so far-reaching and powerful in their results. For one to leave his old home and his family—move to a new section of the country to seek employment is always attended with peculiar difficulties and dangers. Such an one will often be brought, in consequence, to beggary and starvation. This becomes more evident when we consider how clannish the Chinese are; how every occupation, down to the most trifling and menial, is delegated to the control of a bureau, with its head and its rules; and every one who is fortunate enough to become a member of such a business circle becomes zealous in the effort to keep others from entering the circle, knowing that in this way the amount of employment afforded them is increased, raising the demand for their labor, and enabling them the more easily to make their own terms with employers in contracting for labor. This is theoretically true, only because the dense population of China crowds every avenue of labor to repletion, and beggars the nation by its very numbers.

Now, if a poor artisan, farmer, merchant, coolie, or even a teacher, is really ostracised, as he usually is, by becoming a Christian, what are his chances of getting employment, when so many who act judiciously and faithfully in their service of mammon are daily found starving on the streets? Every Chinaman recognizes this at a glance, and naturally supposes that those who are willing to incur such dangers and privations, and, at personal sacrifice, add the lustre of a Chinaman's glory by joining a foreign religious society (which society, he supposes, is begging an entrance at the gates of the Celestial Empire; such persons will naturally and surely be rewarded with the means of a livelihood.

So profound is their national conceit, that a starving beggar would think that to join the foreigner's church would be to lay the foreigner under lasting obligation, that nothing short of a temporal support could supply the demands of such entailed duty. These combined arguments, to a Chinaman's mind, are very convincing; for he is in business matters a materialist, by birth, rearing, religion, and force of circumstances, one to whom real good must take shape in food and clothes.

(4) Another cause in the existence of the Buddhist and Tavist priesthoods, which are systems, containing this working principle. Every Buddhist or Tavist priest is wholly dependent on his church or priesthood for sustenance.

A similar relation is supposed to necessarily exist between the convert to the Christian faith and his church. What strength one this proposed analogy is the fact many suppose the Christian is now seeking an entrance into China, in about the same way that these forms of idolatrous worship have done in previous times; and are no doubt denounced as heresies, all three, Christianity, Buddhism, and present form of Tavism, by the consistent Confucianist. Just so far as these influences affect the native Christian, they are bad.

The priests are regarded by the people as little better than professional beggars, which in truth they are. There is almost the sole bond of superstitious fear which holds the people in slavish support, and regard to the enchantments and devices of the priests. For they do not work, are lazy, idle, licentious, and degraded in every form of vice. And as the Romish church, with its idolatries, has formed, as the people suppose, a connecting link between the Tavist and Buddhist religions on the one hand, and the Christian religion on the other (for very few comparatively learn to distinguish between the Romish and Protestant churches until they come well under the influence of the gospel); and all native Christians, it is supposed, must look to the foreigner for a support. Is it strange that the rice Christian should exist? And may not many an honest child of God, converted from such surroundings, remain for years seriously crippled in Christian manhood by the shackles of such evil influences which have come upon him from his ancestors and from his early life and training? Can we who have grown up in the atmosphere of the highest spiritual manhood and of soul liberty really sympathize with them in respect to such difficulties?

And as we see them gradually grow out of such a bondage, and out of heathenism, into lovely Christians and freemen in Christ Jesus, we thank God and take courage. And can we expect a sudden religious revolution in China until this work of religious education has lifted our brethren higher, and more thoroughly permeated the social and political life of the nation? With such a view ever before us, let us estimate the success the gospel is making, and rejoice that such wondrous blessings do crown our labors in the day of seed-sowing, and long before the fullness of harvest time.

This day cannot come until this country shall have been Christianized through the work of native Christians and native churches. The hope of China rests in these same rice Christians. Let us thank God we have true and sincere men among them, and do all we can to encourage and assist them in Christian growth and activity.

Rev. Hight C. Moore Resigns

Dear Recorder:—On Monday night Bro. Moore handed in his resignation at the conference meeting of the church. Bro. Moore has been with Broad Street church as pastor but a few months, beginning his regular pastorate with the opening of the new year.

There were some serious difficulties confronting him on entering upon his work.

The church was considerably in debt, some to the former pastor, and a considerable amount on the improvements which had been made—and with this the great financial depression which placed the church at a considerable disadvantage in meeting its obligations.

Then besides these troubles, there was a lack of perfect unity in the church among its members. Almost in the very beginning of the work Bro. Moore unwittingly gave offense to some by some criticisms which he passed upon what had been done, which, with these other troubles, but made his work the more embarrassing.

The nature of the work here demanded a man of experience and peculiar tact and judiciousness in dealing with its diversified nature. Bro. Moore did not contemplate these things before entering upon his work, and having had a very limited experience as pastor was hardly prepared for what he was called to encounter. His short stay with us has won for him many friends, and has shown him to possess an enviable Christian character. He possesses excellent gifts as a thoughtful and fluent speaker. These, with his scholarly attainments and genial disposition, fit him for a career of much usefulness in the Master's work. He will carry with him the affections and kindly regard of many, and will always receive a cordial welcome when he comes to Winston.

Bethel Hill, N. C.

The annual closing exercises of Bethel Hill Institute came off May 30th and 31st. Rev. W. C. Tyree of Durham preached the sermon Wednesday at 11 o'clock. Mr. W. W. Kitchen of Roxboro delivered the address Thursday morning. An interesting concert closed the exercises that night. Bro. J. A. Beam is doing a fine work, both among the churches and in his school. I was really impressed with the great work the dear brother has done and is doing. He has been pastor of Bethel church seven years, baptizing over one hundred, seventy of whom have been pupils in his school, with increasing contributions, while perfect harmony has been enjoyed by the entire membership. He has now in process of erection a new school building, which will cost about $5,000, and accommodate several hundred students. The twelve acre lot, in the midst of which the new building stands, is one of natural beauty. About ninety students have been enrolled this session, fourteen of them young men preparing for the pulpit, eight young ladies to teach, and the others for usefulness in the other callings in life.

Rev. P. H. Fontaine, one of the best preachers, pastors and scholars in all of the country, has bought a farm near this school, to which he will move in September with his family for the purpose of educating his children.

The churches of that section, the people of the community and the school are to be congratulated in bringing among them such a cultured, useful, Christian gentleman as Bro. Fontaine will prove himself to be. Knowing as I do the school, its origin, progress, genuine work it is doing for the mind and soul of those who are brought under its influence, and all connected with it, I most heartily recommend it to those having sons and daughters to educate, and to young men and young ladies who are trying to educate themselves. I was pleased to notice how much like a big family of brothers and sisters, under the easy, perfect control of Brother and Sister Beam, the whole seemed, both in the boarding home and school building.

Eight Months in Carteret.

Dear Recorder:—During the eight months that I have been in Carteret county—the first eight months of my ministerial life—I have kept silent so far as the columns of newspapers are concerned; but I have been trying to discharge my duties as best I could. I am pastor of three churches in Carteret, and in these churches we have some of the most devoted Christian people that I ever saw—people who are not only church members, but are Christians,—not only hearers, but doers. While I am very thankful that we have such good people here, there are a great many who are not Christians.

Carteret county, as you remember, lies right on the coast, and has many indentations by the sound and bays. I have heard it said that every residence in the county was within a mile of the sound or bay.

Owing to the natural advantages, the people pay but comparatively little attention to farming. They look to the water for a living, such as cystering, fishing, clamming, etc. Also, owing to the scarcity of fish this year a great many have failed to make scarcely any money, hence it is impossible for this field to come up to its expectations in giving to the different objects of the Convention.

There are but comparatively few Baptists in Carteret county. This seems to be a neglected part of the State. I think our State Board should pay more attention, if possible, to this section. I think that there is not another section in North Carolina where the Baptist State Mission money could be more profitably spent than in this county. From all accounts, there are at least two places east of my field where good permanent Baptist churches could be built up. All that is needed is the means to support preachers while working up those fields.

I think there are at present only six Baptist churches in the county. Bro. Moore, Bro. Hiden and myself have charge of all the Baptist work in Carteret county.

I hope the day will soon come when Carteret county will be a strong Missionary Baptist section. E. C. Bobbitt.

A LaFayette Man

CURED WITH THE COMBINATION OIL TREATMENT.—DR. D. M. BYE'S TREATMENT SUPERSEDES THE KNIFE.

John T. Cuppy, the well-known grocer of this city, of North Fifth street, has been cured with Dr. Bye's gentle Combination Oil treatment, a method that has relegated the surgeon's painful knife to ancient history in many cases. The old saying, "Physician, heal thyself," don't go, and the most unqualified indorsement ever given Dr. D. M. Bye's great work of curing terrible cancer and other malignant diseases comes from the medical fraternity itself. Unable to cope with certainty with the dreadful afflictions in the darkness of their hope, they rush to Dr. Bye. Over 2,000 cases cured the last two years, with balmy oils, and of that number no less than forty-three doctors have placed themselves under his care. A wonderful safe and painless method of relieving and curing cancers and tumors. Such cases as were given up as hopeless, and past all human aid, and it is generally believed by those who know what the Combination Oil Cure has done, that it is the only remedy known that will cure catarrh in its worst form. The oil is a great boon to woman in the treatment of many ailments which can be reached by internal or outward applications. The most convincing proof of the results of Dr. Bye's treatment is to spend a day at his office, see and talk with those who are being cured. This gives confidence, when all other arguments fail. See the awful afflictions of others. Hear their words of praise. And then you will feel that in placing your case in his hands, you are doing the best thing possible to enjoy good health. Call or write for circular, giving prices for Oil. No. 493 North Tennessee street, Indianapolis, Ind.

All is Well

And hear at times a sentinel,
Who moves about from place to place
And whispers to the worlds of space
In the deep night that all is well.

And all is well, though faith and form
Be sundered in the night of fear.
Well rolls the storm to those that hear
A deeper voice across the storm.

Blocks

When Sidney Smith was rector of a parish in Yorkshire, England, he found his vestry were discussing the propriety or otherwise of paving a certain approach to the church with wooden blocks. Having decided to undertake it the question arose as to the manner how. "Gentlemen," said the witty rector, "I think if you will all put your heads together, as the saying is, the thing can be accomplished without much difficulty."—Homiletic Review.

Equitable Life

Durham, N. C., Mar. 27, 1894.

Mr. W. J. Roddey, Rock Hill, S. C.

Dear Sir:—When the settlement of my policy for $50,000 in the Equitable was first made, I expressed some dissatisfaction at the outcome, but since I have had more time to look into the matter, I am persuaded that I have had cheap insurance. I have always regarded the Equitable as one of the strongest insurance companies in this country, and am carrying at present a policy for $25,000 on my wife and one for $50,000 on my own life, and have had these policies in force for more than 10 years.

Yours, very truly,

J. S. Carr.

Everyone should look into life insurance; should compare it with other investments; should study it in connection with their own condition in life. Let us send you some facts and figures.

A Bright Lad,

Ten years of age, but who declines to give his name to the public, makes this authorized, confidential statement to us:

"When I was one year old, my mamma died of consumption. The doctor said that I, too, would soon die, and all our neighbors thought that even if I did not die, I would never be able to walk, because I was so weak and puny. A gathering formed and broke under my arm. I hurt my finger and it gathered and threw out pieces of bone. If I hurt myself so as to break the skin, it was sure to become a running sore. I had to take lots of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has made me well and strong."—T. D. M., Norcatur, Kans.

Several Things.

The churches in this section are doing fairly well. I think some of them will do better in the matter of contributions than usual, and some, I fear, will not do so well. The cry of "hard times" is still heard on every hand, but no one has yet perished, and all of us are blessed beyond our deserts. But for the tender mercies of the Lord times would be much harder. Some never give a cent to his cause, but complain because he does not do more for them.

I expect to baptize three into the fellowship of the Milton church next Sunday, among them a young physician recently located in our town. All our services are well attended; and this of course is an encouraging sign. At Yanceyville and Providence also the work goes quietly on. The Yanceyville sisters cannot be beat in the lively interest they take in all church work.

Bro. D. H. Harris seems to be getting his work well in hand. He is a lively brother, and we predict for him much success in the Beulah Association. I am glad he has pitched his tent among us.

I spent a few days, not long since, with Bro. N. S. Jones and his flock in Salisbury. Bro. Jones had done, and is still doing, a splendid work here. Surely "he is the right man in the right place." His people all love him, and besides, he has the respect and confidence of the people generally in the place.

I like Bro. Hobgood's suggestion as to how to provide for the higher education of our girls. If a few of them, and I think for some time to come there will be only a few, wish for a more extended course of training than they can get at our colleges for girls, why cannot arrangements be made to accommodate them at Wake Forest? We have about as many objects to collect money for now as we can well handle, and I think it unwise to keep on creating new ones. Great zeal may lead us into blunders that it would take years to correct. We must strengthen stakes as we enlarge the place of our tents.

Well, well, another political campaign will soon be upon us. What shall we do? If the Lord's people were as zealous in his cause, as they are in the cause of their respective political parties, what great things, what amazing achievements they would accomplish! I hope every Christian will keep in mind throughout the campaign the fact that, the Lord sees every act, hears every word, and knows every thought of man.

J. R. JONES.

Literary.

The History of the English Bible. By T. Harwood Pattison, D. D. 12mo, 281 pp. Price, $1.25. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

It is frequently charged that we know about the Bible rather than the Bible itself. That we read and study concerning it, rather than it. There is doubtless truth enough in the charge to give point to it. And yet it is only by way of deficiency that there can be any fault. The one should not be left undone while the other is done. We cannot know too much about the Bible, and not least the English Bible, the one book which in its English dress has had such a wonderful career.

It is of this English Bible that Prof. Pattison tells us the story. In a manner as fascinating as that of a romance, and with a style which it is a delight to read, he tells us how it grew up and twined itself about the life of the people who have given it its name. He takes us back to Wycliffe, who counted his life as not dear to him, that he might kindle a light in England which no efforts of his enemies could put out. We follow Tyndale into exile for the same cause; who would make the ploughboys of the country more familiar with the Bible than many of the priests. We trace the perfecting process of revision under Coverdale and in the Great and Genevan Bibles, until we come to the Authorized Version, in which the perfection of form seems to have been inspired to fit the preciousness of the truth. Then we see the genesis of the Revised Version as we are led into the conclave of scholars in the Jerusalem Chamber; and finally to look outward on the influence of the Bible on literature, the nation, and life. "Books are not absolutely dead things," Milton said, "but do contain a potency of life in them." Certainly that is true of the Book, whatever it may be of others; and under Prof. Pattison's guidance many will see this who perhaps never so fully saw it before.

The June number of The Harmiletic Review brings to a worthy close the twenty-seventh volume of that successful publication. The Review Section opens with a clear and forcible discussion of "The Evidential Value of Miracles," by Prof. Marcus Dods, D. D., of Edinburgh. "The Lost Treasure from Egypt," is the title of a paper by the Rev. Camden M. Cobern, Ph. D., descriptive of an Arabic copy of the "Diatessaron" of Tatian, recently discovered in the land of the Pharaohs, and but just done into English by Rev. J. Howlin Hill of Cambridge. Prof. Hunt of Princeton contributes a timely paper on "Vocation—Avocation—Vacation." Dr. William Hayes Ward gives another of his articles on "Light on Scriptural Texts from Recent Discoveries," treating the special subject of "Shushan, the Palace." The Sermonic Section is peculiarly rich in its presentations of truth. Published by Funk & Wagnalls Company, 30 Lafayette Place. Price, $3.00 per year.

Of the numerous excellent helps for Sunday-school workers none excell in literary merit and practical usefulness our own Baptist Teacher, published by the American Baptist Publication Society. For Baptist Sunday-schools, this valuable help is unsurpassed. Its lesson notes and articles, doctrinal, historical and denominational, are of the highest order. With unswerving loyalty to Bible principles, which are Baptist principles, it is a help par excellence for all Baptist Sunday-school teachers.

In the July number, Dr. Weston contributes an admirable article upon the four Gospels, eminently worthy of being preserved for future and frequent reference. Pres. Broadus in his usual clear and definite style, outlines the doctrinal points in the lessons of the coming quarter. Dr. Marsh graphically pictures the boy Jesus in home, school and temple. This is an excellent magazine, only 50 cents in clubs of five and upwards, and deserves a large list of subscribers.

Annual Meeting of the American Tract Society.

At the sixty-ninth anniversary of this great undenominational Society in New York on May 9th, 1894, its officers gave a full statement of the work done through the agencies of the benevolent and business departments. There were 195 colporters employed to carry messages of printed and spoken truth to the most needy. They visited during the year 137,606 families, to whom they sold or gave 102,698 volumes, and thousands of tracts, papers, leaflets and cards. Of these families, 12,852 were found having no religious books but the Bible; and 8,327 of them had no Bible. Total amount received by donations and sales was $470,930.55, which has been wisely expended to help in the wants of all classes and denominations, North, South, East and West in this and many other land, by Christian men and women of the ministry and laity, as "they went everywhere preaching the word" in the spirit of Christ's love to rescue and save the perishing. This Society has a claim on all who can co-operate either by thanksgiving, praying, working, or contributions, to help make our world-wide neighbors wise and good unto eternal life.

W. J. W. CROWDER.

Byron used a great deal of hair dressing, but was very particular to have only the best to be found in the market. If Ayer's Hair Vigor had been obtainable then, doubtless he would have tested its merits, as so many distinguished and fashionable people are doing now-a-days.

The New Association.

Some of the churches about Greensboro have halted at the question of going into a weaker Association. They seem to desire to remain in the old and strong ones. We confess that the new organization will be weak, but when we remember God's power and the way in which he has used the weak things of the world for the accomplishment of his purposes, we are encouraged. We have found great destitution in this territory. Neither the Convention nor the adjoining Associations have attempted to enter the field. It is rapidly going into other hands. We have appealed to the churches bordering this destitution to form an organization to supply this destitution with our principles. If any church wants to be "toted" we can't promise to "tote" it now. But we want it to help us "tote" this destitution, and we believe that every church within a radius of 25 or 30 miles which will come into this organization will be stronger in every way at the end of the Associational year than to remain in the old Associations. And more, we believe a section of territory will be occupied which has never been entered by Baptists. We promise the churches that come hard work and a great deal of it.

The Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley Railway Company will sell "Summer Excursion Tickets" from June 1st to September 30th, inclusive, to all seashore and mountain resorts in North Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia. These tickets will be good for return trip until October 31st, 1894, with privilege of stop overs in each direction at all resort points. W. E. KYLE, G. P. A.

Whittling Down.

Mr. Spurgeon had an infinite disgust for the modern tendency to whittle down gospel truths to the little ending of nothing. He said:

"When a man gets to cutting down sin, paring down depravity, and making little of future punishment, let him no longer preach to you. Some modern divines whittle away the gospel to the small end of nothing. They make our divine Lord to be a sort of blessed nobody; they bring down salvation to mere savability, make certainties into probabilities, and treat verities as mere opinions. When you see a preacher making the gospel small by degrees and miserably less till there is not enough of it left to make soup for a sick grasshopper, get you gone. . . . As for me, I believe in the colossal—a need deep as hell and grace as high as heaven. I believe in a pit that is bottomless, and a heaven that is topless. I believe in an infinite God and an infinite atonement, infinite love and mercy, an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure, of which the substance and the reality are an infinite Christ."—Selected.

The Rest of Heaven.

To cease from effort; who desires that? Assuredly it is not the inheritance of the divinely blest. For heaven is life—abundance of life, a well of living water gushing up in the soul, but cessation from labor is death. Idle feet, hands folded over the breast, a placid smile frozen on the lips—no flush, no eagerness—this is death. The soul revolts at it. We crave exertion. The happiness of heaven will largely consist in the best and most economical adjustment of all the forces of human life to the great purposes of God. No man nor woman will labor out of their sphere. None will miss their calling. Toil will become pleasure because the employment of each one will be suited to his capacity and taste. All trades and professions will be equally respectable and enviable. The hewer of wood and the carver of statues will belong to the same guild of "ancient and honorable workmen," and will rejoice alike in the approving smile of Him who assigns their tasks. So the redeemed will rest in service.

Rest is not quitting the busy career;
Rest is the fitting of self to its sphere.

'Tis the brook's motion, clear without strife,
Fleeing to ocean after its life,

'Tis loving and serving the highest and best,
'Tis onward, unswerving. And that is true rest.

And that is heaven's rest.—David James Burrell.

What Christians Are For.

What is it that we who are Christians are put into the world for? It is not, primarily, to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, to shelter the shelterless; it is not, primarily, to make men and women happier, nor even to give them better intelligence; nor is it even to endow them with some virtues which they do not now possess. No one of those things, nor all combined, are the function of the Christian church. Christ has told his disciples explicitly why he has sent them forth: "As the Father hath sent me into the world, so send I you into the world;" and then he has told us in his prayer what he was sent into the world for: "I have glorified thee on the earth, I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do." That is the work of Christ, to glorify the Father. I glorify the Father by bringing one of his children back to the Father. It is true that when they come back they will grow wiser, better, more virtuous; and as they grow wiser and better and more virtuous they will get clothing, shelter, food; they will be helped to help themselves when they come back into their Father's house. But the prime function of Christ's disciple is to bring every wandering child back to God, and he cannot do that and not carry a living and glorified faith in God wherever he goes.—Lyman Abbott.

Cultivation of a Suspicious Spirit.

What is more damaging to character than the cultivation of a suspicious spirit? We know some otherwise good men that have almost ruined themselves by indulging in this folly. They have now reached the point at which they really believe all the world to be in a conspiracy against them. The egotism of such a conviction is sublime. The world is too busy with its own affairs to pay much attention to any one person. Nine times out of ten, the ill thoughts that we entertain concerning those around us have no foundation in fact, but are simply born out of our own morbid imaginations.—Nashville Advocate.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Pastor Moore's Resignation.

To the Biblical Recorder:—At the regular monthly conference of Broad St. Baptist church, on the evening of the 11th, after the transaction of business, the pastor, Rev. Hight C. Moore, tendered his resignation to take effect June 30th and then retired; Bro. S. F. Conrad being called to the chair. A vote was taken upon the acceptance of the resignation and the church voted not to accept. Bro. Moore was notified of the decision, and returned and addressed the church pressing his resignation.

Upon another vote being taken the resignation was accepted, and the following resolutions were passed:

"Resolved, That in accepting the resignation of Bro. Hight C. Moore as our pastor, we desire to express our entire confidence in his earnest and sincere Christian character, and to say that we recognize in him many useful and worthy gifts for the gospel ministry.

2. That in parting with him as our pastor, we deplore the circumstances which have led to his resignation, and that we believe whatever have been the grounds of complaint on the part of any, we do exonerate him from any intent or purpose to produce alienation or discord among the members of this church, and that he has continuously borne and manifested a Christian spirit and love for the cause and work of the Master.

3. That in leaving us we desire to express to him our appreciation of his labors among us, and our sympathy and prayers for him in future field of labor.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the church record, also that a copy be furnished Bro. Moore, and that copies be sent the Twin City Daily of this city, and the BIBLICAL RECORDER of Raleigh for publication."

JAMES D. HOLLISTER, Church Clerk.

North Carolina Baptist S. S. Chautauqua.

SECOND ANNUAL MEETING

The second annual meeting of the North Baptist Sunday-school Chautauqua will be held at Mount Vernon Springs, Chatham county, on the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley Railroad, one mile from Ore Hill, beginning on Tuesday, August 28th, at 4 p. m., and continue till Sunday, September 2d, 1894.

Special rates for board have been secured at the Mount Vernon Springs Hotel, as follows: "Per day, $1.00; full week, $6.00; and in private residences near by at seventy-five cents per day, or $5.00 full week. Usual reduced fare will be granted over all the railroads in the State.

The full programme of exercises will be issued by the Executive Committee during the month of July.

The meeting at this place last August was most delightful and profitable to all the Sunday-school workers who attended. From the first to the last day it was a spiritual and an instructive feast.

The object of the Chautauqua is to bring together the Baptist Sunday-school workers of North Carolina in an annual meeting for mutual interchange of methods of teaching and conducting the school in every department, and for invoking special spiritual preparation in same. It will prove a blessing to any officer or teacher. It will aid and stimulate the school represented. It will warm the heart of any pastor.

Our brethren and sister of Mount Vernon Springs Baptist church, and the people of the community generally, will do all in their power for our comfort and for the success of the Chautauqua.

The grove in which Mount Vernon Springs church is situated is a very large one, and parties desiring to do so can take tents or make shelters and "camp" in the grove during the Chautauqua. Several did this last year, and found it very comfortable.

We hope every Baptist Sunday-school in the State will send at least one representative.

N. B. BROUGHTON, President.
J. C. BIDGOOD, Secretary.

Statement.

Some time ago we announced that if the way opened, we would join the Gospel Mission in China. The friends of this Mission, with few exceptions, say that we are too old, and that our family, eight in number, is too large. That the $1,200 passage money required for us would send four single missionaries. That we can do more for China by staying here and raising funds for others than going in person.

Further, there are six young missionaries who wish to join the Gospel Mission this fall, for whom passage money must be raised.

Last and most important of all is the fact, that the support of some now in the field is not fully provided for.

To send us now would be to take part of the support away from Bostic, Blalock and Crocker. Under these circumstances in these hard times, money cannot be raised to send us. Therefore, like many others who cannot go for lack of funds, we shall do all we can here to extend the Master's kingdom.

R. L. PATTON.
Morganton, June 15, 1894.

Pastors of Baptist Churches in North Carolina.

Dr. F. M. Ellis of Baltimore made the proposition some weeks ago that the pastors of the South give five dollars towards liquidating the debt of the Foreign Mission Board.

We have about four hundred pastors of Baptist churches in North Carolina. Can we not, if necessary, make the sacrifice and send five dollars each to meet the pressing demand? Brethren, do not let us be behind in this call. Other pastors in other States are responding.

R. VAN DEVENTER,
Vice President for North Carolina.

Pilot Mountain Association.

This body will meet with Mt. Olive Baptist church in Stokes county, five miles from King's Cabin, a station on the C. F. & Y. V. R. R., on Thursday before the first Sunday in August, 1894. The north bound train is due at King's Cabin at 5 o'clock p. m. The south bound 10:45 o'clock a. m. Persons intending to come by rail and wishing conveyance will be met at station on Wednesday evening or Thursday morning, provided they notify the undersigned at once, on which train they will arrive. Ours being a country church, we need a little time to arrange matters.

Absolutely Unanswerable.

Dear Recorder:—I want to say amen to Dr. Taylor's articles in the RECORDER on "How far Ought a State to Undertake to Educate." I think his articles are timely, pointed and absolutely unanswerable. I think the time has come when the taxpayers of this State ought to speak out on this subject, and condemn with no uncertain sound wrong appropriation of their money. I say give the people the information that they need upon this subject, and they will right the wrong. I think it is the duty of each one of us to point out where the candidate for the next legislature stands upon this subject before we cast our vote; that is my determination.

Roberdel Gracious Meeting.

Last night Rev. I. S. Boyles, who was our former pastor for two years, closed a great and glorious meeting of ten days at our church. The church has never been so greatly moved and revived before. More than twenty-five professed faith in Jesus. A dozen have joined the church, others will follow, and some will join elsewhere.

To dear Bro. Boyles we all feel greatly indebted for his most earnest preaching of the pure gospel and for his most faithful labors for the lost. He holds a tender and loving place in all our hearts. Bro. Wallace was with us a few days and did good service.

To God be praise and honor for his goodness and mercy. We want to live revival lives the remainder of our days.

I love the RECORDER.

EUGENE LEGRAND.
Roberdel, June 14, 1894.

Hollins Institute.

The fifty first session has come and gone—its work and its lessons have made their indelible impress. The closing exercises continued through four evenings and one forenoon, and, from beginning to end, moved on a high plane, calling forth exhibitions of appreciation and approval. The marked feature of a Hollins' commencement is the prominence given to the pupils, officers taking but little part. Music, Art, Elocution, essays, written debates, all by the pupils, come and go as the scene changes and the hours pass, no haste, no halt, no confusion, no agitation, no embarrassment, thus affording the best evidence of intelligent successful training. The session has been one of marked success. More diplomas were awarded than ever before.

Medals for Scholarship were awarded to Miss M. Elizabeth Jones, Lynchburg, Va.; for English Composition to Miss M. Elizabeth Jones, Lynchburg, Va.; for Instrumental Music to Miss Lily Ford Snead, Fluvanna county, Va.

Rev. E. B. Pollard of Roanoke, Va., delivered the medals in a most graceful and appropriate style.

Prof. Chas. W. Kent of the University of Virginia delivered the annual commencement address. His theme might be designated "the position and education of women." It was a speech of great ability and high finish and was delivered with power. It received unusual approval by the audience—rounds of prolonged applause following on its close. It will be published in the Semi-Annual which is sent out by the two literary societies of the school. Your correspondent did not know the University had such an orator.

The two literary societies of the school had their celebration on the evening of the last day. Their programme was well conceived and exquisitely executed—holding the large audience literally spell-bound for two and a half hours. They had Music, Elocution, essays, written debates and an orator in the person of Rev. J. Cleveland Hall of Roanoke. His theme was "Language and Books, Their Use and Abuse." The treatment was elevated in thought and pure and beautiful in diction.

Much study and attention is given to Music in this school and both at the spring concert and at commencement, music of a high order and degree of excellence, under both home and foreign instruction, was executed. We have not space to mention here the various brilliant performances during those occasions, but one surpassing all others we have heard here and elsewhere claims a few words. It occurred during the morning hours of commencement day and was called "The Hallelujah Chorus," from Handel's Messiah. Eleven performers were required for its rendition,—one at the pipe organ, four at two grand pianos, and six violins under Miss Goldsmith, the accomplished teacher of violin, and all under the direction of Prof. E. F. Rath, the Musical Director.

We neglected to mention that on Sunday preceding the commencement exercises, the annual sermon before the Christian Association of the school was preached by Rev. W. R. L. Smith of St. Louis, Mo. His text was "I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now." X. Y. Z.

HELPLESS INVALID.

"About 18 months or two years ago my wife's health gave way, and she grew steadily worse. She could not retain scarcely anything she ate and the case finally assumed the worst form of
DYSPEPSIA and CHRONIC DIARRHŒA,
and she became a helpless invalid at the age of 18. I had her under the treatment of a good physician, but his efforts to relieve her were of no avail. So, after matters had continued thus for 8 or 10 months, and my wife had given up to die, I took the case in my own hands and purchased a bottle of Dr. King's
ROYAL GERMETUER.
began giving it to her in water as hot as she could drink it, before and after each meal, using a mild purgative occasionally on retiring at night.
Suffice it to say in less than a week there was
A WONDERFUL CHANGE.
She could eat a little of anything she desired, and today is a well woman. She used altogether possibly 4 or 6 bottles. In my opinion
GERMETUER HAS NO EQUAL."

Is the University of North Carolina Baptist?

Dear Recorder:—In your issue of June 13th some one who signs his name "B." in his report of the recent commencement of the University at Chapel Hill, says that he wishes that our "Baptist people could only know what a great work the University is doing for them." If the University is giving Christian education according to the Baptist idea, it is high time to close Wake Forest, and all send to the University, and indeed were not all of our Baptist fathers fools for ever building Wake Forest College! There are Baptists in North Carolina who have more State pride than they have love for Christ or his cause. They contribute but little for preaching the gospel even at their own doors, and comparatively nothing to Wake Forest, but they are great friends to the University because it is a State institution. Now if support from the State is withdrawn from the University, I suppose they will be willing to contribute to its support. They ought to be.

Indeed I am a little tired of this "higher education business" any how. How many young men who have graduated in our colleges and universities are swinging around doing nothing, only trying to be a lazy and respectable nobody? They are waiting for a job to "boss" negroes or poor white folks. Will they plow, or sow, or dig? No, not they! They are educated, and that means that somebody must support them, or they must have a job where they can make money. Many of our young people are educated away from the practical duties of life. They may get into a place and live high, but the money some of these make is polluted with the sin of oppression or extortion.

I reckon if we close up Wake Forest, we had better sell the property and devote the proceeds to the University which is such "a great school for Baptists"!

Many of us in this section are too poor to educate in any school even if we could have free "tuition, board," &c. If we must be "hewers of wood and drawers of water" for the educated, we will do our hewing well, something not many of the educated can do; and we will work when we draw water, something most of the so-called educated won't do—not even the water they drink, let alone that which is used to wash their clothing.

Yours against frauds and puffs,
E. F. Jones.

From Soochow, China.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I have a little time this afternoon before starting on a four days' country trip, and I wish to tell our people through you how the Lord has been blessing our work this year.

Beginning the day after China's New Year (Feb. 7th), for seven weeks we gave ourselves especially to preaching in the chapel, most of the time having one service in the day and one at night. The presence of the Lord was evident. And it was a source of great thankfulness and joy with us to see so much more interest in the gospel manifested by the heathen than we had ever witnessed here before. One young man was added to our church by baptism, and two by letters, making our present membership eleven. Before this meeting, there had been only one person added to us during the four and a half years of our work here, and we have no good reason to think that any one else had been saved. Some continue to attend our regular chapel services (seven per week). And we hope, the Lord abiding with us, the good work may go on.

I had the privilege of attending our Baptist Association at Ningpo in April. This Association includes all the Baptist churches in the eastern part of Central China. There were about forty delegates present, of whom seven were foreigners. Sixteen churches were represented. And, including Chinkiang and Yangchow churches which were not represented, there was an aggregate membership of six hundred. Much of the true Christian spirit was manifested in the sessions. It lasted three days. I worked among the villages and towns five days last week, preaching, and selling Christian literature—especially portions of the New Testament, while our native co-laborer did the chapel work. The fields of ripening wheat, the banks of the canals covered with vegetation and decked with flowers, and the quiet lakes furnish delightful scenery. But the people in the villages sunken in iniquity, so nearly ruined by opium, and "having no hope and without God in the world," are indeed pitiable. Fraternally, T. C. Britton.

The sheriff of Wake county has, after strenuous efforts, re-captured Orange Page, the condemned murderer who recently escaped from jail. Hereafter, we are informed, murderers will be kept in separate cells in the Wake county jail. The sheriff informs us that there is no law whereby he may prohibit inmates of jails from making loud noise all night. There should be such law.

The experienced Christian has too solid a view of the mercy of God in Christ not to "rejoice," but too exalted views of the holiness of God not to "rejoice with trembling."—Arnaud.

The Baptist church at Mt. Airy has extended a call to Rev. Jas. I. Kendrick, a Wake Forest graduate, and a this year's graduate of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. Bro. Kendrick, we are glad to learn, will probably accept the call. Bro. R. A. Newton of Mt. Airy writes: "Brother Pruett left us on last Friday (8th inst.) His removal is a great loss to our town and the church. The church here gained one hundred per cent. during his pastorate. Mt. Olivet, Charlotte, could not have made a better selection."

DILDAY—DILDAY—On May 31st, 1894, at the residence of Daniel Lowe's, by A. B. Adkins, Esq., Rev. J. W. Dilday and Miss Lillie D. Dilday, all of Hertford county.

DIED.

BAKER—After an illness of three weeks, sister Bettie Baker departed life May 13th, 1894, in the sixty-eighth year of her age. Some years ago she was baptized into the fellowship of Pleasant Grove church, where she remained an active member until the day of her death. She leaves one brother, Deacon Langly Taylor, to mourn his loss, but his loss is her eternal gain.

FEREBEE—At his residence in Camden county, May 3d, Bro. Jas. C. Ferebee, in his seventy-eighth year. I have known Brother Ferebee for more than thirty-two years. He was an humble, quiet Christian man. Liberal to his church, and always ready to help the needy. The world saw the want of him; always plain and blunt, but to know him was to love him, because of what you saw was in him. R. R. Overby.

CRUTCHFIELD—At Mt. Vernon Springs, Chatham county, N. C., June 1, 1894, in the sixty-eighth year of his age, Joseph A. Crutchfield. Three years ago a tumor appeared on his arm. It was taken out, and then others were developed, and for the last eighteen months he suffered continuously and greatly. He bore it all with great patience and fortitude. He joined the Missionary Baptist church young, and has been a faithful member, and a constant reader of the Recorder. He was a good and kind husband, obliging and sympathetic neighbor, honest and upright in all his dealings, and given to hospitality. He gave a hearty welcome to the visitor, and was anxious to make you feel happy while at his home. He said that he had faith in Jesus who died for sinners, and that he was one saved by grace. His life certainly bore the fruits of the spirit.

We will all miss his pleasant face, cordial welcome, and cautious advice. May the teachings of divine truth and the fond hope of soon meeting the departed husband cheer the bereaved wife. The writer preached the funeral from the text, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." Ps. 116: 15. O. T. Edwards.

Mt. Vernon Springs, N. C.

ROBERSON—God in his providence saw fit on May 5th, 1894, to remove from our midst our brother Cornelius M. Roberson, at the age of twenty-nine years. Bro. Roberson, with tenants, was stripping tobacco one and a half miles from his home. Seeing angry clouds rising he started for home that he might be with his wife and child during the storm. While passing under a locust tree, within three yards of his porch, a fearful stroke of lightning struck the tree, shivering it into splinters and killing Bro. Roberson instantly. He fell almost in the arms of his family. On June 20th, 1889, he was happily married to Miss Ella Price. Soon thereafter he connected himself with the Leaksville Baptist church.

In his funeral discourse the pastor, Rev. J. B. Richardson, said, "I knew Bro. Roberson well. Two great purposes prompted and led his life. The one was to serve and honor his Lord and Saviour. The other was to provide for and honor his family. To the first, as a citizen and neighbor, he devoutly and faithfully addressed himself daily. To the second he lovingly and tenderly gave his energies, early and late, to support and comfort all the dear ones dependent on him. With a glad welcome he often received us into his family, and while with him he was ever anxious to have and hear the Bible taught to his household. Whenever we visited him we knew this was to be our work while there. Yes, he was a noble specimen of a Christian gentleman." C. G. J., Sr.

BURKE—At the residence of his parents, east end of Statesville, N. C., Monday, June 4th, 1894, at 1:40 a. m., Claude H., second son of Harry and Delia Burke, in the seventeenth year of his age.

When I took charge of the church there in the fall of 1887, I lived next door to Lawyer Burke, and very soon acquaintance grew into friendship, and this has been more and more cemented as the years have passed.

His children were much in my home, and so Claude and I have been intimate friends, notwithstanding the great difference in ages. He was convicted of sin in 1888, and confessed Christ during Mr. Fife's meeting there in February, 1891, and was baptized by Elder W. A. Pool, then pastor of the church there.

From childhood Claude was bright, and did his own thinking along the line of Bible teachings, more so than even the family then knew. Some months ago I had a most comforting conversation with him, in which his experiences seemed more like those of a man of thirty than a boy of seventeen, full of trial and full of trust.

Wednesday before his death in answer to a card from his father, I went to him. He was bright and calm in view of death, and smiling, he said, "That's all right; Jesus has saved me; I am not afraid to go; I know I am safe; . . . I want you to pray for some of my young acquaintances. I wish they were Christians. . . . Pray for pa and ma, and Flake and Maude; and pray for me if it is his will for me to get well, that I may be useful to him." After I left him, he turned to his mother and quoted Prov. 4: 18, "The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

Dear parents, brother and sister, let us look away from this new made grave in your beautiful cemetery. Our loved one knows no more tears as we do. Let us look up to "Father's House" that is home. Claude is there, and we are on the way to him. It is not a far home! We will soon be there. Since our loved ones are gone heaven is so much nearer, and the doctrine of the resurrection is so much dearer to us all, than ever before.

Just a few more heart pangs, a few more days of service to our "Gracious Father," then he will call us, or else "come again" and take us up home to himself and our loved ones. See John 14: 1-3; 1 Thess. 4: 13-18.

O what condescension on God's part,
O what joy and glory is ours!
W. J. Hopkins.

Tributes of Respect.

At a called communication of Mt. Pleasant Lodge, No. 157, May 26th, 1894, the following resolutions were read and adopted:—

Whereas, It has pleased the giver of all good to remove from time to eternity our much esteemed brother James A. Penny, a member of this Lodge, who departed this life on May 25th, 1894, in the fifty-seventh year of his age; therefore Resolved 1. That in the death of our brother our hearts have been deeply pained by this sad and melancholy event.

Resolved 2. That we deeply deplore the great loss sustained by his family and the community, also the church of Christ of which he was a member, and by our fraternity.

Resolved 3. That it becomes us to bow with reverence and humility to this melancholy and inscrutable dispensation of providence, thus reminding us that in the midst of life we are in death.

Resolved 4. That we extend to the bereaved family and relatives of our deceased brother our sincere and heartfelt sympathy in this their sad bereavement.

Resolved 5. That the Lodge be draped in mourning the usual number of days, and that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the Lodge record, a copy be sent to the family of the deceased, and to the Biblical Recorder and Orphan's Friend at Oxford for publication.

Girls who board are required to board with the principal, unless otherwise requested by parent or guardian.

A FULL CORPS OF EFFICIENT TEACHERS. Commercial instruction is a specialty. Diplomas are awarded to those who complete the commercial course as prescribed in catalogue. There is a great demand for young men of a business education.

MUSIC, both instrumental and vocal, holds a prominent place in our school. We keep posted as to the requirements for matriculation in the different colleges of the State, and so direct the courses of those who expect to attend college that they may take good stands in their classes. For those who wish to prepare for teaching in public schools we arrange a special course looking towards that end. Our school is not for young men who wish to play the dude, nor for young ladies who wish to be society belles and pass their time in idleness, but for those who are earnestly desirous of a practical business education, or of sufficient preparation to enter college.

My Burden.

A heavy burden, Lord, I bear,
It is too great for me,
Beneath its weight I'm bowed to earth,
And fain I would be free.

REFRAIN.

My burden is too great for me,
I bring it, bring it, Lord to Thee;
My burden is too great for me,
I bring—I leave it, Lord, with Thee.

In vain I've tried to roll it off,
But still it clings to me.
It's more than I can bear, dear Lord,
I bring it now to Thee.

"Upon the Lord thy burden cast,"
The Master says to me;
I hear and hasten, Lord, to bring
My heavy load to Thee.

In joyful haste; with loving faith,
And longing to be free,
I lay my burden at Thy feet,
And leave it Lord with Thee.

Educated Feet.

Educated feet are a good thing—provided they are educated in the right way. But not to dance, not to trip gracefully to music, or enter a room without stumbling, or walk with "the poetry of motion"—these, at best, are mere pedal accomplishments; of about the same real value, in the education of feet, as fancy embroidery in the education of hands, or the proprieties of five o'clock teas in the education of heads. You would teach your hands how to write, and draw, and bake, and sew seams before you would teach them how to do any fancy work—would you not? And your head how to read, and reason, and compute, and understand, and express its thought, before the trivial rules of a small social occasion?

Why, then, when people speak of "educated feet," do they think of nothing but dancing and marching and graceful walking? Are there not some fundamentals in foot education too? Are there not some really useful and practical things which our feet should be taught?

First, we ought to teach them to be obedient. "This is the way—walk ye in it," is the first command of Christ to youth. We all know, or may readily learn, the way in which Christ wishes us to walk—the path of righteous conduct, of self sacrifice, of sincerity, purity, devotion. Have we educated our feet to follow that path? Have we made them obedient to the Divine command?

In the second place, we ought to educate our feet in service. Do they know the way to the bedside of the sick, to the hovel of the poor, to the hearth of the lonely, to the cell of the prisoner? Do they carry you on missions of mercy and of love? Teach them how to serve.

Thirdly, we ought to teach our feet how to stand. There is something finer and more beautiful than any grace of motion in the stanch, noble character which can abide, while the siren voices are crying, "Come! come!" Do your feet know how to resist temptation? Can they plant themselves upon the right and defy everything which would move them thence? If so, you have learned one of the grandest lessons of life. If not—ponder it, practice it.

Yes, we ought to educate our feet just as well as our hands and our heads. We ought to educate them in the things which will make good and strong and helpful and Christlike men and women of us.—Zion's Herald.

Water Good Enough.

The nomination of Lincoln for President of the United States was quietly received at his home in Springfield, Illinois. When the committee from Chicago arrived to apprise Mr. Lincoln of his nomination, his two boys, Willie and "Tad," were perched on the fence before the house. "Tad" stood erect, and welcomed the committee by shouting "Hooray!" Charles Carlton Coffin describes the reception of the committee.

"Mrs Lincoln will be pleased to see you in the other room, gentlemen. You will be thirsty after your long journey. You will find something refreshing in the library."

In the library were several hundred volumes ranged upon shelves, two globes, one terrestrial, the other celestial, a plain table, a pitcher of cold water and glasses, but no wines nor liquors.

"You did not find any great spread of liquors, I take it," remarked a citizen of Springfield the next morning.

"No," I replied.

"Thereby hangs a little story: When we knew you were on your way, a number of us called on Mr. Lincoln and said that in all probability some of the members of the committee would need some refreshment, wines or liquors. 'I haven't any in the house,' he said. 'We will furnish them.' 'Gentlemen, I cannot allow you to do what I will not do myself,' was the reply.

"But that was not the end of it. Some of our good citizens, feeling that Springfield had been highly honored by the nomination, sent over some baskets of champagne, but Mr. Lincoln sent them back, thanking them for their intended kindness."—Evangelical Messenger.

Santo Domingo, the City of Columbus.

Santo Domingo is the oldest city built by Europeans now standing in the western hemisphere. It was founded by the brother of Columbus, and is said by some to have been named after their father, Domenico, and by others to have received its name because it was on Sunday that the ship sent from the north arrived there—Santo Domingo meaning "holy Sunday." Curiously enough, its founding was the result of a quarrel.

On the northern shore of Hispaniola, as the island of Santo Domingo was then called, was Isabella, the first Spanish colony in the New World. There, one day, a young Spaniard named Miguel Diaz, one of the followers of Columbus, stabbed a companion in a fight; and, afraid of the anger of Columbus, he fled into the mountains and went toward the south. After wandering for some days, he came to a river, and following it to where it emptied into the sea, found a tribe of Indians called the Ozamas. They had heard of the wonderful white men who had landed on their island, and they received him with awe, but with kindness and hospitality, and took him before their queen, Zameaca, who was famous for her beauty and gentleness. He had not lived long with them when Zameaca lost her heart to the fair-faced Spaniard, and they were married. For a time all went well, but Diaz soon tired of the simple life; and his wife, to please him, told him of gold to be found in the river Jayna, and guided him to it. Diaz then went back in haste to Isabella, knowing that the news of the discovery would secure his pardon,—as it did. He guided his avaricious companions to the golden stream, and afterward to the mouth of the Ozama River. There Columbus chose the place for the town. It was begun in 1496, and it was called Santo Domingo.

The Spaniards ill treated and made slaves of the simple Indians, and Zameaca, seeing the evils she had brought upon her people, fled to the mountains and was never heard of afterward. The new city grew and prospered until the year 1502, when it was entirely destroyed by a frightful hurricane, and was rebuilt on the other bank of the river. There it stands to day, not much changed from the Santo Domingo of four centuries ago.

It is very curious to go from one of our cities, with its new, bright, tall buildings and its tall broad streets alive with the hum and bustle of business, to this sleepy old Spanish town, where (on account of the earthquakes) the houses are rarely more than one story high, and are painted various colors—blue, green, brown, or red; where the narrow streets have sidewalks only three feet wide, and where nobody is ever in a hurry; and to remember, as one walks over the town, that those streets were once trodden by Pizarro, who gathered there the first money that enabled him to start on the expedition that conquered Peru; by Cortez, the conqueror of Mexico; by Ponce de Leon, who discovered Florida; by Balboa, the first European who saw the Pacific Ocean; by Ojeda, who discovered Venezuela; and by Columbus himself, and his brothers and his son, and the companions of his voyages.—St. Nicholas.

Noblesse Oblige.

'Tis wisdom's law, the perfect code,
By love inspired;
On him on whom much is bestowed,
Is much required;
The tuneful throat is bid to sing,
The oak must reign the forest's king,
The rushing stream the wheel must move,
The tempered steel its strength must prove,
'Tis given with the eagle's eyes
To face the midday skies.

If I am weak and you are strong,
Why then, why then
To you the brave deeds belong!
And so again,
If you have gifts and I have none,
If I have shade and you have sun,
'Tis yours with freer hand to give,
'Tis yours with truer grace to live,
Than I who, giftless, sunless, stand
With barren life and hand.

Mother not to Blame.

Probably there are none of our readers, or at any rate very few, who would willfully lay the blame for their own misdeeds on the shoulders of others. There are many who are doing it unconsciously, however. You ask in what way? Let this story answer:

Tom had been an idle, careless, mischievous boy in school. He did not mean to be a bad boy, but he wanted to do about as he liked, without seeming to care how much he troubled others by it. He had a seatmate who was quite unlike him, in that he was careful to try to please his teachers.

One day Tom heard his teachers talking about some of their pupils; he heard his own name mentioned, and then that of his seatmate.

"Jamie must have a lovely mother, I think," said one, "for he is always so polite and agreeable, and tries very hard to please all who are around him."

"I have heard that Tom Dunn's mother is a good woman," said another, "but I don't see how it is that she has such an unpleasant boy. I think he has a generous nature, and when he likes can show manners. It is my opinion that his mother tries to teach him just what is right, but he will not listen to her teaching. You know there is many a boy that will go on to destruction in spite of his mother."

Tom had heard enough to make him miserable for the rest of the day; and he had not put conscience away so far but what he could hear a whisper: "You've been a mean boy, and they've laid it all to your mother."

Now he did really love his mother, and could not bear the thought that he had brought discredit upon her. After school that night he lingered until the others had passed out, and going up to his teacher, he said slowly, and as if he hardly knew how to say it:

"I want to tell you—that—that mother isn't a bit to blame. Don't lay it to my mother—all my bad ways, I mean."

Tom did not think at all of what a brave thing he was doing; he thought of nothing but the wish to defend his mother. But when the teacher took his hand and said, "Your mother must be a brave lady, Tom, for her boy has shown himself brave to-night, and I shall expect good things from him in the future," Tom thought, "I wonder if the other boys know that all they do, good or bad, is laid to their mothers?"—Presbyterian Journal.

There is but one way for any of us to exert a true influence, and that is by being true and faithful ourselves.—W. G. Eliot.

A KNIFE

in the hand of a Surgeon gives you a feeling of horror and dread. There is no longer necessity for its use in many diseases formerly regarded as incurable without cutting.

The Triumph of Conservative Surgery is well illustrated by the fact that

RUPTURE or Breach, is now radically cured without the knife and without pain. Clumsy, chafing trusses can be thrown away! They never cure but often induce inflammation, strangulation and death.

TUMORS Ovarian, Fibroid (Uterine) and many others, are now removed without the perils of cutting operations.

PILE TUMORS, however large, Fistula and other diseases of the lower bowel, are permanently cured without pain or resort to the knife.

STONE in the Bladder, no matter how large, is crushed, pulverized, washed out and perfectly removed without cutting.

STRICTURE of Urinary Passage is also removed without cutting in hundreds of cases. For pamphlet, references and all particulars, send 10 cents (in stamps) to World's Dispensary Medical Association, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

To a young man just beginning to discuss and express his opinion upon public policies and public facts, it seems most difficult to say anything and not offend some one. And if he be a great one whom he offends, some think him an upstart; if, however, he attempts to point out the flaws in the conduct of men of small affairs he will probably have the plaudits of the great. It would appear that one has to become great before it is meet for one to tell a great man that he is at fault, however faulty he be. It is a fear under which small men labor that prevents the exposure of many a wrong. We all desire renown; none would remain among the mediocre—the common. And, therefore, since it is generally thought that the good will of men already great is essential to promotion, the great pursue their course unchallenged save by jealous rivals. And this is wrong, for the insignificant may see evils where the great overlook or choose to disregard them. It is a greater wrong, however, for any one to hesitate to expose what one thinks is wrong because one is not so renowned as he who is accountable for the wrong. It is a cowardly fear that dogs would spurn. When one knows the right and follows it not—when one is politic—such a one should be driven from the pale of respectable men. When one knows a wrong and refuses for selfish motives to expose it, one commits a crime against the God of Justice, against the citizenship and against one's self. And yet we know there are many politic men. Policy often purchases renown; but policy costs one one's self respect; and that is all there is worth having in public affairs.

We began remarking upon the difficulty with which one meets in expressing opinions. Some one is always offended; and we are told that young men should not offend their elders. We know there are elderly editors who do not choose to give offence to to certain people, who cover over self exposing evil, who seemingly take delight in misty sentences and vague phrases. They are unworthy of their calling. If there is a class of men called to expose evil that class is composed of men who conduct newspapers. Not that they should not try to see the good in things, but that they should try to see the evil and try harder to remedy it. An editor must be independent of all men to be a good one; and he must not fear the scorn of the great nor the ungrateful silence of those whom he would protect.

There are times when offences must be given and consequent enmity incurred. One cannot honestly refuse to see a fault because a friend or an influential man will be offended. We are in a world that was created to move upward; and not one step upward can be made unless faults are pointed out. And they must be pointed out not in a general way—indefinitely,—for that is the subterfuge of those beings who fear to offend. Some person or persons are accountable for every wrong in public affairs, and they must be designated in not uncertain terms, or they will regard the effort as aimed at some one else, or of no importance. And there's the rub: To speak of individuals, to tell individuals that they are remiss of their duty, and in consequence incur their hatred, if they are small, or their contumely if they are great. An editor cannot be a man and fear either.

We wrote recently of the trial and the sentence of the New Hanover murderer, John Brock. He murdered his wife and was sentenced to thirty years' imprisonment. We held that he should have been hanged. We still hold to that opinion, despite a lengthy letter from one of the counsel for his defence informing us very candidly that we made ourselves ridiculous, that we wrote untruths, etc. We would gladly publish the letter, but cannot afford the space. The only thing it says in Brock's favor is that he is a drinking man, and was probably drunk at the time. It says a great deal in favor of the prosecuting officers, the judge and jury. Brock should have been hanged. In fact, there is evidence that he should have been hanged several years ago, for circumstantial evidence has branded him more than once. Here is manifested a striking testimony to our editorial on capital punishment: A woman met death in peculiar circumstances while in Brock's care some years ago. He escaped the law. Another met death in his company; and he almost escaped punishment; he did escape the law, if the law is just. And if he were a free man now would he not be encouraged to kill some one else who is in his way? Is the reason for the alarming increase of murders not apparent?

We had no purpose of offending any one when we wrote the article on capital punishment; but we knew we would be abused because we spoke definitely, and held certain men chargeable of certain wrongs. We had no personal acquaintance with any one concerned; we had no malice at all. We did have the evidence as produced at the preliminary trial and at the final trial as written in the Wilmington papers. If that evidence had been submitted to a jury on which we were serving, Jno. Brock would now either be sentenced to death or have a new trial.

It appears that the United States has begun to clean its stables—an arduous task, we fear; and one, indeed, to which all good men should lend their strength. New York City, the metropolis of iniquity—and made so by partisan municipal politics—is now undergoing the preliminary to a reformation in a general investigation of her police force. It has already been proven that many of her police were mere agents of a political machine, that they were authorized to charge a certain sum of money to fail to arrest offenders against the law, which money they contributed to the political machine—Tammany Hall—which dictated the affairs of New York, and which appointed police on payment by them of a certain amount of money. The money was used to bribe voters and procure power for the machine. There was never a more corrupt nor a more finished scheme. The privilege of committing crime was bought, and the purchase money was used to procure power to protect more crime, and by that means to make more money for the political leaders. Every city in the land has this end to fear. Rings and machines are on every hand; and rings and machines are centers of corruption. Politics should have no part in city government. Character and ability should have precedence over political principles in a city election.

The investigation by a committee of the United States Senate into the Sugar Trust scandal has developed evidence that several Senators were using their position to make money by gambling in the rise and fall of stocks. Senator Ransom's son and private secretary was implicated in a small way. Many Senators admit that they gamble in stocks; some of them boast of it. As long as people elect gamblers to represent them they deserve to be misrepresented. And if every editor in the land were man enough to call a gambler a gambler the people would know whether or not they are electing gamblers to represent them. It can be safely charged to the press that gamblers are in the Senate, for we believe the majority of people in every State would discountenance a gambling Senator were he exposed. We need a search light at Washington City—a search-light that will expose wrong regardless of the feelings of great men.

Mr. Josephus Daniels of Washington City stated in a recent press correspondence that those men who had been at the National Capital longest were not inclined to condemn Breckenridge—sensual and shameless wretch of a being—while only those who had lived there a short while condemned him outright. The insinuation was that they who had lived in Washington City several years had become so contaminated with the general iniquity that they were not in a position to "throw stones," for fear of breaking the glass in their own character. A more shameful commentary has not been made on any government. To think the capital of our nation a centre of so much baseness, is harrowing. To think that honest men are contributing honest money to the support of wretches who are so iniquitous, is awful. We hope Mr. Daniels is mistaken. Yet he cannot be entirely mistaken, for he speaks from an observation of several months. There must be a general cleansing, a Niagara of public opinion. We must seek men and principles, and forget party services. We must cease to reward men, and begin to pay men to serve us. We speak of no man nor party, because we do not know what man or what party is at fault. No party can of itself be long unimpeachable unless men become so. Mr. Daniels spoke generally, sweepingly, but, we are sorry to say, indefinitely.

No Other Man Has His Hand on Your Goal.

ADDRESS BEFORE THE LITERARY SOCIETIES OF WAKE FOREST COLLEGE BY REV. R. C. M'CONNELL, D. D., LYNCHBURG, VA., JUNE 18, 1894.

Every man has an individual destiny. Indeed every man has had his own peculiar beginning. The often forgotten and many times under-valued selfhood is after all the most interesting of all subjects. Individuality is the element which differentiates every real man from the herd.

I.—The counterpart of the goal on which your hand will one day be laid, is now formed or forming within you.

(1) I do not say that, Minerva like, it was born full grown. Possibly ill-tempered fate was the trip hammer which shaped the image of your goal out of the malleable material of very early life.

(2) No such anomaly exists in nature as the happy union of a faulty character with high destiny.

II.—No man knows in what department of human activity his highest possibilities may be achieved.

(1) The most difficult of all questions is what you are fit for, and whether you are fit for anything.

(3) Honest effort, the hand of Providence and the call of duty will settle the question with tolerable accuracy.

III.—The highest goal lies in the plane of many of your fellows.

(1) Not now as formerly does one colossal stand out as the Pike's Peak of a continent.

(2) Certainly no man will reach his goal from the trunks of his beheaded fellowmen.

I.—The counterpart of the goal on which you will one day lay your hand is now formed or forming within you.

Nowhere in the dim distant future is there a glittering renown on which some day you will happen. Already that goal may be, no doubt is certain, but it is certain because it is a growth of the seeds already planted in the fertile soil of your heart. The low notes of your future song of triumph have already been struck. The flower of your life is kept back till the summer sun shall paint it bright, but the roots are growing now. The grist of prosperity and even affluence will be ground by the water now accumulating in your reservoir. The battles of the future will be fought and won by the soldiers now being drilled in the secret chambers of your mind and heart. The shell and shot that will scatter the subtle foe of the future will be hurled by the dynamite now being stored in the magazine of self-possession. Real reputation is published character. True success is character projected. Far-reaching influence and worthy renown are translated manhood. You are now what you are, later you will be what men find out you are. Easily might there be a substitution in the forceful quotation, "Be sure your sins will find you out," and let it read, "Be sure your fellowmen will find you out." Only an unreal man without character salutes the world from the pinnacle of the temple which is his own "air castle." All who ever look down and into this world first look up and out upon it. Be not deceived by the glare of what seems to be the lights beyond—better know well that the flame is sure and steady within.

The circumstances of life will gather opportunities quite as rapidly as you will be able to discharge them. The grain will be brought to the mill if only the grist that it grinds is good. True, possibly some good workmen go in quest of work, but more often the work seeks the workman. The goal of a man's life is manufactured in his own workshop. Indeed, goals are never made—men are made and the goals await them. If now, young man, some glittering dream of the future lures you forward, make sure that you shall not realize that dream without there is foundation for it within you. Labor not for the prize half so much as you labor to be worthy of it. Strive to be a man and wait, and if you do not reach the goal it will reach you. Manhood is at par in all markets. If wealth is your goal, magnify the imperishable treasure of unsullied character. If scholarship lights the lurid flame, know thyself first and best, expunging all unworthy to be known. If statesmanship creates the fervid glow, remember that "he that ruleth himself is better than he that taketh a city." The wisest lawmaker cannot himself be unlawful. Should aspiration be given to point the way from earth to heaven, certainly in this there is laudable ambition, but not without caution. Only let him know that "when the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into a ditch."

In every sphere of human activity the man is more than his aims, more than his deeds. No projectile will fly beyond the limit of the force that hurled it. The streams of human purpose, no more than other streams, rise above their source. On the mountain side yonder God has placed his water tanks from which the streams thread the valleys and are forced on to freshen the salty sea. Thus on the sublime heights of true manhood, standing out in the pure air above the murky damps of sordid immorality, gilded by the first and purest rays of the sun of God's smile stands the man who sends forth the rills and rivers of joy and strength that quicken and vivify the world, and rush on to freshen the briny deep of human woe.

(1) I do not say that, Minerva-like, it was born full grown. Possibly ill-tempered fate was the trip-hammer that shaped the image of your goal out of the malleable material of very early life.

Ah! that hard lot that has been the adversary of so many thousands. God has made it the invincible advocate that stood at the threshold of life, questioning whether or not we shall prove ourselves worthy to live. The fates tell us of what sort we are. The unseaworthy founder when first they put out from shore. It is not always true that a hard early life makes a successful man, but it is true that early hardships temper and solidify the true metal.

In my early life I knew a boy against whom the fates frowned. Poverty and obscurity were his heritage. The only possible chance for any education was the little three months' school of each year, located by the State four miles from his hovel, to which he went without coat and barefoot, and when the frost pinched his feet he would lie down on his back and hold them up to the sun for a few moments to warm them, and then speed on to repeat the process over and over again until he would complete the painful journey. While he was thus seeking an education, his mother was doing washing for the bones off which the greater part of the meat had been cut and carrying them home to him to eat. With him as with thousands what seemed the direst privations moulded a solid wall of resistance that has become the bulwark of a successful and eminently valuable life.

"Let us be patient—these sad afflictions
Not from the ground arise,
But oftentimes celestial benedictions
Assume this dark disguise."

Weal or woe is not the accident of an hour or even of a life. Deeply imbedded in the very natures of men is the stuff of which destiny is composed. That the growth of this stuff is possible, I suppose no one doubts; then with what assiduity should early planting and cultivation be carried on. The sum of what I had desired to impress in this connection is the duty of every young man to look within and not beyond. Fancy in the young is disposed to run several paces ahead. What I intend to be or do fills the vision and paints a glowing horizon on to morrow's eve or next year's setting sun. While the truest, the surest and the best use of these prodigal moments would be the illumination of the now prosaic but fruitful present. Tell me what you are, what you are now doing, and I can tell you what you will be and what you will be called on to do. Fate is a corpse, destiny is a breathing, throbbing possibility. Ask of God and obtain power to put breath into the fate that threatens to throttle you. Wreathe the menacing frown of fate in a garland of hope that is born of faith and purpose. Translate the hard lot of your earlier struggles into strength for yourself and hopefulness for others. Fair days have no silver-lined clouds. God's smile is not half so sweet in the day of prosperity. Angels' visits are made in the night. Resurrections occur among the tombs. Bare the heart to the giver of all that is worth having, and then reach forth thy hand and take what it may please him to put within thy reach. Thank God if any power you have, and return him the best use of it possible throughout life's pilgrimage. There can arise no fears for him who looks life square in the face and lays himself out for what God has put in him. The stones that threaten to crush will be made steps in the stairway up to the top. No man can be kept from being a man. The time may be longer, the difficulties may delay the consummation, but sooner or later that man made right inside and outside will stand forth the admiration of the world.

(2) No such anomaly exists in nature as the happy union of faulty character with high destiny. This statement seems to be contradicted in history. There have arisen here and there in the history of our planet what promised to be a star of the first magnitude, whose speedy career and dazzling splendor have marked the page of history with a certain glow that might be misunderstood by some for great merit. Here, as everywhere, let us be cautioned against supposing that notoriety is renown. And let it be remembered that infamy is often world-writ for fame. No astronomer would write among the stars, whose path around our world is radiant with interest and nightly emblazoned by the presence of him whose plastic hand gave them their place, the meteoric hap-hazard that has shot through the air, and striking out through space has burned its way along shedding consternation and dismay, till imperious law ends its wild career, and explodes it, the helpless victim of its own lawlessness. Neither does universal history contain among the true and the noble the names of the notorious whose career is marked by ambition and rapine. Well might the Son of God ask, "Do men gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles?" Some men's names live only because they are associated with others that are worthy to live. As some one has said of Judas Iscariot, whose name will be known to the end of time because his infamy is connected with the imperishable "Jesus of Nazareth." Men are coming to recognize as never before the worth of men who are true, but never has the world been so blind to virtue that the luster of worthy character was wholly lost. Never has it, nor can it be possible to rank the true and the false. The corrupt and the pure have ever been distinct. The stream of life that refreshes succeeding generations must flow from a pure fountain. Nor murky, miasmatic, stagnant slough will ever give forth the limpid waters human beings need.

II.—No man knows in what department of human activity his highest possibilities may be achieved.

It is a passion of our times to select a calling and warp the life to suit it. Without aiming a shaft at technological education, in truth it must be said that great care will be required if it does not foster such tendency. May not many of the horrible misfits in the vocations be traced to this unwise lack of selection. Like the architect quarries the material for his structure, human beings are shaped up to fit in the human edifice—but not like the architect do we select with reference to suitableness and natural aptitude. How many flounder about at this and the other vocation till kind providence by some unknown law points out the place for which they were made. There is some one thing for which every one is best suited, and in this he will reach his utmost possibilities. This one providential calling ought to be sought with all diligence. Sometimes you see one who supposes himself to be a genius, and capable of far more than ordinary men, so he occupies his vast capacities with several callings together. I remember a friend of mine who was a farmer, a conductor of a saw mill, the superintendent of a mercantile establishment, and an advocate at the bar, besides a minister of the gospel, the pastor of four churches. With the mind and energies thus divided it is utterly impossible ever to know in what department of work he would best succeed. Especially is it true of very young men and boys that the vaguest notions of life work haunt them. It must be safer and better to leave the matter unsettled till maturer years, and then decide with carefulness and the advice of the wisest friends. There is one exception, and but one, to the general principles here insisted upon. There is one calling that is by many sometimes associated with the professions, and spoken of as if it should be entered upon from the same motives that lead men to enter the other vocations of life. I enter my solemn protest. When the mighty God lays the hand of choice upon you to preach his gospel, one of the greatest questions in life is settled. From God Almighty's decision there is no appeal. Aptitudes, qualifications, likes and dislikes are out of the question. One only open road is before you. Never was it, and never will it be "to Nineveh or to Tarshish." It is only to Nineveh. Go by way of the ship and the whale if you like, but to Nineveh you shall go. While in some circles it is regarded as a condemnation of life, and a sort of confiscation of prospects to be called of God to preach, I do not so regard it. If it shall be your privilege to spend your days on earth in that calling, thank heaven for the honored distinction and equip yourself for the blessed work with all diligence, and humbly committing yourself to the work do what you can to bring this lost world into fellowship with God, remaining that no other sphere affords a wider or more elevated opportunity for the exercise of the highest gifts and the most elaborate preparation. I warn any ambitious young man against the displeasure of God if he should assume unbidden the sacred duties of the ministry of the gospel, and I welcome such as God has called to that brotherhood composed of men, who as a body are unsurpassed in scholarship, eloquence, manhood and manliness by any other calling on earth.

(1) The most difficult of all questions for a young man to decide is what he is most fitted for, and whether he is fitted for anything. I remember so distinctly how the blood ran hot in my little veins, as I saw the soldiers drilled for the war. I expected to be a soldier. Many a noble boy fired by the same silly feeling slipped away from home, and now sleeps far away, the place where he lies unmarked by so much as his name.

There are two distinct tendencies—one shown by a certain class of young men to whom many appropriate epithets have been applied. Some are "swell-heads," some "up-starts," but I prefer a descriptive title given to such characters by an old-time mountaineer who called them "striped breeches." These suppose themselves capable of the discharge of any responsibility, and hesitate only to decide which will furnish the shortest road to fame. And the other class of young men, possessing of immaturity, self-distrustful, tremble at the approach of every real duty, and linger on the threshold of manhood until they are pressed into service. Of this latter class I speak. There are fearful responsibilities connected with all real life, and the powers and aptitudes are all untried. It is therefore natural that a candid young man should shudder and hesitate. When it is said remembered that the first effort of some of the very work for which they were made is so utterly abortive. I have seen a young man in his first effort at public speaking have his neck swell until it burst his collar button off, who afterwards made an effective and impressive speaker. I remember now, as if it had been yesterday, my first attempt to fire a gun. It was Christmas eve, and we had a long flint and steel rifle. My older brother had secured some powder, but no lead, so he shaved a peg of wood to fit the gun which he used for a bullet. The gun was loaded, the powder put in the pan, and having no flint for the gun, it was arranged for John to touch the powder with the red end of a stick. The piece was fixed up on a board, the gun levelled across the fence,

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 27, 1894.

Rev. C. T. BAILEY, Editor and Proprietor.
J. C. CADDELL, Assist and Correspondent.

If you are interested in education send for Dr. Taylor's article with addenda in pamphlet form. It is now being sent all over the State. If you receive more than one copy of the pamphlet send it to someone who is interested in education. And if you have read the article, send it to some one who has not. Every citizen of North Carolina should study this question to day, in order that his actions may not be in his own light hereafter.

How raw of us take God at his word! And that means how few have faith. The Bible from beginning to end is accepted by Baptists as the whole word of God. There are promises in that Bible that are seldom tested; and that they are not tested is a reproach to its Author. We cannot doubt God and be saved, which means we cannot doubt the promises of his Word; and if we live a Christian life it is impossible to avoid testing those promises. For our every action should be a test of God's promises.

One who hordes money in life and dying leaves large bequests doesn't add any testimony to God's promise of return of bread cast upon the waters. And by this is demonstrated that same lack of faith that is now delaying the coming of the kingdom of God on earth. We need men who will be willing to sell all they have for Christ; and that is all we need to effect a millennium of peace and good-will. How few show their faith in God's Word by trusting entirely in his promises.

There would be no need for fraternal orders, secret or open, among Christians if Christians were Christ-like. When a Christian manifests a fraternal spirit to his brother Odd Fellows or Masons, etc., and shows no evidence of a sense of Christian brotherhood we are tempted to doubt his Christianity. Had the commandment of Christ been observed by Christians from the beginning, a need of other orders would not have been felt. Thus these orders are growths of a negative cause and not a positive demand. Of all orders on earth Christianity has most in it to bind its followers; for all others are reared either on business, personal or selfish bases, while it is based on love to fellowman and the unifying love of Christ.

A local alumni association of Wake Forest College was organized in Raleigh last Friday night. It is the largest of local Wake Forest alumni associations, and has before it a field of great usefulness.

We earnestly urge the formation of such associations all over the State wherever there are several Wake Forest men. They can do much to aid the College by working for students and in other ways that may seem advisable. Surely if former students of an institution owe it a debt, there is no better way of discharging it than by organized effort in its behalf. And they do owe it a debt that cannot be discharged save by work in its interest.

This number marks the completion of the fifty-ninth volume of the Recorder. We might say much in the premises, but on reflection, it seems to us that after all nothing can speak as our actions have spoken and are speaking. Mere words cannot measure our gratitude to God for his manifold blessings upon us. And promises can by no means so strongly intimate our ambition to more fully serve Him through this medium with each successive issue as our weekly efforts.

The Recorder is now in its prime. It has demonstrated by long life that it is a permanent institution. It has before it an ever enlarging and an equally inviting field of usefulness. We have not done our work alone. The present condition of the paper is as fully due to our denomination as it is to us; for its constituency makes the paper. To do its full work the Recorder should have 20,000 subscribers; and it will have them in time, if those who love it, if those who feel that it is a blessed agency of the gospel of the Son of God will make the effort.

Looking backward we recall many mistakes and triumphs; but we recall nothing for which we do not thank God. Looking forward we can only pray for God's guidance and direction even as we have felt the encouragement of his presence throughout our work.

The Recorder enters its sixtieth year with gratitude to its supporters and with entire good-will to its friends and enemies (if it have any, every where.

A LIFE; NOT AN INCIDENT.

Every one has probably heard people say that they professed religion under some one's preaching at a certain time. The statement, which by common usage has become acceptable, is not a good one. It implies too little. And though some good people may speak it with the intention of conveying the idea that they are professors of religion, it cannot always be understood to mean this. It is a good basis at any rate for what we have to say.

Profession of religion is not an incident, but a life. It is not one action, but every action of life; it is not the occurrence of a day, but the continuous occurrences of the days of our lives. When Paul said "it is no longer I that live, but Christ," he made the best profession of the Christian religion of which we know. And when Christ is not apparent in one's life, the fact that that one professed religion years ago is no evidence that the profession was a profession of real religion, but rather the contrary. This is not falling from grace; for the evidence is that grace was never given.

The world has always tended to the formal in its religions. Roman Catholicism is the great testimony to this fact; but the religion of Baptist churches is not always free from the attachment of too great significance to forms. We accept a member on repentance and profession of faith and observance of the ordinances. But this acceptance should not hinder us from withdrawing fellowship from one, when one's actions are unchristian, when it becomes apparent that one is content to observe the ordinances and make professions, but disregards the commands and the obligations of our religion.

Actions have always spoken louder than words, and if it is possible they speak louder in our religion than elsewhere. We would rather see Christian charity in a man than have him profess faith in Christ and never do a charitable act. We are aware that we are laying much stress on good works, but we are convinced that good works are the unfailing sequence, and, therefore, a testimony to, faith. Lip-service as an evidence of Christianity cannot be compared with the evidence which a self-sacrificing life bears. Many of us have seen lip service until we were disgusted. The reader of a prayer book and the worldly-minded society being are often one and the same. The prayer of long prayers is frequently the doer of little service for the Lord.

To profess faith and observe the ordinances and attend church, and yet refuse to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction and keep one's self unspotted from the world, is not pure religion. God gives us duties other than those essential to joining a church. He tells us to visit the poor, the fatherless and widows; he tells us to preach the gospel to every creature; he tells us to glorify him by living in the likeness of his son who was sent to glorify the Father. Not to do these things is an evidence of a want of faith. And we are not told to do them occasionally. We are expected to live our lives doing them. To send a check to a sick one and to contribute to missions is well as far as it goes; but it is not well enough. Our time is God's; and our time should be given to his glory as well as our money. Naturally people say that they haven't time; but they have. Not that they should be absent from business and become charges on their fellows, but that they may live the Christian religion in their offices and on their farms and visit when they can. To those who cannot go to foreign countries God has given both the poor and the sick and the home-heathen; and they should not be neglected as long as Christ's example is not forgotten.

Being a member of a church, being a professor of religion cannot save any one. These things may be evidences of salvation, but they are not guarantees. One act does not make one a Christian. And yet we are told "'tis only heaven that may be had for the asking." We do not doubt it, if the seeker asks in the right spirit. Then God grants salvation through his son; and not only salvation, but he gives one grace to live in the likeness of Christ.

We are convinced that every professor of religion should read as soon as possible the life of Jesus as told by the New Testament. Ignorance of that life may have led many to profess Christianity when they were professing something else.

It may seem that we are preaching an ideal religion. So are we, for Christ's life is the ideal of all Christians. It would be shameful indeed for one to seek salvation through Christ and not desire to live the life of the source of salvation. Christ-likeness in every action is the profession of religion that all Christians need,—not lip-service, not professions, but actions from the beginning to the end of our lives. We cannot conceive of a person sincerely seeking membership in God's kingdom and not working for the kingdom, serving God. We cannot abide the idea of one seeking salvation of Christ, professing faith in his power and rejoicing in his glory, and not seeking to become as he was.

If all Christians on earth differed in some respect relative to the Bible, having this interpretation and that, deeming this thing essential and another incidental, but were agreed that Christ came on the earth to glorify God by bringing mankind back to him, by imbuing men with the fraternal spirit, the progress of the kingdom would not be as slow as it is now. The delay cannot be charged to the divided state of Christianity, but to the inaction of those who profess one thing but do others. Were we all one, and yet inactive, our progress would be slower than it is. It is faith that is needed, and not unity. There should be no differences; but in our opinion faith is the only remedy for them, and, therefore, we should seek faith first and unity afterwards. Be as good a Baptist as the Bible tells you to be, and the cause will not suffer for want of unity, so far as you are concerned.

We hear much of would-be modern Pauls. We do not know the man who does not admire Paul's character, nor one who would not be a Paul. It seems to us that such an attainment is not impossible. Paul was a wretched, prejudiced, narrow man once; and when he changed his course he was faced with many barriers. He never had half the opportunities for evangelization that the least of men now has. And yet his life was as successful as human life can be, his work as finished and his death as triumphant as that of any man. Paul was great not by his own might. He would not have been great had he not been converted. And in his growth in greatness there is a secret that all should know. His Christian life was directed by three forces: "This one thing I do," "It is no more I that live," "To me to live is Christ." When one has become so full of Christ that one can say these words in sincerity we have a Paul in every sense of the word.

If there were no other evidences of the increasing menace of the sale of spirituous liquors in our State, the recent assembling of a body of men devoted to that damning traffic would be sufficient. The daily conduct of liquor-dealers is a continual crime against society and a menace to the general weal. Such being the case it cannot be doubted that, were they powerful enough, crime against the law would not be feared by them. They have combined in North Carolina for power. They have used their small power in the past to break the moral law. Is it not patent that they only need more power, which they now seek, to break the statue law with impunity?

The time has come when a liquor-dealer should be made a civil outlaw as well as a moral one. There may be differences of opinion as to how to effect this; there is no longer room for doubt that it must be effected some how. If nothing else is done the local power to prohibit and present the sale of liquor can be made more thorough as set forth in the plan which we published some months ago, and which we heartily endorse.

This is a truth: If the people of this State will not protect their homes when local power is given, without the remotest objectionable feature, a general law will not be upheld. And for this reason we desire and shall do what we can to have the local power of the people, the power to protect our homes, extended.

The infidel Hume once said that the life of one man is of no more consequence to the rest of the world than that of an oyster. The statement is a fine testimony, a key-note, of the infidel idea that men are no more than animals.

While it may seem that some certain man is not of any consequence to humanity, it is not true of those who live the Christian life. Christians live for the sake of others, and there are many to whom life would be bitter—an hereditary disease, some one has said—were it not for Christ's presence in their fellows. And those who live in Christ's likeness are of utmost consequence to their fellows for this reason.

That one's ambitions must be indeed debased who does not desire to make a lasting impression on mankind. And herein is the cause of the effort of men to do creative work. The writer of a poem, the author of a great book, the sculptor of an inspiring statue or the painter of a great picture lives and wields an influence as long as men live. But greater than these is he whose life is an inspiration.

A young man who had been associated with us many years died last week. He was a clerk and men thought of him more as an instrument than as the embodiment of a force that cannot die. And yet he lived such a life of meekness, purity, faith and holiness that his memory will be an inspiration as long as those who know him shall live; and in their lives, let us hope, that inspiration will be transmitted. The Christian example of Wm. E. Pell will be a potent influence on earth when his name has become unknown to men. A greater immortality, a greater work can no one seek. Truly could he say "thy gentleness hath made me great."

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Dr. N. B. Cobb received one person for baptism at Dunn on the 17th.

....Rev. J. Paul Spence has returned from Crozer Theological Seminary, Penn., and is at Elizabeth City.

....A large excursion of the two Baptist Sunday schools of Durham was made to Chase City, Va., last week.

....About thirty five accessions have been made to the Grace Street Church, Richmond, Va., in the past few weeks.

....Rev. Dr. J. B. Taylor has recently baptized thirty-eight persons into the fellowship of the Baptist church at Salem, Va.

....Prof. Whitescarver of Roanoke, Va., has accepted the professorship of mathematics in Hollins Institute, Virginia.

....Rev. A. M. Simms has begun a series of sermons in the Raleigh Baptist Tabernacle on "Crises in Individual Lives."

....Rev. D. M. Austin began assisting Rev. E. F. Jones in a series of meetings at the latter's church in Gastonia last Sunday.

....Bro. J. R. Edwards has our thanks for an invitation to the closing exercises of Colgate University, Hamilton, N. Y., June 21st.

....The department of Pedagogics in Mercer University, Ga., Dr. J. B. Gambrell president, is to be opened to both men and women.

....Rev. Jno. Stout, who went to the Dallas Convention as a delegate from South Carolina, was taken sick there and died the 17th inst.

....Closing exercises of Richmond College occurred last week. Dr. C. S. Gardner and Robert J. Burdette made addresses to the graduates.

....The Executive Committee appointed to fix the place of meeting for some of the Associations ought to act at once and let us give notice thereof.

....Robeson Institute is to be considerably enlarged before next session, says the Robesonian. This institution held its first closing exercises this year.

....Bro. A. J. S. Thomas of the South Carolina Courier has received the title of Doctor of Divinity from Columbian University, Washington, D. C.

....Dr. T. E. Skinner returned last week to Raleigh from a two week's stay at Morehead City. While there he occupied Bro. Hiden's pulpit on one occasion.

....Read Dr. Taylor's remarks in this issue. He states the Baptist principle and the Baptist idea of citizenship so well and so definitely that no one can be in doubt after reading his article.

....We were glad to see Prof. E. P. Hobgood on his way to the Teachers' Assembly, of which he is president, last week. He says the outlook for the Oxford Female Seminary next year is very good.

....If any of our readers know of a better way of celebrating the sixtieth anniversary of the Recorder than by sending us a new subscriber or renewing their subscriptions, we wish they would write us of it.

....Dr. J. W. Carter preached a strong missionary sermon in the Raleigh First church Sunday morning, and a collection followed. This example may well be followed by every church in the State.

....We have received the minutes of the eighty-ninth annual session of the Chowan Association, which met May 22–24th. Copies may be had of Bro. Lycurgus Hofler, clerk of the Association, Gatesville, N. C.

....We are grateful to the Guilford Battleground Committee for an invitation to attend its seventh annual celebration July 4th next on the battlefield at Guilford Court House. An excellent program has been arranged.

....We sympathize deeply with Bro. F. F. Cohoon of Elizabeth City in the death of his wife. No one could do more than she did to make visitors to the last Convention at home. May God comfort the family in this affliction.

....It is announced that Prof. E. McK. Goodwin, formerly of Raleigh, now superintendent of the Western State Asylum for deaf mutes at Morganton, and Miss Maud F. Broadway will be married on the 30th inst.

....Our secular exchanges contain an account of a great epidemic raging in China. We hope that our missionaries may avoid it. How much more should we pray and work that the unsaved may yet have time to prepare!

....Rev. J. A. Hoyle writes: "I baptized two converts into the fellowship of Long Creek church, Gaston county, last Sunday (17th.) This church is now in a prosperous condition. Brother Smith's articles will do good."

....Rev. C. C. Brown's article in this issue seems to us peculiarly timely. College president's have been giving advice by the wholesale for several weeks, and Bro. Brown takes the occasion to give them a liberal dose of their own medicine.

....Wake Forest College closed its fifty-ninth session week before last; the Recorder closes its fifty-ninth year this week, and its editor is proud to say that he can celebrate the beginning of his sixtieth year in such distinguished company.

....We learn from an article in the Hendersonville Times that Rev. G. H. Detwiler has leased the Judson College property for a term of ten years and will reopen it as an undenominational institution. Bro. Detwiler is, we believe, from Illinois.

....Rev. Edward S. Pearce was ordained to the full work of the gospel ministry at the call of Eureka Baptist church, Gates county, June 15th. Elders W. B. Waff and W. P. Jordan and deacons W. W. Knight, Fred Brinkley and T. M. Matthias officiated.

....Rev. E. M. Poteat, who preached the baccalaureate sermon at Wake Forest last week, has been granted a vacation by his New Haven church, which he will largely spend in our State. In his absence, Dr. Geo. B. Vosburgh will supply his regular pulpit in part.

....Bro. E. W. Tatum of Jerusalem, N. C., informs us that he has been taking and reading the Recorder for fifty-two years, which is as complimentary to him as it is to the Recorder. So far as we have seen the Recorder holds the record in this State in the matter of old subscribers.

....Two daughters of Bro. Sheriff Page of this county were married at the home of their father at Morrisville last week. Miss Cora Page to Mr. J. C. Cooper of Rowan county, and Mary L. Page to Julian E. Johnson of Kentucky. We extend congratulations and best wishes.

....Interest in "How Far Ought a State to Undertake to Educate" is growing on every hand. We hear more of it every day. This is as it should be. Interest should be aroused until no man in North Carolina can say he is ignorant of this grave and practical question of State policy.

....Bro. Wm. T. Jones of Goldsboro writes, June 19th: "On Saturday and Sunday I travelled thirty-four miles and preached four times. Bro. Jenkens is doing well in Goldsboro. He draws, but without sensationalism. He preached a good doctrinal sermon on "close communion" recently.

....Rev. H. A. Brown of the First Baptist church, Winston, is overworked, and will go to the country to rest. We were glad to hear Bro. Brown say when he came down to Wake Forest that his health had greatly improved; and we hope there will be further improvement during his vacation.

....Bro. Willis Holding of Wake Forest may proudly boast of a unique record: for twenty years he has had a representative son in Wake Forest College. Beginning in 1876 with Newton and ending with Solomon in 1894, he had six sons educated there, all but one graduating; and all of them have become successful men.

....Rev. Benj. C. Lampley of Sumerton, S. C., died at his home June 19th. He was at one time pastor of the church at Greenville, Miss. Rev. J. N. Booth of Union held the funeral services. The Courier (S. C.) was called on to announce the death of three able servants of God last week. May God raise up others to take the places of these men.

....In the educational campaign there must be constant, aggressive, bold, hopeful agitation. This will bring the denominational colleges the victory as certainly as the next Legislature meets. The people are with us, and the councillors in the Winston policy are confused and are even now on the run.—C. Durham.

....Bro. B. H. Carter of Apex made us a pleasant visit last Monday. Bro. Carter graduated at Wake Forest this year, and will probably teach during the coming year with the purpose of attending the Louisville Seminary and entering the ministry as soon as possible. Bro. Carter is at present acting business manager of the Wake Forest Student.

....Rev. Jas. I. Kendrick, a graduate of Wake Forest College and the Louisville Seminary, well-known also to our readers as an occasional contributor, was ordained to the gospel ministry in the Tryon Street Baptist church, Charlotte, last Sunday afternoon. Bro. Kendrick will accept the call to Mt. Airy. We welcome him to the Lord's great work in North Carolina.

....We were glad to see Rev. Hight C. Moore, recently of Winston, and his promising young brother, Rev. Jesse D. Moore of Beaufort, in Raleigh last week. Bro. Hight Moore will go to Monroe to preach once or twice for the Baptist people there; Bro. Jesse Moore goes to his former home, Globe, N. C., where he will rest two weeks. Bro. Moore brings encouraging reports from Beaufort and from Bro. Hiden's pastorate at Morehead City.

....Brethren C. M. Billings and J. R. Moore, ministerial students at Wake Forest last session, passed through Raleigh on the way to their homes Monday. The former, with Rev. J. C. Yates, represented the College in the medal contest before Teachers' Assembly at Morehead.

....In an early issue—probably next week—Dr. Durham will begin a series of short articles, to be indefinitely continued in these columns, on the educational question. They should be read as widely as possible, as the Doctor has some facts and figures on hand of greatest significance that but very few are acquainted with.

....We have received a copy of the American Baptist Publication Society's prize story—"A Mexican Ranch"—by Mrs. Janie P. Duggan of Wake Forest, formerly missionary of the Southern Baptist Convention to Mexico. It is beautifully bound, printed and illustrated. A hasty glance at its contents reveals evidences of great care on the part of its author. An extended review will appear in an early issue.

....Rev. L. C. Broughton writes from Roanoke, Va., June 23d: "Am now engaged in a gracious revival in the Y. M. C. A. Tabernacle of this city. The meeting began in our North West mission. Space was at once in demand, so we went to the present quarters. The meeting is gracious. Christian people of all denominations are working. I am preaching every night, besides doing my regular pastoral work."

....Rev. Geo. A. Lowell, who graduated from Wake Forest College in recent years, and has lately been attending Crozer Theological Seminary, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Baptist church at Clayton. Bro. Lowell purposes returning to Crozer next fall and taking a degree there next June. He writes from Clayton: "We have a very neat church building, and a great deal of material to work upon. We enter this work with sanguine hopes, recognising that it is a difficult one."

....We are grieved to learn of the death at Yorkville, S. C., on the 17th inst., of Dr. Richard H. Griffith, who some years ago was pastor of the First Baptist church in Charlotte, N. C. Bro. Griffith was widely known and wielded a broad influence. He had served the denomination as Corresponding Secretary of the South Carolina State Mission Board and also as Financial Agent of Furman University. The state of his health had prevented active participation in work for several months. He was a man of consecrated energy.

....Bro. D. Rich, Winston, N. C., writes: "The facts as set forth by Bro. S. F. Conrad (regarding Bro. Moore and the Broad Street Church), and published in your paper are, in my opinion, true, and really as they exist; but in justice to the good people of our church I think he should have stated farther that we paid Bro. Moore's salary in full to July 1st, 1894. But for the fact that so many of our people are at this time out of work, we would soon cancel the small debt we owe for improvements on our house of worship. We hope very soon to pay this and be in position to call another pastor and carry on the work."

Board of Education.

I wish to call attention to the fact that the Board of Education is in need of funds to carry on the work which has been committed to it. What is that work? "The Board of Education shall, so far as it is able, assist promising and indigent young ministers seeking to prepare themselves for the more efficient preaching of the gospel."

During the past term the Board has been aiding thirty-three young ministers. The contributions so far have not been sufficient to meet expenses, and the session closes with a thousand dollars indebtedness.

But we hope to be able this summer and fall to meet this, and carry on the work without indebtedness. Let the brethren and the churches send up their contributions as soon as they can to Bro. J. D. Boushall, Treasurer, Raleigh, N. C., or have them ready and send them up to their Associations.

Do not all wait to the close of the year. Brethren, help. For Christ's sake help his poor young ministers seeking to prepare themselves for the work to which he has called them. Let all the churches do something.

There are more than a dozen other young ministers who are asking for aid, who seem to be worthy and in need of it. Brethren, what shall we say to them?

How North Carolina Stands.

Dear Brethren of North Carolina:—According to an apportionment of the amount needed to pay off all obligations and support our missionaries in the field this year, we should look to your State from May 1st, 1894, to June 15th, for $1,125 00. In that time we have received $45.15, also $10 from W. N. C. Convention.

"Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." 1 Cor. 16: 2.

The work is the Lord's and we are his.

Fraternally,

Funds to be Sent by a Church to Miss Knight.

At our last monthly conference, June 16th, 1894, held at Eureka church, Chowan Association, the question came up before the church: Shall we continue to contribute to the support of Miss Fannie Knight in China? and it was decided by the church by a majority of twenty-nine against one that we should—by sending our Foreign Mission contribution directly to the missionary from the church.

R. F. KNIGHT.
Wiggins X Roads, June 19, 1894.

To My Baptist Brethren.

I desire to endorse with all my heart the sentiment of Bro. Currin in the last RECORDER that Baptists as a denomination ought not to go into politics. Nay, more, I will go further and say that when any man goes into politics in his capacity as a Baptist, he ceases, to that extent, to be a Baptist.

Some western editor, in blaming Gov. Northen for the appointment of Mr. Walsh, a Catholic, as U. S. Senator, referred to the former as the "Baptist Governor of Georgia." Dr. Gambrell of Mercer University wrote to the paper that Northen was a Baptist and that he was also the Governor of Georgia, but that he was in no sense a Baptist Governor. I liked that very much when I read it.

All through their history in this country, however, Baptists have not hesitated in their conventions and associations to adopt reports and resolutions in regard to many matters which are on one side moral and religious and on the other side economic and political. Had they not done so, religious Freedom would not have triumphed. Semple's History of the Virginia Baptists contains accounts of action taken by the General Committee of Correspondence and the General Association. Not infrequently, have the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina and the Southern Baptist Convention adopted reports on "The State of the Country." There is a great deal of difference between politics, in the sense of party politics, and general questions which affect the happiness and moral advancement of all the people.

And I wish to say once for all that I have had, and intend to have nothing whatever to do with the politics of any party in the protest which we are making against the present educational policy of the State. There is nothing of a partisan nature in this protest. It appeals alike to all people of all parties.

I think that it was clearly shown in last week's paper that the interests of Christian education are imperilled. If this be true, ought not Christians to defend these institutions? If they do not, who will?

A recently published address to the Baptists of North Carolina makes an appeal to them to change their educational policy. It is very remarkable that the University of North Carolina seems at no time for nearly a hundred years, to have concerned itself much about Baptists until they, through their own independent methods, have become comparatively numerous, cultivated, and influential. When, perhaps, the Baptists needed the University, they received little recognition. Now that the University needs the Baptists, they are greatly courted.

Baptists are now reminded that there are several Baptist Trustees of the University. There are about forty Baptist Trustees of Wake Forest. Five Baptists are in the Chapel Hill faculty. That is true. And they are scholars and godly men,—no one doubts that. But there are more than twice that number in the Wake Forest faculty. And Baptist young men do well in their classes at Chapel Hill. Of course they do. That is no such surprise to Baptists as it seems to be to others. They have been doing just that way for many years at Wake Forest. And when they have gone as graduates to Universities in other States, they have often held their own against all comers. Only last week a Baptist, a Wake Forest alumnus, graduated at the head of a class of 271 at the University of Pennsylvania. And of the six Honorary Scholarships just conferred by the Johns Hopkins University on North Carolinians, Wake Forest graduates have won three.

Ought the Baptists of North Carolina to change their educational methods? Let us see. The experimental test is always the best. Actual results are better than theories. It is by their fruits that we discern the relative value of methods.

By building up, and standing by, their own college, Baptists have not only grown in numbers, but have developed wonderfully in all other respects. We are invited to forsake—for it is bound to come to that—a method which has proven its efficiency and value by actual experiment, and to adopt another method. And yet strangely enough, those denominations which have relied on the method now commended to us and have maintained no colleges of their own have never made great growth in numbers.

Would it not be better for the Baptists of North Carolina to walk in the old paths which, so far, have led to marvellous success rather than enter new avenues which have not seemed the best for religious development where they have been tried?

Baptists might get more places and political honors by adopting the advice. But that is not their ambition as a people. Their aim as a religious denomination is to build up the kingdom of heaven in this world and to fit themselves for the next. Yet perhaps the day may not be far distant when the people will repudiate the idea that a man must go to a State school before he can be nominated or elected to the higher offices.

The friends of the several colleges of North Carolina propose to agitate this matter until they get relief. Robert Peel, the great English statesman, said, "Agitation is the marshalling of the conscience of a people for the moulding of its laws." To agitate in this sense and for this purpose, there can be no objection. It seems to be the only hope of the colleges. In February, 1893, a courteous appeal was made in vain to the Trustees of State Schools for a change of policy. Then appeals were made to the Legislature through the joint committee of education. The only hope now is to inform the people and urge them to select for their lawmakers men regardless of party who will represent their views on educational questions.

This is no "little Baptist fight against Chapel Hill," as a newspaper correspondent wrote not long ago.

Those who make the protest think that they are standing for a great principle. If that principle shall be ignored, several Christian colleges will be seriously injured. If that principle shall be endorsed, several State institutions will be not injured, but put upon a different basis of support. And their claim to a practical monopoly in supplying certain classes of teachers and available candidates for office will be taken away, as, in the name of justice and right, it should be.

Baptists are not ashamed of the part they have taken in the discussion, but they claim no monopoly in it. On Dec. 4 h, 1893, the Western Methodist Conference assembled in Charlotte passed the following preamble and resolutions:

"Whereas, It is true that from the foundation of the commonwealth of North Carolina, the principal work in education has been done chiefly by the church, and by private enterprise under the endorsement and support of the church; and whereas, we believe it to be in accord with neither the will of the church nor a wise statecraft for this work to be abandoned by the Church and wholly transferred to the State; and whereas, the schools of the church, and therein, the cause of higher education are crippled by the present scope and plan of operating the higher State schools; and whereas, we greatly prefer a proper adjustment of these relations by the State Legislature to a progressive antagonism to these institutions themselves; therefore

"Resolved 1. That we do hereby regretfully but urgently petition the Legislature of the State of North Carolina, next to assemble, to establish such an order in the higher schools under its control as that will obviate this conflict of work and interests.

"2. That a committee be appointed by the Chair, whose duty it shall be to visit the next session of the Legislature and lay before it in behalf of the Conference our complaints and the substance of this petition; and meanwhile to secure a proper discussion of the subject and to seek the co-operation of other religious bodies in accomplishing the ends of this petition.

"3. That we invite the co operation of other religious bodies within the State by the appointment of such agencies as they may deem best.

4 That in making this petition, we do not contemplate any injury to our State schools within what we regard the rightful and proper limits of such institutions, but rather their improvement, as well as the protection of the interests which we represent."

And unsolicited letters have reached me from men of various religious beliefs expressing their sympathy with the views expressed in my articles. Baptists are certainly not going to have anything to do with political issues in their capacity as Baptists. A man really ceases to be Baptist if he does that. But the overwhelming majority of Baptists in North Carolina are not going to allow their rights as citizens to be ignored. And in the exercise of these rights they are going to protect Christian education, by whomsoever it is provided.

The most important question before the people of the State now is the educational question. And it will continue to be so until it is settled. Compared with this, it is a matter of minor importance as to what men are "honored" by election to high positions.

There are good and able men in every part of the State who are thoroughly in earnest about this matter. They will see to it that the people are informed, though the secular press should stand together in silence or in opposition.

Emphasis must be laid upon the fact that relief must come from the people. If they express no opinion, things will go on as they have been going. There is not much use in going before the Legislature unless the people shall have first spoken.

At the time when universal free education at Chapel Hill was pressed for adoption by the Legislature, an eminent citizen of North Carolina wrote me a letter from Raleigh in which he said: "The difficulty of the situation is in the fact that the men in the Legislature who have aspirations for future political promotion (and all of them of brains have) are afraid to put themselves forward in opposition to a measure desirable to, and sought by the University authorities, as they have the reputation of killing and of making alive politicians and office-seekers."

A prominent gentleman of another State wrote me some months ago: "The truth is we can do nothing. Our Legislature is made up of lawyers educated at our State University, and when anything is to be done in the Legislature, Prof. —— and Prof. —— come, and have anything done they wish."

Those who in the interests of State schools ignore the claims of the Christian colleges will only laugh in their sleeves when we seek relief as we did from the last Legislature; but when the people with minds informed and consciences aroused shall begin to speak, it may be next year, it may be years to come—then relief will be given.

Board of Missions and Sunday-schools.

A meeting of the Board of Missions and Sunday schools will be held in Mission Room, 118 Fayetteville street, at 8 15 p. m. Tuesday, July 3rd, 1894.

J. C. SCARBOROUGH, Pres. of Board.
C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec. of Convention.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the advertisement of C. B. Webb of Statesville, N. C. The success which has come to his business is the legitimate result of the energy and honest dealing which has always characterized the man who now seeks wider patronage for his business. We know Mr. Webb, and can with confidence recommend him to our readers and the public generally.

On the sixth page, Messrs. W. H. & R. S. Tucker & Co. tell our readers about "Tailor-made Dresses." These dresses are made in the latest styles, and orders therefor will be promptly filled.

Your Proportion.

Dear Brethren.—In arranging for the work of the year, it is our duty to consider carefully just what we have resting upon us. We have thought it best to take you into this calculation with us. Our indebtedness, at the beginning of the year, was $30,000, the monthly expenditures with our present forces is $10,000, or $120 000 for the year, making a total of $150,000 to be raised this year. Shall we raise it, or call some of our missionaries home? We have already reduced, with their consent, the salaries of many of the missionaries. Now let our people enlarge their gifts. Some of the missionaries have consented to take off $100 or more from their salaries. How many at home will give that much? The Corresponding Secretary has gone carefully over the States, and has made the following apportionment of what has been thought best to ask from each State for the year:

Alabama	$ 19,000
Arkansas	2,400
W. Arkansas and Indian Territory	600
District of Columbia	1,200
Florida	1,800
Georgia	18,000
Kentucky	18,000
Louisiana	2,400
Maryland	10,200
Mississippi	4,800
Missouri	9,000
North Carolina	9,000
South Carolina	15,000
Tennessee	6,000
Texas	15,000
Virginia	21,000
Other States	600
	$150,000

This estimate is, of course, binding on none. It is hoped that in many cases the brethren will be dissatisfied, on the ground that they have been rated too low. In each State, we expect to show what has been done each month, in the denominational papers, so that you can see what your State has given. This is your work, which the Master has entrusted to you, and it is but meet that we should keep informed, so that you can keep interested.

Would it not be well for two hundred pastors in your State to take a collection at once, and get your State up into the front line, and what is better, get our Board finances in better shape.

Fraternally, R. J. WILLINGHAM,
Cor. Secretary.

Dr. Taylor's Article.

Dear Recorder:—I have just received a copy of Dr. Taylor's article in pamphlet form, and have read it carefully. I wish to express, as one citizen, the profoundest admiration for the invincible character of the facts and arguments submitted by Dr. Taylor. Those who do not desire to join him in the conclusion he reaches do well, and will continue to do well not to give the article an honest and studious consideration.

If a man be intellectually honest, and at the same time candidly patriotic, and study this subject with Dr. Taylor, he will admit that it is proven that for the State in the exercise of its just powers to attempt to furnish Christian education, or aid in furnishing it, by appropriation or otherwise, is neither right, nor expedient, nor possible. I am proud that the one who has established this reputation for Christian like and statesman like argument happens to be a Baptist. Yet there are many in this State, as is well-known, who bitterly oppose the views set forth. We have looked for an attempt at refutation. The silence is oppressive but not mysterious. More than this, as certain as truth gets a hearing in North Carolina, these principles are going to prevail. It will not be to morrow. They will not find easy acceptance with our politicians at first. The social power of the Episcopal church will oppose them. The weight of presumption in favor always of an established order of things will stand in their way. For many years these same forces withstood the struggle against State aid to Church in this State. This is no new fight and no new enemy. But truth beat its way through at length. That's the habit of truth. Such is its power. There are many things to encourage it now.

The State's niggardly care of its ignorant children has been too long a confession not to be understood by the people; and it will be found that they do not believe that appropriations for education should be for the benefit of a few. It will also then appear that with Dr. Thomas Hume's declaration before the Convention last December that if one must perish, the State University or the common schools, let the common schools go but the University live, the real citizenship of North Carolina does not concur. The young men of the State, of whom 125 each year go away from our colleges unbiased by the hope of political preferment held out by the University, will see to it that future Legislatures check the unnecessary and unjust use of the people's money. They will see to it that all possible provision be made for the children of the people in the common schools. If the University has friends enough to prevent this consummation, it has friends enough easily to endow it most liberally.

Dr. Taylor has done the cause of education a service that will be appreciated more and more as the vital nature of this question comes to be understood, and the facts established in this pamphlet receive that wide dissemination which the friends of Christian education should make possible.

JNO. E. WHITE.
Edenton, June 20, 1894.

In response to your request for opinions upon the article from the trenchant pen of Prof. C. E. Taylor, on "How far Ought a State Undertake to Educate?" I would only ask a careful perusal of the same by every man and woman in the State. The light is turned on as to what we have and how it should be retained.

I hope the pamphlet will be widely read.

Funeral Inquiry from Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—During his life time, my father, Thomas Lemuel Barkett Whibby, has often told me that the Lemuel Burkett in his name was for a relative, Rev. Lemuel Burkett, a Baptist preacher. My grandfather, too, I believe, had a brother who was a Baptist preacher.

My father was born near Hertford in Perquimans county in 1810 or 1811. If there are persons now living in North Carolina who remember the Baptist preachers of that period, and especially the persons named, I would be greatly pleased to hear from them.

Yours in the faith,
W. S. WHITNEY.

and all was ready. When the powder was touched it flashed up in the pan, I dropped the gun, fell back in a brier-patch, the gun discharged straight up, and John gave me a sound thrashing for losing his wooden bullet. Now of course I say it modestly, but I afterwards made a very respectable rifleman.

"Lives of great men all remind us
We may make our lives sublime,
And departing leave behind us
Footprints in the sands of time."

(2) Honest effort, the hand of Providence and the call of duty will settle the question with tolerable accuracy.

Here are mentioned three things that are really three parts of one thing. Honest effort is often veiled Providence, and the call of duty is the muffled voice of God. If a young man will do honestly the first thing that duty points out to be done, the next thing will wait his doing. There is an unseen hand that guides.

Certainly there are decided tastes which are often the Providential means of leading us to the calling for which we are intended, and yet taste is more often accounted for on other grounds than natural bent. In an address of this kind, surely it will be allowed to speak the deeper philosophy of the soul, and so I must not do myself the falseness to leave unmentioned the talisman in the possession of every one, "If any man lack wisdom let him ask of God, who giveth liberally and upbraideth not." You have the inestimable privilege of asking the infinite God to guide you into life's calling. He that sees the end from the beginning will direct you if you will. Beyond the ragings of our most fearful tempests, above the heavy settled glooms of earthly damps, high over the destinies of nations and the wrecks of men, hear His steady promise, "I will guide thee with mine eye."

III.—The highest goal lies in the plane of many of your fellows.

As universal science and popular education are the wide spread possession of the the people, more and more will the mass of mankind be levelled up, until distinction in the mass will mean as much as hitherto it has meant to reach the distinguished class. Every man has always been a part of his times now and henceforth much more so. Every one may soon make up his mind to be jostled by his fellows, and he may be thankful if he can keep his head above the danger of suffocation. With all this let no young man be discouraged. We are all levelled up. If your voice may not be heard above the throng, see how sweetly it can be made to harmonize with the chorus. If many others lend their energies in the accomplishments laid out for you, see how gracefully you can return grateful acknowledgements. It is a source of great satisfaction that there are so many good, strong, wise men alive on the earth at one time. May their number be greatly increased, and their power for good government, morality and religion be magnified a thousand fold. Let you and me pray that our lives may not be discordant notes in the hymn of praise that swells from the throng in the earth.

(1). Not now as formerly does one colossal figure stand out as the Pike's Peak of a continent. It will never be again. It is only approached in the field of invention and discovery. Our utilitarian age would not produce idealistic men. Besides, no great question will overshadow all others and furnish the occasion to bring out such men. Men will get very rich and very wise, but only the riches will be spoken of. Men like Edison will become universal. Still the man who owns a phonograph or rents a telephone will not do him homage. Our future wars will be conducted on paper. In the field, in the shop, everywhere, scores of men in almost all essential respect about equal, will live, work and die, and you will be one of them. Formerly history has been written in the biographies of a few men—this will never be possible any more. Our history, and the history of those to come after us, until some great revolution takes place, will be the history of principles embodied in movements of men. Any man who seeks now to place himself on an eminence renders himself ridiculous and becomes the object of newspaper jeers and popular contumely. There are great men living now, even greater men live now than have ever lived. Many complicated questions there are, to be sure, still, but the vigilant press makes all knowledge common, and all of us know so nearly all that is to be known, that no one man becomes conspicuous. The altitude of the mass has made impossible striking promontories. Praise God if you stand among the mountains of his favor, and do not lament that others stand with you.

(2) Certainly no man will reach his goal from the trunks of his beheaded fellow-pilgrims.

May I hope that no one of you has any such expectation? I do not fear such a deliberate aim. I only am solicitous that you should not seem to do what you would despise. In this age of push and struggle there is constant danger of cultivating the disposition to take care of "Number One." Young man, we are brothers. Our individual careers are interwoven with the destinies of our fellowmen. The Son of God gave the highest rule of human life. The old saying of tradesmen and handicrafts, "Live and let live" has been transformed by the change of a single word and become radiant with the best spirit of all that is best. No longer do men with the highest impulses of life, "live and let live." The spirit of the man capable of laying hold of the highest goal lives and helps live. The best artisan this world can furnish is the man who beats swords into ploughshares and spears into pruning hooks. Have no fears that another man's hand is on your goal. All men who reach goals have them of their own.

The old idea that "there's room at the top" is dimly appreciated until you learn that the race of human achievement is an inverted pyramid, with ample room for all who may reach its sublime heights. Take your fellow up with you and know the ecstasy of having lifted another while you have climbed the rugged steeps.

For the rest, I exhort you young men to keep close to the Nazarene. No achievement in life can be worthy of your best endeavor that may not be laid as a trophy at the feet of the Bleeding One. No aim in life can be worthy to engage you that does not borrow luster from the Carpenter of Nazareth. Commit your ways unto him and dare and do. Let the rays of the Sun of Righteousness gild the goal for which you reach, and all is well.

Young People's Societies.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I have seen a great deal about B. Y. P. U. and young people's societies in general. Both sides have strong men—men who fear God and delight to serve him—for their advocates.

A great many of these "big guns" have had a "say," and I suppose it is in order for the "little fellows" to be heard from. As I am about the least, I'll proceed to "say on."

I am unqualifiedly opposed to young people's societies for the following reasons: first, there is no necessity for such organizations; second, there is neither precept for, nor example of, such organizations.

The main argument in favor of societies is, "The times demand the organization of our young people." The "times" will eventually "demand" no religion, viewing it from a certain standpoint. Are we to suppose there were no young people in the Apostles' days? It would not be safe to make that declaration. Did the young people of that day need societies? We have no record of such need. Do the young people of the present need what those of the past did not? If some brother will prove that societies were needful then, I will at once change positions.

But they are heard to inquire, "How are we going to instruct our young people in the doctrines, &c."? I ask, how have they been instructed? Was the instruction which our fathers received of an inferior grade? Who has instructed the present generation that it has become so wise as to realize something never before realized—that former instruction is insufficient? It seems to me that if our past history has been a success, we may fully expect our future to be the same. But say they, "We have so advanced that we can't afford to rely upon the means once used." Why? Has there been a failure? If so, Christ was not a true prophet, for he said, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

But "them tother folks" they say. "We must organize for self protection." If other denominations want societies, let them organize. They have had experience in society work. Shall we forsake the "old way" that has been so abundantly blessed of God, and follow them? The church is enough for us; all we can do can be done in the church. Societies are human institutions and tend to rob the church, the bride, of at least a part of missions. Let's have as little machinery as possible.

In love,
Carson, N. C. A. W. SETZER.

The National Evangelization Society.

Our organization is now on its feet and at work. We have contributors from the North and the South, and the hearty co-operation of good people everywhere. I have long seen the necessity of some organized effort in this work. There are many men who are roaming at large through the Lord's harvest field trampling the wheat under their feet rather than garnering the sheaves. Many others who really mean well, are not sound in their theology, or else have exceedingly objectionable methods. In view of these things, and the ever-increasing need, in the times upon which we have fallen, to have the gospel pure and simple, preached throughout the land, I entered upon this work, called to it, as I honestly believe, by the great Lord of the harvest; my object being to select men as far as possible free from objection, and who are already favorably known by their works. We are now making up a program for the next year's work, and happy to say that we can furnish to the brethren who need help, evangelists who will do good work.

As the question of pay often arises, arrangements have been made which save the preacher and the churches from embarrassment. I undertake to pay the salaries, and only ask to have the churches where our evangelists work, take a collection for the general work of the Society. I hope that the brethren will communicate with me before engaging their help.

Mr. Spurgeon once remarked that "no pastor should do his own revival work."

Our Saviour sent them out two and two together, to share the burdens as well as double the efficiency of the workers, and he also said that the "sower and the reaper rejoice together." The gospel plan is to have the sower and the reaper, and it seems to me that this is carried out when a good evangelist goes to help the pastor.

I ask the sympathy and prayers of the Lord's people everywhere in this effort to spread the gospel throughout the country.

The year 1894 will be known in the history of the church as one of the greatest revival years since the day that Christ ascended to the right hand of God. It only remains for us to bestir ourselves, for there is "a sound of a going," and the Lord leads his hosts to the battle.

Fraternally yours,

I am content if Thou but lead the way,
Whether it ends in life and health,
Or slow decay;
All ways to Thee are bright,
To me are dark as night;
Choose Thou the way.

Only I beg to feel, Saviour divine,
The pressure of Thy hand so warm and strong
Fast holding mine;
And hearing oft Thy voice,
I ever can rejoice,
A child of Thine.

There are two precious words often found in the mouth of Christ: "Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." "Whatsoever ye ask in my name, that will I do." "Whosoever" is on the outside of the gate, and lets in all who choose. "Whatsoever" is on the inside, and gives to those who enter the free range of all the region and treasures of grace. "Whosoever" makes salvation free. "Whatsoever" makes it full.—Presbyterian Observer.

A FRIEND

Speaks through the Beothuck (Me.) Register, of the beneficial results he has received from a regular use of Ayer's Pills. He says: "I was feeling sick and tired and my stomach seemed all out of order. I tried a number of remedies, but none seemed to give me relief until I was induced to try the old reliable Ayer's Pills. I have taken only one box, but I feel like a new man. I think they are the most pleasant and easy to take of anything I ever used, being so finely sugar-coated that even a child will take them. I urge upon all who are in need of a laxative to try Ayer's Pills. They will do good."

The College President—His Work and Qualifications.

BY C. D. BROWN, SUMTER, S. C.

Please write it down where you can see it, that I have no special man in my mind, except the ideal president about whom I am writing. There is no ground, then, for any one to come out against me with swords and staves because he or his friends have concluded that I am making an attack on some one.

The president of a college is the centre and source of its life, in great part, and the wrong man in this office will lead to wrong measures in many directions. Some of my opinions may be mere notions after all, for the two are often confounded. The reader must try to discriminate for himself.

Let me say, then, as to the college president's work, I do not believe he should teach. He should be able to teach; otherwise he can only be an empiricist directing others along lines which he himself could not follow. The fact that he can teach—his ability to teach—will show that he is a man of education and ample knowledge. Some men are elevated to this office on the ground that they are good men, popular, and well thought of. All these things are desirable, but are not enough. He should be a teacher. But, while this is true, there will be no opening for him to exercise his gift if he is to attend to the numerous calls that are made upon him in directing the management of the school and controlling its details.

Nor should the president preach. I mean as the regular pastor of a church. How he will ever get his consent to give up preaching, having been "called" to that work, is a question for him to settle. He may be able to see that a president's work and a preacher's are synonymous; or he may conclude that his occasional sermons and addresses and his morning chapel service fill the requirements of his calling as a preacher. These things he must settle for himself when he turns aside from a pastorate to a college; but it is clear to my mind that a man cannot serve two masters here any better than elsewhere, and the president of a college should not be allowed to preach. If he does preach, there will surely be half-hearted work in one direction or another.

The president should travel much, and keep himself in touch with the people. He should be the people's man, a connecting link between the college and the churches. In this way the people will come to know him, and to love him too, if he is the right kind of man. Almost all business, these days, is run by agents. Drummers flood the earth. The great factories and wholesale houses seem to have an ardent faith in personal work. Their faith is amply rewarded, and so they send out men after other men whom they want to influence. The sons of light are not so wise in their generation, but they ought to be, and this kind of agency business—this drummer's work—should be a part of the work of a college president. The slightest influence will turn a boy's head or his father's head to or from one of our denominational schools, and there should be some one to influence them in the right direction. Two or three hundred dollars expended yearly in visiting communities where boys live who contemplate attending college, would be money wisely spent. This is what is meant by personal work. Wharton, in one of his addresses, tells how he fled once from a battlefield with a Yankee soldier at his heels. In leaping a fence, he fell headlong into a ditch on the other side. When he raised up to look about and take his bearings, he saw his friend the enemy standing over him, pistol in hand, the muzzle of which seemed as large as a flour barrel. He says the Yankee came after him, and he went with him. This, he says, is personal work. I don't know that the college president need wear a brace of revolvers; but if he wishes the boys to come, he should go after them.

I have not discussed at all the work of the president in managing the school, nor shall I do so now. Rather let me add a word about his qualifications.

He must be a composite man—genial in his nature, quick in his mental habit, firm in his opinions, wise in his judgment, and above all, must he know how to give advice. This last is not a common gift, and yet it is one most needed by a man in that office. He becomes the father, for a time, of many boys who are often in perplexity and need help and faithful advice. The habit of some presidents is to hear the case, then discuss both sides of it, the pros and the cons, and throw it back on the boy for decision. This is not the most helpful course. The boy does not come to hear argument, but he wants to know what his duty is in the circumstances. I think this was Gen. R. E. Lee's strong point as a president. After hearing the case, he seemed to reach his conclusion at once, and many of us who were blessed with his presence at Lexington, Va., still cherish the memory of his wise and fatherly counsels so freely and unreservedly given to us. I venture that there are men of to day who are still trying to do just as Gen. Lee advised twenty-five years ago.

The president should know men and know men's faces. It makes a boy feel a little awkward to have to tell his name two or three times in a session to the president. This very same bon homis that brings the president into touch with the boys will give him a hold upon the people. And next to a hold upon the boys, he must have a hold upon the people.

I have an idea, too, that the president should sit at the head of a sort of business bureau and be fully in the confidence of the business men over his State. Men should write to him for clerks and book-keepers and cashiers. I am sure it lies within the range of possibility for him to find places of work for all that go away from his school who are really fitted for work in some department of labor. I see that this will lay on him a heavy burden, much correspondence, and great worry and anxiety; but what of that? It will be a powerful incentive to labor, if a boy knows that in the hands of the president who watches him closely, there is ready for him an appointment to some field of work, where he can earn a living immediately upon leaving college. I have known of more than one boy who, upon leaving college, had his buoyant spirit broken in the hopeless endeavor to find work.

Let me say, in a word, the college president must be a leader, not a follower of men. The spirit of progress and enterprise must characterize him. His brethren may be slow to follow, but he must be quick to lead. He must remember that the outside world will require him to be satisfied with very little—satisfied with things as they are. But he must not consent to this. There should always be something better ahead for which he is striving and to which he is leading the people. The man who goes in the lead must needs go alone. The president must know how to relish this splendid solitude, this life of the explorer and the scout courier, and he should know that when he stops, the whole column behind him will come to a sudden halt. Of course, all this will require a man of stubborn will and iron nerve. All well; let the president be such a man. If he finds that he cannot meet the requirements of his office, then may be there is a smaller place in which he could be made to fit.

The Premium List for the State Fair of 1894.

The premium list for the great State Fair of 1894 is out and ready for distribution. It is by far the handsomest and most comprehensive publication of the kind ever issued in North Carolina. The covers are of rich and brilliant design, and artistically executed in bright colors. The contents are very interesting and well calculated to awaken lethargic sentiment on various subjects.

Among the premium are $100 for the best bale of cotton, with a scale of premiums down $5.00; an $800 piano for the best exhibit by a female school; $50 for the best exhibit made by a lady resident in the State; $50 for the best exhibit in Floral Hall; $50 for the best county exhibit of agricultural products; $50 for the best county exhibit of each of the following: peanuts, rice, cotton, tobacco.

A new and interesting feature is a dairy cow contest under the supervision of the North Carolina Agricultural Experiment Station. The tests will be made at the home of the owner of the cow. The first premium is $40; second, $25; third, $15.

The poultry department is particularly full and complete, and besides the premiums offered by the Society, there are "specials" from all over the United States.

The list contains forcible, instructive and finely illustrated articles on "Public Roads" and "Cotton."

The general schedule of the premiums is so proportioned as to guarantee the expenses of a majority of the worthy exhibitors, and to splendidly reward those who excel.

The publication, on the whole, is an announcement to the effect that the next State Fair will be a Southern record breaker. Sent for one to

The Word of Salvation.

A young man in America was once at work upon his farm. He was careless about religion, indeed nobody had ever said a word to him about it. He had no Bible, and only worldly friends: there seemed little chance of his ever hearing of Christ and salvation, and of heaven and hell. On this particular day, it was a bright morning in early summer, he had to take his cart, drawn by oxen, along the high road. He was thinking of nothing except his daily work and his daily bread.

A gentle breeze was blowing, and as he went along it stirred a little piece of paper that had been lying by the roadside, so that it fluttered in front of him. But on went the young man, the oxen and the cart, all the same. When he had gone a short way farther, however, a thought came over him, "I wonder what that bit of paper was! I've a great mind to go back and see." And stopping his team, he did go back. He picked it up and read it as he walked along. It was a leaf out of the Bible.

The summer passed away with its flowers and sunshine, and the corn grew ripe, and was gathered into the garner; there was another harvest too, standing ready for the sickle. The young man who had found the leaf lay upon his bed, sick and dying. A sore disease had smitten him, and his parents knew there was no hope of his life. They were stricken with grief, but he—O he was rejoicing!

And now his lips were open to tell them what he had never told before. The leaf out of the Bible had brought to him first the sense of sin and then the knowledge of a Saviour. He sought for a whole Bible, and ever since it had been his constant companion, and now, though called almost suddenly away from life with all its happiness, he knew whom he had believed, and he was ready. He had an anchor, sure and steadfast, for the Lamb that was slain to take away sin had taken away his sin. Without a doubt or a fear he entered into rest.—The Worker.

Visiting the Sick.

"I was sick and ye visited me." Matt. 25:36.

If you earnestly desire to grow in grace and in love to God and man, be sure to be found, as often as possible, around the beds of the sick, helping them in every way you possibly can. There are many who say they would visit the sick if they had only the means to relieve their wants. Is this really a good reason? Did you ever read of Peter and John, Acts 13, when they were going up into the temple, and how they met a poor fellow that was lame from his mother's womb? He asked alms of the Apostles, but bless your heart, they didn't have a cent; but mind you, that did not keep them from doing their level best for the poor fellow, and they really did more for him than money could have ever done. Now, if you have no money to give the sick, don't let that keep you back from visiting them, but resolve, like the Apostles, to do your very best for them in other ways, and the Lord will surely bless your efforts; and you will steadily grow in grace, and in love, and in mercy every day.

Another reason people give for not visiting the sick is, that they are such poor hands around the sick bed. Of course they are, and will always be so, until they just pitch in and learn how. Any kind of new business is a little difficult at first, but it can be soon mastered after a little perseverance.

Another reason some people give is, they are so dreadfully afraid of contracting some contagious disease. Poor, timid things! There are only a few diseases you need to fear, and should the religion of your Master demand your presence you should go, for he that loseth his life shall save it.

Now, the Lord comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God, 2 Cor. 1: 4. Now if the Lord has comforted and blessed you in your troubles, it is for the very reason you may be enabled to comfort others. Now, if you fail to do this you are impeding your own spiritual growth, and checking one of the most fruitful streams of good to your soul.

Now, if you have not visited the sick in the past because you did not have the money to give them, or grace enough to read and pray with them, start this very day, and the Lord will surely help you, and bless you, and give you fully of his blessed spirit, and you will grow in grace and in the knowledge of God every day.—Selected.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

One reason why some people find it so hard to lead a Christian life, is because they devote so little time to it.

"Grin Like a Cheshire Cat."

"Well, well! Didn't ever hear of a 'grin like a Cheshire cat?' Why, you see, a man down in Cheshire had a cat which grinned and grined until there was nothing left of the cat but the grin, just as some scrofulous people, who don't know of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, get a cough, and then cough and cough and cough until there is nothing left of them to erect a monument to but the cough."

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is the most effective, anti-bilious, anti-dyspeptic, strength-giving remedy extant. For weak lungs, lingering coughs, spitting of blood, scrofula, sores, pimples and ulcers, it is a wonderful and efficacious remedy.

Its manufacturers guarantee it to do all that they claim, or money is returned.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation, piles, sick headache, and indigestion, or dyspepsia.

The Christian Teachers' Assembly and Summer School for males and females will begin its first session at Littleton Female College, July 2nd, and continue four weeks. There will be four Departments of Instruction, and a variety of subjects will be taught. Board may be secured at the College, or at any one of the hotels or private boarding-houses at reasonable rates. For further information, address Rev. J. M. Rhodes, Littleton, N. C.

Unbelief and discontent change "the cup of our blessings into a mere scorn cup for smallness and for easy breaking."

Faith is the sacrifice of the understanding to God; repentance the sacrifice of the will. —Jeremy Taylor.

Some Food for Thought.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Sister Crawford and I have been called upon in the past two days to help save four people's lives who had attempted suicide. One drank opium, one white lead, one matches, and one used a razor. The latter's attempt was made nine days before they called on us. Bro. Royall and I have just been to see him. His throat is badly cut and but little hope of his recovery. He has suffered perhaps more from their foolish heathen doctors than from the razor. These suicides are very frequent in China. The people are miserable in this sad life and know nothing of the happy home beyond, the hope of which cheers Christ's disciples amid the darkest scenes of this earthly pilgrimage. Oh for the time when this people may know Christ and the hope of everlasting life through him!

I have recently been interested in inquiring into some of the purely useless, yea, destructive expenditures of this poor people. I think I am perfectly safe in saying that the people of this Shantung province alone spend yearly at least $15,000,000 for opium and tobacco, and fully as much more on their idolatry—$30,000,000 in all! What a sum for one single State! They do not need more money nor more education in order to stop this great outflow for ruinous things, but they do need Christ in their hearts. Give them all the gold of earth or the finest culture of the age, and without Christ they only become ten fold more the children of the Devil! Oh for many more laborers to call them from these poor grovelling Satan-serving lines to everlasting life in the world's Saviour!

We cannot help them to any great advantage in temporal and worldly things till Christ has formed in them the hope of glory. In this Province are ten Departments. We of the Gospel Mission have selected one of these, near the western border of the Province, in which to live and preach Christ, so soon as we can go there and live. Almost no mission work has been done in it; and this makes it specially difficult to rent houses and locate. It is in area equal to perhaps about four ordinary counties, but in population equal perhaps to the most populous of the Southern States. Five of the brethren are now living in three different cities in miserable Chinese inns preaching and getting acquainted with the people preparatory to settling there as early as possible. When located in this field we will be over three hundred miles from Chefoo, our nearest post-office, and will have to hire our mail carried to and fro by a footman.

We are all well and happy in our Master's service.

God bless all the saints in the Old North State! Fraternally, G. P. BOSTICK.

Resolutions of Respect.

WHEREAS, As Rev. J. A. Beam has served Red Mountain Baptist church for eight years as pastor, and as his intercourse with us has been pleasant, and as we believe has been the source of much good to the Master's cause; therefore, be it

Resolved, That as Bro. Beam feels that the Lord's work calls him to another field, that we submit to what he believes to be the Master's will, not, however, without the keenest sense of regret, that he whom we have loved, and who we believe loves us, will be with us no more in our delightful services to God. Furthermore be it

Resolved, That we pray God's richest benedictions to rest on the labors of Bro. Beam wherever he may go, as we believe they have at Red Mountain, and we believe that we can pray no greater earthly blessing than that his intercourse among his people may ever be as pleasant and as gracious as it has been among us. We commend Bro. Beam to whatever flock he may serve as a polished gentleman, a scholarly preacher, an earnest worker, and above all a pious, consecrated Christian pastor.

Be it resolved furthermore, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the church, and that a copy be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER with the request that the same be published.

DR. E. H. BOWLING,
R. J. TILLEY,
RUFUS BOWEN,
Committee.

From Waynesville.

Dear Recorder:—Some two months ago this scribe wrote you a short note in reference to a meeting of ten days' length, just then completed. Perhaps the waste-basket got the scribblings; but as it is due a good pastor and his helper, I write again. [Your communication failed to reach this office, brother.—EDITOR.]

Our pastor, Rev. M. A. Jenkins, secured Rev. G. L. Finch of Biltmore to preach for us. There have been many marks of improvement in the Christian living of our membership since then,—the best mark by which to measure results. Two have been baptised—consecrated young men, we think, and two reinstated. Small figures, you may say; but the burning words of Bro. Finch still ring in the minds and cling to the hearts. The membership is held by a braver spirit just because of his consecrated earnestness, and the almost unanimous voice of the church is that Bro. Finch's influence here is stronger after two months of quiet overlooking the field. No one can make a mistake in getting our brother to evangelize with them.

Here let me say that Pastor Jenkins is leading us forward with a fine, prudent, but valiant leadership. His sermon, yesterday, on "The Great Need of the Church," was so stirring that tears came to many eyes as they heard him discourse of consecration, purity, and persistent toil.

Our Sunday-school, with Bro L. M. Welch its pastoral superintendent, enrolled 192 yesterday. The prayer meeting attendance on Wednesday evening was over fifty.

We have never seen better marks of church growth than here in Waynesville within the last two years. With the Lord's help you may confidently expect great things from this church. S. A. CHAMBERS.

Waynesville, June 18, 1894.

The Old Men and Women do Bless Him.

Over 600 people have come or sent to Dr. Bye for his Balmy Oil in the last four months to cure them of cancer and malignant diseases Out of this number over fifty are very old people, whose ages range from seventy to ninety-five years. On account of distance and infirmities of age they had to send for home treatment. Read what they write and say to the greatest humanitarian of modern times, Dr. D. M. Bye, the discoverer and originator of the Combination Oil Cure for cancer:

ELK POINT, S. D., March 21, 1894.

DR. D. M. BYE—My Dear Brother: The Oil you sent was applied to my face as you directed and it has done the work. The fungus soon cleaved off of the edges and then the center or cavity all came out in a lump, clean, and the place looks healthy. I suffer but little pain and everything looks favorable. I keep indoors with care, and hope of perfect cure in good time.

Allow me to express to you my gratitude for your very kind and faithful care of my case, besides your Christian sympathy and words of cheer when I was under the cloud and all was dark. God bless you, and prosper you in your good work for the suffering ones. Gratefully,

JOSHUA V. HIMES.

This man was born in 1805; is now pastor of a large church. If he lives a few years more he will be one hundred years old. We give one more letter, just received from one of the most eminent families in Kentucky.

Mrs. Clay writes concerning her mother, Mrs. Blair, who is almost as old as the venerable Mr. Himes. The cancer had eaten away her upper lip and some of her nose. She being confined to her bed, they sent for the Balmy Oil and take home treatment.

CARLISLE, Ky., April 14, 1894
D. M. BYE, Indianapolis, Ind.

Dear Doctor;—As mother grows better I expect I will be indolent about writing. Your Balmy Oil seems to be the very thing to do the work. We did not expect mother to get well in a week or two, owing to her advanced age, but she is now able to go to the dining-room for her meals. I would never advise any one to use the burning plaster as we did on mother, which did no good. The oils are as mild as a May morning. I will recommend it to all suffering ones. Mother does not suffer any more now as she did. Very respectfully,

MRS. MATTIE CLAY.

Mrs. Nancy Dungan, living thirteen miles southeast of the city, had cancer on nose, part of which was eaten away. She is in her ninety-first year. A seventy year old son came and got the Balmy Oil. She is now almost well. The doctor went to see her but one time. When he bid her good bye this beautiful old lady with one hand uplifted blessed the doctor in the name of the God of her fathers, and further said: "My mother and grandmother both lived to be over one hundred years old, and let me tell you, doctor, from my youth I was careful to obey my parents and I have always claimed God's promise, and it must be in his good providence that I ever heard of your Balmy Oil, and I now hope to see my one hundredth year. May God bless you in your good work."

Mrs. J. K. Hall, who lives at Spiceland, Ind., a good old quaker lady, had a most terrible cancer; was cured with the Balmy Oil. She, too, is close to ninety years old. The doctor went once to see her at her home. When he said bood bye she, too, with tears streaming from her fading eyes, with a full heart, called down God's blessing on the doctor, saying: "I will ever pray God to spare your life and bless you in your good work for suffering people, and especially the aged ones like me. Oh, I know the good Lord will bless you." We could tell of more than a score of old people. Some were cured after all hope had fled, and they had gone to many great doctors and spent hundreds of dollars in a fruitless effort to be cured, but never got any benefit until they were cured with Balmy Oils. One man had spent nearly $2,000 and was at last cured by Dr. D. M. Bye with his Balmy Oils. Imitators are springing up in the South and West who are advertising to cure cancers with Balmy Oil.

We warn the people of these fraunds. Dr. Bye has no offices only which are run in his name. All others are but imposters and bad men who seek to make money from the good reputation already made by the oil treatment. Notwithstanding Dr. Bye has protection from the Government by patent, yet these bad men persist in their dishonest schemes to defraud all whom they may get the chance. Dr. D. M. Bye has his main office now at 462 N. Tennessee St., Indianapolis, Ind. Persons wishing treatment will describe their case and write for circular and prices of oil.

HELPLESS INVALID.
"About 18 months or two years ago my wife's health gave way, and she grew steadily worse. She could not retain scarcely anything she ate and the case finally assumed the worst form of
DYSPEPSIA and CHRONIC DIARRHŒA,
and she became a helpless invalid at the age of 18. I had her under the treatment of a good physician, but his efforts to relieve her were of no avail. So, after matters had continued thus for 8 or 10 months, and my wife had given up to die, I took the case in my own hands and purchased a bottle of Dr. King's
ROYAL GERMETUER,
began giving it to her in water as hot as she could drink it, before and after each meal, using a mild purgative occasionally on retiring at night.
Suffice it to say in less than a week there was
A WONDERFUL CHANGE.
She could eat a little of anything she desired, and today is a well woman. She used altogether possibly 4 or 6 bottles. In my opinion
GERMETUER HAS NO EQUAL."

MUSIC. A young lady of four years experience desires a situation as teacher in a female seminary or large boarding school. Vocal and instrumental music taught. Best references given and required. Address Box 24, Scottsville, Albemarle Co., Virginia.

Publisher's Announcement.

In the interests of the young people the American Baptist Publication Society has decided to reduce the price of the Life of Jesus, by Rev. O. C. S. Wallace, and A Short History of the Baptists, by Mr. H. C. Vedder, from 90 cents each to 60 cents. These books will be of special value in connection with the studies of Christian Culture Course, and both of them bear the C. C. C. stamp of the Baptist Young People's Union, and are commended by that Society to its constituents.

The American Baptist Publication Society is about placing on the market the Annotated Paragraph Bible. This popular Bible has been thoroughly revised by the Religious Tract Society of London, at an expense of $15,000. The former edition, which has had a large sale, was edited by Dr. Angus, Editor of the "Hand-book of the Bible." The revised edition has been edited by Dr. Green. Both of these men are well known Baptists.

Warren Union.

The Warren Union will hold its next session at Warren Plains, commencing on Thursday night before the fifth Sunday in July. We are arranging for a great meeting and urge all the churches connected with the Union to send a large number of delegates and visitors.

The churches connected with the Union are earnestly urged to send a liberal contribution to the Union Meeting by their delegates for the purpose of establishing a mission near Ransom's Bridge in a very destitute section of the Union. This request is in accordance with a resolution unanimously adopted by the last Union Meeting.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

A telephone exchange has been organized at Mt. Airy.

A new cotton mill has begun operations at Durham.

North Carolina undertakers met in annual session at Greensboro last week.

Hog cholera is prevailing with unusual virulence in various parts of the State.

D. C. Holder was struck by lightning and killed in Davie county on the 20th inst.

The advisability of extending the Raleigh and Durham telephone to Greensboro and Winston is being considered.

There are now 1,100 convicts engaged on the State farms. Others are making brick, for which a ready sale is found.

Twenty bales of cotton were lost at Graham recently by fire originating from sparks from a passing engine.

Two of our State exchanges report having seen cotton blooms. The general crop outlook is not very encouraging, however.

It is stated that Mayor Boyd is making a Dr. Parkhurst investigation into Greensboro affairs, and matters are being thoroughly stirred.

The Knights of Pythias met at Asheville last week. E. A. Ebert was elected Past Grand Chancellor, and Chas. Holland, Grand Chancellor.

Farmers in Mecklenburg county have resorted to the irrigation system this year in order to enable their crops to withstand drouths.

The Fourth of July will not be celebrated to any extent in this State this year, nor in any other State to an unusual extent. There is saving common-sense in this.

Bill Wylie, colored, died in Charlotte Friday, from the effects of a blow received at the hands of brakesman Haney, also colored, of the S. A. L. Railway. The latter is at large.

Dr. T. B. Kingsbury of the Wilmington Messenger has been tendered the privilege of appointing an associate editor in North Carolina for the great National Cyclopedia of American Biography.

A man named Mills is in the Wake county jail under indictment for attempt to assault a Miss Wimberly of Apex, N. C. His victim successfully resisted his attempts, but is at the point of death from injuries received in the struggle.

The colony of 300 Waldenses in Burke county it said to be in need of assistance. They were unfortunate in their selection of land, last year's crops failed, and the prospect is not promising this year. They need farm instruments and live stock.

The closing exercises of the State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts occurred last week. They were very creditable throughout. The exhibits of work done were admirable. Congressman Hatch, who had been engaged to make an address, failed to materialize, and Hon. F. H. Busbee took his place.

For the past two weeks a deplorable controversy in our State papers has been maintained by members of the Vance family as to the disposal of the late Senator's remains, his wife and son having various preferences in the matter. We have no hesitancy in saying that while the entire matter is to be regretted, we sympathize thoroughly with the son.

General News.

Prof. Ewell, president emeritus of William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Va., died June 20th. He was eighty-four years old, and had lived them well.

The city of Chicago now boasts a larger population than that of any city in the western hemisphere. Its population is stated to be 1,700,000.

Erastus Wiman, well-known as a representative business and society man, was last week sentenced to six years hard labor in the New York penitentiary for forgery.

Immigration to this country is at a "stand-still," as many steerage passengers having left our shores as have arrived in the last ten months. This is hopeful, at least.

Strikes and Coxeyism are decreasing and the probabilities are that the summer will be remarkably quiet. Epidemics of cholera and yellow fever are to be feared, but will not become dangerous under the present good quarantine system.

The 20th inst. marked the fifty-seventh year of the reign of Victoria as Queen of England. She has reigned longer than any other English ruler except George III, who reigned fifty-nine years. The Queen's health is said to be remarkably good.

The Electropoise

is a little instrument weighing less than a pound, which when attached to the body causes the whole system to absorb oxygen—pure oxygen from the air. It introduces this potent curative agent—oxygen—into the remotest and most recondite parts. It purifies the blood. It vitalizes every organ.

It makes war on disease by destroying its producing cause. It eliminates the morbid and noxious elements that act injuriously or that lower vitality.

It neutralizes or expels all poisons, either of malaria, contagion, or from the effects of powerful drugs.

With the body plentifully supplied with oxygen and freely oxygenized blood, it is impossible for disease to exist, because the conditions that made it possible have been removed—burnt out.

It is harmless. As the Electropoise simply induces the absorption of oxygen, no injury can possibly result from its application.

Abandoned cases have been treated from all sections, and the results fully warrant the claim that "the Electropoise cures when all else has failed."

Do not despair. If you have tried physicians, specialists, change of scene and climate,—everything, in the vain hope of cure, and are desperate, remember the Electropoise has made its reputation by curing cases that were supposed to be "incurable," and pronounced by physicians as such.

Investigation courted. We solicit the closest investigation into the Electropoise—its workings—our methods—results that attend its use, etc.

Especially do we ask physicians and scientists to investigate the matter. Thinking people of all classes will be interested in our book.

Statesmen, jurists, clergymen, scientists, physicians and intelligent members of all classes of society use and indorse the Electropoise. In our book their certificates are given, together with other information about the Electropoise, its price, method of applying, ease of application, certainty of effect, absence of shock, or other sensation except increase of vigor, its total difference from the "electrical appliances" commonly known. This book mailed free to any interested applicant. Write for one and learn of this remarkable home cure for disease without medicine.

DIED.

GREEN—Little Hugh, the only child of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Green, died June 11th, 1894, aged four years, nine months and twenty-eight days. Hugh suffered severely for about two weeks, but at last God saw fit to take him to his bosom, and we believe that he is now with him who, while upon earth, said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God." We sympathize with his parents in their sore affliction, and we hope that they will look forward to the time with joy when they shall meet him in that land of eternal happiness.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep,
A calm and undisturbed repose
Unbroken by the last of foes."

G. CASWELL DUNCAN.

RACKLEY—At his home in Sampson county, N. C., on the evening of June 13th, 1894, death took from our midst Bro. George W. Rackley. He was a victim of paralysis, from which he lingered and suffered for about four weeks. He had reached the age of fifty-three years, and was for several years a member of Mt. Gilead Baptist church. In his death his sorrowing wife looses a faithful husband, and his children a kind, loving father.

The funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. C. F. Hopper, in the presence of a large circle of friends and relatives.

"But I would not have you ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope." 1 Thess. 4: 13. M.

VESTAL.—At the home of her father, Winston Reece, in Yadkin county, on June 8th, 1894, Mrs. Nelia Vestal, wife of Dr. W. L. Vestal. She had gone to her father's on a visit, and while there was seized by the fatal fever. Four physicians were called to her bedside, but in the short space of one week she passed from friends on earth to live with God. Sister Vestal was only twenty-seven years old and had been a member of the Baptist church for ten years. She adorned her confession of Christ, and left behind the testimony that she gloried in the cross of Christ. A faithful Christian, a true companion, a tender mother. Four little children follow on behind.

J. E. G.

DAVIS—On the fourth day of April, 1892, about 7:30 o'clock p. m., while sitting by my table preparing my lessons for the next day, in the old dormitory at Wake Forest College, a telegram came in my room from my nephew containing these words, "Mother is dead." The first sister that God had taken from me since I could remember.

But a few days ago another sad message came to me with these words, "Julia Ann died on Sunday morning, May 13th."

She was a sister and a mother to me, after God took my mother in my infancy. It is hard to part from such dear ones, but we should remember that God has only taken them up higher.

She leaves a kind husband, Mr. A. F. Lewis, and five children to mourn their loss. Little children, you must not cry too much for mother. The world may neglect you, but we have the blessed assurance that God will care for his little ones. "When my father and mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me up."

She was a consistent member of the Rocky Ford Baptist church, Franklin county, N. C.

EDWIN C. BOBBITT.

COHOON—At Elizabeth City, N. C., June 17th, 1894, Selma S. Cohoon, the beloved wife of F. F. Cohoon, departed this life in the thirtieth year of her age. Hers was a rare and beautiful Christian character. A cultured mind, a spirit with every lovable grace made her friendship a treasure to be prized. Thoughtful and considerate, sympathetic and self-sacrificing, it is not strange that her home was one of the most hospitable in North Carolina. She inspired the most loyal and loving devotion of her husband, friends and family. Her resolution was superbly heroic. Though she spent several months in Baltimore and Philadelphia under specialists who pronounced her case hopeless, still her faith, courage and fortitude held her up for many weeks after all others had despaired of her recovery. She met death in full consciousness without a fear. Her faith was fixed and her hope was not dimmed for a single moment. She wanted to live, love and do good, but faltered not in going hence when she clearly understood it was God's will.

Hers was the first home the writer entered on coming to Elizabeth City, and she was the first one he baptized on taking pastoral charge, hence he shares a grief with the husband and family that is quite personal in its keenness. Heaven is more to be desired by all of us because Selma Cohoon is there.

Tributes of Respect.

Sister Elizabeth Baney, wife of Daniel Baney of Sampson county, N. C., was born July 23d, 1823. On July 23d, 1845, at the age of twenty-two, she was married. On June 23d, 1893, her spirit took its flight from this world of sorrow to the realms of the blest. She was for fifty years a member of Mt. Gilead Baptist church.

Her life was one of great usefulness, and she will be much missed in her home, in her neighborhood, and in her church.

She lived and died within two miles of where she was born, and we have yet to hear the first word of fault found of her as a true Christian woman.

Strive With a Purpose.

Strive with an earnest purpose,
In every task to excel;
That which is worth the doing,
Is worth the doing well.

Where there's the will for winning
Surely the way will come;
That which is worth beginning
Is well worth being done.

Think that however humble
Tasks which around you lie,
Half-hearted work will ever
Yield but a poor reply.

Then let us strive with fervor,
Toil with whole-hearted zest;
That which is worth the doing
Is worth our very best.

—Mary L. Warner.

The Starry Host.

The countless stars which to our human eye
Are fixed and steadfast, each in proper place,
Forever bound to changeless points in space,
Rush with our sun and planets through the sky,
And like a flock of birds onward fly,
Returning never whence began their race,
They speed their ceaseless way with gleaming face,
As though God bade them win infinity.
Ah, whither, whither is their forward flight
Through endless time and limitless expanse!
What power with unimaginable might
First hurl them forth to spin in tireless dance!
What beauty lures them on through primal night,
So that, for them, to be is to advance!

—Rev. J. L. Spalding, in the Century.

For Our Girls

Take care of your health by living out of doors as much as possible. Take long walks in the sunshine. This is good for the complexion and good for the spirits. English girls understand this. It is said that dogs and English girls always choose the sunny side of the street when out for a walk.

Learn self-control, and be self-supporting. Be able to do some one thing better than any one else. Reverses may come, and then you are independent. Contact with the world need not lessen your womanliness, but otherwise may increase your power.

Cultivate cheerfulness; discontent shows itself in the face. Look on the bright side, and make the most of things.

Be polite always. True courtesy is a better robe than silk. A gentle voice is irresistible. Loud talking does not show the true woman, or indicate the most of all things.

Say kind things of others, especially of girls. The girl that never says anything good about her girl associates, will never make a sympathetic and wise mother. If you cannot say kind things, say nothing.

Be punctual. This is a great fault with the girls. Late for church, late for meals, late for engagements makes disagreeable friction in the family, and thereby mars all pleasure.

Do not exaggerate; learn to speak the simple truth, state plain facts. The habit of exaggeration has grown to be ridiculous among girls, and many girls appear silly by indulging in their extravagant talk. By all means, secure the very best education possible. Go to a university or college if you can. Inform yourself in every way. Read the best books. Time is to precious to read anything else.

Be especially gentle and kind in the home circle; always ready to help by word or act. Do not exaggerate the little crosses and privations, but make the most of numerous blessings. In the home circle is where you receive your true test, and where your power is most felt. See to it, dear girls, that you give your best here, for home is largely what you make it.—Selected.

Just Simply Stop Breathing.

It is a fact not generally know that if a person holds his breath wasps and bees may be handled with impunity. The skin practically becomes a coat of mail against which the insects vainly drive their stings. The moment a particle of air escapes from the lungs the stings will penetrate. In explanation of this curious fact a well known physician advances the the theory that holding the breath partially closes the pores of the skin, and thus leaves no opening for attack. This interesting statement explains and enhances the value of a practice I have followed for the prevention of colds. For many years my occupation took me to crowded political and labor meetings, generally held in rooms destitute of any means of ventilation. The heat was intense, the air fetid and poisonous. I have left such meetings bathed in perspiration and plunged into the chill air of a winter's night, thereby running the risk of catching the severest cold. Yet, strange to say, I enjoyed a singular immunity from such aggravating ailments. At the first touch of cold air I took a deep inspiration, and then held my breath for half a minute, in the meantime walking as fast as I could. During that half minute the pores of the skin were closed against the chilling atmosphere, and by the time the lungs called for reinvigoration the body had considerably cooled and the risk of a chill was over. I recommended the practice to public speakers, vocalists, entertainers and those who are obliged to frequent unduly heated rooms. In my own case the practice never failed, and although I fully believe in its value I never understood the reason of it until a learned scientist came forward with the remarkable theory that while holding the breath the skin could be maintained impenetrable to the sting of a bee.—Jennesse Miller Monthly.

Whaling

Regular whale-boats are twenty-eight to twenty-nine feet long, with a cut in the bow through which the line passes, and in the stern a post over which the line may be checked if it is running out too fast. The officer sits in the stern, from where the line, which is coiled in a tube, is managed. The oars are called "leading," "tub," midships," "bow," and "harpooner" ("harpooneer" they pronounce it). When a boat "goes on," the harpooner draws in his oar and prepares to "strike." He doesn't always succeed.

When the whale is struck the harpooner shifts with the officer. This explains why he is often called the boat-steerer. The critical moment has arrived. The whale once fast, the future is narrowed down to "dead whale or stove boat." Therefore the killing of the whale is in the hands of the officer. He must judge nicely, though on the spur of the moment, when to lay on or off, and meet all the emergencies caused by the unforeseen actions of the wounded leviathan.

Sometimes the whale will rush through the water, drawing the boat after him at lightning speed, and almost tearing the loggerhead out of the stern, the while the line is taut as a fiddle string. Or he may "sound," or dive, and fathom after fathom of line he rapidly paid out. Woe to him who gets foul of the smoking line! It often means loss of leg or arm, or even instant death; for the diving weight of tons at the other end tells before knives can be whipped out and the line out. And where will the whale come up? Perhaps right under the boat, staving it, or raising it up with him and spilling all hands into the sea, where they will sink like so many stones unless they know how to swim or unless another boat is at hand to pick them up. He may appear a little to one side, and in his convulsions shiver the boat with one flash of his tail, or splinter it between his jaws. I saw on the shore at Provincetown, last summer, a stove boat from one of the Provincetown whalers. The captain had been thrown out over the bow; the others jumped. Fortunately there was another boat near by to save them—and kill the whale.

In the old days the whale was killed with a lance in the hands of the officer. It required eye and nerve for the fatal thrust at the rolling, plunging monster. Now, however, they use the bomb-lance, which is shot from a heavy brass gun, and explodes within the whale, usually with fatal effect. —Gustav Dobbs, in St. Nicholas.

Our Nation's Capital.

We are quite sure that if a number of boys and girls were asked to name the different capitals of our country, the order would be something like this: Philadelphia, New York and Washington. That is all right as far as it goes, but the truth is our country has had a good many more capitals than those named. It may be said that during the Revolution the British "kept things moving." They would have been very glad to lay hands on the "rebel" Congress, knowing which, that body took good care to keep out of their way. Inasmuch as wherever Congress went it took the national capital with it, you can easily understand why the following named places bore that honor at the dates named:

Philadelphia, from September 5, 1774, until December, 1776; Baltimore, from December 20, 1776, to March, 1777; Philadelphia, from March 4, 1777, to September, 1777; Lancaster, Pa., from September 27, to September 30, 1777; York, Pa., from September 30, 1777, to July, 1778; Philadelphia, from July 2, 1778, to June 30, 1783; Princeton, N. J., from June 30, 1783, Annapolis, Md., from November, 1783, to November, 1784; Trenton, N. J., from November, 1784, to January, 1785; New York, from January 11, 1785, to 1790, when the seat of government was changed to Philadelphia, where it remained until 1800, when it was finally removed to Washington.

Thus it is that nine different cities and towns have figured as the capital of our country.—Blue and Gray.

The Hasty Word.

To think before you speak is so wise an axiom that one would hardly think it needful to emphasize it by repetition. And yet in how many cases the hasty temper flashes out in the hasty word, and the latter does its work with the precision and pain of the swift stiletto! Singularly enough the hasty word oftenest wounds those who love one another dearly, and the very closeness of their intimacy affords them opportunity for the sudden thrust.

We know the weak points in the armor of our kinsman and our friend; we are aware of his caprices, and originally are tender and compassionate even of his vanities and whims; but there dawns a day when it is written in the book of fate that we shall be as cruel as we are loving. We are cold, or tired, or hungry. We are anxious over unpaid bills, or our expected letters have not arrived, or one of the children is ailing, and we dread the outcome of the malady. So politeness fails us, fortitude is vanquished, philosophy is in abeyance and we say that which we repent in sackcloth and ashes.

But though the hasty word may be forgiven, it is not at once forgotten. It has flawed the crystal of our friendship; the place may be cemented, but there is a shadowy scar on the gleaming surface. Oh, if the word of hate had but been left unspoken; if the strong hand of patience had but held back the sword as if to strike!—Harper's Bazar.

The Loneliness of Age.

The loneliness of age! How few think of this and treat with due tenderness and consideration those who have outlived their generation, and whose early companions and friends have been taken from them! Unable to engage in the activities of life, they are no longer brought into contact and sympathy with those around them, and no tie of common interest and mutual dependence binds them together. They necessarily, to a great extent, live in a world of their own, with which those around them are not familiar. The communings of their hearts are with the scenes of the past and the companions of other years who have long ago passed away. Lover and friend have been taken from them, and their acquaintance laid in darkness. The forms they admired and loved are gone, the eyes that looked into theirs with the tenderest affection are sightless, and the voices that cheered and stirred their souls have long been silent. Their early world of hope and joy has become a desolation, and they sit in silence contemplating the ruin that has been wrought. They are "Only waiting till the shadows

Are a little longer grown," to pass on the reunion that awaits them, and the glad greetings of those they love. Who would not do what he can to cheer the loneliness of the aged, to smooth their pathway, and comfort them in their declining years.—Churchman.

Consider now the lilies,
Oh, heart of mine, to day!
They neither spin nor toil to win
Their beautiful array;
I would that thou, my heart, could lead
A life as sweet as they!

DESPITE many persistent ill reminders "hard times" had passed quite out of our mind of late; and we daresay others have been so blessed since depression of affairs has become the rule—the usual—and, therefore, anything but remarkable. We are all but adjusted—not in any degree reconciled, be sure—to the temporarily irremediable state of affairs; and adjustment to such conditions is next most desirable to their removal. But there is a class, which deserves sympathy at all times, that is now most grievously and dangerously affected by the depression—a class that has not had time to adjust itself nor forethought to anticipate other than unimpeded advancement, to which some consideration may wisely be given.

If we were asked to enumerate those who are most exposed to detriment by general depression of business, we would mention the numbers of young men and women who have but recently been equipped for work, advised how to work, and set upon the world to work among millions of grasping bread-winners, but to whom opportunity of working comes not, nor manifests a tendency to come. College graduates are meeting with discouragements everywhere; and a young man or woman thoroughly discouraged is the most pitiable of objects,—and a dangerous object, because one's discouragement may overshadow a life time. They probably struggle inwardly with the misapprehension that theirs is a most untimely time, that they have taken the tide of affairs at the ebb, and that the flood is quite beyond them. It is indeed a misapprehension. There are more than one flood as there are more than one ebb; and waiting, though slow, is sure, if it be governed by proper judgment. And if we were asked to enumerate those to whom the present depression offers the largest possibilities of personal benefit, we would be compelled—paradoxical, though it seem—to name this same class first, which, its present salvation worked out with severe struggles with a loss only in its numbers, as flailed wheat must leave some chaff upon the floor, will take a flood-tide well-manned and secure against future ebbs when we shall have been lifted out of the present depression. But one cannot work out one's salvation without opportunity of working, says one. True, but we do not believe that work of some kind may not be secured by every one who seeks it, every one who would work well in prosperous times. Times cannot become that severe. Something needful of being done can be found, something—and whatsoever or wheresoever it be, it is better than nothing. Earning ten dollars a month in a despised position is vastly better than eating in the sweat of another's face. Do something, do not count the cost; but be content in doing your best, and our word for it, the silver lining of the clouds will appear, and in very bold relief, too. It does not injure one to work now for less than one's time seems worth, or to pursue an avocation entirely diverse from that to which one aspires, half so much as doing nothing at all, waiting in an ebb that will not give place to a flood save for those who have worthily manned themselves in struggles. Absence of occupation is a most baleful menace to a young man or woman; for out of it comes the cynic, the hypocondriac, the loafer or the suicide,—never any good thing.

POSSIBLY there is some one, capable, deserving and willing, who cannot secure even the humble privilege of working for bread. We do not believe it, but granting that there is such a one, to that one is given at least the opportunity of occupation, an opportunity of which even the "conny-poor" are not deprived, thank God. And so long as one occupies one's self discontent will not hang heavily on one; and occupation is the duty of one who cannot obtain work even if one has to go to the poor house to live. Self-respect is the boon of every honest person whatsoever one's surroundings. So wherever or whoever you are, if you cannot obtain work, occupy yourself with books and study, which are not without the reach of any one; and when times do improve you will realize that nothing has been lost by the unavoidable delay. No one suffers from a too thorough knowledge of anything. Indeed a thorough knowledge of a poor house has been the making of some men.

There was a man among men who could calmly say, "My time has not yet come," though all the world were offered him. He taught men many things, but he taught nothing more practically wholesome than the virtue of patience. Young men desire to become successes in a day. The Christ lived "the best ten years of his life" in obscurity, at any period of which he could have become the Master; and even when he had begun his active life, in spite of his power, he restrained himself when it was given him to dethrone kings, when he was implored and finally taunted to destroy a kingdom and become that King of kings which it had been written he should become. But he had other and less conspicuous work. Much of his life was devoted to preparation, and he was prepared to do little things as well as great. So now our earlier days may be obscure to our eventual advantage. We may need to prepare for work for which educational institutions do not prepare one.

There is no reason for discouragement. If you can get work of any kind, get it—and work and wait for a higher and a better vocation, opportunity of which will be presented as surely as one works and waits for it. If you cannot obtain work, employ yourself with study—and study and wait, ever alive to opportunity. Our present selves will be our "dead selves," our "stepping stones to higher things," in another decade; and high or low now will matter not then. Such a glorious thing is life! To day is what it is, yesterday is what we think it, to morrow is what we make it.

A YOUNG man out of work and occupation, too, recently said that one must "join a ring" to get along. And he proudly boasted that he was "getting into half a dozen rings" in an admirable way. Such an idea is to be heartily shunned. It is well to have influential and kindly-disposed friends; and we doubt not that by such means many a young man has been pushed ahead of his more deserving fellow. But we spurn the thought of one's rising by the aid of friends alone, though men have so risen; yet they rose higher in the estimation of those who did not know them than they did in that of themselves or their friends. One who cultivates friendships in order to rise, one who cultivates friendships with a selfish motive, has no friends, and deserves the contumely in which such a one will, sooner or later, be held. Such may succeed, but such never deserves success. A young man out of work should value his manhood, his self-respect, his principles, above all else. And the despicable hanger-on of rings, the misled moral weakling who fears and, therefore, courts rings, is not worth employment, and can never hope to obtain an independent position. Worth may not win all success, but it commands success, and this virtue it will ever maintain, with the added quality of self-respect, the consciousness of no obligation to influence unduly given, which cannot be the boon of one who rises by the aid of a ring. Be anything honestly rather than whine at the feet of influence, rather than "bend the pregnant hinges of the knee." Be mindful that in all things self-respect, if nothing else, is at stake, without which one's life is a protracted progressive crime against one's self.

VENERABLE men have said that one cannot win success by dishonest means. But we would not advise acceptance of the statement without an understanding of the word success. If it signifies the respect of numbers of people, honor, influence and wealth, it is not a truth. Many men have won such success dishonestly, and the example of their lives is still upheld in epitaphs and biographies. But if self-respect and inward complaisance be added to the qualities mentioned,—no man can win that success save by honest, faithful, persistent work. And there can be really no success without these latter qualities.

Dishonesty, sacrifice of principle and self-respect, often secures public honor and influence. But it is a theory of ours that if one holds zealously to Conscience from the beginning, success such as can be attained by no other means will crown one's days; not that one's conscience is unerring, but that success depends not so much upon whether one does what is right, as upon whether one does what one thinks right. Grievous mistakes of judgment are the portion of every human being, but if they are conscientious one cannot blame one's self, and it does not matter whom the rest of the world blames. It requires a great deal of moral courage to act entirely conscientiously when all external things seem to advise otherwise; but if one does otherwise one becomes a mere agency of circumstances, loses one's self, loses all worth having. Conscientious action may retard one's advancement, but it never injures one to day in any degree commensurate with its recompense on the morrow. To wait for the recompense requires great patience and greater courage, but one should wait.

ERASTUS WIMAN, a few years ago extraordinarily successful in every sense of the word, now awaits the execution of the sentence of a just judge to imprisonment for five years. He wrote books replete with good advice to young men, but no effort of his life can so impress the world as his pitiable fall. He had honestly accumulated more money than he could dispose of; every luxury was at his command, every inducement to honesty was presented him—and we do not now think of him as dishonest—but he desired more money, for reasons that philosophers cannot divine, and he forged a note for a paltry sum that wouldn't have bought his stables! He had no thought of taking the money permanently: his entire purpose was to replace it before any one should miss it; and men have done this successfully, and are now accounted honest and exemplary. But Wiman, more unfortunate than they, met with sudden reverses, and through inability to replace the amount became a common felon before he could realise it.

Had Erastus Wiman observed the maxims of his own book he would not have yielded to temptation for self respect's sake, whether there was other consideration or not. He forgot that one may become as mean a felon in one's own eyes as in those of a judge and jury. Ourselves are our most faithful witnesses, our consciences the justest of tribunals; for an accusing conscience hits a thousand tongues, and it will exact its penalty whether the world does or not. Wiman forgot that long before he dared tempt the law.

Rewards in Heaven.

BY REV. WM. T. JONES

The doctrine of rewards in heaven does not affect the doctrine of grace through Christ. But this doctrine does oppose antinomianism.

Never was a doctrine more strongly put in the Word, than that of salvation through grace, and through grace alone. Paul says, "I do not frustrate the grace of God: for if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain." Gal. 2: 21. If a man can be saved by works, then Christ's death was unnecessary. If Christ wrought part of man's salvation, and man completes the work, then Christ's death was ineffectual. If a man can save himself in part, and Christ saves him in part, then man's work is put upon an equal footing with Christ's death. Numerous passages might be cited to show that salvation is only through grace, but the text just quoted will suffice.

I utterly reject the doctrine of salvation by works; but nevertheless, I believe in Christian works. "Wherefore my beloved, . . . work out your own salvation with fear and trembling." If you are a Christian, fill out your life for the glory of God. "Even so faith, if it hath not works is dead, being alone." God's Word teaches us that there is merit in the believer's works, and that God recognizes them and will appropriately reward the doer. "And he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal; that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together." John 4: 36. "I will give unto every one of you according to your works." Rev. 2: 23. See also Matthew 16: 27; 2 Cor. 5: 10, and Rev. 22: 12.

CROWNING OF THE FAITHFUL.

We are taught that the faithful to Christ are to be crowned in glory. "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." 2 Tim. 4: 7, 8. "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tired he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him." Jas. 1: 12. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. 2: 10. Over in 1 Thess. 2: 19 we read, "For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming?" 1 Pet. 5: 4 says, "And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

THE UNCROWNED OF GLORY.

Some people will go to heaven, but receive no crown. Rev. 3: 11 says, "Behold, I come quickly: hold fast that which thou hast, that no man take thy crown." This passage certainly does not teach "falling from grace." It seems to me that it refers to our opportunities. A failure to embrace opportunities for doing good, means an eternal loss of results.

Again, we are taught that some will barely enter heaven. "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ. Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble; every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. If any man's work shall abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire." 1 Cor. 3: 11–15. As an offset to this, we are exhorted in 2 Peter 1: 10, 11, "Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." The apostle had been giving some instructions as to growth in Christian character, and these tenth and eleventh verses are the result. He exhorts to develop a full Christian life, and so have a broad entrance into glory.

DEGREES OF HAPPINESS IN HEAVEN.

We are enjoined to "grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." Growth in grace and in the knowledge of God are two great cardinal virtues urged throughout the New Testament. Some of God's people more fully obey this injunction than others. Some Christians are more like Christ than others. The kingdom of heaven dwells more richly in the lives of some Christians than in others. The higher the spiritual life in this world the better are we prepared for the world that is to come. Jesus said in his prayer, in John 17: 3, "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." Knowledge of God means eternal life, and the greater the knowledge of God the greater the spiritual life. "I am come that they might have life, and have it more abundantly." Jno. 10: 10.

In the Scripture quoted before, we are certainly taught that distinguishing rewards are to be given for services rendered in the cause of Christ. The logical sequence then would be that some will have greater degrees of happiness in heaven than others. In Matt. 5: 19 we read that some "shall be the least," and some "shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven," on account of their own actions. Matt. 20: 16 says, "So the last shall be first, and the first last." This text, with the preceding context, seems to me to teach that some who have great opportunities in this world for doing good, and abuse them, shall have less rank in heaven, while those whose opportunities have been poor in this world, if they rightly use their opportunities, shall enjoy greater rank in the kingdom of heaven.

God would have us so fill our life on earth as to be capacitated for the enjoyment of the highest glories in heaven and receive his richest rewards. Our God would certainly prefer that we should enter eternal glory with great spiritual powers than that we should go into his presence as spiritual dwarfs. Else what does he mean when in his Word he constantly exhorts us to grow in faith, grow in grace, grow in knowledge of the truth, and in all of the spiritual graces?

We do not spring into strong and deep spiritual powers at one bound; they are the result of growth. The Word teaches us that heaven's laws mean growth.

A faithful Christian life means a fit crowning at the end. "And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever." Dan. 12: 3.

I have given some of the Scripture on this doctrine of rewards, but I have been too much pressed for space to elaborate it.

Goldsboro, N. C.

Church Membership.

BY REV. JNO. S HARDAWAY.

Every Christian ought to be a member of the church. For a professing follower of the Lord to be content to remain outside of the church argues badly for his piety. If no church of his faith is in easy reach of him, he ought to make a pilgrimage to some place where there is a church of his faith and be duly received into fellowship.

Taking it for granted that every one will agree that all should join the church who profess to be Christians, a vital inquiry is this: What motives should influence us in joining the church? Let us first call attention to some motives that should not influence us.

(1) No man should join a church with whose doctrines he has no sympathy. There is much looseness of views prevailing among church members upon this point. Men go into a church not believing its doctrines, and begin to teach subversive doctrines, and when their attention is called to the fact, they claim a right to think and believe and teach as they please; and if remonstrance or protest is made, they cry out that they are persecuted; pose as martyrs, and claim to be curtailed of liberty, etc., etc. They never seem to think that it was dishonest and immoral to come into a church while holding views out of accord with the teachings of that church.

(2) Again, no one should join a church because his father, mother, wife or friends are in it. Doubtless it would be pleasant for all the family to hold fellowship together, but unless there is unity of faith, external unity of church membership is nothing. Church membership is something which should be between God and the soul. No human being, not my father, nor mother, nor wife, has a right to come between me and my relation to God. In matters of religion the soul stands in God's presence. Every man should hold his fellowship where he believes God would have him hold it; not where wife, or husband, or friend would have him hold it.

Christ says, "I have come to set a man at variance against his father," etc.—"and a man's foes shall be they of his own household." That means, if I understand it, that where Christ's law and will necessitate a division of families, then they must divide to be true to him.

Yet how many rather than suffer the inconvenience resulting from divided households give up principle and truth, and receive and embrace error! There is many a wife to day with her husband outwardly in church relations, and many a husband with his wife outwardly in church relations, who is at heart deploring the fact that she or he is not living up to inward convictions before God. Men and women seem to forget that to be in a church is to endorse its doctrines and practices. For instance, the man in a Pedobaptist church endorses and approves infant sprinkling; and the man in a Baptist church endorses and approves believer's baptism, and disapproves of infant sprinkling. Therefore to my mind it is as clear as a sunbeam that a person who does not believe in infant sprinkling cannot be a member of a Pedobaptist church without sin before God; and it is equally clear to me that a man who does believe in infant sprinkling cannot be a Baptist without sin before God. This to me is clear as day-light, and yet with the glaring sin apparent before all, we hear men advising friends to join in order to be with wife, or husband, or child, or parent. God forbid that any such motive be our reason for joining the church, when our consciences tell us that it is not right.

(3) Again, we should not join a church when we are not in accord with its teachings, just because it is near us, and hence more convenient to attend. This is sometimes done by weak or thoughtless persons. If what I have said above be true, that to be in a church is to endorse its teachings, we had better live singly and alone teaching right things, than go in with others whose views we do not at heart accept.

Nor should we join a church because by doing so we can find congenial society. No doubt if we are in a community where members of churches with whose doctrines we accord are few in number, we might receive more attention as members of society if we deny our principles and accept the principles and practices of those who predominate in the community. A man with an elastic conscience may do this; or one with no conscience at all; or a person who is a weather-cock that turns with every breath of air that blows; but true men and true women cannot do it; it is impossible. They believe something; and they esteem truth as precious, and they cannot sell it as did Esau his birth-right for a "mess of pottage."

Having said this much about wrong motives for joining the church, let us consider the one and only motive which should determine our choice of the church we should join.

We should join the church that we sincerely believe God would have us join. To ascertain his will we should search his Word, and go where that Word directs. Conscience enlightened by the Word of God will teach us where we should go. If we take the Word of God and by prayerful study are convinced that it teaches infant baptism and sprinkling, by all means let us join a church that sprinkles and baptizes infants.

But if on searching God's Word, we can discover no infant baptism, and no sprinkling, then we cannot consistently or conscientiously become members of churches that believe and practice those things.

If we take God's Word, and honestly, and prayerfully, and sincerely follow what we believe to be its teachings, we shall have peace of conscience, and rest of heart, and the light of his countenance; without which we may never expect a true, deep and real happiness.

A Voice in Virginia.

Bishop Fitzgerald, who was in Raleigh recently at the Methodist missionary meeting, gave utterance to the following at Randolph Macon College, Va., June 21st, 1894, which meets with our thorough endorsement:

"Godless education is education downward. Education naturally belongs to the family and the church. In my judgment the stopping point of education by the State should be the primary branches of an English education.

"If the power of God be lost there is no function for a Christian college in this land. But it will not be lost. By the faith, unfeigned, that works by love the channels for its inflowing will be kept open through all the years to come, and Randolph Macon will more than ever be blessed of God and prove herself worthy of the affection and support of the Church to which it belongs and the good wishes of every good man and woman within the sphere of its beneficent influence."

Strength knows conflict, weakness, defeat

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 4, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

OTHER States are exerting their utmost to destroy the liquor evil. North Carolina cannot in justice to itself refuse to come into line. We have the power now; we may not have it when the State is more thickly settled, when liquor dealers have become sufficiently numerous to form a powerful organization. Our next Legislature should be asked to make it possible for every community in town or country to drive saloons from their midst. And it will do this if Christians select the proper representatives.

THE Wilmington Messenger says: "If we are to have a temperance party and an educational party there will be indeed a strange mixture of politics and principles in the coming fight."

Do not fear, brother; we are not for organising parties, but for rectifying those already organized. We do not want a mixture of politics and principles, but ask only for the latter, and wish we could say as much for some other people. We want the men—without regard to party—in whom temperance and educational principles are thoroughly mixed, and the smaller the proportion of politics therein the more acceptable is he. And we are trying to fill our legislative chambers with just such mixtures.

IT SEEMS that at least two great American magazines are attempting to force the question of taxation of church property on the country. Many articles on the topic have appeared of late, and interest is increasing rather than waning.

We, for one, think all church property should be taxed. Any other arrangement is inequitable as long as there are two sects in the land. We do not care how soon the question becomes an issue, and we know we voice the Baptist idea in saying that the cause of Christ should not expect anything at the hands of a government whose governmental principles are political and not Christian. If, perchance, some one questions whether we would have our government committed to Christianity or not, we have only to say that it can become Christian only through the thorough evangelization of its citizenship; and this cannot be effected by all the enactments that could be passed in a thousand years. Our country and all countries should be Christian, but the form of government, if it be negative in this respect, can have no influence against this. If, however, it be positive, injury will be done to soul liberty; and unfaith and agnosticism on faithless "Christianity"—such as England's establishment has produced—will result.

IN BRO. HARDAWAY'S article, "Church Membership," and in the import of Bro. Hunter's letter to Baptist pastors in North Carolina, important matters are suggested to us—joining the church, maintaining active church relations, and church-letters. The reasons for joining a church have often been presented. We do not perceive how one can have similar beliefs to those held by a church and refuse to unite with it. Certainly no one can fear joining a Baptist church, since it does not require any one to do anything contrary to conscientious convictions. What a glorious thing it is to be able to say that Baptists leave the standard of duty to individual interpretation of the divine will! Of course one would not desire nor should be allowed membership in a body whose principles and practices are contrary to one's conviction.

There is need of more attention to church-letters. A church should not allow one of its members to go elsewhere to reside without a letter; and it should not only not allow this, but, if needful, the placing of the letter with another church should be urged. A letter from a Baptist church should be a letter of introduction into a world-wide brotherhood, and it should be the first thing a stranger in a community would present.

We believe, moreover, that college students going from home should be offered their letters and urged to take them to some church within reach. It will be anything but beneficial to a young man or woman to spend ten months each year for several years away from his or her church. Vital connection, active church life, should be maintained as thoroughly as possible by all church-members.

THE call for funds for missions is very urgent. North Carolina is doing nothing like it should. Let our pastors take the first opportunity to preach a missionary sermon—Home, Foreign, State, what a tremendous subject!—and take up a collection at the close.

ATTRACT OR SEEK?

At the present time there are many manifestations of a widespread, multiform and determined tendency to attempt to add to, improve, and make attractive the gospel, in order that its spread may be quickened. We do not doubt that the occasion of these attempts is an extensive realization that the gospel's progress is much slower than it should be even in our "Christian country," not to mention that only a bare and precarious foothold has been secured after long years of persistent, though not powerful—humanly speaking—effort among heathen nations. Ours is not a Christian country, if Christian citizenship means Christlikeness. We do not have to look far to realize this: there are evidences on every hand of the unbrotherliness of human beings in all spheres of occupation. But we protest that the existence of this condition of affairs is due not to lack of power on the part of the real gospel, but to lack of real gospel. Given a Christian community, and we are assured it will spread the gospel to its every nook and corner; given a Christian nation, and the unbrotherliness of its component citizens will have to be sought in exceptional cases, if it be found at all.

A great deal of unnecessary ornamentation in churches, and distasteful variety in religious exercises is frequently excused by the remark that they are necessary to attract the unsaved,—not for the gratification of Christians nor for the glory of God, but to induce the attendance and please the appetites of unchristian and perhaps wilfully immoral men and women! Such a spectacle is shameful. We worship God to glorify him, we build houses of worship to his glory, and we try to be the means of saving men and women for his glory. The latter may seem to be an excuse for any means of attracting the unsaved, but it is not. We do not know that any one has read in the Bible of an effort to make a meeting place attractive, or to add sensational or sensual things to religious exercises; for the latter, indeed, were for God's glory and not for man's gratification. A choir that sings to please men, that sings with the purpose of making such pleasing music that the unsaved will come within the reach of the gospel, sings with the wrong motive. A preacher who relies on his natural or cultivated talent to "draw" audiences, is not a worthy apostle. A church that is built with a view to the numbers its magnificence will induce, cannot be dedicated to God as the ancient churches were.

In the present time it is remarkable if many of the unsaved have not been persuaded that they were doing some church and the cause of Christ a distinguished service by permitting their names to be enrolled. So many attractions are offered that one might properly conclude that the sacrifice was made by one who consented to profess religion rather than by the Saviour. And we have no doubt many people have joined churches through such inducements as these; and we do not hesitate to say that this attempt at improvement of the gospel is accountable for the slowness of its spread. Such work teaches the unsaved that they are the desired, that their bodies are what is wanted, and not their souls.

But some one may say that the unsaved cannot be drawn otherwise half so effectually, and that, therefore, they should be drawn by these means. It strikes us that Christ never attempted to attract or draw the unsaved at any period of his life. What an impressive lesson his ascension would have taught, had he cared to have it heralded far and wide that he was going to ascend! But such was not Christ's method: "The Son of Man is come to SEEK and to save that which is lost." He sought; the unsaved attracted him, he had no time to attract the unsaved. And if this is gospel, the reader must admit that many churches that are now deploring the slowness of the evangelization of the world are not themselves evangelising their own community as they should. The greatest external attraction that Christian churches have is in the lives of their individual members. When a pastor can point out this and that happy one to an unsaved man and say that they were made so by Christ, he offers an attraction greater than all the other human attractions. The greatest internal attraction a church can have is evidence of the glorification of God.

We think it is clear that the unsaved should be sought rather than attracted; that it does not excuse any departure from scriptural methods to claim that they will not induce the unsaved to come in reach of the gospel. It is not whether they will come, but whether Christians will carry it within their reach. This means personal work and a great deal of it. And it does not mean personal work for the pastor only and mere worship for the lay-member; but personal seeking and personal example by every Christian.

One who waits to be paid to go out seeking sinners is as inconsistent with the Scripture as one who will not visit the poor and the sick without remuneration. Every Christian on earth is called to do personal work—a duty to God and fellow man, a privilege secured for us by Jesus Christ.

HELPLESS SILENCE.

We were disappointed to read in a recent number of the Wilmington Messenger that the able editor of that journal had not read "How Far Should a State Undertake to Educate," because he has been laboring under the misapprehension that its principles will not become so widespread that all papers in the State will have to discuss them. We had anticipated some fine work by Dr. Kingsbury, who manifested quite a lively interest in educational matters when connected with Our Living and Our Dead in 1875, and other editors in behalf of State-aided schools this summer, fall and winter; and even now we apprehend that Bro. Kingsbury will realize that his utterance last week is quite premature.

We may hope, at any rate, that those of our contemporaries who have not and will not read Dr. Taylor's pamphlet will be as just as Bro. Kingsbury, and not discuss the matter at all. No one should enter discussion of this issue without a thorough knowledge of the interests and the claims of both sides; and we do not know how better one can gain a knowledge of our view of the matter than by study of the pamphlet—"How Far Should a State Undertake to Educate." For ourselves we are apprehensive that we know almost too much about the other side.

There are, however, evidences, which we have pointed out upon two occasions, that some of our contemporaries that have ventured to say nay to us in this matter are "vastly ignorant" of the principles involved; and, therefore, open to the charge of prejudice.

There are more evidences—and they are palpable—of a concerted effort to extinguish the issue with an awful volume of—silence, which effort, we rise to explain, cannot succeed.

"How Far Should a State Undertake to Educate" is going to be the issue in North Carolina this fall. The ground-swelling of public opinion may not be perceptible to some at present, but it will shake the State before the year expires. Twenty-five thousand pamphlets are now in the hands of or are on the way to 25,000 of the more intelligent citizens of North Carolina, farmers, merchants, mechanics, doctors, lawyers, etc. In a few more weeks the matter in this edition of the pamphlet will be abridged, a great many vital and telling facts and figures introduced, and put into the hands of one hundred thousand citizens of North Carolina. Thus one side of the question will be read by at least 125,000 citizens,—will be read by ninety per cent. of the newspaper reading citizens of the State.

If we were able we would undertake to help the cause of State aid. Surely it should have one lone defender, who thinks he is able, somewhere in our broad confines. And yet the president of the institution that has most cause for concern in this issue has three times expressed his disinclination to reply to Dr. Taylor's article. We scarcely hoped, confident as we were, that even a logically invincible article would make a clean sweep.

We shall not blame ourselves if only one side of this question is presented to our readers and the public; for if we could conceive of another side, they should have it. It will not be our fault if every intelligent citizen has the opportunity of contemplating in a clear light only one view of this issue; it will be the fault of those who say there is another view but who hide it under a bushel. We are willing if they are. We are quite determined that the right side shall be known; that it shall prevail against argument, silence, prejudice, sneers or misrepresentation.

THE effort against Romanism, widespread and noisy months ago, is now becoming less sensational. The revulsion that follows enthusiasm is upon us. The A. P. A. out-Romed Rome; and the A. P. A. has now not as much popular sympathy as Rome has. What we need is a studied and persistent effort to evangelize Romanists in America and everywhere, not a political order that purposes abridging religious freedom. Rome is wrong, Rome knows it is wrong; but there are sincere adherents to the Roman church, and they should be taught, not driven. The gospel of Jesus Christ will exterminate Romanism more thoroughly than all the political orders and governmental decrees. If, however, Rome attempts to abridge other peoples' freedom, she may expect abridgement of her own. America must be protected from such an attempt; and the one source of that protection is the persistent and aggressive watchfulness of Christian churches.

....Rev. J. F. MacDuffie writes from East Durham, June 29: "I returned from my old home in Marion, S. C., the 18th inst. Was sick about a month, and the doctor advised rest. I believe everything is moving on quietly here."

....Rev. I. S. Boyles changes his address from Wake Forest to Pilot Mountain, N. C. He writes June 27th. "The Roberdel meeting resulted in thirty professions and eighteen additions to the church. I greatly enjoyed my work there."

....If any pastor or superintendent of a Sunday-school desires Bibles or Testaments for donations to destitute families or individuals, I shall be glad to furnish them. They will cost nothing except the postage or express from Raleigh.—C. Durham.

....Let no one say that we are contending for our side of the educational question for the sake of higher education alone. The poor boys and girls of our State will reap a larger benefit from our principles than is possible for the institutions of higher education.

....Rev. W. H. Sledge, who received the degree of B. A. from Wake Forest College last month, was ordained to the ministry last Monday night at Leaksville, Dr. Thames of Danville, Va., Rev. J. B. Richardson and Rev. M. A. Adams taking part in the ordination.

....There were eighteen graduates at the recent Richmond College commencement. Honorary degrees were conferred as follows: Hon. W. J. Northen, LL. D.; W. F. Dunaway, D. D., and W. L. Wright, D. D. The institution seems to be in a very encouraging condition.

....Rev. J. R. Edwards, a North Carolinian who graduated with high honors at Colgate University, N. Y., last month, writes that he will have charge of the Colgate Library this summer and also supply the Baptist church at Smyrna, N. Y. He will enter the Colgate Divinity School this fall.

....The Board of Alderman of Greensboro have by vote of eight to four refused to issue licenses to saloon-keepers. We have heard various reports as to the occasion of this vote; but we commend the result anyway. Can a Christian alderman vote to license sin! No more can one vote to allow the sale of whiskey.

....The French Broad, Mitchell County, and Yancey County Associations united with our Convention at its session in Elizabeth City last December. Dr. Durham, for the next twelve days, will be on a visit to the churches of these Associations. He will preach and address the people on missions and education at many places in that section of the State.

....Rev. N. S. Jones writes: "My work is getting on finely. I leave the 3rd for Evergreen, Ala., to spend a short vacation. I am expecting Rev. R. T. Bryan to address my people on the 19th inst. Dr. Mitchell will speak also on education in the near future."

....We learn from the Landmark that Rev. R. T. Bryan preached and lectured at Statesville last Sunday. It seems that doctors can't make him rest. He knows the needs of China too well to stop for anything. Let's help him, brother pastors. A sermon and a collection would be timely.

....Dr. Charles E. Taylor, President of Wake Forest College, N. C., was a spectator at the commencement of Richmond College. He says that Wake Forest had the most brilliant close that it has ever had; and also that he confidently looks for three hundred students at Wake Forest next session. They will come if he says so.—Baptist.

....At the meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Baptist Female University plans for the building were approved and accepted. It looks now that the institution is a certainty, though it is impossible to erect buildings in time for the opening of the next school year. Bro. Stringfield and the Board are very much encouraged.

....Sister Samantha Sanders, a member of the First Baptist church of Raleigh, died on the 26th ult. She was a pious woman and a strong Baptist. She was an owner of some real estate, which was willed to the use of a surviving blind sister, and after the death of said sister, the property goes to the Thomasville Orphanage.

....It will be very unfortunate if any political party attempts to monopolize the principles of Dr. Taylor's article. We do not care to have such principles espoused in a partisan way. The best policy is to see that the candidates believe in these principles and to require them to express their views wherever they go. And this will be done.

.... Dr. R. H. Timberlake of Wake Forest was stricken with apoplexy about two weeks ago and died on the morning of the 29th ult. He had been a resident of Wake Forest many years, and his figure will be missed by many a returning student. He was good-natured and kindly, especially to students. We extend sympathy to the bereaved family.

....The neatest chapel we know in the State has just been completed at Statesville. It is situated in the most desirable part of the town and cost $800, every dollar of which has been paid. Bro. Geo. H. Brown, cashier of the bank, is very happy over this new enterprise for the Baptists of Statesville. It was through his efforts largely that the house was erected.

....It is generally reported that Dr. Harper of Chicago University has been chosen President of Columbian University, Washington City. If he accepts, it will be for only half of his time, as he would not give up his connection with Chicago University. We would prefer that the Columbian University have its own entire Baptist President—and him an orthodox Southerner.

....Prof. Smith, who is a member of the Olive Branch Baptist church, Union county, has been teaching writing in Raleigh for the last several weeks. He informs us that Miss Mary Carter, daughter of Dr. J. W. Carter, and Miss Beulah Harris were awarded the prizes at the close of the first session of his school last week. Bro. Smith will stay with us a while longer and conduct a second session.

....Rev. O. L. Stringfield was in Raleigh for a short while last week. His first trip in the interest of the Female University, he says, was very encouraging. Much interest was shown, and many pledges secured, though, as was expected, cash donations were infrequent. The Baptist Female University will be a blessed reality in a few more months, if North Carolina Baptists will rally to Bro. Stringfield's call.

....We were very glad to receive the following from Bro. Hight C. Moore, written June 26th from Goldsboro: "Am just back from Monroe. A telegram follows me, saying I have been called to the pastorate there to succeed Bro. Adams. I will go next week if nothing prevents." The promptness of the Monroe brethren and sisters speaks well for them and their former pastor. We hope great success will attend Bro. Moore's work there.

.... With last week's issue of the Christian Sun (Raleigh, N. C.), organ of the Christian denomination in this State, Messrs. Clements & Mood retired from its proprietorship and were succeeded by Prof. R. L. Moffit and Rev. M. L. Hurley. We have enjoyed the Sun's visits under the former management, and we wish it prosperity under the new. Bro. Clements will re-enter the pastorate, and Bro. Mood will remain in the employ of the Sun. In a conversation with Bro. Clements last week, he remarked that while the sale of his paper was quite satisfactory to him, he had a great deal more satisfaction in thinking that he now had some opportunity for resting occasionally.

.... We have been much gratified at the interest taken in our request for names of our subscribers who have taken the RECORDER longest. We received the following last week, and are sure that it settles the matter for all time: Mrs. M. E. White of Fair Bluff writes: "My grandfather, Rev. Dennis Simmons, was a subscriber to the Baptist Interpreter, and continued his subscription after it became the BIBLICAL RECORDER until his death. Then my mother began taking it, and when my father and mother were married in 1847, both were subscribers. My mother has been a constant reader of the Interpreter and the RECORDER sixty-one years. My grandfather's, my father's or my mother's name has never been off your lists. Mother is now eighty-three years old, but can still see to read the RECORDER." Any paper should be gratified at this record.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

HIGH POINT.

Strangers in High Point will hardly recognize the old church. I was there just as the finishing touches were being put on. Bro. Weaver and his members deserve great credit for the exquisite taste shown in the work as well as for the amount which has been contributed. About eight hundred dollars has been expended, and for this they have the walls and over-head ceiling done up in the handsomest style in embossed paper elegant windows, the most modern pattern; neat, substantial, and very comfortable benches; a handsome pulpit-stand, and the entire outside of the church neatly painted. Everybody seems to be happy, and almost as well pleased with the new appearance of the church as they are with their preacher, and that is saying quite enough. Members of other denominations, and some not members of any church, made liberal contributions to this work. I went to

SALISBURY.

Bro. Jones was present beginning to realize that he was a grass-widow and that two States lay between him and his wife and baby. Bro. Jones is much encouraged, his church is steadily growing in numbers and in strength, his Sunday-school is better than ever before and his congregations grow larger year by year.

Patient, honest labor will tell for a preacher just the same as for men in other pursuits. If Bro. Jones shall find it in the line of duty to remain here for as many years longer as he has already remained, Salisbury will be one of our best and most interesting churches.

I was glad to have an opportunity of looking in on Bro. Alderman at CONCORD.

He is working away with a new lick, and Sister Alderman is anxious to remain and develop the interest here. About thirty members have been added to the church during the past twelve months. I have not visited a town anywhere that shows more signs of growth and real prosperity. There are more than two thousand people employed here in the various factories; and by the way, not one of these factories has failed to run on full time during the past year. I counted more than twenty new residences in course of erection, some of them costly and very handsome.

The debt on this church ought to be provided for. It takes just about all the church can do to manage the interest, and this is exceedingly discouraging to the members. If this debt could only be raised I really think the contributions would greatly increase.

Bro. Hufham has taken a new lease on life, and is at least ten years younger than when he reached Shelby. If he will interest himself in this matter, this debt can be paid, and we will start the Baptist interest here at a new pace.

I always feel like doing better when I spend a while with Bro. Hocutt. The grip got him bad for a long time, but he is better now, and is walking up to his work in good shape. There are few better towns in the State than Burlington, and every year it grows and gets better. A new church must be built here or the old one made larger, to meet the growing demands of the congregation. This ought to be done at once. This is not a "boomed" town, and with the sort of men who are interested in business here, the town will continue to grow and get better in the years to come.

Bro. Cates gave me a fine night's rest and the brethren and sisters, especially the latter, paid me their subscriptions in a way to send me in to Raleigh with the very best recollections of the incidents of my trip.

A Place for a Good Man.

Dear Recorder:—I see in the RECORDER of a recent date that there are a number of young men from our colleges and seminaries who are desirous of entering upon active work as ministers in North Carolina; and I know of no better place for one of the right kind than here in our "Alleghany" county, as we greatly need a preacher that can defend our faith and proclaim the truth as it should be told in our churches. This is a Baptist community, but those who belong to the church are mostly Anti's; so if you know of any that are truly in earnest and consecrated to the cause, send them along, as I think the field is "already white unto the harvest." They could either come to Elkin, and from there to W. C. Fields, Sparta, or go to the head of the R. R. at Wilkesboro, and come across the mountain to Laurel Springs and inquire for me, and we could give them a map of the field and start them on their work.

J. H. DOUGHTON.

Laurel Springs, June 30, 1894.

From Burlington, N. C.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—A few items from Burlington may be of some interest to your readers. Last January I had la grippe. From that time until a month ago the condition of my health would not allow me to do the amount of work that the church needed, hence, while there have been developments, we have not accomplished all that we had hoped to accomplish.

During this year we have received several members into the church in Burlington, and there are now six or eight awaiting the ordinance of baptism. Nearly every week there are those who express a desire to become Christians, and occasionally there are professions of conversion. We are making some progress in raising the money to pay the debt on our house of worship. We hope to finish this before the end of the year.

Last week we had special services in Graham. Bro. W. C. Tyree of Durham was with us three days. I need not say that his service was highly appreciated. There were two professions of conversion. We have received seven into the fellowship of this church within the last two months, and we expect to receive others soon.

Twelve months ago last Sunday, we organized at Haw River with thirty-three members. Since then we have received members at nearly every service. The fourth Sunday in May I baptised two and there are others awaiting the ordinance. We are now negotiating for a lot, and we hope to commence building soon. The outlook at this place is especially hopeful. "They have a mind to work."

Bro. Andrews is succeeding well at Glencoe. I shall administer the ordinance of baptism there next Sunday. We expect to protract the meeting through the following week.

It seems to me that the BIBLICAL RECORDER has improved more during the last two years than during any two years since I have been reading it—twenty-five years. Those paragraphs on the first page, dealing with the vital questions of the day, are worth more (many times) than the subscription price. No series of articles, within the scope of my reading, has made such an impression on the public mind as that of Dr. Taylor's. Can they be successfully answered? While these articles deal with principles, now and then some one will make personal thrusts which are hurtful.

Fraternally, JOHN C. HOCUTT.

School Exercises.

The annual exercises of Pinnacle School and Commercial Institute was well attended. The exercises commenced on Tuesday night by the primary department.

At 11 a. m. Wednesday, Rev. H. A. Brown of Winston preached the annual sermon. It was a very able one, and listened to by the large crowd with great interest.

The address before the literary societies was delivered on Thursday at 11 a. m. by Prof. W. J. Ferrell of Wake Forest College. The address was very fine and highly entertaining and instructive. Prof. Ferrell is a speaker of force and ability, and the address was much appreciated and highly spoken of. His visit to the mountain county of North Carolina will make many friends for Wake Forest College, and will, we believe, result in much good.

The declamation contest came off Thursday at 2:30 p. m. Mr. O. H. Schoub of Culler, N. C., won the medal. At 3 30 the orator's contest came off, and S. E Hall of Culler, N. C., received the medal. The medal for the best essay was won by Miss Ella Boyles of Mt. Airy, N. C.

The whole programme was unusually interesting and entertaining, and the Principal, Prof. Chas. T. Ball, was highly complimented for the manner in which the students acquitted themselves and upon his management of the school. W. A. AYERS

North Carolina Teachers' Assembly.

Dear Recorder:—The address to the teachers and other members of the Assembly by President Hobgood was delivered on Friday evening to a large and attentive audience. It had been anticipated with pleasure and interest because this the Annual Address, in a great measure, gives tone and dignity to the proceedings, and we can pay no greater compliment than to say that the courteous and scholarly speaker fulfilled the expectations of his friends and admirers. His subject was "Some Lessons from the Life of Arnold of Rugby." Those who are familiar with the history of this noble, Christ like teacher and the motives that influenced him in the conduct of his school, must feel its appropriateness. It was very timely in view of the fact that the importance of teaching the principles of the Christian religion in our institutions of learning is now engaging the attention of the thinking class of our people. The address was admirable throughout, its argument earnest and convincing, its close a beautiful and affectionate tribute to his father's memory from a son of the distinguished head master—its delivery graceful and forceful.

The glamour of the summer night, the soft rhythm of the sea, the magnetism of mind acting upon mind, all may have lent their charm, but never before were we so impressed with the harmonious blending of tenderness and strength in the character portrayed. M. PARHAM.

Ordination of Bro. H. H. Marshburn.

By request of Flat River Baptist church, a presbytery, consisting of Rev. J. J. Lansdell, Rev. W. R. Gwaltney and Rev. J. E. Smith, convened at the church, June 25th, 1894, for the purpose of examining Bro. H. H. Marshburn with a view to ordination.

Bro. Lansdell was elected Moderator, and J. E. Smith, Secretary. Then the presbytery proceeded to examine the brother.

After a full examination, the presbytery decided to ordain Bro. Marshburn. Bro. W. R. Gwaltney preached the ordination sermon in the morning, and Bro. Lansdell a sermon to the church in the afternoon. Both sermons were full of great thoughts which we should treasure up as precious gems in our hearts. J. E. SMITH.

Yadkin Association.

This Association will meet this year with Swaim's church in Yadkin county, seven miles southeast of Elkin, on Thursday, Aug. 16th. Brethren coming by rail to Elkin will please write to Moses Calloway or Richard Waggoner, Long Town, Yadkin county, N. C., and means of conveyance will be ready at Elkin to carry them to the church.

Rev. J. C. Wilson Dead.

It is a remarkable coincidence that just on the eve of going to press, the RECORDER received the following letter announcing the death of Bro. J. C. Wilson, regarding whose retirement from Olive's Chapel church resolutions were sent us last week, which appear in this column. In addition to this the poem—"A Godly Man"—in another column, was suggested by a visit to Bro. Wilson's home. The letter from Dr. Cobb follows:

Rev. John C. Wilson, for many years pastor of churches in Mt. Zion and Sandy Creek Associations, died suddenly at the house of Mr. S. Richardson on Sunday, July 1st, on his way home from Shady Grove church in Chatham county. He was at Merry Oaks, three miles from his home, on Saturday in usual health apparently. He was past seventy years of age, and was for many years Moderator of Mt. Zion Association. He will be buried at Mt. Gilead church to morrow at 11 o'clock.

Resolutions of Respect.

We, the committee appointed by Olive's Chapel church to draft resolutions in regard to the work of Rev. J. C. Wilson, submit the following:

Bro. Wilson, now in his seventy-fourth year, is worn out with a long and profitable life spent in the service of his Master. He was ordained in 1846 and preached the gospel for more than forty-six years.

His labors were principally in the counties of Chatham and Wake.

He is a man of strong convictions and has preached the gospel with great power.

He has preached at this church about twenty years—at one time thirteen years in succession. During this time many souls have been brought to Christ under his ministry. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That we return thanks to our Heavenly Father for his noble life and labors. Further, we assure Bro. Wilson, our ex-pastor, that we esteem and love him.

REV. W. S. OLIVE,
C. F. WILLIAMS,
A. T. OLIVE,
Committee.

A GODLY MAN.

I chanced to go in a quiet home,
To see a good and godly man.
He said his work on earth was done;
He's awaiting the call to a higher land.

His face was wrinkled and worn with age,
His scalp was smooth, his locks were gray;
His steps were tottering, his mind impaired,
Yet he was as calm as a balmy day.

There's holy beauty in his face,
Though faded from his youthful bloom,
There's something sacred in his ways,
That scatters away all the gloom.

His crowning day is near at hand;
There's peace and joy not far ahead;
Thus closes the days of a godly man,
Whose life's been spent in winning souls.

Gent'e and meek, with patience he waits,
Ever trusting his Saviour's hand;
Trusting his promise, through the gates,
With the holy redeemed he soon will stand.

The delivering angels soon will come,
To bear him away to his rest;
To hear the sweet message, "Well done,
Enter thou into the joys of the blest."

He soon will join that holy band
Up in the regions above;
Amid the holy redeemed to chant,
The songs of all redeeming love.

L. I. WILSON.

Ordination of Edward S. Pearce.

At the call of Eureka church, Gates county, N. C., Elders W. B. Waff and W. P. Jordan, with Deacons W. W. Knight, Frederick Brinkley and T. M. Mathias met at the home of Bro F. Brinkley for the purpose of examining Bro. E. S. Pearce relative to his ordination for the full work of the gospel ministry on the night of June 16th, 1894.

The presbytery was organized by electing Elder W. B. Waff, Chairman, and T. M. Mathias, Secretary. After a careful examination, it was unanimously agreed to have the ordination the next day.

On June 17th, 1894, met as agreed at Eureka church at 11 o'clock a. m. for the ordination. The ordination sermon was preached by W. B. Waff from Isaiah 52: 1. W. P. Jordan offered the ordaining prayer, and presented the Bible. W. B. Waff delivered the charge, which was timely and good. The right hand of fellowship was extended to Bro. Pearce by the presbytery.

After a collection of $14 73 was taken for the Orphanage, and observing the ordinance of the Lord's Supper, we adjourned.

T. M. MATHIAS, Clerk.

Bro. J. L. Kendrick Ordained.

On Sunday, June 24th, 1894, a presbytery, consisting of Dr. T. H. Pritchard, Elders V. I. Masters and S. M. Hughes of South Carolina, and Elder L. R. Pruett, convened in the Tryon Street church, Charlotte, to ordain Bro. J. L. Kendrick to the full work of the gospel ministry.

The presbytery was organized in the afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, with Dr. Pritchard as Moderator, and L. R. Pruett as Secretary.

After an interesting and a most satisfactory examination of the candidate, the presbytery proceeded to his ordination. The examination was public and very instructive. It was a very impressive service. The following programme was adopted:

Examination by Dr. Pritchard; prayer by Elder V. I. Masters; charge to the candidate by Elder L. R. Pruett; presentation of the Bible by Elder S. M. Hughes; the hand of welcome and fellowship by the presbytery; benediction by the candidate.

Bro Kendrick is well fixed for the Master's use, entering the great field as a graduate from Wake Forest and from the Seminary at Louisville. He is a young man of fine character, and gives promise for great usefulness.

The Mt. Airy saints are soon to know that they have made no mistake in securing the services, if he preaches to them as he preached to our Trade Street saints last Sunday. L. L. PRUETT.

I am much pleased with Dr. Taylor's articles and think they will certainly do great things for North Carolina.—Rev. T. M. Baldwin, Rice, N. C.

See advertisement of Dr. Whitehead of the Medical department of the State University on another page. Work there counts in institutions that give M. D. See also Dr. Manning's announcement of the widely and favorably known Law School. His students are proverbially successful applicants for licenses.

The dull season is upon us. If you can possibly renew, do so without delay. We would be very glad, also, if any our readers would send us the names of any brethren or sisters in their communities who should take the RECORDER. A little effort along this line will help mightily.

M. Sadi Carnot, President of the French Republic, was assassinated by an Italian anarchist on Sunday, June 24th, at Lyons, France, whither he had gone to see the Exhibition of Arts, Sciences and Industries. The fatal deed was committed at night as the President sat in his carriage retiring from a banquet given in his honor, the assassin jumping upon the steps of the carriage and plunging his dagger in the abdomen of the unsuspecting President. M. Casimer Perier has been chosen by the Chamber of Deputies to fill the unexpired term of President Carnot.

Why Have Young People's Societies?

BY REV. R. VAN DEVENTER.

The Lord is leading in that direction.

We join the brethren in saying the churches are sufficient; but are of the opinion that our churches are not as efficient as they should be. Many independent organizations, rivals of the churches, exist because the churches have not been doing their duty. The Lord has given us a perfect revelation of his will, and to day he is speaking to men concerning its execution. God has his throne in his churches, and from this seat of his power he takes counsel with his people relative to the work and methods. "For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things." Acts 15: 28.

God spoke from his throne in the Baptist church in Moulton concerning the forward mission movement, and the Christian people of to day do not doubt the wisdom of the work begun. In 1884, Nov. 18th, the N. C. Baptist Orphanage Association was organized. There is hardly a doubt in the mind of any as to the wisdom of that step. It is felt that the work was in answer to God's command to go forward in the work of charity. It is believed that this movement in the interest of the young people is another call from God to the Baptists of North Carolina.

Since the last Convention in E. City, this work has grown. I find that most of our strongest churches in towns have organizations for young people, and many have been organized since last December.

A wise and learned pastor says, "I am decidedly in favor of organizing the young people of our churches in Unions." He only expresses the opinion of many men. I feel, when many of our best pastors and our strongest churches endorse a movement, their action is worth the consideration of the rest of us. These things show the trend of this movement.

The Lord leaves to our judgment the methods to be used.

He would have the children taught the Bible. His people organized the Sunday-school. He wanted the churches to give the gospel to the world and said so, and his people organized a missionary society. When he tells the churches he wants them to utilize the young life, what objection can there be to the churches obeying this voice of God and organizing them for the largest usefulness!

The command of God obeyed, there will be success.

Tennyson, in his "Charge of the Light Brigade," says:

"Was there a man dismay'd?
Not tho' the soldiers knew
Some one had blunderèd:
Their's not to make reply,
Their's not to reason why,
Their's but to do and die:
Into the valley of death
Rode the six hundred."

Men may blunder and sacrifice loyal lives, and lose a noble cause; but with the command of our Captain going before, we can rest assured there can be no failure.

They are Scriptural.

It is simply going back to the method of the first century.

In the Bible and especially in the writings of Paul the young people are treated as a class. In writing to Timothy, Paul urges him to "flee youthful desires." He would not have written thus to old men. We do not expect the Christian boy to live a life like his grandfather, nor a Christian girl to emulate the ripened life of her grandmother; but we should expect Christian youth to do the straight thing, be a loyal, natural boy-like or girl-like servant of Jesus. Again, Paul tells Titus to exhort young men to be sober minded. Titus 2: 6. And in writing to Timothy, Paul insists that he, a young man, "be an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity." 1 Tim. 4: 12. John in his last days, singles out this class, and sends them a message because they are strong. 1 John 2: 14.

The Bible makes special reference to the period of youth.

It needs special and wise directing. Youth cannot withstand vain men and the children of Belial. 2 Chron. 13: 7.

It needs careful training. "As new born babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby." 1 Peter 2: 2.

Constantine had imperial plans to execute in building Constantinople. In the multitude of laborers and artificers he soon discovered the skill of his architects was unequal to the greatness of his designs. He instituted schools, appointed professors, and offered rewards and privileges to the ingenious youth who would study and practice architecture. By training Constantine would meet the demands of the future. Let the churches become as wise as the children of the world.

Lycurgus founded the glorious discipline of the Spartans on the basis that it was the noblest and most important work, to prescribe rules of living for the youth: "That the most stately trees, and fairest herbs and flowers, are beholden for their shade and beauty to the hand that first fixed them in an agreeable soil."

If we would have strong and efficient churches in the future—churches that will take up the work of to-day and carry it forward, let us get in our forces and begin to utilize our resources. The Southern Baptist Convention said this work belonged to the churches, and should be under the direction of the churches. I trust the churches in North Carolina will lay hold of their opportunity.

A holy life proclaims God's power in the soul, and stirs the malice of the Devil.

Constitutional Beginnings of North Carolina.

By John Spencer Bassett, A. B., Ph. D., late Fellow in History at Johns Hopkins University and Professor of History in Trinity College, N. C.

[REVIEWED BY H. A. FOUSHEE, ESQ.]

Such is the title of a very interesting monograph by a brilliant young North Carolinian in whose success we may well rejoice. He is one of five North Carolina boys who have won the high honor of a fellowship in Johns Hopkins; Walter Page, Editor of the Forum; C. L. Smith, Professor in Wm. Jewell College; C. A. Smith, Professor in the University of Louisiana and A. M. Carroll, son of Dr. J. L Carroll, now a student in Germany, being the other four.

The inscription on the title-page is Freeman's epigram: "History is Past Politics, and Politics Present History."

Beginning with the general features of the Proprietary Period, he treats of the development of civil liberty and the economic and social conditions. Next he shows us the source of the Constitution of North Carolina, which was the English manorial organization. "There was in England, until the days of modern reform, two local jurisdictions. On the one hand, was the authority of the king, exerted through the sheriff in the county and the reeve in the township; on the other hand, was the authority of the lord of the manor, exercised either in person or through his steward. The one stood for the people and the people's leader, the king; the other stood for the land and the land's owner, the lord. The one was expressed tangibly in the jurisdiction of the township and of the county; the other in the private jurisdiction of the courts baron and leet. Now it is the latter institution that we mean by the manorial organization." But it was not the simple English Manor but rather the County Palatine—the highest form of the manor—that was the source of our Constitutions.

The author next discusses the Proprietors and the Constitution, the legal status of the Proprietors and their theory of government, closing with an analysis of the Constitution.

The time embraced by the book is from 1663 to 1729 inclusive.

The above is a brief analysis of what the reader may expect to find discussed at length. I shall attempt to call attention to only a few facts that may be of interest to the general reader.

First, I notice that Dr. Bassett explodes the old notion that there ever was any organic union between North and South Carolina. Both were governed by a Governor of Carolina up to 1710 when he was directed to appoint a Deputy Governor for each colony. "These two were therefore entirely co ordinate in authority. From the fact that the Governor of Carolina usually appointed his deputy for North Carolina and lived in more populous and more cultured South Carolina, which he often ruled in person, the idea has sometime appeared that the Governor of the northern colony was dependent, not on the Governor of Carolina but on the Governor of South Carolina."

North Carolina was a liberty-loving colony even then, and in their struggle for their rights from 1670 to 1712, her people drove from office six of their fourteen governors. During this time there were actually two rebellions and the inhabitants were kept in a constant state of unrest. Governor Spottswood of Virginia spitefully remarked that the people of North Carolina were so used to turning out their governors that they thought they had a right to do so. This restlessness was not the result of a lawless spirit, but because the people had real grievances.

There is one fact that makes North Carolina unique among all Southern colonies. That fact lies in the economic condition of the early settlement. Two forces tended to keep it a poor colony. First, it was the policy of the Proprietors to grant the land in small holding, 640 acres being usually the maximum quantity. Only a few persons, the hereditary nobility—and in North Carolina they were few—could acquire larger tracts. Therefore land owners were not powerful. In Virginia and South Carolina, where it was the custom to make large grants, a predominant landed aristocracy soon sprang into existence. Situated in the midst of slaveholding States, our State has not escaped; but, while it has always been only mildly aristocratic, it has at no time been dominated by a few powerful families.

Again, Dr. Bassett calls attention to the fact that the attitude of the Constitution towards religion was exceedingly liberal for that time. The Constitution provided for perfect toleration of all churches. It was necessary for a church to have legal standing to have seven members. It was required that they must believe in a God, publicly worshipped, and declare their method of testifying in a court of justice. Even in this day it would be hard to call any body of people a church that could not come up to these requirements. We must also remember that this was a time when Parliament passed the iniquitous Test, Conventicle and Five Mile Acts.

Christopher Gale was the first Chief Justice, becoming such in 1718. The number of Associate Justices varied from two to ten. The Associates had equal authority with the Chief. The Court met three times a year. In the early part of the century it was permissible for a Justice to come from the bench in order to represent a client before the court of which he was a member, but in 1715 this was forbidden.

The thesis is full of interesting facts regarding our early history which no student of North Carolina history can afford to overlook. The style is simple and plain but strongly natural.

It is reason for congratulation that Dr. Bassett will reside in our State. In the vigor of young manhood, possessed of untiring energy and a thorough acquaintance with the best methods of historical research, he purposes doing much to rescue our State history from oblivion and give us just cause to be prouder than we are of the "Good Old North State."

North Carolina Baptist S. S. Chautauqua.

SECOND ANNUAL MEETING.

The second annual meeting of the North Baptist Sunday school Chautauqua will be held at Mount Vernon Springs, Chatham county, on the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley Railroad, one mile from Ore Hill, beginning on Tuesday, August 28th, at 4 p. m., and continue till Sunday, September 2d, 1894.

Special rates for board have been secured at the Mount Vernon Springs Hotel, as follows: "Per day, $1.00; full week, $5.00; and in private residences near by at seventy-five cents per day, or $5 00 full week. Usual reduced fare will be granted over all the railroads in the State.

The full programme of exercises will be issued by the Executive Committee during the month of July.

The meeting at this place last August was most delightful and profitable to all the Sunday school workers who attended. From the first to the last day it was a spiritual and an instructive feast.

The object of the Chautauqua is to bring together the Baptist Sunday school workers of North Carolina in an annual meeting for mutual interchange of methods of teaching and conducting the school in every department, and for invoking special spiritual preparation in same. It will prove a blessing to any officer or teacher. It will aid and stimulate the school represented. It will warm the heart of any pastor.

Our brethren and sister of Mount Vernon Springs Baptist church, and the people of the community generally, will do all in their power for our comfort and for the success of the Chautauqua.

The grove in which Mount Vernon Springs church is situated is a very large one, and parties desiring to do so can take tents or make shelters and "camp" in the grove during the Chautauqua. Several did this last year, and found it very comfortable.

We hope every Baptist Sunday-school in the State will send at least one representative.

Only the Scars Remain.

"Among the many testimonials which I see in regard to certain medicines performing cures, cleansing the blood, etc.," writes HENRY HUDSON, of the James Smith Woolen Machinery Co., Philadelphia, Pa., "none impress me more than my own case. Twenty years ago, at the age of 13 years, I had swellings come on my legs, which broke and became running sores. Our family physician could do me no good, and it was feared that the bones would be affected. At last, my good old mother urged me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles, the sores healed, and I have not been troubled since. Only the scars remain, and the memory of the past, to remind me of the good Ayer's Sarsaparilla has done me. I now weigh two hundred and twenty pounds, and am in the best of health. I have been on the road for the past twelve years, have noticed Ayer's Sarsaparilla advertised in all parts of the United States, and always take pleasure in telling what good it did for me."

For the cure of all diseases originating in impure blood, the best remedy is

The Old Yadkin Association.

Dear Recorder:—It is a rare occurrence that a reader of the RECORDER sees anything in its columns from the Old Yadkin Association. It being one of the oldest Associations in the State seems to be left out of the count in many respects. The brethren fail to write about it as they do in some other Associations. I mean there is not much said about it in the papers. The contributions from it are not one-tenth what they should be. It has failed to meet its pledge, to contribute half of Bro. Tatum's support in China. At its last session after Bro. Bryan's earnest plea, the delegates pledged themselves to raise in their churches one cent a month per member for Foreign Missions.

Judging from the amount I have seen reported from the Association in the RECORDER this year, I am very fearful that hardly one-tenth of that amount will be raised. I am very sorry that this state of affairs exists.

The trouble with our people is a lack of information concerning the various objects for which we are called on to contribute. To my mind the way to remedy this evil is to get the RECORDER in at least a dozen families of each church. I think Bro. Caddell could not find a more needful field for a two-weeks' canvass in the interest of the RECORDER than within the bounds of the Yadkin Association. Come up, Bro. Caddell, and see us. Fraternally,

A. J. MARTIN.

Hamptonville, June 14, 1894.

To the Baptist Pastors of North Carolina.

Dear Brethren:—It may be some student of the A. and M. College, located at West Raleigh, lives near you or in reach of some of your churches. Since the first of January, I have been thrown in contact with these young men—some of them from Baptist families. The protracted meeting at West End was a great blessing to the students. Some of those professing faith in Christ have told me they expected to unite with Baptist churches on their return home. Others may do so if they can know more of our teaching.

Then, too, I want to ask all pastors of young men coming to this school to encourage them to take church letters with them as they return the first of September and unite with us in our West Raleigh work. Our building is near the College, and this work is of great importance in the present and future.

Our young brethren are kindly invited to take hold of this work with us while in school. They will feel more at home and exert a greater religious influence by actively uniting with us. The church is now a branch of the First Baptist church of Raleigh, but is to become independent during the fall.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

An Odd Collection.

A man in Colorado has a quaint collection of bottles. It is divided into two sections. Section one is large. Section two is not. Section one contains hundreds of bottles, the contents of which his wife swallowed to find relief from her physical sufferings. Section two contains a few bottles that once were filled with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It was this potent remedy that gave the suffering wife her health again. It cures all irregularities, internal inflammation and ulceration, displacements and kindred troubles. It has done more to relieve the sufferings of woman than any other medicine known to science.

Pile tumors, rupture and fistulæ, radically cured by improved methods. Book, ten cents in stamps. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

At the bottom of every man there is an abyss which hope, joy, ambition, hate, love, the sweetness of thinking, the pleasure of writing, the pride of conquest cannot fill. The whole world would not satisfy it; but, O my God! a drop, one single drop of Thy grace causes it to overflow.—Joseph Roux.

Prayers need not be fine. I believe God abhors fine prayers. If a person asks charity of you in elegant sentences, he is not likely to get it.—Spurgeon.

Obstacles count for nothing to God's ready messengers—nay, stumbling stones become stepping-stones when our feet are shod with sanctified alacrity.—A. T. Pierson, D. D.

God delights in the heart in which pure thoughts are made welcome.

Build a little fence of trust
Around to day,
Fill the space with loving works
And therein stay;
Look not through the sheltering bars
Upon to-morrow,
God will help thee bear what comes
Of joy or sorrow.

Oil Cure Cancer.

OVER 2,000 CASES SUCCESSFULLY TREATED IN THE LAST TWO YEARS.—INTERNAL EJECTIONS.—EXTERNAL APPLICATIONS.

A great boon to suffering humanity. No need of cutting off a woman's breast, or a man's cheek or nose, in a vain attempt to cure Cancer. No use of applying burning plasters to the flesh and torturing those already weak from suffering.

Soothing, Balmy, Aromatic Oils give safe, speedy and certain cure. The most horrible forms of disease, Cancer on the face, breast, womb, stomach. Large Tumors, Ugly Ulcers, Fistula, Catarrh, Terrible Skin Diseases, etc., are all successfully treated by the application of various forms of simple Oils. The Oils are a great blessing to women, in the treatment of many ailment which can be reached by internal or outward applications. Dr. Bye secured a patent on his trade mark. The combination Oil Cure, No. 23,099, registered May 23, 1893. Notwithstanding his protection, imitators have tried to make money, advertising the Oil treatment, but all such are base frauds. He has but two offices, here and at Kansas City, Kan. The latter conducted by his son, B. E. Bye, and Dr. John Morgan, formerly president of the Examining Board of Fort Worth, Tex. Dr. Bye's Remedy of Oils is recommended and endorsed by the highest medical authority in the world. The secretary of the Pan-American Congress gave Dr. Bye a letter of recommendation of him and his great remedy to the most eminent of the profession in Mexico City, Mexico, where the oils are being tested with astonishing results in the leading hospitals of that great city. Thirty doctors and wives of doctors have been cured in the last two years, which shows their confidence in the Mild Method treatment.

Dr. Padget, of Fond du Lac, Wis., a cancer specialist, said to Dr. Bye: "I have taken out many cancers with knife and plaster, but my wife has one in the breast. She is old and feeble. Dr. Bye, I want you to cure her with your oils. I have friends who recommended your treatment, who belong to the profession. I have faith in you, and my wife dreads the knife."

Members of the State Board recommend the oil treatment. Hear what one of Illinois' most noted physicians writes to Dr. Bye:

"The Lord has wonderfully blessed you in giving you such a remedy. I am sure that in active practice of twenty-five years I have never seen anything that could come anywhere near it for healing, disinfecting and as a general microbe destroyer. May the Lord continue to bless you in your labors and spread the knowledge of your medicine until it shall be universally known."

Dr. Clark is one of the medical examiners of the State of Illinois.

Dr. W. E. Burnett of Norris City, Ill., writes Dr. Bye the following letter: "I said to my friends that I was satisfied they had the right physician treating the cancer, for I firmly believe, Doctor, that you have reached a point in the scale of science which no other physician has ever reached in treating the dreadful trouble known as Cancer."

It would seem strange, indeed, if any person afflicted with Cancer or Tumor, or any of the above-mentioned diseases, would, after knowing the facts, resort to the dreadful knife or burning plaster, which has hitherto been attended with such fatal results, if they know of the Balmy Oil Treatment.

Dr. Bye's office is located at 492 North Tennessee St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Persons are requested to cut this ad. out and send it to some one afflicted and save suffering and life. More than one-half of all their patients have learned of them in this way. Recently a man by the name of Bacon in Chicago, who was suffering with cancer, showed a two-line ad. pasted in his scrap book. "This I shall keep while I live; it saved my life." He was successfully cured by Dr. Bye of an awful cancer.

President Woman's Central Committee of North Carolina, MISS FANNIE E. HECK, Raleigh, N. C.; Secretary, MRS. J. A. BRIGGS, Raleigh, N. C.

A Small Request.

The Woman's Central Committee of Missions wishes to help every Woman's and Children's Missionary Society in the Baptist churches of North Carolina, by sending to every such Society a monthly package of free missionary literature. The Committee now sends this literature to 265 societies, but feel sure there are many others who would be benefited by the receipt of this missionary information, which can be had for the asking. The literature consists of a small paper, published for the information of the missionary societies, containing a monthly program for meeting, &c., called Missionary Talk, reports of societies, and tracts published by the Home, Foreign, and Sunday-school Boards of the Southern Baptist Convention.

You will, therefore, confer a benefit on both the Society and the Central Committee by sending the names and the post-office addresses of the Presidents and Secretaries of the Societies mentioned below and of any others known to you as not receiving this literature.

Please be careful to state name of church and Association, and send at once to

"Disfigured For Life"

Is the despairing cry of thousands afflicted with unsightly skin diseases.
Do you realize what this disfiguration means to sensitive souls?
It means isolation, seclusion.
It is a bar to social and business success.
Do you wonder that despair seizes upon those sufferers when
Doctors fail, standard remedies fail,
And nostrums prove worse than useless?
Skin diseases are most obstinate to cure.
CUTICURA REMEDIES
Have earned the title Skin Specifics
Because for years they have met with most remarkable success.
There are cases that they cannot cure, but they are few indeed.

The Board Debt.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I have read the call of Dr. Ellis and Bro. Van Deventer for five dollars from each pastor to relieve the balance of debt on the Foreign Mission Board. I am in sympathy with that call, but I doubt the justice of it. The faithful pastors of our churches have give liberally to this and other Boards. They have made denials and now many of them cannot meet this new call. Dr. Ellis can. He has a large salary, paid promptly and can meet this call without denial. Bro. Van Deventer has only a wife and himself, but most of our pastors have larger families and cannot give as liberally as these and other brethren. For one, I am going to help a little on this debt, but is it just to our other Boards to make this extra call at this time? For one I believe something is wrong in our methods, when we bring up such debts as this and then appeal to the churches and pastors who have already given liberally to this object to give again. I do not believe it is God's pleasure to run our Boards on the credit system. In the management of my own financial affairs when I close the year with a debt, I curtail and I believe this is the custom of the best business houses; and I am of the opinion that our Boards should do likewise. These debts on our Boards are injurious to our work and I am in favor of making our plans according to our means. For one I am tired of debt-making and helping pay debts, the making of which have been against my judgment.

Literary.

A Mexican Ranch; or Beauty for Ashes. A Prize Story. By Mrs. Janie Pritchard Duggan. 12mo, 376 pp. Price, $1 25. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

This book was the result of an offer of five hundred dollars for the best story along certain lines of Christian character and work. The judges to whom the stories were referred were unanimous in selecting this as worthy of the prize. One of these judges, Prof. Enoch Perrine of Bucknell University says of it: "This is excellent in every way; clear and simple in plot, correct in expression, and restrained in thought." We believe that the verdict of the judges will be sustained by all the readers of the story.

It is a discussion of the principle of Christian indebtedness, or the obligation that one who has is under to impart to him who has not. To illustrate this, the author, who has been a missionary in connection with the Southern Board, has chosen Mexico, a field with which she is perfectly familiar. The principle character of the story, Mary Summers, a young woman of social standing, wealth, and culture, finds that she has been receiving much from the Master and giving nothing. Under the intense white light of a strong conviction of duty, and privilege as well, she consecrates herself to his service, and to that of her fellow-men. Making a thorough course of preparation, with especial reference to the care of the sick by a term of nursing in a hospital, she offered herself and was accepted as a missionary. The story opens with her at the ranch of San Bernabe in the north of Mexico. It follows her in her work, in school and mothers' meetings, and the sick room. It tells of the gradual transformation of life and character, which always comes with the coming of the Christ. Superstition gives place to faith, and the "oil of gladness" in many a heart and home takes the place of the "ashes of mourning." Vivid descriptions of Mexican life and scenery are thrown in; and touches of humanness; the bitter opposition of Don Gregorio; the womanly sketch of Angela; and the romantic attachment of Jose to the bright attractive young missionary.

It is a true story, not in the sense that each person and scene described is real in fact, but in the sense that just what is depicted here really has and does exist. The ignorance is there; and the superstition, and the consecration, and the blessed result are all there. San Bernabe will stand for many a real ranch, and the story of the wise, loving, devoted missionary there, told in so interesting a manner ought to be an inspiration wherever it goes.

The illustrations of the book are well chosen and executed, most of them being from life. It is well printed and beautifully bound, and is to form the first of a series called The Crown Series, and consisting of select Christian fiction. We predict for this volume, and the series to which it belongs, a large circulation and a wide career of usefulness.

The News Observer Chronicle, Raleigh, N. C., has been placed in the hands of a receiver. It is heavily in debt. The date of sale is July 16, when it is thought the company will be reorganized and the publication of the journal continued as usual.

It is thought that either Dr. James Atkins of Asheville, Prof. Wilbur Tillett or Prof. Dancy of Vanderbilt University, Tenn., or Mr. J. H. Southgate of Durham will succeed Dr. Crowell to the Presidency of Trinity College. The trustees meet this week.

A large tobacco prize-house at Greenville, property of the American Tobacco Company the trust that defies North Carolina's present administration, was blown down on the 28th ult. Eighteen men were at work upon it at the time, five of whom were slightly, two seriously injured and one probably fatally.

One Jackson cut and seriously wounded policeman Hofman of High Point, who attempted to arrest him. Sensational reports of the matter, stating that Jackson terrorized the entire community and defied a large gathering of men, were sent out. The Enterprise says these reports were false; that Jackson escaped by running.

Raleigh, June 30, 1894.

Several New York banks agreed recently to relieve the National Treasury of the burden of gold shipments, and instead of calling on the Secretary of the Treasury to ship gold to Europe, send it themselves. They did it with a motive of self-preservation, knowing that if the Nation's credit becomes impaired, National banks will suffer in proportion.

HELPLESS INVALID.

"About 18 months or two years ago my wife's health gave way, and she grew steadily worse. She could not retain scarcely anything she ate and the case finally assumed the worst form of

DYSPEPSIA and CHRONIC DIARRHŒA,

and she became a helpless invalid at the age of 18. I had her under the treatment of a good physician, but his efforts to relieve her were of no avail. So, after matters had continued thus for 8 or 10 months, and my wife had given up to die, I took the case in my own hands and purchased a bottle of Dr. King's began giving it to her in water as hot as she could drink it, before and after each meal, using a mild purgative occasionally on retiring at night.

Suffice it to say in less than a week there was

A WONDERFUL CHANGE.

A Little Girl's Escape.

HOW SHE WAS RESCUED FROM A LIFE OF TORTURE.

ALMOST BEYOND THE HOPE OF RECOVERY—A LOVING FATHER'S GRATITUDE.

(From Kansas City, Mo., Journal.)

Perhaps no disease with which a young person can be afflicted is so terrible and blighting in its nature as a nervous disorder, which gradually saps the strength of its victim and haunts him or her day and night.

This was the melancholy prospect which confronted Mr. L. L. Barbor's young daughter of Edgerton, Kan., and the gratitude of her parents when a complete and lasting cure was brought about may be imagined. Learning of the case, for it is one which has created a great deal of interest throughout the county, a Journal reporter sought Mr. Barbor to get the full particulars in the belief that much good could be done other sufferers by the publication of the facts of the case. The reporter found Mr. Barbor in his shop busily engaged on a piece of work. He at once narrated briefly the particulars of the cure which had been affected in the case of his daughter. The facts are set forth in the following affidavit which Mr. Barbor voluntarily and cheerfully made:

L. L. Barbor being duly sworn, on oath deposes and says:

During the spring of the current year, 1893, my daughter Bertie, aged thirteen years, became afflicted with a nervous disease which grew upon her to such an extent that it seriously interfered with her studies, and aroused the gravest fears that it would develop into St. Vitus' dance. My daughter became so nervous that she would drop her knife and fork while eating, and would at times be seized with nervous twitchings which excited the alarm of myself and wife. About this time my wife read in a newspaper of a wonderful cure of the same disease effected by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. So strongly was I impressed with the facts set forth in the testimonial that I wrote to ascertain the authenticity of the case. Receiving a reply which completely satisfied me, I sent for a box of the pills.

From the very first dose a marked improvement in my daughter's condition was noticed. She had become thin and excessively pale, as is common to sufferers from nervous diseases, and her weight had decreased to an alarming extent. After a careful and thorough trial of the pills, she not only began to grow less nervous but also began to gain flesh.

It is needless to say that I was both surprised and delighted with the wonderful change brought about by the first box of the pills. She is a new girl, and all the symptoms of her disease have disappeared. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have certainly wrought a wonderful and complete cure, and I can say nothing too good in their favor. But now she is away on a visit, something she would not have thought of being able to do three months ago. From being shrinking, morbid and timid she has become a strong, healthy girl with no appearance of ever having been afflicted with any nervous troubles. The pills have done wonders, and I take great pleasure in recommending the pills to all who are afflicted with a similar disease.

(Signed) L. L. BARBOR.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 14th day of August, 1893.

[SEAL] W. H. KELLY, Notary Public.

Mrs. Barbor, who was present, cordially assented to all that her husband said regarding the remarkable cure brought about by the pills, and declared that they owed their daughter's life to them.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain in a condensed form all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood, and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, and that tired feeling from nervous prostration; all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature.

These Pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and Brockville, Ont., and are sold only in boxes bearing the firm's trade-mark and wrapper at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and are never sold in bulk or by the dozen or hundred.

From Little Alice.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Will you please allow me a few lines in your good paper for the benefit of our S. S. Chautauqua? Parties have written me concerning board in private families. If I can be of any service to them, it will be with pleasure. There is but one hotel at Mt. Vernon Springs, but good board can be secured in good families near the Springs, and there is plenty of nice rooms and clean beds. We are home like folks at Mt. Vernon Springs and will do the very best for you we can. I think thirty or forty can get board in good, quiet homes. Some who boarded among us last Chautauqua spoke then for board this year, so pleased were they with their homes.

We are looking and expecting in every paper to see a letter from Rev. Mr. Emerson.

There was a little mistake made in my last letter: it put Uncle Joe's sickness ten years instead of two. Uncle Joe is dead now, and gone to be with the angels of rest. Although he had no children, he always had a smile for us little folks.

Visitors are coming nearly every day to drink the water here.

ALICE RUSSELL.

Closing Exercises at King's Mountain.

The closing exercises at King's Mountain began Wednesday night, June 20th, 1894, by the literary department, consisting of speeches, essays and comic dialogues, all of which were judiciously selected, thoroughly prepared, admirably rendered and enthusiastically received by the very large, exceedingly well behaved, appreciative audience. Thursday afternoon, after the furious rainstorm had passed, Hon. C. B. Watson of Winston, the speaker for the occasion, delivered a most excellent address, which was plain, pointed, practical, truthful, witty and wise. This address was understood and appreciated by all present, and will in coming time bear fruit to the honor of the noble speaker and the good of the hearers.

At night the music department charmed the densely-packed audience with vocal and instrumental solos and duets—violins, harps, guitars, and one of E. M. Andrews' silvery-toned pianos being freely and admirably used.

GILL—TAYLOR—On June 27th, 1894, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Jesse F. Taylor, near Raleigh, by Rev. Dr. J. W. Carter, Mr. David E. Gill and Sonora Taylor.

MARSHBURN—RICHARDSON—On June 24th, 1894, at the residence of Mrs. A. W. Richardson, by Rev. J. V. Devenny, Mr. Otis M. Marshburn of Wake county and Miss Nora L. Winstead-Richardson of Johnston county.

JONES—LAWRENCE—On June 20th, 1894, at the residence of the bride's father, by Rev. J. W. Atkinson, Dr. A. O. Jones and Miss Virginia E. Lawrence, all of Wake county.

DIED.

McLESTER—On May 23d, 1894, at her home in Concord, N. C., Mrs. Mary B. McLester passed away after a lingering sickness of many months. She left a husband and ten children to follow her to the brighter world. From early maidenhood she lived a consistent Christian life. Her life was a beautiful proof of living Christianity. PASTOR.

HUBBARD—Died at Hamer, Caswell county, June 18th, Bro. Henry Hubbard, in the eightieth year of his age. A few hours before the end came he told me that he was perfectly resigned to the Lord's will and was ready to go. He had been a member of the church about fifty years, and from all I can learn lived a consistent Christian life. "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace." May the Lord comfort the bereaved. J. R. JONES.

DUDLEY—Mr. George Dudley, son of C. B. and F. I. Dudley, of Oak Grove township, Wake county, was born March 2d, 1876, and died June 8th, 1894, of eating poison hemlock, supposing it to be angelica. He was a grandson of the late David C. Dudley, Sr., of Raleigh. He was a member of the Missionary Baptist church at New Bethel, Barton's Creek township. Bro. Dudley leaves an aged father and mother, four sisters and three brothers. Two of his brothers are away from home and do not know of his death, and one is at home with his parents, to mourn the loss of one so dear to them. Bro. Dudley was converted under the preaching of Bro. George W. Coppedge of Wakefield. He was a devoted servant of the Lord about four years, and was very much loved by all who knew him, and we believe it was the greatest pleasure of his life to serve his Master. Since the good Master in his divine wisdom saw best to take him to himself we do pray that he will send home the two absent sons to comfort their aged parents. A FRIEND.

ROYSTER—Janie Royster, the youngest child of Maj. Beverly S. and Mamie Holgood Royster, died on June 17th, 1894, after an illness of eight days. She was born January 14th, 1893, and at her death was only one year, five months and three days old; but O how sad a void has her death made in the home and hearts of her devoted parents and little sister!

Janie was a very intelligent and lovely child, with a beautiful disposition, and she won an abiding place in the hearts of all that knew her. During her sickness she bore with remarkable patience her sufferings, taking without hesitation whatever medicine was given her. She died on her mother's birthday, and the day on which her little cousin died a few years ago.

"She thought the good night kiss was given,
And like a lily her life did close;
Angels uncurtained that repose,
And the next waking dawned in heaven."

J. S. H.

STALLINS—Bro. William Stallins departed this life June 17th, 1894, aged sixty-seven years, three months and eleven days. This servant of God was a member of Sandy Cross church for more than thirty-five years. The brethren loved him and gave every attention during his illness. The disease was slow, but sure to destroy life. Patiently he waited and endured his sufferings, hoping that relief would come, and that he might be spared to remain with his aged wife longer. But when he realized that he must move from this to the world of spirits, he bowed with submission. Closing his eyes upon earth he bade farewell to his earthly home and friends, and quietly sank beneath the Jordan of death. In this dispensation of God's providence the church, the community, and his home, sustains a great loss. As a church member, neighbor, husband and father, the brethren say the vacancy in many respects will never be supplied. Bro. Stallins had a hold upon the people. This was seen at the old home where the funeral service was conducted by the writer. O the tears of these dear people over this aged father. He leaves a wife, six grown children, with a host of friends to mourn their loss. O aged lonely widow, home is dark to you, but Jesus is there. Look up to him and listen; he will soon call for thee. "Be ye also ready." JOSIAH ELLIOTT.

TATUM—Sister Cynthia Lucrethia Tatum, daughter of Mr. J. H. Thompson, late of Davidson county, and wife of Mr. D. G. Tatum of Jerusalem, Davie county, N. C., died suddenly Monday morning, June 11th, at Petra Mills, to which place she had gone for her health. A sudden attack of heart trouble took her redeemed spirit to the paradise of God.

The bereaved family, accompanied by sorrowing and sympathizing relatives and friends, arrived at their home in Jerusalem, and the body of the departed loved one was borne tenderly, lovingly, and sorrowfully into the house, where it rested until next day afternoon when, after appropriate religious services, it was carried and laid in its final resting place in the family cemetery. A large concourse of relatives and friends attended the funeral obsequies, deeply sympathizing with the bereaved family. Thank God "we sorrow not as those who have no hope."

Sister Tatum was forty-six years old, and had been a member of the church at Jerusalem about nineteen years. She was a pious, quiet, gentle Christian, whom all loved. She bore her affliction with fortitude and patience. Her bereaved husband and children and the church all mourn, but are comforted, knowing that their loss is her eternal gain.

PASTOR.

CASHION—Addison Baxter Cashion, one of our number, is dead. He passed into a sweet repose Friday night, June 8th. He is dead, yet he lives on and on in his many deeds of charity and kindness. He was a true Christian and a devoted husband and father. It seemed as if his life of usefulness had just opened, but now we realize that he was just ripening for heaven. For the last two years he had taken a greater interest in the church and in the general affairs of his country than ever before. As teacher of the Bible class at Independence Hill he had drawn the members near him through the tender chords of his love and faith in Christ; and oh how sadly he will be missed, but God saw fit to remove him from our midst. Though it is hard to part with him, still we bow submissively to the heavenly will. He always seemed happy and content with all God gave him. In his last illness his faith seemed to increase, and he patiently bore the twelve weeks of intense sufferings with Christian fortitude. His presence was always a pleasure to those who knew him best. He had ever a kind word for all, and always sympathized with his young relatives in their various pleasures and sorrows. He cannot come to us, but in God's appointed time we shall "gather at the river," greet him again in our Father's eternal home.

"Asleep in Jesus, peaceful rest,
Whose waking is supremely blest,
No fear, no woe, shall dim that hour
That manifests the Saviour's power."

is located in Franklin Co., N. C., 18 miles east of Louisburg. Unsurpassed for health and refinement. Situated in the country, it is free from the objectionable features of city and town schools. Good board in 300 yds of the Academy at $7 per month (28 days.) There are two regular boarding houses, one for young men, the other for young ladies, besides a number of private homes in which board can be had. Girls who board are required to board with the principal, unless otherwise requested by parent or guardian.

A FULL CORPS OF EFFICIENT TEACHERS. Commercial instruction is a specialty. Diplomas are awarded to those who complete the commercial course as prescribed in catalogue. There is great demand for young men of a business education.

MUSIC, both instrumental and vocal, holds a prominent place in our school. We keep posted as to the requirements for matriculation in the different colleges of the State, and so direct the course of those who expect to attend college that they may take good stands in their classes. For those who wish to prepare for teaching in public schools we arrange a special course looking towards that end. Our school is not for young men who wish to play the dude, nor for young ladies who wish to be society belles and pass their time in idleness, but for those who are earnestly desirous of a practical business education, or of sufficient preparation to enter college.

God Knows.

Through all my little daily cares there is
One thought that comfort brings whene'er it comes;
'Tis this: "God knows." He knows indeed full well
Each struggle that my hard heart makes to bring
My will to his. Often, when night-time comes,
My heart is full of tears because the good
That seemed at morn so easy to be done
Has proved so hard, but then, remembering
That a kind Father is my Judge I say,
"He knows," and so I lay me down with trust
That his good hand will give me needed strength
To better do his work in coming days.

Running a Race.

A little tear and a little smile
Set out to run a race;
We watched them closely all the while,
Their course was baby's face.

The little tear he got the start
We really feared he'd win;
He ran so fast, and made a dart
Straight for her dimpled chin.

But somehow—it was very queer,
We watched them all the while—
The little, shining, fretful tear
Got beaten by the smile.

A String of Gold Beads.

"Oh, auntie, they are so lovely, such a pretty size and such an exquisite dull gold, that I could hardly come away and leave them!" and here Edith paused for a much-needed breath.

"What is so lovely? and where are they to be found?" inquired Aunt Rye putting down her sewing and preparing to listen with attention.

"Why, gold beads, at Mr. Wells, the jeweler's. Oh, such beauties! All the girls are going to get a string. It's the very latest thing, and so pretty! And I'm so glad that I haven't spent my last allowance. Papa sent me an extra five dollars for a birthday favor, and it's lying up stairs in my desk this very minute. You know Mr. Wells' things are always reliable, and I am sure papa will let me have the beads, if you approve. And you do; don't you Aunt Rye, dear!" pleaded the tall niece excitedly.

"Well, dearie, when I was a girl we thought gold beads were to be kept until after our first party; but I think the idea pretty and a sensible one too, for if you take care of them they will last a life time; so I think I shall have to say yes. If to-morrow is fine, I will meet you after school, and we will do a little shopping, and buy your beads," replied the gentle lady, who never denied her niece any little pleasure which she could conscientiously give her.

They did go shopping the next afternoon, but, wonderful to relate, no gold beads were bought, and nobody regretted the exchange. This is how it all happened: Early the following morning Edith had gone to her dressmaker's to be fitted, and found the poor woman sobbing bitterly as she sewed upon the handsome garment. A few sympathetic questions brought out the whole story. She had just received a letter from a widowed friend saying: "Send your little sick girl out to me for the winter. I can't afford to send the money for her ticket; but if you send her, I will take good care of her, give her nourishing food, and this clear, bracing air will do her more good than whole quarts of medicine."

Delighted beyond measure, the poor mother had toiled hard for the money, and had finished and taken the work home that was to bring it, only to find that it was not convenient for a fashionable woman to pay her faithful seamstress for some time.

"She ought to be ashamed of herself! She has stacks of money, and your work is so beautiful! But don't cry, Mrs. Brown; I shall tell Aunt Rye all about it, and little Janie shall have her trip in spite of everything; so cheer up, and see if everything doesn't turn out all right," reassured the young visitor.

But it was Edith after all, and not Aunt Rye, whose generous heart and bright mind found a very practical way out of the difficulty. That night, before Mrs. Brown had put out her lamp, an expressman left a large wooden box marked with Janie's name at the shabby little brown house.

Upon opening it, out came materials for a pretty winter dress, a comfortable gray ulster, a pretty hat daintily trimmed with nice ribbon, fleece lined gloves, and two whole sets of fine warm flannels. These were Aunt Rye's gifts. In the pocket of the little ulster a gay red purse lay, holding a crisp ten-dollar bill, marked "For Janie's journey, with Miss Edith's love."

"Oh, mother, it's fairies!" cried the delicate child joyfully.

"It's better than fairies, for it's real Christian folks with kind hearts under their fine clothes," replied the grateful mother softly.

"Well, Aunt Rye, I've spent every cent I have; my pocket book's as flat as a flounder," but I'm happier than anybody I know of, and I haven't bought a single gold bead," cried Edith exultingly as the expressman carried off the heavy box.

"Well, dearie, I differ with you, for I think your ten dollars has bought a few gold beads."

"Why, Aunt Rye, what do you mean?" demanded Edith.

"Well, dear, the cheerful sacrifice of a little piece of girlish vanity has slipped three very lovely beads, called unselfishness, love for one's neighbor, and cheerful giving, on your life chain; and I am sure there are three others, called gratitude, thanksgiving and hope, on Mrs. Brown's chain, while you supplied three others, joy, love and childish pleasure, to little Janie; and before long I hope a great and splendid bead called good health will keep the others from slipping off. So you see, dear, the sacrifice has bought a chain of very perfect and lovely beads, every one of which is pure gold," concluded the gentle voice.—American Messenger.

An Absurd Bird.

Kiwi-kiwi is the creature's real name, but scientific men call it apteryx which is a Greek word meaning wingless, because, though a bird, it has no wings. That is absurd enough, but it does not satisfy the kiwi, who seems as unbirdlike as possible, and, in order to be so, has gone to ridiculous extremes.

It not only has no wings, but it has no tail,—not even so much as an apology for one. And as if that were not enough, it has no feathers worthy of the name. Its quills are covered with soft down for about one-third of their length, and then are fringed with hair like webs out to the ends, which are sharply pointed. It is only as large as a common domestic fowl, but it has much stronger and stouter legs and bigger feet.

Of course you cannot be surprised to learn that such a bird looks at first sight like a quadruped. It carries its head low and hobbles along in a most uncouth fashion, moving so swiftly when pursued, however, that it is very difficult to capture this ridiculous bird.

When it sleeps in the daytime—for naturally it is odd enough to choose the wrong time for sleeping—it rests its long bill on the ground, and so makes itself like a strange sort of three-legged stool. Most other birds use their beaks or their wings or their spurs to fight with, but it would be foolish to expect any such natural proceeding from the kiwi; and, in fact, its plan of fighting is to kick. It is very fond of earthworms; and one of its ways of procuring them is worthy of so odd a bird. It thumps the earth with its big feet, and if there are any worms in the vicinity, up they come to discover what is the matter.

It is a cousin of the ostrich, and though its plumage has no such value for us as its large relative's has, it is very highly valued by the natives of New Zealand. The kiwi has a very tough skin, which, when properly dressed, makes good leather.—John B. Coryell, in St. Nicholas.

Fireworks in Brazil.

The children in Brazil, dear boys and girls, have firecrackers and skyrockets and other fireworks just the same that you do in America. But what you do in sport—that is, when you send them off—they do as part of their religion. They think that in doing this they honor the saints and the images that they worship. To day is what they call Saint Bernidito's day. Although it is Sunday, the fireworks have been booming from four o'clock this morning until now, nine o'clock at night. Sometimes we can hardly hear our preacher talk, they make so much noise. In front of the processions an image or idol of the saint is carried, and they are foolish enough to think that if it is not carried in front it will be certain to rain. Perhaps you would like to know what such a religion can be that teaches the people to do all these foolish things. It is Roman Catholic, and it is the most dangerous kind, because the people have some light and truth, but not enough to save them—nothing like enough. Will you not do all you can to send them the true religion—the sweet pure religion of our Saviour?—Selected.

No Counterfeit Infidels

"Did you ever see a counterfeit bank note?"

"Yes."

"Why is it counterfeited?"

"Because the genuine note was worth counterfeiting."

"Did you ever see a scrap of brown paper counterfeited?"

"No."

"Why not?"

"Because it is not worth counterfeiting."

"Did you ever see a counterfeit Christian?"

"Yes"

"Why was he counterfeited?"

"Because he was worth counterfeiting."

"Was he to blame for the counterfeit?"

"Of course not."

"Did you ever see a counterfeit infidel?"

"Why, no."

"Why not?"

"Ahem!"

We pass the above catechism along.—Philadelphia Methodist.

The Best Men Wanted.

"Yes, we want the strongest and best men among the readers of your paper to represent us in their respective localities, either devoting all or any part of their time to our business. Men and women who stand well are offered exceptional opportunities for profitable work." That is what B. F. Johnson & Co., Richmond, Va., say in reference to their advertisement.

A young woman whose life was full of lofty ambitions, found herself occupied day after day with disagreeable household tasks. As the future seemed to shut down hopelessly around these homely duties, the girl grew complaining and bitter.

One day her father who was village doctor, said to her: "Do you see those vials? They are cheap, worthless things in themselves, but in one I put a deadly poison, in another a sweet perfume, in another a healing medicine. Nobody cares for the vials themselves, but what they carry.

"So with our duties, insignificant and worthless in themselves, but the patience, or anger, or high thinking, or bitterness which we put into them, this is the important thing, the immortal thing."—The Silver Cross.

"One of my sick headaches," you will hear people frequently say, as if the complaint was hopelessly incurable. As a matter of fact, Ayer's pills not only relieve sick headache but effectually remove the cause of this distressing complaint, and so bring about a permanent cure.

What is Temperance?

Self control! No man is temperate until he has the reins of his own life in his own hands; or rather has put them into the hands of God. "The horse is prepared against the day of battle, but safety is of the Lord."

Would you know how to control your appetite for drink, ask Sam Small, or John Wooley, and they will answer: "Safety is of the Lord." Would you know how to control your love of gambling, ask Mason Long or John P. Orelun, and they will answer, "Safety is of the Lord." Would you know how to control yourself, ask the man of Nazareth, and he answers, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly of heart, and ye shall find rest for your souls."

But, if you would have God's help, do what you can yourself. It isn't best to go into a saloon to pray for deliverance from drink, or into a gambling house to get help to quit. Resolve, and rise, and set out toward home and holiness. The Prodigal did that, and was saved by the father's love. God—the father—will meet you, when you move toward him, "for safety is of the Lord."—W. B. Riley, in Baptist News.

Jno. Y. MacRae, druggist, Raleigh, N. C., recommends Japanese Liver Pellets, for constipation and sick headache. Small, mild, easy to take. 50 pills 25 cents.

Oppenstrauss: "My frent, dot ring is wort five hundret tollars, and I let you haf it for sixty five."

Jones: "But it has the initial letter 'W' on it."

Oppenstrauss: "My frent, dot ring is such a bargain it would pay you to haf your name changed."

WHEN YOU CAN'T EAT without that uncomfortable feeling of fullness or drowsiness afterward, then it's time to take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They make digestion easy. Keep a vial of them in your vest-pocket, and take one after every hearty meal.

It's time to take them, too, whenever you "feel bilious." They're specific for biliousness. They act wonderfully upon the liver.

These tiny, sugar-coated Pellets—the smallest, the pleasantest to take, and the most natural in their ways—absolutely and permanently cure Constipation, Jaundice, Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick or Bilious Headaches, Sour Stomach, and every liver, stomach, and bowel disorder.

Chronic Nasal Catarrh.

W. M. Hopper, Esq., of Laketown, Rich Co., Utah, says: "I was suffering from chronic catarrh, and bought half-dozen bottles of your Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and I am happy to say I am permanently cured of that disease."

DURING recent weeks we have been endeavoring to find out whether some term more pertinent than "commencements" may not be used to designate the exercises that mark the annual closings of educational institutions for summer vacation. They cannot be properly called commencements save with reference to seminaries, colleges and universities; and in these so little attention is devoted to those few beings, who are really the only excuse for usage of the word, that annual exercises seems to us more relevant, more appropriate, more expressive and more truthful, if, indeed, it is less imposing. We do not care to have the terminology changed with regard to institutions whose graduates are veritable commencers, and in whose commencement exercises veritable commencers perform leading parts. We insist, however, that the word commencement should not be used by institutions in whose annual events an entire school take parts, nor by those in whose exercises celebrities from afar are the features. A name—whether it be senator or commencement—does not make a small man nor a small affair great save in the contempt of those who know its smallness. It does not injure one to tell the whole truth whether it concerns a very small matter; and custom—a very great matter with some—dictates the contrary or not.

THE assassination of President Carnot of the French Republic is extraordinary only in that it is an accomplished fact. Every chief man of every country, and even of States or cities, would be assassinated were stringent measures of prevention relaxed. It is not a growth of the present time: would-be assassins and real assassins have lived in every age. It does not reflect upon France nor upon the character of its late president that the latter died by violence. In our own country the Chief Executive is zealously guarded; and even his children, who have not had opportunity of aggravating any one, have to be watched over. And there is no remedy; there is prevention only.

France has not had a more admirable chief man than Carnot; it has not had a more popular one since the Corsican. But the possession of every virtue would have secured him against neither the anarchist, nor the mad notoriety-seeker, nor the pitiable crank who attributes his imagined grievances to prominent men. That these classes are sometimes successful; that, as in the late instance, access to the victim was so easy, and secondly, that the assassin was so desperate as to lay down his life to strike the blow, is extraordinary. There are thousands of men enjoying the rights of loyal citizens in the United States who would assassinate Cleveland to day if they had the opportunity and the desperation. Such events are possible wherever there is a half mad being or a brain-perverted anarchist; and this world will never be entirely rid of either. The power of prevention is never beyond good men nor good governments, however. And as France's failure to use that power rendered the murder of her president possible, so our country's leniency to anarchists—all of whom should be imprisoned or exiled—makes a repetition of the catastrophe here a daily possibility.

THE election of Casimir Perier to the presidency of France is a significant tribute to independence. He was never a partisan, and would not permit his name to be used for the next French presidential election because he would have to become a partisan to succeed. He did not seek the presidency; he refused it when offered, and not until his mother appealed to his patriotism did he decide to become a candidate. Such men are always needed in crises, for in a crisis a partisan leader creates more friction and excitement, instead of decreasing it. In times of trouble one who commands the respect and confidence of all classes is needed; and partisans who command either beyond party lines are few. Casimer Perier is one of the few men of history of whom it may be said, "the need arose, the man appeared;" and it could not be said of him were he a partisan.

THE 'anti-option bill' has passed the House of Representatives. It is designed to rid our country of gamblers in stocks and produce, whose methods we have referred to heretofore,—a class of men that has done the nation inconceivably more harm than a hundred Louisiana lotteries could, more burdensome upon the honest labor of this country than any system of taxation now possible. They have never created anything but wrecks; they do not labor except in scheming to reap the rewards of some one else's labor; they have depressed the prices of farm products, increased mortgages, ruined railway and other enterprises, extorted the pound of flesh and destroyed the moral sense of more men than it is possible for lower class gambling methods to reach, for option dealing extends from one end of the land to the other. To New York's option dealers is due also the powerful English influence upon our affairs.

Of course the bill is inoperative until it is approved by the Senate; and some of the Senators are confessedly gamblers. But we need not bother with its fate—long deferred at best—in this branch of our national legislature.

THE RECORDER has been asked it it thinks that the people are oppressed "by bad, unwise and unpatriotic laws." The people are suffering because of unwholesome and unwise laws;—the word unpatriotic is incongruous: it can be applied only to human reasonable beings.

We have been asked if our remedy for hard times is "to live hard and be content to do so." The RECORDER'S remedy is to live as well as possible—make the most of to-day—and strive for betterment in whatsoever way one thinks best. And no reasonable being can conclude from any previous utterance of ours that we hold any other opinion.

We recently advised those who are looking to legislation for relief to cease looking, which advice we still think good despite the questioning of a contemporary. No government can make its citizens prosperous by legislation; no government should be expected to do more than insure its citizens protection in the pursuit of happiness. That this protection is not equitably nor thoroughly insured to-day is why we say that we have unwise and unwholesome laws. All the legislation would not make us happy; we alone can do that. If every principle of any political party extant were incorporated into our statutes, none but those who adjusted themselves to the changed conditions, those who pursued happiness and prosperity in work, would be relieved or be prosperous. If to adjust one's self to such conditions be hard living, make the most of it. And surely no one can construe adjustment to imply resignation or reconciliation. We are anxious to prevent the usual deception of the public with impossible roseate promises in future campaigns. The man who waits on legislation for a living, who waits on political parties for prosperity, will either get an office or starve.

We have no objection to answering questions, but we do dislike to see evidences of intent to misconstrue our statements and flagrant insinuations.

AN ARTICLE by Justice Walter Clark of the North Carolina Supreme Court in the Arena for June upon "The Election of Postmasters by the People," has been the subject of extensive comment, much of which has been favorable. Judge Clark is an aggressive and at the same time a discreet "reformer." He believes thoroughly in the power of the people to govern themselves; and thinks, too, that the Constitution of our fathers is not altogether fit for us.

In this article he endeavors to show that a dangerous amount of power is given the president in appointing postmasters. The appointing power not only has the opportunity of making 75,000 (the approximate number of postmasters) friends, not to mention their friends and relatives, but also of necessity renders Senators and Representatives under obligations to him. We all remember how Harrison secured his second nomination for the presidency through the aid of Southern appointment-made allies. And no one need be reminded how that Cleveland hearkened to Senator Ransom's voice a few months ago, but was deaf to Vance. And no one doubts the reason. A President cannot make 75,000 appointments without aid; it is only natural that he should accept the anxiously proferred services of patronage-seeking Senators and Representatives; and it is not less natural that those Senators and Representatives who have successfully sought patronage should be under obligation to the President. Thus he is able to influence legislation, when it was purposed by our fathers to hold the Executive and Legislative branches of our government as far separate as possible. To allow the people to elect their own postmasters cannot do harm, while it will rid the country of a grave danger—one man-power, will lessen the evils of the accursed spoils system, will allow our representatives to do other work, and will place before them less opportunity of corruption.

Space will not allow an extensive review of the article. It may be epitomized as a strong argument for widest possible popular privileges and most limited one man power. One sentence strikes us as pre eminently pertinent: "If the people are wise enough to elect presidents, congressmen, governors and judges, why can they not be trusted to select Senators and postmasters?" In our opinion when they are permitted to do so another step toward democracy and right will have been taken.

Sanctification.

A Paper read by Rev. H. A. Brown before the Ministerial Association of Winston-Salem, June 4th, 1894, and requested for publication by the ministers present.

The word "sanctify" is used in two senses in the Scriptures—first, in the sense of setting apart for some special work or service; and second, in the sense of making pure and holy. The first-born of every family among the Israelites was sanctified to the Lord. In process of time the Levites took the place of the first born, and were likewise said to be sanctified. The vessels used in the sanctuary or temple or tabernacle were spoken of as sanctified, sacred, holy, &c. They could not be used on ordinary occasions for the drinking of water or wine. The altar on which the offerings were made was sanctified. The Saviour speaks of the altar which sanctified the gift.

Christ himself was sanctified in the sense of being set apart for a special work. He was a priest forever after the order of Melchizedec. He was holy, harmless, sanctified and separate from sinners. He was tempted in all points as we are, yet without sin. All truly regenerated persons may be said to be in a state of sanctification in the first sense of that word. See 1 Cor. 6: 11. Sanctification in its generally accepted sense is a continuous work of the Holy Spirit in the hearts of the people of God—beginning with regeneration and continuing until the separation of the soul from the body in death. Some one has said that regeneration is sanctification begun, and sanctification is regeneration completed. Regeneration is a single act—it is instantaneous; but sanctification is a process. Regeneration is a birth, sanctification is the life that follows the spiritual birth Sanctification, as I understand it, is not a paroxysmal state of holy delight to which the soul suddenly springs up. It is a new life in process of conquest. It is a multiplying of the deeds of the body—a renouncing of the Devil, the vain pomp and glory of the world—an habitual self denial and a continual offering of all our powers on the altar of God's service. Sanctification is the work of God. All the persons of the Trinity are represented as acting in the work of sanctifying believers. But as this is the dispensation of the Spirit, and as it is the peculiar province of the Spirit to apply the benefits of the atonement, we may safely say that the Holy Spirit is the chief agent in producing sanctification in the heart. He illuminates the mind and creates new desires. He makes us dissatisfied with what we have. We perceive new relationships to God and to our fellowmen. New hopes and new prospects rise up in us. New tastes, so to speak, demand to be gratified.

He makes us dissatisfied with our environment. As we go into damp, chilly rooms, sometimes, and instinctively feel that we must hoist the windows—as a thousand voices proclaim our discomfort, so we are made conscious of unhealthy spiritual surroundings. A holy restlessness is created within, and we long for better atmosphere and the warm, genial sunshine that is conducive to spiritual growth. We gradually become dissatisfied with what we know. We must grow in grace and in the knowledge of Jesus Christ. We find ourselves longing for more spirituality. We are not satisfied with past attainments in the divine life. Our prayer, like that of Socrates, is, "Make me pure and beautiful within." We are made conscious of the existence of two natures in us, the carnal and the spiritual. We are impressed that the carnal must be overcome—must be made to perish.

Once when a celebrated French preacher was probing the conscience of Louis XIV., he said a Christian has two men in him, the old man and the new man. The king interrupted the preacher by saying, "I know both these men." "It is worth something to know these men," replied the preacher, "but one of these men must die." As the house of David was said to wax stronger and stronger, and the house of Saul was said to wax weaker and weaker, so the spiritual man must increase and the carnal man must decrease. Mr. Drummond puts it correctly when he says, "The spiritual man having passed from death to life, the natural man must pass from life to death." The Holy Spirit gives us strength and assurance. The Spirit bears witness with our spirits that we are the children of God. He maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered. He takes the things of Christ and shows them to us—he shows us things to come.

He acts as the interpreter in the interpreter's house. He makes plain that which was dark and mysterious. He throws a silvery lining about the darkest clouds. He interprets the meaning of our groans. He guides us into all truth, and as the pillar of fire and pillar of cloud safely conducted the Israelites to the earthly Canaan, so he will guide us into the full blessings and possession of the spiritual or heavenly Canaan. We have seen how the Spirit carries on the work of sanctification in our hearts. But sanctification is a duty. In regeneration we are passive; but in sanctification we heartily co-operate with the Spirit. Paul expressed the thought beautifully when he said, "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling; for it is God who worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure." The power to will and the power to work according to God's pleasure is wrought within us by the Spirit; but we must work out what he worked within us. We must reduce to visible and tangible forms in outward life the delicate tracery wrought by the Spirit on the spiritual trestleboard in our hearts. We co-operate with the Spirit in the exercise of faith. Faith is the hand which receives—the channel through which spiritual blessings flow to the soul. Let us widen the channel, that as the ocean which passes through the inlet and spreads over vast acres of shining lake, so the blessings of God may flow out into all the nooks and corners and wide surfaces of our spiritual life.

We co operate with the Spirit in our sanctification by a careful study of the Scriptures. The Saviour prayed, "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth." "As new-born babes, desire the sincere milk of the word that you may grow thereby." The entrance of God's word giveth light. The Scriptures are profitable for doctrine, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished unto all good works.

The Word of God is the sword of the Spirit. If the sword is not used, it cannot do the work for which it was intended. An Oxford Bible with flexible covers, veneered corners, seal skin lining, and beautifully decorated book-mark, kept in a drawer, will not promote sanctification. The old Bible our mothers read with its faded page, and many a tear stained passage, will not avail us unless we read it. The Word of God must be read, studied, digested and assimilated if our spiritual life would become strong, symmetrical and beautiful.

The conscientious observance of the ordinances is regarded by all Christians as a means of grace, and hence promotive of sanctification. A patient submission to the afflictive dispensations of God's providence tends to promote sanctification in our hearts.

The question comes up here, is there such a thing as complete sanctification in this life? Is there such a condition as sinless perfection this side of the glorified state in heaven? May we become perfectly free from sin? Good men differ very widely in their interpretations, explanations and conclusions in reference to this point. How you answer this question will depend upon how you regard Scripture teaching on other great questions. What conception have you of God's law? What is your definition of the nature of sin? What limitations, if any, are to be put upon the power of the human will? If you regard the law of God as a sliding scale of requirement graduated to the moral condition of creatures, then perfection is possible. Any man can keep the law if its requirements are suited to his condition. Any man can jump over a house if you build the house low enough for him. If the voluntary transgression of known law is your only definition of sin, then perfection is attainable. Mr. Wesley said, "I believe a person filled with the love of God is still liable to involuntary transgressions. Such transgressions you may call sins if you please; I do not." But a heart that is depraved to such an extent as to permit involuntary transgressions is not a perfect, absolutely pure, wholly sanctified heart. "If, again, the will is able to choose God supremely and persistently at every moment of life and to fulfil at every moment the obligations resting upon it," then perfection is possible; but if the will is viewed as having been corrupted and enslaved by the fall, it is not possible. The celebrated Lyman Beecher used to say, "When men know what the law is, they will say with the Psalmist, 'I have seen an end of all perfection; thy commandment is exceeding broad.'" The word translated "perfect" as applied to spiritual conditions already attained may be said to mean relative perfection, equivalent to sincere piety or maturity of Christian judgment. Noah, Abraham, Job, David and Peter were all said to be perfect. Their biographies do not show that they lived without sin. The Bible distinctly denies that any man lives on earth without sin. See 1 Kings 8: 46; Eccle. 7: 20; 1 John 1: 8 "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." Dr. Hodge in his commentary on the Confession of Faith says, "The personal profession of a life without sin is generally judged to be just ground for serious suspicion as to the claimant's mental soundness or moral sincerity." I do not think I would go so far as that; but I would modestly quote the language of Arnold of Rugby and say, "Always expect to succeed, but never think you have succeeded."

Sanctification is ever to be kept before our minds as an ideal after which we are to struggle. One thing is quite sure we can come much nearer perfection than many of us do. Our prayer ought to be "Help me to be pure in thought, word, action and influence." Many good men among the Methodists and the Baptists profess to have reached a high state of holiness—a serene region which they call the "higher life" or the "rest of faith." If there is such a state in this life, I want to reach it. But for the present I must quote the language of Paul, "Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect, but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which I am apprehended of Christ Jesus. Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

"John's Baptism not Christian Baptism."

BY REV. O. C. HORTON.

John's baptism is being discussed among us under the above caption. It is in book, tract and conversational forms, and asking to be received as truth coming from the Lord. It instituted a question in my mind, as I read and re-read the broad assertion, namely, "If John's baptism is not Christian baptism, what does it take to make out a case of Christian baptism?" Heaven appointed what John did, and sent him to do it. Christ received baptism at the hands of John. If being baptized in heaven's appointed manner, by a heaven elected and sent administrator, and as Jesus was, does not make out Christian baptism, we would like to know what more is required. Is not heaven the author of John's baptism? (John 1: 3), and was not John on this side of the law and the prophets? (Luke 16: 16 and Matt. 11: 13)—"The law and the prophets were until John: since that time, the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it." Again, "For all the prophets and the law prophesied until John." Mr. Wesley's comment on this is, "The Old Testament writers taught and foretold until John, or until near his public ministry; when he appeared, the fulfilment began. In John the old dispensation expired and the new began." Here is the "say so" of another of the same faith and order (?) on the same subject—"We must not forget that John belonged to the old dispensation; that the ceremonial law was still in force: and that John was acting under the law that imposed baptism; and then all will be clear." "Can two walk together except they be agreed?" If they cannot, these brethren of the same church part company at this point for want of agreement. Singular on both sides, because each has his own view, and one has left the Bible. Was there a dispensation between the Old and New Testaments, a kind of intermediate period, made especially for John's benefit? To which of the many divisions of time did John the Baptist belong, since one gives him a place under the law and in the old dispensation, and another on this side of the law and the prophets? Luke says, 7: 26 and 27, "That John was more than a prophet." If he belonged to the old prophetic dispensation, where and in what sense does the "more than a prophet" come in? Wherein did he differ from Isaiah, Daniel and the other prophets? It seems John was a prophet—equal in greatness to any who preceded him—but he was "more than a prophet." If still in the old dispensation and under the law, it is a little difficult for me to see where this more comes in, and what it is, of which Jesus is speaking. According to the views of these brethren, he belonged to both dispensations, but some of us have not so learned this subject. I feel that one of these brethren must be mistaken in his view, and here put in my protest against the introduction of this new era or dispensation, unknown to history and the Bible, for the sake of making out John's work unchristian!

Another case cited to prove that John's baptism was not Christian, is the re-baptism by Paul at Ephesus, Acts 19: 1—5. "If John's baptism had been Christian, the twelve who had received John's baptism would not have been re-baptized by Paul, says the one who would make out John's baptism to be unchristian. The Scripture cited does not say that John baptized these twelve disciples, but they were baptized "unto John's baptism"—by whom we are not told (see verse 3). The re baptism of these disciples does not prove John's baptism to be unchristian, and therefore the ceremony must be repeated by a Christian-qualified administrator. "They were told of John's baptism and perhaps urged to believe on Him who should come, that is, on Christ, when Christ had come already, had died and risen again more than twenty years before." "These were never baptized by John," says another, because their ignorance of what John had done and taught proves the contrary or opposite view. They had not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost," and see how John was full of the Holy Ghost from his mother's womb, Luke 1: 15. He also taught those who accepted his teaching that the One coming after him would baptize them with the Holy Ghost," Matt. 3: 11; Mark 1: 8; Luke 3: 16; John 1: 33. John knew something of the Holy Ghost, and told his (John's) disciples about him, and yet these disciples at Ephe-

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 11, 1894.

Rev. C. T. Bailey, Editor and Proprietor.
J. O. Caddell, Agent and Correspondent.

Baptists in North Carolina need the Baptist Female University. The expenditure of a little energy and the suffering of small sacrifice now will enable such an institution to open its doors to your daughter in a few months. The time for objecting to the institution was when the proposition was before the Convention. It is too late now for anything but work for the institution.

In another column it will be seen that the next "Baptist Congress" proposes discussing "Tradition as a Formative Force in Baptist Doctrine and Church Life." Whoever suggested that subject is sadly lacking in knowledge of Baptist doctrine and church life. We have been laboring under the impression these many years that the formative force in Baptist doctrine was and is and ever will be the Holy Word of God, and the same may be said of the church life of all regular Baptists. Tradition had nothing to do with it, and it is absurd to presume even for a moment that it did.

This week we lay some valuable facts relating to the Home Board before our readers. As Dr. Durham says, they will be of special value at the Associations, and we advise those who intend to speak to reports on the subject to study the subject now. Our next issue will contain a sketch of the Foreign Board and its work. A thorough knowledge of all denominational objects, ways and means, will have great influence for good upon the churches; and we do not know how better one can incite general interest in them than by an instructive speech at an Association. Every Baptist should have a thorough knowledge of his denomination's work.

We have frequently heard brethren refer to their wives as good "assistant pastors," but until quite recently we had not supposed that the term signified more than that they were valuable assistants in Sunday-school classes, in the sick room, as general companions, and in doing many other things which only a woman can do well. But in this day of new things our good old State is not altogether exempt from innovations; and, we have been told, that not long ago a preacher announced from his pulpit that his wife, his assistant pastor, would conduct prayer meeting at the next regular occasion of the kind, as he would be absent. And when the time came the said assistant pastor was on hand, opened the meeting in due form, and before the meeting was over called on another sister to lead in prayer.

We need not inform those who have read the Recorder that such a performance as this disgusts us. And we doubt not that our brethren and sisters can abide it but little better. We have often thanked God that our State has been graciously spared the humiliations of some of the more progressive States. We thank him now that but one of these new departures has appeared, and we pray that we may be forever spared from others.

Is it not paradoxical that an institution that boasts of the number and the success of its alumni should expect to be destroyed for want of $20,000 a year? Does it not reflect upon its alumni, does it not reflect upon the institution itself. Good institutions and institutions that have been sending out well-equipped alumni for nearly a century do not die for lack of support. Is it not paradoxical, too, that an institution that boasts that it has a hundred more applicants for entrance than it can accommodate should cry out that the taking away of $10,000 from its annual income will destroy it and all its most glorious, unspeakable and indispensable influences?

But the calf bleats "starvation" in weaning time. The protected manufacturer holds up the picture of motionless machinery and starving men when free trade is mentioned. We all like to have incomes that are certain whether the weather is good or not. The State is so convenient and so prompt and so certain; is it surprising that any one should dislike to get far away from its treasury? The University of Georgia authorities preached the doctrine of destruction when the effort was made to take away its State appropriation. Since it has been taken away, however, the University still exists and flourishes. The University of Virginia is by no means dead, and yet we have Dr. Thornton's word for it that not one cent of the Virginia appropriation is used to defray running expenses. If these universities can flourish as they do without State aid, if Davidson, Trinity and Wake Forest have flourished for years without State aid, why cannot any other first-class institution in North Carolina

PAYING THE PREACHER.

Have you ever stopped to think for what you pay the preacher, or why you do not, as the case may be? Is he paid from a sense of obligation for services rendered? Do you pay him for a certain number of consoling or instructive words? Do you pay him for the eloquence of his speech and his manifest desire to please you? Do you pay him for his devotion to God's work. Is you contribution to him a charitable one? Or do you pay him because other people pay him and say you should pay him? And if for any of these reasons you pay him, by what do you measure the amount? By number of sermons or visits? By shortness or longness of the same? By what you think other people think you should pay him? Or as you think he deserves of your share of God's gifts? Doubtless these queries seem impertinent to many. We hope, however, they will start some to thinking.

Your pastor, however poor in this world's goods he be, is not one of God's eternal poor. It may seem to you that inasmuch as he is largely supported by voluntary contributions, he is an object of charity. It is a mistake. If we presume that your pastor is one of God's called, the conclusion that you owe him a certain proportion of your goods cannot be escaped. One who goes about from day to day carrying the cup of cold water or the comfort of God's promises to this and that one, who strives to keep the grace of God among his people by night meetings in the week, who, when your day of rest has come, upholds the wholesome gospel of the Saviour that your rest may not be valueless, rather that it may be the sweeter, who devotes the energies of his life to you and mankind, deserves—charity out of the question—your support. A Christian does not pay the preacher in charity. Nor does one pay him altogether for services rendered, if the latter implies absence of a sense of duty to one of Christ's emissaries.

While we are endeavoring to explode the idea that you are doing a charitable act when you pay the preacher, we would not have it understood that the act is not more of a righteous nature than paying any other obligation. If you pay the preacher thinking that you are exercising charity, you make a mistake. You do perform a duty to God as well as discharge a personal obligation. But it does not require charity to perform a duty to God. The difference may be made more manifest by a practical instance: If a man pays the preacher merely what he thinks he should pay in personal obligation and in duty to God, his act is not charity; if, however, one pays the preacher more than he really feels obligated to do for services and in duty to God, he does it in charity—to those who do not, or cannot pay their part, not in charity to the preacher. One pays in these latter circumstances to bring the gospel to those who have it not, and is therefore really an agency in mission work.

It seems to us that one must have a rather watery view of religion who counts the amount of his subscription to pastor's salary in the list of his charities, or who pays him out of the Lord's tenth. The preacher's time is worth something, his education, his knowledge, his work, are surely worth a considerable amount to those who reap benefits of them. And while they are given to Christ who bought us with his life, we cannot escape a sense of obligation for them. And here, too, a distinction may be necessary. Everything we do in Christ's name is not charity. We have many duties, and the exercise of charity is only one of them.

But if there is a reader who feels that he is not reaping any benefit from his preacher's labors, who feels no personal obligation, there is still sufficient reason why he should pay the preacher so long as there are evidences that he is called of God. It is not because other people pay him, nor because it "looks bad" not to pay him, but to pay him in obedience to God who has commanded him to give his whole time to work for the kingdom of Christ, who has called your preacher to aid in carrying the gospel to the uttermost parts of the earth. That is a duty to God. So, in our opinion, the reason for paying the preacher are two-fold: personal obligation and obligation to God, for either of which one should willingly contribute towards the preacher's maintenance.

No one except yourself knows how much you should pay the preacher. You should give as the Lord has prospered you, but giving and paying are distinct acts. But we need not say that every one knows what he feels should be paid;—certainly every one knows that the preacher should be paid well enough to enable him to live as other people live. He has a family to support, children to educate, and dependents, probably, to provide for, as well as you. If he is God-called, he works as hard as you, and, therefore, deserves as much.

We do hope that the old idea that one may contribute liberally to the preacher's support and go no further in contributions, will be forsaken; charity never grows out of a sense of obligation to one to whom it is exercised. It is an act done without regard to self for the good of some one else. To pay your share towards the pastor's support and not to carry the cup of cold water to the thirsty, not to aid in sending the bread of life to the heathen, not to give in entire charity as the Lord has prospered you, is to fall of your duty. Render to the Lord as he has prospered you, and pay your pastor as you think you owe him from personal obligation and obligation to God.

We do not know of a holier human thing than an active and harmonious church of God; and there is nothing more anomalous than a church which is inactive or inharmonious. Yet both kinds exist; and the latter is as deplorable as the former is blessed.

We cannot conceive of one being Christ-like and at the same time inactive in Christian work. We can conceive of one being Christ-like and inharmonious, because human beings have not perfect knowledge. But at the same time such a one will not be objectionably inharmonious; for a person whose character is modeled after Christ's cannot be objectionable.

But there are both inharmonious and inactive Christians in some churches, and they are out of place. We believe in tolerance to the last degree, but it is not Christian to tolerate unchristian—inactive and objectionably inharmonious—membership. A few churches of a few Christian members are stronger than a world of inactive Christians though they all be in one church; for the former have their strength and their wisdom of Almighty God.

Every wrong, which cannot be attributed to physical conditions, can be attributed to the failure of mankind to follow the principles of the life of Jesus Christ. Causes and causes of social evils and political and economical wrongs and remedies and remedies therefor are continually occupying the human mind, when any Christian may explain them and point the way to their removal. It is all found in the New Testament.

The country is by no means a Christian one, but we are persuaded that if those of its residents who have membership in Christian churches would live in the likeness of Jesus Christ, saloons would be removed by public opinion, extortion would cease, low prices would become good prices, and a peacefulness such as our country has not known would be our lot. If the commandments of Jesus Christ—love thy neighbor, love thy God—governed the entire conduct of the professing Christians of this country, what a regenerated civilization ours would be! This is not an unattainable ideal; it should be and shall be the real in the "Coming Kingdom," which is not half as unattainable and a thousand times more desirable than the visions of Bellamy, the theories of George, or the myriads of remedial propositions that are daily placed before a misled and discontented humanity.

We can conceive of but one reason for the existence of societies for Christian work, of any description, for young or old, within a church. And that is in the desirable impetus that united and organized effort gives to any work.

If a series of societies can exist within our denomination in perfect harmony of action and entirely co-operative under the direction of the churches of the denomination, it is reasonable to think that such thoroughness of organization is more effectual than the desultory efforts of a body of many members, whose tastes and aptitudes necessarily differ.

The "Young Peoples' Movement" is a case in point. If it is claimed that the young people need organization of efforts, and if this be shown, then there is reason why the young people should be organized. But if one claims that the young people need organization as an incentive to work, we are immediately persuaded that they need regeneration rather than organization. A Christian who will work well in a society, will work well in a church. It is repulsive to think that any one would wait for a society to put one to work for Christ. Is God's glory and man's welfare not sufficient? And, moreover, no one can persuade us that a society can find work for one any better than one can find it for one's self. Are not the fields still white?

We have advised the organization of the young people locally because in our opinion there is need for their organization in some churches and none at all in others. And the local church can better perceive whether it needs such organization than a general body can.

We can never be persuaded to urge the organization of anything within a church to increase the Christian spirit; because we believe that if a church of Christ is not sufficient for this, no other organization can be.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

ASHEVILLE.

People are exceedingly peculiar in their desire for a place to spend the summer. Going to the mountains, you pass the train going east just as you get through the long tunnel at the top of the Blue Ridge. Every coach is full, people going east to the seashore to get cool. In the train which carries you, there is a regular host going west to get a breath of mountain air and a drink of water that needs neither to be filtered nor cooled with ice. Each of these passengers was looking for the same blessings, cool and comfort, and was expecting to find them at exactly opposite points. The secret of the matter is, that people, after all, desire what they have not, and there comes the trouble. Many a man lives and dies at the foot of a mountain without knowing of its beauty, or the lovely sunset it hides at the close of each day in the year. Asheville will always be sought by those who have leisure, and are willing to spend money for health and pleasure. It is a city now, and has passed the point where doubt as to its perpetuity can come in at all. Millions have been spent in costly structures and permanent improvements, and millions more will be spent as the years go by. Men have built houses wherever they desired: if the site was a hole in the ground, it has been leveled up; if on a mountain top, then it was leveled down; and so the work went on.

Bro. Bryan, however, took no stock in the leveling business, but found for himself and family a neat little cottage on the top of a mountain five hundred feet above the city. A good brother of Bro. White's flock kindly furnished him a nice horse, another supplied a buggy and harness, and now since a little expenditure of skill in painting and repairing harness, he has a "rig" plenty nice for even a full fledged Doctor of Divinity.

The Doctor was very considerate of Bro. Mitchell and myself, and had one of us in the buggy almost constantly. It is very convenient for a Chinaman and an American to ride together. In China the ethics of driving is, for everybody to turn to the left, while in this country everybody turns to the right; so we never had to give the road to anybody.

Bro. Bryan's health is greatly improved, and notwithstanding his pleasant situation, I thought I could detect a longing both on his part and that of Sister Bryan to return to their chosen field of labor.

My visit to Asheville was one of real pleasure. I heard Bro. White preach a most excellent sermon. Dr. G. W. Purefoy was in fine humor. Judge H. B. Carter appreciated being elected a Trustee of Wake Forest, and will be of real service to the College. Dr. Millard has for months been tusseling with the grip, but now has the best of the seige. Bro. Lorick was delighted at an opportunity of paying up for his Recorder, but if "Madame Rumor" has the matter straight, his sweetest joy is just a little in the distant future.

The Adventists are tenting in the grove, waiting for and expecting, so they say, the "second koming." If the "fool-killer" should pass that way, the State of Illinois would have to send down another battery, or the meeting would at once come to a close. However, this doctrine is having its influence with many, who ought to know better. It is next to impossible to find any doctrine however foolish, dreadful or unnatural it may be, but its devotees will also be found, and who appear to take comfort in its belief.

It is easy to go down hill, so a few hours brought us to where I never fail to add largely to my week's work. The Press Convention meet here this year, and I could hardly be expected to say anything that has not already been said by some one of the hundred editors who enjoyed the fine hospitality of the town. The business part of the town has been destroyed by fire, and largely rebuilt during the past year.

Bro. Patton is pushing ahead with his work, and will build a new church-house during this year. The Baptist cause here has grown rapidly in the last few years, and the prospect was never so fine as now. Some sixty members have joined within the past twelve months, and the church is giving more for all objects than ever before.

I have not seen a more hopeful people than I found at STATESVILLE.

One of the finest cotton factories in the State hast been completed near the depot. A nice settlement has just been formed of operatives and others who have recently built in this part of the town. On what I judge is the most desirable lot in the entire settlement has been erected a chapel by the Baptists which cost about eight hundred dollars. It is one of the very neatest little houses in the State, and every dollar of the money had been paid before the house was dedicated. This seems to be the pet interest of the church, and in the years to come, the wisdom of these brethren will be fully shown.

Bro. Church is succeeding finely with every department of his work. His health is not all we could wish, but he is greatly strengthened by being able to always count on the never-failing help of brethren like Brown, Thomas, Lewis, Turner, and others who are willing to work and sacrifice for the cause.

The brethren were glad to have Dr. Mitchell preach for them, and gave him a fine crowd in the new chapel. J. C. C.

Dr. Durham begins his series of articles in this issue. Much of them is history that has been unwritten until now. The stronghold of State aid grows weaker daily.

....Prof. W. J. Ferrell of Wake Forest College made us a pleasant visit last week. He informed us that fields have been assigned to the professors for their summer work and they are awaiting marching orders.

....The North Carolina Christian Advocate came out last week in new form. We do not fancy the reduced size of the pages, but that don't keep us from congratulating our neighbor on this evidence of prosperity.

....It was Bro. H. H. Mashburn instead of Marshburn who was ordained at Flat River Union chapel on the 25th ult. We beg Bro. Mashburn's pardon.

....The young people meet this month at Toronto and Cleveland. The South will not be well represented at either the B. Y. P. U. A. or the Y. P. S. C. E.

....We were very glad to have a visit last Saturday from Dr. John Mitchell, who was returning to Wake Forest after a successful canvass for his Board in the West.

....We regret that unusual pressure compells us to leave out several excellent news letters from this number. Write oftener and more briefly, brethren and sisters.

....Rev. J. A. Hoyle of Maiden writes July 7th: "I am now leaving for King's Mountain to commence a meeting to-night. Rev. E. F. Jones of Gastonia will assist me next week."

....Receipt of catalogue of Buie's Creek Academy, showing an enrollment in the past year of 173, is acknowledged. We congratlate Bro. Campbell on the success with which he is meeting.

....We suggest that the Union Meetings, to be held the fifth Sunday, this month, discuss the temperance and educational questions. Our people need the widest possible knowledge upon these subjects.

....Rev. Frank Dixon of the South Baptist church, Hartford, Conn., has our thanks for a copy of a sermon preached by him and lately put in tract form, entitled "The Christian Substitute for the Jewish Tithing System."

....Treasurer Thos. H. Briggs of Wake Forest College requests us to acknowledge the receipt of two hundred dollars from a "Friend of the College," for the system of water works and the deficit on expenses. Good.

....Whatever else may be believed, there is a certainty that there is something rotten in Texas Baptist journalism; and the sooner it is discovered, the better for Texas. Eternal quarreling cannot but do injury to the cause.

....We call attention to the card of Hollins Institute in this issue. It is one of the oldest and best institutions that we know of, and we commend it unreservedly. A sketch of its methods, etc., will appear in our next number.

....Bro. Jno. T. Pullen addressed the congregation of the First Baptist church, Raleigh, on "Personal Work for Christ," last Sunday morning, Dr. Carter being absent in the meeting at Carthage, which we hear, is very hopeful.

....The Baptist church at Washington, N. C., is to be rebuilt, says the Gazette. We are glad to hear the news. The present building was erected as early as 1834. Pastor Duncan McLeod will proceed with the work at once.

....Rev. J. Paul Spence, a promising graduate of Wake Forest College who has spent some time at Crozer (Pa.) Theological Seminary, has returned to this State, and will supply for Dr. C. S. Blackwell at Elizabeth City next month.

....The Mirror says the ladies of Wilson are doing excellent work toward raising the amount for building the new Baptist church, ground for which has been broken. We congratulate Dr. Mundy on this evidence of his successful ministry.

....Orders for "How Far Should a State Undertake to Educate" continue to multiply. There is yet a good supply of this admirable work, and if the reader thinks that he or she can wisely distribute copies of it they will be sent on application.

....Rev. W. B. Morton of Louisburg called to see us last Thursday. With the exception of a scar, he showed no effects of the murderous blow he received from the jail breakers several weeks ago. Bro. Morton can relate a very vivid account of the episode.

....The Presbyterian General Assembly recommends that its seminaries adopt the Scotch custom of keeping open six months in the year and make the course extend through four years, instead of the present custom of teaching eight months in the year for three years.

....Our county papers might be used by the friends of the voluntary system in higher education to very great advantage for the next three months. The pith of Dr. Taylor's articles might be given, and other facts brought out that would lead the people to read the entire discussion.

....The American Baptist Publication Society has published the proceedings of its seventieth anniversary meeting. The Society is one of the largest in the world, and while its report this year is not altogether as encouraging as previous reports, many of the facts set forth are hopeful.

....We mourn the death of our aged Bro. B. F. Mitchell of Wilmington. Wilmington Baptists will miss him sorely. Bro. Mitchell was eighty-one years of age, and had devoted much of his time to Christian work. He came to this State from the North, but he was as good a Carolinian as we knew. May God comfort the family.

....Say to the brethren of the Eastern Union of the Raleigh Association that the next session will meet with Wilson's Mills church, instead of Princeton, as formerly appointed. We are expecting to see a full delegation from all the churches of that union on Friday, July 29th, and the next two days thereafter.—O. C. Horton.

....In view of the general misapprehension regarding Broad Street church, Winston, the following statements taken from the Sentinel may be instructive: The whole floating indebtedness of the church is only $125, and nearly that much is due it. The church has not yet called a pastor, but the committee is corresponding with that purpose in view.

....We were glad to have a visit Monday from Bev. R. E. Peele of the Brooklyn church, Wilmington. He reports all the Baptist work in and around Wilmington as flourishing.

....A Virginia brother sends us a letter with the request that we place it in the hands of the President or Secretary of the Baptist Young People's Union of this State. We thank the Lord that we have no State President or Secretary.

....Rev. A. N. Campbell of Poe's began a series of meetings at Benson last Saturday. His son, Rev. J. A. Campbell, writes: "We are struggling hard to keep the forces united and the cause advancing. Dr. Taylor's articles win favor wherever read."

....It used to be said that Baptists were entirely wrong in their idea of baptism. Now Bro. Horton tells us on another page that people are trying to prove that Baptists are right so far as John's mode of baptizing is concerned, but that John was wrong. Well!

....Another million dollars subscription for general improvement and equipment of the Chicago University has been completed. Why don't some political brother attribute the "congestion in the money market" to the marvelous accumulations of this institution?

....The Monroe Enquirer says that Rev. A. C. Davis preached at Arlington on Sunday, July 1st, on eternal punishment, maintaining that punishment for the unsaved is everlasting. The church there has been led off into the belief that the wicked "burnt up like a brush-heap." We suggest that Bro. Davis leave a number of Bibles with pages turned down at the proper places among those people in order that they may not be again misled.

....We know that Bro. J. W. Lynch of Danville, Ky., was happy on the 3d inst., when he wrote us the following: "Bro. Jno. E. Ray of Colorado Springs, Col., was today (July 3) elected Superintendent of the Kentucky Institution for the Deaf and Dumb located at Danville. We are congratulating ourselves on the acquisition of so valued a Baptist." We hope Bro. Ray will see fit to accept this position, and we feel sure he will for the sake of getting nearer North Carolina, if he has no other reason.

....We announced the sudden death of Rev. J. C. Wilson last week, and mentioned the peculiar circumstances of the occurrence. It seems to us that God took him just after he had done all he could in this world, so that he might say, "I have finished my course." On retiring from the Olive Chapel church, its members adopted resolutions of respect for him, which were sent to the RECORDER for publication a week before his death, but which were delayed until the day after.

....Program of the twelfth Baptist Congress, to be held at Woodward Avenue church, Detroit, Mich., in November, has been received. Dr. Lansing Burrows, Prest. B. E. Andrews, Prest. W. R Harper, Rev. E. M. Poteat and Prof. J. R. Sampey are among the speakers. Subjects for discussion are: "Tradition as a Formative Force in Baptist Doctrine and Church Life," "What Does the Denomination Owe to its Colleges, and what do its Colleges Owe to the Denomination?" "What is 'the Kingdom of God'?" "Interpretation of the Old Testament as Affected by Modern Scholarship," and Christ the Liberator; Christ the Unifier."

From Wake Forest.

I know of three or four graduates and several undergraduates who are anxious to secure work as teachers. They are men who will do good work, either as principals or assistants in academies. I will cheerfully send their names and addresses to parties who may desire them. Two or three young ministers also wish to secure summer work.

The committee on water works and sanitation have gone promptly to work. Hands are now at work arranging for better water-supply. The Executive Committee have decided not to undertake to furnish bathing facilities for the present. It is hoped that the sanitary arrangements will be completed before the opening of the Fall Term.

The Faculty have begun to scatter. Prof. Royall is at Jackson Springs. Prof. Carlyle is in Robeson county. Prof. Brewer is at Cornell University. Prof. Maske is in Richmond county. Prof. Sikes is in Union county. We shall greatly miss him when the Fall Term opens.

Prospects for the next session seem to be good. Very many of the friends of the College are working to secure patronage in many parts of the State.

One more thing is on my heart to say. There will doubtless be—perhaps there ought to be—during the summer and fall much discussion of current educational questions. In one form or another, the matter may come before our associations and union meetings. This discussion ought always and everywhere to be temperate and in the spirit of Christian love. It would be a grievous misfortune for any of our religious meetings to become the arenas for heated debate. And, really, there is no need for it. Let us aim to set forth truth, clearly and plainly, but to do it in love. Truth becomes luminous through calm and temperate discussion. How often it has become obscured through passion and strife!

CHAS. E. TAYLOR.

July 6th, 1894.

We are pleased to call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Roaring Gap Hotel, which appears in this issue of the RECORDER. The location of this new summer resort is all that could be desired by those seeking the coolest mountain air and the coolest and purest mountain water. The names of the originators of this enterprise is a guarantee that guests will find everything claimed in this advertisement.

Facts and Figures; or, Side-lights on the Educational Discussion—No 1.

BY REV. C. DURHAM.

It is not designed by the writer to discuss in these articles any of the great fundamental principles involved in the question, "How far Should a State Undertake to Educate?" All that is now needed in such a discussion has been done by Dr. Taylor. One of the big-brained Judges of this State, after reading Dr. Taylor's great discussion, says: "The discussion is, in my opinion, complete, and the argument unanswerable."

My object is to give some facts and figures, side-lights and suggestions, to furnish, if I may be able, some little ammunition for the infantry, the rank and file of the people, to be used, if found helpful, by some of them, it may be, in discussing the educational questions now before the people of the State. Many of the facts and figures which I shall use have never been given to the public. It has been very difficult to secure some of them.

1. It is a fact that our appeal to the the people has been forced upon us by the State's present educational policy in self-defence. For twelve years in various ways the denominational schools have been before committees of the Legislature making known their grievances. These protests have prevented such legislation as would have destroyed the denominational colleges, but they have not succeeded in removing the unfair and unjust discrimination in favor of the State schools and against the denominational schools. The friends of the denominational schools have exhausted all honorable means, known to them, to prevent an appeal to the people. They did not wish to do it. They knew about the conflict on this subject in South Carolina, and what came of it. They knew of the struggle only a few years ago in Georgia and how the University proper at Athens was left without a dollar's income by appropriation through the Legislature.

I have personally desired that there should be no appeal to the people on this question, and with an earnest desire to prevent the conflict now before us, I, without consultation and on my own responsibility, wrote to the President of the University the following letter:

"RALEIGH, N. C, Dec. 2nd, 1892.

DR GEO. T. WINSTON, Chapel Hill, N. C.:

Dear Sir:—Since I saw you at Fair Bluff, I have thought much about your visits as President of the State University to our religious denominational meetings; and as a matter of personal courtesy to you, and because of my high appreciation of you as a man, and of your work as an educator in North Carolina, I give you my conclusions:

I think that you are wrong in such visits, that you are doing harm to our denominational schools, and that your course in turn, after a little while, will bring against the institution you represent the combined influences of the denominational schools in this State, resulting in great friction and injury to education. Hence I am opposed to your visits to our religious, denominational meetings, as President of the State University, to represent the same in our meetings. If you shall see fit to visit our religious, denominational meetings, where I am, with the thought of being invited, without opposition, to address the meeting, you will most certainly be mistaken. In faithfulness to well formed convictions, after looking carefully around the questions involved, I shall object, and give the meeting the reasons for the objection. I write now, therefore, that, if such a thing shall be necessary, you may not be taken by surprise because I object, and that you may know there is nothing personal, and no opposition to the University in it, and that all may know, at that time, you were given due notice of my intention. With sincere esteem,

C. DURHAM."

The use the President made of this letter is known to many. The effort has since been to do indirectly what could not be done directly.

For the BIBLICAL RECORDER of Feb. 1st, 1893, I wrote an article in which the following language is used:

"This whole question is many times larger and deeper than that side issue, "a squabble before the Legislature about an appropriation to the University." Nothing has come before the real friends of education in this State in many years, which reaches deeper into the future history of all our educational plans and work and the well-being of many of our people than this question. It will not down. It is childish to put it aside.

The man who will properly prepare, introduce and urge through the Legislature, a bill that will guard the rights of all and bring into harmonious relations the University and the colleges of this State, will render one of the most important services to the cause of education and to the entire State that it is now possible for any man to render. Let it be done. Genuine wisdom and the highest patriotism would save this antagonism. Harmonious and equitable adjustment here is the first and essential step towards the ultimate success of higher education in North Carolina. Think as we may, there is now in some points an irreconcilable antagonism which will not and cannot, in the very nature of things, grow less, but larger and stronger and deeper; and unless one or both of these systems are modified, this antagonism will continue till the peace and harmony of our people in politics and religion will be involved.

It is not necessary for it to come to this state of things before a remedy is provided."

A committee representing a large number of the denominational colleges, honestly and earnestly desiring to avoid an appeal to the people, went before the the Legislative Committee on Education of the last General Assembly.

The treatment of these citizens on that occasion, and the cause they represented, only intensified their determination to have relief. Their cause was just, and they were the best friends of a wise and honorable State educational policy; helpful to all and injurious to none: but it was demonstrated to be impossible to secure relief, or even a fair hearing before the Legislature, through a committee constituted as the committees on Education were constituted in the last General Assembly.

These friends of education saw that they must be unfaithful to their cause, and cowards before the State's policy, or they must appeal to the people. Their only hope is in the voice of the people. They are not in doubt about the final result.

2. It is a fact that the attack is not by the friends of the denominational schools on the State schools, but by the representatives of the State schools on the denominational colleges.

One of the Professors at the University, a few years ago, made bold to publish the following: "Now, if the State provides for secular education in a safe way in a satisfactory degree, the church, in all its divisions, appears to have no reason to establish schools for such kinds of learning."

A leading Trustee of the University said: "There is no place in the State for Wake Forest College, and there is no use for it."

The President of the University said to a committee of Trustees of Wake Forest College, about two years ago, "Gentlemen, if my policy destroys the colleges, I am not responsible."

Dr. Thomas Hume, a Professor of the University, before the Baptist State Convention in Elizabeth City last December, went far beyond all former utterances on this subject, and declared that if one must perish, cease to be aided by the State, the University or the common schools, the common schools must go, and the University must live—must have the money. He appealed to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction to know if he did not agree with him. I need not say that Superintendent Scarborough did not agree with Dr. Hume.

3. It is a fact that this appeal to the people is not a party, political question. Every good citizen alike, every friend of education, and every patriot in the State of all political parties, should be deeply interested in this appeal to the people for the adoption of the voluntary system in the higher education.

The rank and file of all political parties will doubtless, when the question is understood, oppose taxation for higher education, and will urge the enlargement and improvement of the common schools.

Why should 1,617,947 people in North Carolina be taxed to give the advantages of higher education to 1,000 young, able-bodied men and women, as a rule, from the best to do families in the State, while a majority of the 600,000 children, mainly in the rural districts and without means, are left by the State to grow up in ignorance?

Boulah Association.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I desire to say to the brethren through the RECORDER that the Boulah Association will convene this year with the Keer's Chapel church, on Tuesday before the second Sunday in August.

Burlington is the nearest railroad station, and brethren desiring to attend will please write Bro. D. P. Sartin, Stony Creek, N. C., and arrangements will be made to meet them with conveyance. Those wishing to be present at the organization must arrive at Burlington on Monday, as the arrival of some of the trains will be too late to reach the point, it being about sixteen miles from railroad.

The brethren and sisters of Keer's Chapel are prepared to care for all that will come, and we are hoping to have the presence and the benefit of the wise counsel of many of the good brethren of the State.

Yours fraternally, D. J. HARRIS.

Yanceyville, July 2, 1894.

From Marion, N. C.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I drop you this note as a matter of news at Marion, and the first of greatest importance to me is that I had the pleasure of baptizing nine in my church here last night, partly as a result of a meeting held here by the solicitation of the pastor of the Presbyterian church, by Brother Western R. Gales. He was here for thirteen days. I attended nearly every service, and I was highly pleased with his manner of presenting the truth. He certainly preached the pure old gospel of the Book, if I am a competent judge of what the truth is, and there is very little, if any, objection to his methods—no "clap trap" about it. He tells the people not to join the church unless they feel they are "new creatures in Christ Jesus." I like him better than any of the so-called evangelists, I have seen, or heard, at least. There was quite a number joined the other churches of the town; I do not know how many, but it was a good meeting. My work at other points is, I hope, progressing very nicely, and I am expecting other additions.

I am pleased to say I do not hear of as much dissatisfaction about the times from Cleveland down, well, everything, as there was a while past. I think there is a better state of feeling among the people.

We are having an abundance of rain, and in some sections the storms of wind and hail have been very destructive to the crops. I am sorry to learn of this.

The 12th of last month my father passed his ninety-sixth mile post, and is comparatively active. I mention this for the reason that so few in this day live to such an advanced age. He lives in Oglethorpe county, Ga. My health is better, but I am again threatened with rheumatism.

I am rejoiced and thankful to the good Lord for still sparing you to us, I hope and pray he may do so for many years yet, for I really do not know how the RECORDER would get along without you. This is no flattery. May God bless you and yours. May write again sometime.

Yours in Christ, M. M. LANDRUM.

Union Meeting.

The Union Meeting of the Eastern Section of the Raleigh Association will meet with the Apex church on Friday night before the fifth Sunday in July. It is hoped we can have a good meeting. Churches and Sunday schools will please appoint representatives. Look for a program next week.

School Notice.

Read the card of the University College of Medicine, Richmond, Va. It is one of the best medical institutions.

WASHINGTON & LEE UNIVERSITY.—We call attention to the advertisement, in another column, of Washington & Lee University, Lexington, Va. The Academic Departments, as well as the professional schools of Law and Engineering, open September 13.

UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF PETERSBURG, VA.—We beg to call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of this famous Virginia School, which, for its methods, the high tone of honor existing among its pupils, and their success at the University of Virginia, Princeton, Harvard, West Point, Annapolis, and the great engineering schools of the country, has achieved an enviable reputation. The 30th annual session begins October 1.

ROANOKE FEMALE COLLEGE.—The last commencement of this old and honored institution, located in Danville, Va., was pronounced by some of the patrons to be the most successful the college ever had. The past session inspired the patrons and trustees with great confidence in the management, and in the future prosperity of the school. Notwithstanding the "hard times," there was an increase of over sixty per cent. in the boarding patronage. The faculty will be strengthened next session by the addition of Miss Lizzie Lounds of Yanceyville and Miss Mattie Rountree of Kinston, N. C., both late of Oxford.

sus had not so much as "heard whether there be any Holy Ghost!" Strange, if John baptized these, that he did not tell them about the Holy Ghost as he did others! Were these twelve all he baptized? If so, the subject is still involved in mystery, unless these disciples were deaf! It is nearly time to leave this much disputed passage of God's Word. John may have baptized these poorly informed disciples and they may have been re-baptized by Paul; but, if so, it was not because John's baptism was not Christian baptism—would sooner believe it to have been because of their ignorance of the Holy Spirit. John's ministry was the beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God. Mark 1: 1, 2. If his ministry was the beginning of the gospel, his baptism must have been in the gospel dispensation, and therefore Christian baptism. Furthermore, the baptism of Christ and his disciples was the same as the baptism of John. "Christ and his disciples made and baptized more disciples than John, even while the Baptist lived." John 3: 22; 4: 1, 2. Though Jesus baptized not with his own hands and in his own name, he did baptize through his disciples and thereby gave his sanction to the ordinance as administered by John, in the very plainest terms he could use, as well as by his own example. When our Lord met his disciples a little before his ascension, he only extended their commission. Matt. 28: 19, 20; Mark 16: 15, 16. Thus extended by our Lord, it comes with authority to us as pastors of to day, for only by a succession of preachers or pastors could all nations be taught and believers baptized. So the writer has learned it from the book of God he believes, and therefore writes not in a spirit of controversy, but in the love of the truth and to meet error in circulation among those for whom he is laboring in the gospel.

China as a Mission Field

Dear Recorder:—We had a very interesting and instructive meeting in our little church at Irvington, Ky., last Friday.

For several months past our church has been studying China as a mission field. Different families were assigned different parts of the great subject with the request that all the family study together, and that some member of the family prepare an essay on that topic to be read when we should come together to give each other the benefit of our investigations. The idea was to get the whole church to act as a missionary society, and the experiment proved so satisfactory with us that we hope to study other fields in a similar way during the coming fall and winter.

In the hope that some churches in North Carolina may try the experiment, I will give the topics discussed in our meeting together with one of the essays.

CHINA.

1. Physical features of the country.
2. Home life in China.
3. Religions of China.
4. Preparation for mission work in China.
5. Beginning and progress of mission work in China.
6. Work of Southern Baptists in China.
7. The present outlook.

The last topic was ably discussed in a paper prepared especially for the occasion by Rev. W. E. Crocker, a missionary in China and a member of our church.

The sixth topic was subdivided so as to discuss all the places occupied by Southern Baptists. We had a number of letters from missionaries on the field, and among them were letters from a number of our North Carolina missionaries including brethren Greene, Britton, Chappell and Crocker.

The appended essay on "Home Life in China" was prepared by Mrs. Haygood.

Truly, W. R. CULLOM.

Irvington, Ky.

HOME LIFE IN CHINA.

Let us commence at the very beginning of life, and, going into one of the Chinese houses, have a peep at the baby lying in its bamboo cradle with its bright little eyes looking up into your face. Its clothing in summer generally consists of one airy little garment; but during the winter as the Chinese have no fire for warming the rooms, the little one is so muffled in wadded garments that he looks like a little round ball. Around the chubby wrist you notice a red cord is tied which is considered a very important matter. When a child is disobedient or hard to manage, a common remark is "Surely his parents forgot to tie his wrists." Around his neck is another red cord with objects suspended, which are supposed to act as charms, preserving the babe from attacks of the "Evil One." On the day a babe is one month old, it has its head shaved and is given its milk name, which name is changed when seven or eight years old. Such appellations as "Little Stupid," "Vagabond," "Dirt," &c., are given as names to the boys, as the parents suppose the evil spirits think they care nothing for the child by giving such ugly names, and the evil spirits won't care for them either. When the birth of a girl-baby is announced, the parents are more in need of sympathy than congratulations, and some kind-hearted visitors say, "Ah, well, even girls are of some use." Generally, the parents would drown the girl-babies rather than go to the trouble of bringing them up.

There have been foundling hospitals built in many Chinese cities to save these little ones from death. When a Chinese baby dies its body is wrapped in matting and taken outside the city to a tower built for the purpose and thrown through a little opening where it falls into a pit below. If the baby is a girl the parents are not particular to ascertain whether it is dead or not.

The Chinese houses are built differently from ours. They are generally one story, with the rooms arranged one behind the other with an open court between, which is called the "heavenly well" that is prettily decorated. In the center is a rockery in which is a tank that is filled with gold fish, and around it are lovely flowers perfuming the air. This garden is a favorite resort with the ladies of the house, as they do not leave their homes more than twice a year, and then go in sedan chairs. When an entertainment is given in honor of a boy baby his mother never appears in the guest hall before the relations and friends, but they often witness the feast by peeping from behind the lovely screens which are numerous in Chinese houses. They have no glass windows, as they are afraid the "evil spirits" will get in; so, often to have sufficient light, they light the large lanterns which are suspended from the ceiling which casts a pretty glow on objects below. At the age of six years a mother commences to torture her daughter by binding her feet. The girls suffer several years before their feet have been transformed into "golden lilies," which, to be a respectable size, must measure three inches in length. "What a good mother she must have had," is a remark you often hear when a girl is seen with smaller feet than usual. Chinese girls are betrothed at a very early age, and should one have the misfortune to lose her betrothed, or the young wife her husband, she is highly commended if she takes opium, or in some other way contrives to follow him into the unseen world. When a girl is having her hair dressed for the marriage ceremony the short hairs in the front of her forehead are plucked out to make her forehead appear square, which is a mark of beauty with them. They allow their finger nails to grow very long and wear little gold or silver shields on them to prevent their breaking off. The ladies always have their hair dressed with flowers and have their faces powdered and a touch of rouge put on; after that they will spend some time at the embroidery frame, or play with the baby, and when tired of that amusement will play cards and smoke, and try to end the weary days. The girls are taught to cook, sew, embroider, weave, and show hospitality to strangers. They are seldom taught to read, as it would not do to find a woman who was superior in learning to man. Let us remember one grand thing about the Chinese, and that is that their children are taught parental obedience. Life is a stern and hard thing in China for both men and women; but, as in all places where Christ is not, the burdens heaviest to bear are put upon the weaker. The Chinese woman does not walk on the streets with her husband; she does not eat with him, but takes what is left after the men of the family have finished their meal. She has no legal right to anything whatever apart from her male relatives. In one thing she is exceptionally blessed. She has inherited from former generations a style of dress at once modest, economical, healthful and becoming. It takes but eight yards of yard-wide cloth for a complete set of winter garments; there is no waste in cutting and no false nor unnecessary appendages. Its truest economy, however, is in the saving of mental worry which comes from always changing patterns. Careful consideration of the effects of modes of dress in both countries have made one sure that the custom of binding the feet hampers the body and soul of Chinese women less than the changing and following of fashions does that of American women.

The Educational Policy of the State.

I want to endorse what Dr. Taylor says in the last RECORDER addressed "To My Baptist Brethren." It is wisely and timely said. While we hope that every Baptist of the State is interested for the good of its citizenship in every department of its care, we also do earnestly hope that none of them, however much they may feel that their own interests with the interests of others may be jeopardized, will take a position on any public policy in the capacity of a Baptist. Such a person would not find favor with his own people. However much we may be forced to suffer and sacrifice by a misguided policy of the State, we cannot afford to yield our religious principles, (and truly ours by the idiosyncrasy of our sect.) But, are Baptists folks? Are they citizens of our commonwealth? Will an expression of their loyalty to a republican form of government, which they are peculiarly qualified to appreciate by their practical confession of faith, necessarily bring odium upon their religion? As the Greek by reason of his nationality would be best able to interpret the ideas and thoughts of the Greeks, so we are almost led to believe that our people have a peculiar endowment for appreciation of a democratic policy of government. Not that we were born of such a republic, but because its existence was the outgrowth of purely Baptist principles.

Now, then, not as a Baptist, but as a citizen of North Carolina, not for the interest of the Baptist in particular, but for the interest of every citizen of our commonwealth, I want to say let the question of State's rights on constitutional basis, and moral rights or ethical rights, be agitated from one end of the State to the other, till the loftier claims of the one shall bring the other into harmony and union with its demands. An objection to such a course brings the motives of the objector into question. This campaign, so far as the press is concerned, will have to be conducted at present in the religious journals. The secular press has not yet fully determined what will be the proper course for them to pursue. However, they will come in all right when the donkey is well nigh haltered and blow the dust of the tressle from centre to circumference. Till then the advocates of reform will have to suffer the painful (?) burden of their silence. I take it as an omen of good that its advocates are not found among the politicians and policy workers of the State. It is among the most loyal of her citizens, irrespective of their religious persuasions.

When the opposers of the suggested reformation in Dr. Taylor's articles show by the same fair and logical treatment of the subject, that he is mistaken, and a different policy will subserve the public good, the masses who are at present looking with suspicion upon the motives of the advocates of continued and enlarged taxation for the luxuries of education, will most happily change their attitude, but till then we will continue to plead for reform. It matters not how much the noise may mar their silent peace, we will cry reform. A negro came down the street with his wheelbarrow loaded with potatoes. He wanted to advertise and sell them, so he cried to the top of his voice, "'tatoes," "'tatoes," "'tatoes," till a bystander, annoyed by the fuss, stormed at him to hush. The only reply was, "You heard me did you? Well, that's what I wanted," and he went on crying "'tatoes" as loud as he could. To circulate these articles, and talk about the educational interest of this State, is some people's business, and because some other people are annoyed at the fuss they keep, is the better sign that the work is being well done.

C. W. BLANCHARD.

East Durham, N. C., June 28, 1894

Another Endorsement.

Dear Recorder:—I most heartily endorse the articles of Dr. Taylor on education. They are clear, logical and unanswerable. Let them be scattered far and wide, and the people will read, ponder and act wisely and right. Yours truly, G. W. HARMON.

Danger of Deviation—Heb. 12: 13

A gentleman crossing the English Channel stood near the helmsman. It was a calm and pleasant evening, and no one dreamed of a possible danger to their good ship; but a sudden flapping of a sail, as if the wind had shifted, caught the ear of the officer on watch, and he sprang at once to the wheel, examining closely the compass.

"You are half a point off the course," he said sharply to the man at the wheel. The deviation was corrected, and the officer returned to his post.

"You must steer very accurately," said the looker on, "when only half a point is so much thought of."

"Ah! half a point in many places might bring us directly on the rocks," he said.

So it is in life. Half a point from strict truthfulness strands us upon the rocks of falsehood. Half a point from perfect honesty, and we are steering right for the rocks of crime.—Treasury

A Gentleman

Who formerly resided in Connecticut, but who now resides in Honolulu, writes: "For 20 years past, my wife and I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor, and we attribute to it the dark hair which she and I now have, while hundreds of our acquaintances, ten or a dozen years younger than we, are either gray-headed, white, or bald. When asked how our hair has retained its color and fullness, we reply, 'By the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor—nothing else.'"

"In 1868, my affianced was nearly bald, and the hair kept falling out every day. I induced her to use Ayer's Hair Vigor, and very soon, if not only checked any further loss of hair, but produced an entirely new growth, which has remained luxuriant and glossy to this day. I can recommend this preparation to all in need of a genuine hair-restorer. It is all that it is claimed to be."—Antonio Alarrun, Bastrop, Tex.

From Louisiana.

Dear Recorder:—Some where we have heard of the man who "every time he opened his mouth, put his foot in it." This seems to be about our situation now. Our recent article in the RECORDER interested numbers of would-be emigrants from North Carolina. Many letters have been received, and at the present rate we will receive many more, making inquiries concerning soil, climate, &c., of this locality. Fordoche, Pointe Coupee Parish is in latitude 30°, 45' north, and is about thirty miles west of Baton Rouge, the capital of the State. Statistics of the weather bureaus show more annual rainfall than middle North Carolina. A killing frost comes about once in five or ten years. Snows are light and never remain long on the ground. The soil, as we said in our former letter, is fertile beyond the imagination of people raised in the hill country of North Carolina or any other State. It will produce from one to two bales of cotton per acre; from fifteen to thirty tons of sugar cane which will make from six to fourteen hundred pounds of sugar; corn does not do so well ranging from none to twenty-five bushels per acre. The nights seem to us to be too warm for corn, and the climate does not suit it at all. The above amounts may be made provided the flood waters from the Mississippi do not overflow the lands. Overflows, or as our people called them "high-water," has come on about an average of one year in five since the late war. The water covers the farming lands from two to six feet deep during an overflow. We do not believe there has been a single loss of human life south of Arkansas which may be charged directly to high-water. When overflowed, farming lands usually remain covered eight or ten weeks. Sometimes these overflows come so early in the season that crops are made after they subside; and, at other times, so late that all growing crops are destroyed, and no more may be made during that season.

Land is held for the most part in very large blocks or farms, but some land may be bought in as small plats as forty acres. Land adapted in a greater or less degree to agriculture and more or less protected by levees may be bought from $5 00 to $50.00 per acre according to situation, improvement, etc. We reckon it will require about twice as much to clear and improve the wild lands of Louisiana as it would those in North Carolina. Taxes are about three times as great as in North Carolina. Stock of all kinds except sheep and their universal enemies, dogs, do well here with very little attention except in time of overflow. Dogs die here in a few months of a strange distemper but they usually live long enough to kill their share of sheep. Much stock is lost in time of overflow. It is usually possible to save seventy-five to ninety per cent. Wire fences are used here altogether and hogs are outlaws, because of the fences and their tendency to root down leaves. Hence very little pork is raised. Hogs might be raised, if they were kept in well fenced woods-pastures, with little or no feed except what nature has provided.

This is a level swampy country, but the drainage is better here than we have ever seen natural drainage in any other swampy country. The swamps here are covered with water several months during the year, and the remainder of the time they are so dry that wagons may be driven all over them.

There is little if any more sickness here than in hilly countries, and we believe that with proper hygienic measures there would be as little sickness as in any part of the world. The well-water here is scarcely fit for beasts, to say nothing of human beings. People use cistern-water altogether. If large cisterns were used and the water caught in winter months, there would, instead of very little, be no complaint of malaria.

Schools are few and sessions short. Good people are here, but they are not nearly so numerous as in North Carolina or in other sections of Louisiana even.

We were physically as lazy or a little more so than the average North Carolinian; but, for twelve months after we came to Louisiana, we wondered why we were surrounded by such a lazy race of people. We are pretty well down towards the foot of the procession now; and we agree with the native born Louisianian who has taken trouble to think about it, that there is something in the air particularly conducive to laziness.

To the man who is comparatively well situated in every respect save fertile soil, we would say: Stay where you are; fertilize your land with home-made manure; raise your supplies at home; educate and endeavor to Christianize your children; and thank God you live in North Carolina.

If any of our good people desire more information than we have given in this letter, we will gladly furnish what may be in our power. If necessary to communicate with a considerable number, we will again ask for some of the RECORDER'S valuable space.

In conclusion and that we may vindicate the hospitality of Louisiana, we say the man who comes here with an intention to succeed, bringing with him industry, sobriety and uprightness of character, will be early welcomed by our good people, and he will likely be successful. But will not such a man succeed in North Carolina?

Go to one of the eastern counties, plant oysters or draw gold with a net from the briny deep. Grow finer tobacco than your neighbor if you work in the tobacco belt. Dig mineral wealth out of your countless mines. Harness the rapids of crystal streams. Or in a thousand other ways you may woo dame fortune in the "Old North State" with chances of ultimate success as much in your favor as they will be anywhere.

Joyful and Sorrowful Reading.

After reading the "Personals and Other Items" column of the last RECORDER, I am compelled to lay down the paper with emotions mixed with joy and sadness. I read with real pleasure of honors conferred on two brethren truly worthy to receive such honors.

And in close proximity is recorded the death of two dear friends of former years. One can hardly escape the conclusion that Furman University did the proper thing and the Scriptural thing (Rom. 13: 7, "Honor to whom honor is due") when it conferred the degree of D. D. upon one so bright, so gifted with sparkling genius, so richly endowed with a style of preaching, unique, and a spiritual nature so highly keyed as to constitute him a charming and an elevating preacher as the talented pastor of the Scotland Neck church. I congratulate "Dr. Vann" upon these new honors. It is in accordance with "the fitness of things."

Columbian University has likewise shown its just sense of appreciation and a proper recognition of merit in bestowing the title upon the editor of the Baptist Courier of S. C. We seldom find so happy a blending of real merit and quiet modesty and smoothness of manner.

I see no objection to conferring degrees when it is done so wisely and well as in these two instances.

But how quickly the current of our emotions is changed when we read the account of the death of two such men of God as R. H. Griffith and John Stout, who were called to their home on high on the same day. The latter was a fellow student in the Seminary, whom I learned to esteem as a devoted servant of God, a pure spirited Christian, and whose career it has ever been my pleasure to watch.

In my first pastorate after leaving the Seminary, in Charlotte my home for some time was in the family of R. H. Griffith, where I soon learned to feel like I was one of the family, which feeling has never abated. I have never had or known a more cherished friend than Bro. Griffith. I have never known a man any where in whom I could confide more implicitly. He was a man of wisdom, but pre-eminently distinguished for his prudence. He was a true man. I knew him intimately, and knew him long, and have seen him under very severe and torturing trials, and I can truly say I never knew him to do, nor to collude in, nor connive at a mean or low thing. I sympathize with his bereaved family, and commend them to the God of all grace. A large part of Bro. Griffith's labors have been spent in this State as pastor at Charlotte, N. C., and other points, and as agent for the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, and he deserves a more extended notice in these columns.

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Moral Conflict of Humanity and Other Papers. By A. C. Kendrick, D. D., LL. D. 12mo, 270 pp. Price, $1.00. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

The book cannot be otherwise than helpful. The style is as charming as the exegetical knowledge evinced is great, and both alike are subordinated to the service of truth and of Christ. Many may not accept all the views propounded, but where conclusions differ there will be mental stimulus and spiritual help; and of the former all the more because of the difference. And moreover there will be help in this, that Dr. Kendrick's recognized knowledge of the New Testament Greek and exegesis and his loyalty to the plain teaching of God's Word will lead to a re-examination of the points at which the difference in view may obtain. The publishers have given a worthy book a fitting dress, and students of the Bible, of any denomination, will be grateful therefor.

Book-Borrowers.

Book-borrowers are so numerous and so generally careless that reform in their case seems almost hopeless. Have you any borrowed books on your shelves? How long have they been there? Does the fact that the book has a paper cover make your duty any less binding? Or have you an art study or a roll of music long ago borrowed? Do return it right away. It is not so much that the article is needed, though that is sufficient reason for returning it, but an untidy habit of failure in this respect will lead you to be careless and neglectful about more important matters.—Congregationalist

Islands of the Sea.

Nowhere else in the annals of Christianity can a story be found more remarkable nor more thrilling than that of the conversion of the islands to the Gospels; nowhere have the triumphs of the Cross been more complete. The names Fiji, Samoa, Madagascar, Japan, the New Hebrides, Sandwich Islands, and Society Islands are sufficient to bring to mind the inspiring facts. In the North Pacific, by a strange providence, idols were cast out just before the missionaries arrived, and a six years' revival followed in which 27,000 were received into the churches. In another group peopled by fiercest cannibals, devils incarnate, almost within a single generation such an astounding moral revolution was wrought that wars and violence ceased, and out of a population of some 125,000 nearly 30,000 are now church members, and upward of 100,000 are regular attendants upon religious services in the 800 places of worship. Madagascar is unique as a mission field. When the foundations of the kingdom had scarcely been laid, a bloody persecution broke out and raged for five-and twenty years, but so receptive were the people and so mighty the truth, that the number of believers increased so rapidly that the 2,000 converts increased to 40,000. Now the London Missionary Society, the Norwegian Missionary Society, and the English Friends together reckon 112,000 converts, and 435,000 as largely redeemed from idolatry.

A Scotch family traveling in Japan became so much interested in the missions of the Northern Baptists that they have given $20,000 to that work, and will give $15,000 for a Gospel steamboat for work among the more distant islands of that island kingdom. Would that travelers everywhere would look into missions thoroughly, and not be content with false hearsay. The missionaries seek investigation, and have naught to fear from the most piercing human scrutiny, living always under the eye of the Almighty.

Of the 1,480,000,000 of the earth's inhabitants, the Emperor of China holds away over 400,000,000; the Queen of England rules or protects 380,000,000; the Czar of Russia is dictator to 115,000,000; France, in the republic, dependencies and spheres of influence, has 70,000,000 subjects; the Emperor of Germany, 55,000,000; the Sultan of Turkey, 40,000,000; the Emperor of Japan, 40,000,000; and the King of Spain, 27,000,000,—two thirds of the population of the globe under the government of five rulers.

"How shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard?" In heathen lands there is only one ordained missionary to each 320,000 souls, including lay workers one to every 165,000 souls, and, including native helpers also, one to each 25,000, and there is only one Christian to each 1,500 persons. "How shall they preach except they be sent?"

Any one sent on God's errands is a missionary. Whether the service be great or small, in the home, in the church, or in the uttermost parts of the earth, if it is work for God it is a mission, and whoever performs it is a missionary. We solemnly set apart those going out to a foreign field. We may be just as truly set apart to our work here. A successful missionary society must have missionaries at both ends of the line.—M. P. E., in Missionary Link.

A Kentuckian who visited Korea presented to the king a bottle of whiskey as a sample of the chief product of his native State. Christian people in Kentucky have since sent to the king a beautiful copy of the Bible to show that the State has something better.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

Our State built nineteen miles of railway last year.

Crops all over the State are reported as flourishing.

Salisbury and Charlotte are to be connected by telephone.

Efforts are being made to erect an Episcopal cathedral at Raleigh.

It is reported that a colony of Nebraska farmers is coming to our State.

A "boy preacher," James Cook, of Georgia is holding services in Winston.

Judge McIver is rapidly recovering from his recent stroke of paralysis at Carthage.

Capt. B. P. Williamson of Raleigh has been elected President of the Raleigh Gas Co.

An electric railway will connect Rutherfordton and Chimney Rock in the near future.

There is a well at Salisbury that supplies water as hot as that of the Arkansas Hot Springs.

A telephone connecting Concord, Gastonia, Rock Hill (S. C.) and Charlotte is to be built.

Joe Jackson, the man who stabbed the policeman of High Point recently, has been arrested.

It is stated that women members of the county boards of charity are doing good work in our State.

The Oriental Industrial Stock, Fruit and Agricultural Fair (colored) was held at Newbern last week.

The Kings Mountain Tin Co. has been reorganized and work on the property commenced in earnest.

Mr. A. Syme, a well known citizen of Raleigh, died last week from injuries received in falling from a bicycle.

Prof. of Economics, J. W. Woody, of Guilford College has been called to a similar chair in Whittier College, Col.

The University Summer School at Chapel Hill opened recently with 120 students. The law class has more than thirty members.

The University Summer School of Biology at King's Mountain, directed by Prof. Cobb, has closed after a prosperous meeting.

Transylvania county has voted in favor of issuing $60,000 in bonds to aid in building a railroad from Brevard to Hendersonville via Asheville.

Dr. Collins Denny of Vanderbilt University has been chosen President of Trinity College. The selection seems to give general satisfaction.

President Winston of the State University offers to give a scholarship and lend $100 a year to the best student that is sent him from the Oxford Orphan Asylum.

All the prisoners in Yadkin county jail escaped recently. Three jail deliveries in thirty days do not speak well for our jails nor jailers; everyone of them is someone's fault.

As the result of an appeal by the Raleigh churches most of the business houses in that city will be closed not later than 10 p. m., Saturdays and 8 p. m. other days. This is a laudable movement.

Efforts, which we hope will prove successful, are being made to stir up public sentiment in favor of a stringent dog law. It may not seem so, but worthless dogs are the only hindrance to this State becoming a great sheep-raising section.

The fourth of July was celebrated with unusual ceremonies at the Guilford Battleground. Vice-President Stevenson spoke, Prof. E. A. Alderman delivered an oration and Prof. McIver read a lady's poem. It must have been exceedingly enjoyable.

The Settle-Williams fifth district contested congressional election case has been put before the House in a majority (for Settle) and minority (for Williams) report. It is presumed that Settle will win, as there is very little doubt of the justice of his side.

To unwholesome sanitary conditions at the Caraleigh mills property near Raleigh is attributed several deaths from typhoid fever and about 40 cases of sickness. Every house in the community has a sick person in it. The sewers from the State Asylumn for the insane and the Penitentiary empty in the locality. Remedial efforts are being made.

At the late Teachers' Assembly Profs. J. M. Horner and M. H. Holt representatives of well-known academies, business and preparatory institutions in this State, took the ground that the State University and all the colleges except Davidson had too low standards of admission. They also spoke of the rivalry for members. Dr. Shearer contended against them.

Superintendent Leazar says the State Penitentiary farms contain 2,500 acres in cotton and 4,000 in corn. He had 900 acres in wheat, 400 in oats and 100 acres devoted to garden truck. There was a good harvest of wheat and oats. His cotton and corn are "the finest he has seen anywhere," though not so good as they were last year at this time. There are 1,250 convicts, and there is not much sickness.

A young man who has been out of college only a few months recently allowed his name to be used for the State Senate. His party papers considered it seriously and were running him well until someone was kind enough to inform the sanguine aspirant that a State Senator must be twenty-five years of age, while he was only twenty-three. This speaks volumes for the intelligence of this very "promising young man."

General News.

The first new bale of cotton has been received in Texas.

Prendergast, the murderer of Mayor Harrison of Chicago, will be hanged July 13th.

Labor day, which is the 1st Monday in September, has been made a national holiday.

Damage to the extent of $30,000,000 has been done by recent floods in Hungary, Europe.

Four of the great World's Fair buildings were destroyed by fire originated by strikers last week.

A bill providing for the admission of New Mexico territory into the Union has passed the House.

The Postmaster General has ordered postmasters to participate as little as possible in politics. Good.

Tillman and Butler of South Carolina are in the midst of a sensational campaign for the U. S. Senate.

It is widely reported that the present administration has saved $25,000,000 in pensions since it began.

Nearly all the Chinese in this country have registered according to the requirements of the Geary law.

Our government paid $12,000,000 in sugar bounties last year. There is no reason why it should have paid a cent.

The Louisiana legislature has voted an appropriation for a bust or statue of Thomas Lafon, a negro philanthropist.

Gov. O'Ferrall of Virginia has ordered Fry's division of the Industrial (Coxey) Army from the confines of his State.

Our government conducts its business from July 1st to July 1st. It is stated that this year the balance against it is $75,000,000.

Gen. Supt. V. C. McBee of the Columbia, S. C. section of the Southern Railway, (heretofore Richmond & Danville) has resigned.

The scourge which is raging in Canton, Hong Kong and other Chinese cities is said to be the "black death," which was supposed to be extinct.

Col. Coxey, the originator of the recent sensational and foolish Commonweal tramp movement, is in the midst of a vigorous campaign in Ohio for Congress.

There is no law in Kansas prohibiting lotteries; and none of the political parties have so far declared against them. There are many small lotteries in that State.

It has been revealed that Santo, the anarchist slayer of Prest. Carnot of France, is a member of a band of desperate men who drew lots to decide which should commit the crime.

Annual meeting of the National Press Association was held at Asbury Park, N. J., last week. Several North Carolina editors were present with the purpose of having the next meeting at Asheville.

The Empire of Japan has sent 10,000 soldiers to take Corea; and they have the King captive in his own palace. China and Russia are too jealous, however, to allow Japan's enterprise to succeed.

Adjutant General Tarnsey of Colorado was recently tared and feathered by a mob for his attempt to quell miners' insurrections. Gov. Waite has offered $1,000 reward for the arrest of the guilty parties.

A son was recently born to the Duke of York, eldest son of the Prince of Wales. He is therefore fourth heir to the English throne, having to outlive his father, grandfather and great-grandmother to obtain the crown.

The Health Department's census of the tenement house population of New York City states that 1,332,773 occupy 39,138 tenement houses, or an average of 34 persons to each house. Such conditions are hard to conceive of.

The tariff bill passed the Senate July 31, the vote being yeas 39, nays 34, Senator Hill voting in the negative on account of the income tax. As the bill passed by the Senate is entirely unlike that passed by the House five months ago, the bill has been referred to the House for concurrence. The ways and means committee have reported non-concurrence. A compromise measure will now have to be substituted by a joint committee of the two houses. Final action will be taken in less than a month.

The greatest strike in history is in progress in the North and Northwest, with Chicago as centre. It began at Pullman, Ill., a town built and owned by the Pullman Palace Car Co., which employed as many as 12,000 operatives. The company reduced its employees' wages a year ago. This year they demanded restitution and the company was allowed until June 25th to decide. In refused. The employees refused to work. Through sympathy employees of more than thirty railroads have refused to work so long as Pullman cars are used on those roads. 200,000 men are now engaged in the strike. No freights are moving from Chicago nor from many other Western and central cities. All perishable goods that await shipment are rotting, while the price of them has gone so high that there is great suffering. Many of the strikers are in open rebellion, burning cars, attacking guards and resisting officers of the law. President Cleveland has sent troops to Chicago and Pullman, but they fear to fire on the strikers hoping to have the matter arbitrated. Gov. Altgeld opposes the President's movement. Eugene Debs, President of the American Railway Union directs the strikers. He says there shall be no concession on his part; he will withstand all efforts to the bitter end. United States mails are delayed, the general travelling public inconvenienced, security of property and life and liberty are menaced. It is hourly expected that there will be a conflict between the troops and the strikers, who are burning and destroying cars. There is yet room for hope that arbitration will result and remedy this insurbordination. The strikers cannot succeed for long because they have no resources, being accustomed to live from hand to mouth, while the railroad owners have plenty and are concerned only for the protection of their property—protection guaranteed by law. The innocent poor in Chicago, New York and Cincinnati are suffering more than all others, suffering while more than $2,000,000 worth of property has been thrown to winds! Effect of the strike is felt as far South as Memphis and will be general unless remedied by decisive action for one side or the other. The latest is, that President Cleveland has issued a proclamation, warning against obstruction of the laws and the destruction of government property, and states that troops had been ordered to suppress such obstruction. The labor leaders are on the ground. At a monster meeting Sunday night of trades-union delegates, a general strike was ordered by 4 p. m. Monday; but other accounts state that said strike could not take place before Friday. The Pullmans are inexorable and refuse to arbitrate.

For the Associations.

HOME MISSION BOARD.

At each Association there will be a report on Home Missions. The writers of these reports will desire facts for the same. I have nowhere seen in a short space the facts so well summed up and presented as in the following statement taken from Our Home Field:

"In 1882, when the Home Board was moved from Marion to Atlanta, its receipts from the churches were less than ten thousand dollars, and its missionaries were 38 in number.

Six years after, in 1888, when its cash receipts had reached $48,000 and its missionaries had increased to 287, it was ordered by the Convention to expend $50,000 for a house of worship in Cuba. The year following, its cash receipts were $69,400, and its missionaries numbered 328; it set apart for the house of worship in Havana, $19,000

In consequence of delay in making the title, the remainder of the money due upon this property was not paid until December, 1892. In 1890 it received $68,300, and had 371 missionaries. In 1891 it received $67,200, and had 486 missionaries. In 1892 it received $84,900, of which it paid $21,000 for the Havana property and employed 365 missionaries. In 1893 it received $107,000, paid $21,000 in Havana, and employed 368 missionaries. This past year it received $73,300, and employed 381 missionaries

The average of its contributions for the past seven years has been $74,000 and the average number of missionaries has been 358

The whole number baptized by its missionaries for these seven years has been 34,975, and those received by letter, 28,968, an average per annum of those baptized 4,995, and those received by letter 4,124

Meanwhile the Board has paid for the property in Havana $65,000, and to aid churches in this country to build houses of worship, $23,744

The Board owns property which it values at $94,000, nearly all of which has been acquired during these last seven years. This estimate does not include the recent purchase of a house in New Orleans, on which the Board has made but one payment."

These facts will be needed for reports and bases of speeches before the Associations on Home Missions. The people want just such information. Facts, when properly understood, are wise teachers. As we look back on these results of the Home Mission work there is cause for profound gratitude to God, and a most hopeful prophesy of enlarged usefulness of this Board in the time to come.

C. DURHAM.

It will be to your advantage to read the announcement of the Normal and Collegiate Institute for young women in another column, and write to Dr. Lawrence for further information. Dr. Lawrence informs us that several girls from Baptist families are being educated there on the Presbyterian aid plan.

HELPLESS INVALID.

"About 18 months or two years ago my wife's health gave way, and she grew steadily worse. She could not retain scarcely anything she ate and the case finally assumed the worst form of

DYSPEPSIA and CHRONIC DIARRHŒA,

and she became a helpless invalid at the age of 18. I had her under the treatment of a good physician, but his efforts to relieve her were of no avail. So, after matters had continued thus for 8 or 10 months, and my wife had given up to die, I took the case in my own hands and purchased a bottle of Dr. King's began giving it to her in water as hot as she could drink it, before and after each meal, using a mild purgative occasionally on retiring at night.

Suffice it to say in less than a week there was

A WONDERFUL CHANGE.

She could eat a little of anything she desired, and today is a well woman. She used altogether possibly 4 or 6 bottles. In my opinion

GERMETUER HAS NO EQUAL."

Dr. Taylor's Articles.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I have just received a copy of "How far Should a State Undertake to Educate." I have been reading those articles from time to time as they appeared in the RECORDER, and desire here to give them my hearty indorsement.

They certainly were timely; and no man in my opinion could have given them more point, power and grace, than Dr. Taylor.

I think it a wise thing to put them in pamphlet form and shall take great pleasure in trying to give them circulation.

Two Well-Edited Papers.

It is hardly becoming in me to say so, as I write a column every week for it, but the impression generally prevails in these parts that the Charlotte Observer is not only the best paper now in the State, but the very best that was ever was published in North Carolina. The other journal, the striking ability of whose management has much impressed me, is the BIBLICAL RECORDER. This has always been an ably edited paper from the time when Thomas Meredith sat at the helm up to this date, but I am satisfied it was never better edited than it has been for the past six months. It contains more editorial than ever before, and of a high order of merit.—Dr. Pritchard in Charity and Children.

A Thing Worth Knowing.

THE EXPERIENCE OF AN ENGINEER.

"I have driven the engine over the rails for many years. For a long time my run has been from Peoria, Ill., to Springfield, O., on the Big Four. I am forty years old. Thirty years I have had catarrh. The second time in the last two years I have resigned my responsible position. I did this reluctantly, because it's my trade and I love it. I have done everything that a mortal could to get cured, tried every decoction and snuff remedy advertised and the monthly installment racket, also three of the best doctors in Indianapolis. They cut bones from my nose, and, with wires charged me with electricity, they burnt me. The sizzing was like cooking beefsteak. I got worse and worse. My sufferings and the odor were unbearable. I felt most miserable. Three weeks ago I saw an advertisement in the city papers stating that a doctor by the name of Bye, who had made cancer a specialty for twenty-five years, had at Kansas City, two years ago, discovered a balm that would not only cure cancer, but all malignant diseases, and catarrh was named. He gave the testimony of many noted people. One was from Mrs. Reeder, Mr. Robert Lincoln's wife's aunt. She said she was cured of a horrible cancer by Dr. Bye; that he did it with balmy oils, which were as harmless and as gentle as dew; and it was further stated that over two thousand cases had been cured since the discovery, and that the doctor had the indorsement of the highest medical authority in the United States, and among the many cured were the names of thirty five doctors, which shows their confidence in the mild method treatment, and that Dr. Bye had established an office in this city, at 492 North Tennessee street. I went to him. He made an examination of my case; said my case was a bad one, but it was the kind he always preferred to cure, and that catarrh was as hard to cure as cancer, but he had cured hundreds of such cases, and had met with no failure yet; that he said but little about catarrh in his advertisements, because people were not willing to pay much to be cured. For the last three weeks I have taken the Balmy Oil treatment, and I believe I am permanently cured, but it would seem like exaggeration to tell it, but what I have experienced and seen convinces me of the facts. The oil seems to destroy all malignancy and purify everything it touches. Any one seeing what it does for cancer will not doubt but what it will cure catarrh. I will end by saying I heartily commend the Balmy Oil treatment. It is very simple. Persons can send for the oil and treat themselves at home. The doctor's prices are most reasonable. Even the poor can afford to pay the price he charges for oil. My home is No. 848 West Washington street, Indianapolis, Ind., and you will find Dr. D. M. Bye at No. 842 North Tennessee street.

"F. M. WALKER."

DIED.

COOK—Little Retha, the infant daughter of Charlie A. and Lula F. Cook, died on the morning of June 1st, 1894. The fifteen short months she spent on earth were too few to soil her little soul with sin, and on the sixteenth in all its purity returned to the Saviour who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me." Heaven seems dearer since Retha is there. May God bless and comfort the bereaved parents. AUNTIE.

TILLEY—God in his wisdom and providence took from our midst on May 29th Luther H. Tilley, after an illness of ten weeks. In all his sufferings he recognized the hand of God, and bore it cheerfully and patiently. During a meeting at Bethany last summer he was enabled to view Christ in the true light, and ever afterwards cherished a bright hope. His faith did not waver in the darkest moments. He was a devoted and kind husband, obliging and sympathetic neighbor, careful and considerate in business, and honest in all his dealings. All who knew him loved him. While it grieves us to part with him we trust our loss is his gain. He leaves a wife and four little children, with a father, several brothers and sisters to mourn his loss.

June 29, 1894. W. H. COPLEY.

MORRIS—Sister Margarett Morris (known better as Aunt Peggy and Grandmother) peacefully passed away to join all the loved ones in the spirit land on May 29th, 1894. She was in her ninetieth year of life. She gave seventy-five of it to her Master's service. She professed faith in Christ at a camp meeting at Eno church in Durham county at the age of fifteen, and ever deported herself in a quiet, humble, lovable way. She was a member of Bethesda church at the time of her death.

Her record is exceptional. She was not perfect, but came as near an ideal woman as almost any. She had a gentle, sweet disposition, and endeavored to make all around her happy and pleasant. She leaves a large concourse of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. To know her was truly to love her. We shall sadly miss her at Bethesda. She loved her church and pastor.

Dearest sister, thou hast left us,
Here thy loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that hath bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal.

To the family we would say, the separation will be short, if you only take her Saviour to be your Saviour. God has meant it for your good and our good. Let us all try to meet her on the banks of sweet deliverance.

J. F. MACDUFFIE.

Tributes of Respect.

Departed this life at her home near Spring Hope, Nash county, N. C., on March 19th, 1894, sister Mary Creekmore, in the eighty-second year of her age. She was a consistent member of Ephesus Baptist church, and had been for many years.

Resolved 1. That Ephesus church deeply feels the loss of such a venerable member, the community a good citizen and kind neighbor, her children a kind and devoted mother.

Resolved 2. That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy, and commend them to the God of their father, who alone can heal their broken hearts.

Resolved 3. That a copy of these resolutions, when approved by the church, be spread upon the records of the church, and a copy be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication, and a copy be sent to the family of the deceased.

H. M. WARREN,
W. W. BATCHELOR,
Committee.

Our Bro. F. P. Alderman is not, for God took him. He was born Sept. 14th, 1853, and died at his home in Sampson county, June 15th, 1894. The funeral services were conducted at his home by his pastor, Rev. Chas. F. Hopper. At the close of the services his body was laid to rest in an oak grove near his residence to await the resurrection morn. Around the open grave many of his Alliance brethren stood and conducted services appropriate to the occasion, the grave was filled, flowers were placed upon it, and then the large number of friends turned in sadness to their homes.

Resolved 1. That in the death of our Bro. Alderman Bethel church has lost a wise and conservative leader and a liberal contributor,—the tenth of all the Lord prospered him

Resolved 2. That we extend to his bereaved companion and friends our deepest sympathies, and pray that the Master whom he loved and served may now give to each of them the consolation of his sustaining grace.

Resolved 3. That a copy of these statements and resolutions be made a part of the records of this church.

Is Cancer Curable?

Dear Sirs:—About eleven months ago, I bought an Electropoise from you for treating cancer; I had one of about ten years' standing. It had reached a stage where it was making rapid progress, being about the size of a silver dollar. I knew that I had to do something or my time was about up and you were the only parties that would give me any assurance of a cure.

I am now happy to inform you that the cancer is no more; the Electropoise arrested its progress perceptibly in a few days, and it gradually and slowly grew less until now there is only a place the size of a pin head, and it is gradually disappearing.

Yours truly,
M. M. LILLIBRIDGE.

(MALE AND FEMALE,)

is located in Franklin Co., N. C., 12 miles east of Louisburg. Unsurpassed for health and refinement. Situated in the country, it is free from the objectionable features of city and town schools. Good board in 300 yds. of the Academy at $7 per month (28 days.) There are two regular boarding houses, one for young men, the other for young ladies, besides a number of private homes in which board can be had. Girls who board are required to board with the principal, unless otherwise requested by parent or guardian.

A FULL CORPS OF EFFICIENT TEACHERS. Commercial instruction is a specialty. Diplomas are awarded to those who complete the commercial course as prescribed in catalogue. There is great demand for young men of a business education.

MUSIC, both instrumental and vocal, holds a prominent place in our school. We keep posted as to the requirements for matriculation in the different colleges of the State, and so direct the courses of those who expect to attend college that they may take good stands in their classes. For those who wish to prepare for teaching in public schools we arrange a special course looking towards that end. Our school is not for young men who wish to play the dude, nor for young ladies who wish to be society belles and pass their time in idleness, but for those who are earnestly desirous of a practical business education, or of sufficient preparation to enter colleges.

Session 1894–95 opens Aug. 21, 1894, and continues nine months. For catalogue and particulars, apply to JNO. A. COPPEDGE, Sec'y, Cedar Rock, N. C.

The Home Circle.

The Orchard on the Hill.

Grandfather's home!—that dear old place,
A house with gables wide
Embowered in trees, a great red barn
With haystacks at its side,
A brook spanned by a rustic bridge,
A gloomy, rumbling mill,
And set against a dreamy sky
An orchard on a hill!

Oh, every summer I go there,
When school is out, to stay;
I look for hens' nests, drink new milk,
And tumble on the hay.
Grandfather is the best of men,—
He lets me start the mill,—
And oh, the pippins growing in
The orchard on the hill!

Grandmother's old, too, but so sweet!
She's sprightly, though she's gray;
She feeds the chickens, milks the cows,
And churns, 'most every day,
Such yellow butter! And her pies
The pastry-cupboard fill;
They're made of yellow harvests from
The orchard on the hill.

Across the farm I love to run,
Through fields of grass and grain,
And fight the thistles by the brook,
The mulleins in the lane.
I love the dear old garden set
With rosemary, rue, and dill;
But best of all, and most of all,
The orchard on the hill!

Oh, the berries from the briers!
Oh, the melons green and gold!
We put them in the spring house
To make them good and cold;
And from the bee-hives, now and then,
A honey-bowl we fill,
To sweeten our baked quinces from
The orchard on the hill.

At night grandfather tells me tales
Of long and long ago,
Grandmother knits and knits and smiles
To see her stocking grow,
While all outdoors it is so calm,
So dusky and so still,
And then the moon rolls up behind
The orchard on the hill.

At nine o'clock we have our prayer,
And then I go to bed,
Away off in the darkest room,
And cover up my head,
'Most scared to death, and listen to
The lonesome whippoorwill
Calling to its mate across
The orchard on the hill.

—Maurice Thompson, in St. Nicholas.

How Some Animals Care for Themselves.

Some of the animals take care of themselves at the approach of the winter. The badgers dig frantically in the earth, throwing up a perfect fountain of sand behind them until they have long burrows, to which they retire on cold or stormy days; but every gleam of sunshine woos them to the surface, and they run up and down the cage begging for peanuts, as in summer. One of them has a cunning trick that he taught himself; on reaching the end of the cage he turns a half somersault, rolls to one side and rises faced right for the return trip. This rarely fails to win a reward from the admiring visitor.

The beavers go to sleep in their huts under the water, and the foxes and prairie dogs dig their burrows deeper and retire from the upper world, although, like the badger, they reappear on sunny days.

One sees some of the animals to a better advantage in winter than in summer; the moose and the reindeer seem more lively, and, I think, would be glad to have it colder than it ever is in this latitude. The frozen, snow covered stretches of Canada and Lapland are more to their liking than the yards of the Zoo, even on the coldest days.

The reindeer came all the way across the seas, accompanied by his mate and little one, with a great bag of their favorite moss to supply them with food until they should have become accustomed to American hay and peanuts. The taste for peanuts seems soon to fasten itself upon every creature that enters the gates, except the flesh-eating animals; and in a short time the reindeer come pressing their soft noses through the bars to beg for peanuts quite as eagerly as the monkeys.

The polar bear is another who does not find it quite cold enough to suit him; he has an ice water bath and a den in the north side of a hill, but he still looks as if he were longing for more snow, and I think that nothing would really content him but a cave in an iceberg. Perhaps, if one were to introduce him to the seal ponds, he might find himself in congenial company, at least; but it might happen that the seals would not care for him as a guest. They are a happy family among themselves, and sit with their heads poked through the ice, calling for their dinner with quite as much appetite as in summer.—St. Nicholas.

When Ponce de Leon sought to find
The fountain giving back lost youth,
It may be that he had in mind
That draught which seems to make a truth
Out of the fable ages old,
For drinking it the old grow young;
It is, indeed, a draught of gold,
Surpassing all by poets sung.

The draught meant is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, of course. It is a most potent rejuvenator of the weakened and debilitated system. It drives out all poison, all impurity, enriches the blood, and makes the old and worn out feel young and vigorous. Ponce de Leon didn't discover it, but Dr. Pierce did, and he rightly named it when he called it a "Golden Discovery."

Poverty not a Curse.

Some writers in the political journals of the day treat of poverty as a great evil, and in a shallow way speak of it as if society is to blame and as if government is to blame for not abolishing it entirely, while they are bound to admit that it is the natural condition of man. We agree with the St. Louis Republic when, in commenting upon this matter, it says:

"It is the business of government to prevent any man from taking another's living from him, but it is every man's business to get his own living. Poverty merely means that he needs the living he gets; that he is in want of the necessaries and comforts of life and obliged to get them by his own effort rather than by taking advantage of the efforts of others by whose labor he can profit without giving them equal advantage in return.

"As long as a people is free; as long as every man can keep the product of his labor without danger of having it taken from him by fraud or force, by the violence of lawbreakers or the more dangerous fraud of lawmakers; as long as the laws assure to every man what he has earned and no more; as long as opportunities are equal under the system of government, whatever it is; as long as every child born naked into the world has a fair field, and, from the laws, no favor, so long is poverty a blessing instead of a curse to a country. Whether any man is better for having more than he needs need not be discussed here. The philosophers and moralists have had enough to say of the demoralization produced by excessive accumulation. What is to be said here is that in order to do our work at all and not to be mere cumberers of the ground the great majority of us have need of poverty as the only always reliable incentive to exertion."

This is sound reasoning. If men had never known poverty they could know little of the comfort of plenty or the healthy exercise of the faculties God has given them, to achieve independence and affluence.—Norfolk Landmark.

Kindness is Catching.

A newsboy took the Sixth Avenue elevated railroad car at Park Place, New York, at noon on Thanksgiving Day, and, sliding into one of the cross seats, fell asleep. At Grand Street two young women got on and took seats opposite to the lad. His feet were bare and his hat had fallen off. Presently the younger girl leaned over and placed her muff under the little fellow's dirty cheek. An old gentleman in the next seat smiled at the act, and, without saying anything, held out a quarter, with a nod toward the boy. The girl hesitated a moment, and then reached for it. The next man just as silently offered a dime, a woman across the aisle held out some pennies, and, before she knew it, the girl, with flaming cheeks, had taken money from every passenger on that end of the car. She quietly slid the amount into the sleeping lad's pocket, removed her muff gently from under his head without rousing him, and got off at Twenty-third Street, nodding to all the passengers with a pretty little inclination of the head that seemed full of thanks and a common secret. This rebukes Ingersol.'s sneer that if he had been God he would have good things catching. They are catching, and God made them so.—Parish News.

Just a Few Words.

Just a few words I want to say to my Canadian sisters on a question that has been a burning one to me ever since it was brought to my attention by George T. Angell, President of the "American Humane Education Society." Do you, my dear, unknown friend, now glancing at these lines—do you ever wear a murdered bird in your hat? I used to. I knew nothing about the subject. I was a sad heretic. But a day came when I ripped birds and wings from my hats and threw them into the fire, except one black bird that I keep hung on the canopy of my bed as a text to preach a sermon from to any unenlightened friend that enters the room. Do you know how the fashion started? Do you know how the birds are killed? Let me try to tell you. Seven years ago, at a ball of the demi monde in Paris, appeared a woman wearing on her head a stuffed bird with glassy eyes and outspread wings and tail. The other women thought it was charming. They, too, obtained stuffed birds. The fashion spread upward; and this is said to be the true history of its beginning. The cruelty that attends the slaughter of the birds is such that no right minded woman, if she knew it, would for an instant think of again wearing the bodies of these little creatures. Are they not tender mothers? Do they not love their nestlings, often flying home with bleeding body to die beside their little ones? The beautiful humming bird killed by thrusting a red hot needle down its throat. The red birds that come from France killed by being placed in a cold oven, which is gradually heated to preserve the brilliant coloring of the plumage.

Down South the hunters carry on such wholesale destruction among the birds that in many cases, where the wings only are needed, they tear them from the living body. The birds are hunted at the season of the year when they are rearing their young, because at that time their plumage is the brightest. Five million song-birds are annually required—what for? Do the men hunters who capture them wear them? No; they are placed on the breasts and over the brows of some of the fairest and best women of this continent. Wait till the women know it. They will change all that, for the heart of a true woman is pure gold.—Marshall Saunders, in Our Dumb Animal.

The Physical Strain Involved in High Speeds.

The exaction that modern railroad speed makes on the physical stamina of railroad men is demonstrated in the fact that seven engineers are required to take the Chicago flier out and seven back. The running time between New York and Chicago is twenty hours, and the average speed is forty-eight miles an hour. Each engineer and engine runs three hours. Machine and man return with a slow train to their starting point, to relieve the strain on both. Then the engineer is given forty hours' rest before he goes on the flier again. This rest is absolute, no work of any kind being required of the engineer.

Though the average speed is forty eight miles an hour, the locomotive must at some points be driven at sixty or more. The physical strain on the men in the cab at those bursts of speed is something terrible. The engineer has fifty things to look out for, and is being shaken and swayed all the time. The fireman is constantly feeding the insatiate furnace. On the run of the Empire State express, three tons of coal are shoveled from the tender into the furnace between New York and Albany. It is not wonderful that the engineers of this train are given alternate days for rest and recuperation. Fast travel not only wears out rails and machines, but human creatures' lives.—Boston Transcript.

A wise and holy rule for our neighbor's faults is this, to speak often of them to God, and forget them before men.—Massillon

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—When about three years old I was taken with mumps, also had fever, finally I had that dreaded disease Scrofula. The most eminent physicians in this section treated me to no avail. I had running scrofulous sores on left side of neck and face. I was small and weakly when eight or nine years old, and in fact was nearly a skeleton. Six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery wrought marvelous changes. Although the sores were healed in eight months, I did not quit taking it until I was sure it had been entirely routed from my system. The only signs left of the dreadful disease are the scars which ever remind me of how near death's door I was until rescued by the "Discovery." I am now eighteen years old and weigh 148 pounds; and have not been sick in five years.

WE ARE in thorough sympathy with the sentiment recently expressed at Morehead by certain proprietors of preparatory and academic educational institutions relative to the admission by our colleges and the University of students who are not qualified for such admission with respect either to mental acquirements or age.

We can speak of Trinity, Wake Forest and the University from personal knowledge; we might be able to speak of other institutions were our quaintance less limited However, we have no hesitancy in stating that we have personal acquaintance with young men who have attended the three institutions mentioned, when they would have stood quite ordinarily in the lower classes of academies; and, we are bold to say, some of them would have met with difficulty in an examination on Sanford's Arithmetic, Webster's "blue back speller," or Swinton's grammar. But having entered college they studied algebra and rhetoric, and to this day they are uneducated. These institutions probably excuse themselves by naming such students "preps," but they can never be excused for deceiving them so that they enter the world without a knowledge of arithmetic—a thousand times more useful than algebra,—and the elements of grammar—equally more important than a mere theoretical knowledge of the English language. They cannot be excused for creating the impression that the work of preparatory schools is unnecessary or that they could do such work as cheaply and as well as these schools.

Our State is better equipped with preparatory institutions than ever before. They are cheaper and better than college preparatory annexes, and they are in the reach of every one. A young man may think it worth something to be able to say he has "been to college;" but when lingering wisdom comes he will realize that all the saying, all the name, will not help him one jot. It is wrong to persuade a young man to enter college before he is prepared. It adds expense, limits his practical knowledge, and enables him to deceive others. It is base to mention requirements in catalogs, that are conveniently forgotten when the unprepared student appears.

Every college is hampered with "special students" these days. They are unable to enter anything well, are specialists in nothing, and seem to be at college for want of an excuse for living. They are a great handicap on whatever classes they enter. In our opinion one should not be permitted to become a specialist until one has acquired a general collegiate knowledge,—certainly one should be required to be able to enter the freshman class of a college.

But it said that scholarships should not be withheld from a young man merely because he cannot enter college classes. Surely if privileges are conferred upon any they should be conferred upon those who are most able to appreciate them. Moreover, if a young man desires a collegiate education, and is worthy of a collegiate education, he will not be hindered by attending a preparatory school until he is prepared. The years spent there would be subtracted from the years to be spent in a college, for a college cannot prepare one for entrance more quickly than a preparatory school can. And of course it is cheaper to go to such a school, being nearer home and generally less expensive.

Every young man or woman should aspire to a collegiate education; but one should not deceive one's self that all the college education will be of advantage if one has not a knowledge of arithmetic and spelling and grammar.

There is more room in our State for academic, business and preparatory schools than there is for institutions of higher education; and their fields should not be infringed on by the higher institutions, whether numbers be absolutely essential to life or not.

THIS IS the season of political primaries; and some observations thereupon may be pertinent.

Democracy took its origin in Athens two thousand years ago; and it has not existed since the Christian era. When a question of politics concerned the Athenians all the citizens were assembled in one place and full and free expression of opinion was invited. This is democracy; and, of course, it cannot exist now in even a large city. But it may exist in primaries, and from them in the county and district conventions.

In our country but few citizens vote for their real choice for president, governor or congressman. Most of us vote for men whom we have never known. This is inevitable in a district of 35,000 citizens. Yet in our primaries we do have opportunity of voting for our preferences, for all the citizens of a ward or precinct may be gathered together, and time may be had for each to express his opinion. But the primary may be conducted, and often is, so that only the majority is heard, when the delegates chosen by the primary vote in the county or district convention. And here is the danger: If the majority of citizens selects the delegates, the minority's voice is not heard again for two or more years. This is always dangerous; for our government, though it cannot be democratic, should be as nearly so as possible. The voice of the people, the voice of every man, should be heard as far as possible; and if the delegates selected by a primary are instructed to vote for each candidate in proportion as preferences are expressed for one in the primary, the voice of the people will be heard in the county or district convention. If, for example, two-thirds of the citizens in a primary desire a certain man for Congress, the other third desiring another, two-thirds of the delegates selected should vote in convention for the majority's preference, the other third representing the minority. By this means only can we hope to have even a semblance of democracy in our government.

DID YOU ever consider how the will of the majority is nullified by present day politics right before your eyes? Say there are three parties in the field and candidates are not yet named. By the present system each party nullifies the will of the minority of citizens in a ward or precinct, however great it be, in the primaries, nullifies the will of the minority of the delegates in the county convention; and then the final election nullifies the will of the majority and minority of two entire parties. So many minorities make an overwhelming negative majority; but being divided they are as chaff upon the threshing floor of present day politics. Fewer parties and fewer threshers and less machinery are the remedy.

LABOR is slowly being made to realize that it cannot win the battle with Capital by its present violent methods. It has been organizing all these years only to march under the command of demagogues to injury and defeat. It can win, but never under such leaders; it deserves to win, but not until it knows that honesty and peacefulness are the duty of all citizens.

If 8,000,000 organized laborers had been engaged in the recent unprecedented strike, the result would not be different from that which 250,000 men suffered. Labor has the right to cease laboring; but it has no right to destroy property nor to infringe on the rights of those who would labor. When it does, it is lawless, and deserves to be classified in the ranks of anarchy. And then the resistless power of a mighty government of law-respecting citizens is brought down upon it.

Labor can gain nothing by "strikes," even if it does not break the law. Capital has nothing but its profits to lose; Labor loses flesh and blood. Capital feasts upon laid up stores, resourceless Labor starves. Capital can bide its time, but Labor must work for daily bread.

If all the laboring men on earth would strike to day the fight would be one of endurance, with all the requisites of endurance on the side of Capital; and Capital would win. If Labor, exasperated, should resort to lawlessness as in the late strike, armies well-equipped, would be set upon them. And Labor need not deceive itself that armies will not fight it when it becomes lawless.

But Labor's battle is not hopeless. No worthy battle is. It has the ballot. It may send its representatives to legislatures. If it knows what it desires, there is no reason why it cannot have it, if it ought to have it. Labor has been deceived by demagogues in legislatures and out. Some have urged it to lawlessness, others have promised it legislation which has not been effected. But this is no reason why it will always be deceived.

Labor may gain much, too, by peaceful methods. The Typographical Union of Raleigh, for example, does not strike, nor does it use undue means to prevent other good printers from working. Its members get good wages, but they are not extortioners. And moreover, the organization is helpful to employer as well as employed in that it keeps the city well supplied with printers, and keeps out undesirable men. There is a lesson here for all organized labor—a lesson in lawfulness and moderation.

IT IS to be hoped that the ever-recurring labor troubles, most of which are due to citizens that are aliens in all but name, will teach our immigrant-seeking State a wholesome lesson. How strenuously have we tried to induce immigration! How have we self-deceivingly boasted of the unspeakable salubriousness and accommodating adaptability of our climate, the immeasurable riches of our blank filling soil, the inexhaustible hidden wealth of our hills, the wasting abundance of our valleys, and the ripe pregnancy of our waters! And all this for the sake of anarchy-breeding immigrants,—and if they happen not to be anarchy-breeding they can by no means be wholesome. Immigration destroys a State's traditions and vitiates its citizenship. Happily these effects are not perceptible in North Carolina as our bureau of immigration has served only to reward the persistency of certain inevitable office seekers.

North Carolina doesn't need immigrants, and immigrants do not want North Carolina; else a "bureau" would not be necessary to entice them. All men, immigrants and North Carolina included, know a good thing when they see it; and it has been observed that the fact that high salaried officials label a thing "good" is no warranty of its goodness. If North Carolina were as well adapted to immigrants as Pennsylvania is, be sure immigrants would perceive it without the aid of a high-priced prepaid guide. On the other hand, if North Carolinians cannot develop their hyperbolical resources, immigrants cannot. The cause of our backwardness is the unculture of our citizenship; and immigrants have not been known to elevate any respectable community. Let North Carolina be for North Carolinians, and in years to come when the world learns the value of conservatism and stability it will not lack for seekers. If our State is better than others, let us be content to keep it all to ourselves; and let us make ourselves worthy of it. Of course we should continue to maintain an Immigration Bureau in order to reward our faithful party workers. It will hardly do any harm anyway, and it may be beneficial in keeping men out of more responsible positions.

Multiple Personality.

BY REV. E. M POTEAT.

The recent literature of psychology describes many striking examples of double-mindedness. Some years ago Prof. James of Harvard University published an article in the Century in which he described the traits and experiences of a certain woman who, under the influence of hypnotizers, developed three distinct and markedly different personalities. Such persons are regarded as abnormal, and their mental structure and experiences are studied as belonging in the field of mental pathology.

It is interesting to observe in normal individuals analogues to these curiosities of the psychological clinic. If their speech correctly describes them, many among us are double-minded, two souled. I recently heard a man saying what he was as a Baptist and what he was as citizen; and another carefully distinguishing his duty as a minister from his duty as a man.

One can hardly forbear to ask how many personalities these brethren carry around with them. We read of a man in Scripture that he gave his name as "Legion, for we are many;" but in the context he is described as one possessed of devils!

What are we to conclude of a man who calls himself minister, Baptist, citizen, upon occasion, and who insists on carefully isolating the functions of each, so that the citizen shall never intrude into the field of the Baptist, and the minister shall never be seen in the midst of practical affairs? Certainly not that he is possessed of devils, though he might properly name himself Several, if not Legion; but that he is the victim of a very bad psychology is a conclusion which it is hard to escape.

Perhaps the Mental Philosophy in which many of us were instructed is in part responsible for the tell-tale descriptions which brethren make of themselves. Recall Upham's Mental Philosophy, and how he delivered into your hand after the manner of the naturalist, and described piecemeal the faculties of the mind. These faculties were so sharply distinguished as to present a congeries of personalities instead of a mind. An appeal to experience, at any moment, would have convinced the philosopher that every conscious act is the expression of his total personality. If a man is exercising his faculty of memory, for example, in that experience he is himself, his total self, remembering. In a word, the old mental philosophy came very near losing the mind in the faculties. The new psychology, true to experience, treats the mind as an indiscerptible unit, and double-mindedness as abnormal.

But whether there is here any suggestion as to the origin of the distinctions I have referred to or not, it must be clear, upon a little reflection, that they are distinctions without a difference. Here is a man. He is a citizen. He is a minister. He is a Baptist. In his every act he is his whole self acting. Suppose he casts a vote with the liquor dealer for the perpetuation of the saloon iniquity. Here it will be said he acts as a citizen. No; he acts as Baptist—minister—citizen. And if he feels compunction, as he certainly ought for such a vote, his entire self feels the compunction, as it is his entire manhood that is smirched. Certain it is, that a man cannot escape responsibility for his act as a citizen under the shelter of his character as a Baptist. And even ministerial robes do not afford a hiding place for the citizen who has played the fool.

The Everlasting Gospel Ought to be Supported.

BY REV. J. A. SMITH.

PART THIRD.

In the previous articles which have appeared in these columns, I have discussed mainly the duty of sustaining the local pastor and supporting the gospel at home.

I feel assured of the fact that all true Christians will agree with me in the statement that the cordial support of the gospel at home is the only sure guarantee that the gospel will be supported in foreign lands. And I feel assured of the fact that they will also agree with me in the statement that the support of the gospel here at home is but a drop in the bucket in comparison with the support of the gospel in heathen lands. And I sincerely hope that what I have to say on the subject will be the means of bringing other brethren to speak and write on the subject of Foreign Missions as they have never done before. These big spread-eagle speeches at the district associations and conventions make us feel very good just at the time and cause us to make some pious resolutions. But we need a general permanent awakening on the subject of supporting the gospel in heathen lands so that we will never again this side of the glorious millennial dawn fall into a state of lethargy and sleep.

If we possess the right kind of religion, the reason why we sing, pray and support the gospel at home is because we have realized the fact that it is the power of God unto salvation. And realizing this grand fact, we desire to proclaim the glad tidings not only in the waste places around our own homes, but we earnestly desire to send the glad doings to earth's remotest bounds. Where this desire does not exist, there is no regeneration, sanctification or Holy Ghost religion. There is a mere partisan or sectarian spirit which in the sight of God is as "the sounding brass and tinkling cymbal." All who feel like Paul when he said, "I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh," have the true missionary spirit. He desired the conversion not only of his Jewish brethren, but all the rest of his fellowmen, and his grand missionary tours and apostolic labors prove conclusively that the burning desire of his heart was the salvation of all men. I have all my life been convinced of this fact that it is going to take the same kind of religious experience for us to enter the everlasting kingdom as it did the beloved Apostle. Nothing will cause me to quicker lose all faith in a man's religion than to hear him speaking lightly of missionary effort and at the same time practicing what he preaches. Those who never pray for missions nor give anything for the support of the gospel in heathen lands, are going to be left at the last day. I cannot see on what general principles they expect to be present at that grand occasion when many shall come from the north and the south and from the east and the west, to sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the everlasting kingdom. These ten cent and twenty-five cent brethren who give annually these amounts to support the gospel in heathen lands when they are able to give ten, twenty-five and even one hundred dollars, are going to be bitterly disappointed on that coming day when Jesus will give the crowns and sceptres to those who have borne the heat and burden of the day and done what they could to save earth's perishing sons and daughters.

Some one has said that the gospel is one of the grandest prophecies in the world—a long, beautiful and most sublime prediction, embracing heaven and earth in its mighty circumference and resting not until earth shall be like heaven, and both shall be one in Christ. This is indeed a grand sentiment, but it is the real sentiment of all who love the Lord in sincerity and in truth and desire to see literally fulfilled that ancient prophecy which declares, "For from the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same, my name shall be great among the Gentiles; and in every place incense shall be offered unto my name and a pure offering; for my name shall be great among the heathen, saith the Lord of hosts."

I for one believe that the loftiest honor is going to wreathe the brow of every man and woman who in person or by proxy is holding out the Bible and its grand truths to the nations in heathen darkness. We are all living in a peculiar period of the world's history. It may be that we are approaching that period when Christ said there should be signs in the sun and in the moon and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth." Great and good men differ so widely on the subject of eschatology, or the doctrine of the last things, that it is almost impossible for us tell exactly the latitude and longitude of the old Ship of Zion. She may be just approaching the bright golden shores, or she may yet have to cross many dark, stormy and tempest-tossed seas. But there is one thing that is grand and inspires the reapers who are out in the fields reaping the golden harvest and bringing in the sheaves for Christ: they may work on undismayed by what is going on around them. They may toil and labor on till Jesus commands the angels to sing "Harvest home," and not till then need our brethren in China, Japan, Mexico and the isles of the seas lay down their sickles and return from their work.

I for one believe that Jesus is going to reign "wherever the sun does his successive journeys run." In the second Psalm it is said, "Ask of me and I shall give thee the heathen for an inheritance and the uttermost part of the earth for a possession." That rich gem, the Lord's prayer, stands in the middle of the gospel like a mountain of light in a very fruitful field assuring us that God intends that his will shall be done on earth as it is done in heaven. Our blessed Lord would never have taught us to pray for a thing which it was not the intention of God to perform. When the will of God shall be done upon the earth as it is done in heaven, the earth will then be like heaven. The meanest, most selfish and despicable man on earth is one who will flatly refuse to make earth like heaven. I have never had any patience with the Hardshell idea that waits until sovereignty pulls the sheep out of the ditch; and yet practically there is a great deal of Hardshellism in all our churches and in all of our hearts. We can discover this fact by asking the question, What are we doing to bring about the glorious consummation and make earth become as heaven? What are we doing to advance the conquests of him who hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, King of kings and Lord of lords?

The church of the nineteenth century may become exceedingly corrupt and wicked in the sight of a pure and holy God. It may prove to be a most miserable failure. It may fail to take advantage of the golden opportunities which God has given it to evangelize the world. The so-called Christians may be so mean, stingy and covetous that they will not bring the tithes and free will offerings into the house of God. The "cheap Johns" in the pulpit may 'spit cotton" and oppose the great extravagance of their brethren. Covetousness, which is idolatry, may utterly repudiate the idea of Christian consecration and liberality. The talent may be hid in the napkin and the pound wasted; but there is coming a radical change, and all of God's plans and purposes are going to be carried out to the very letter. If we fail as churches and individuals to do our duty in the evangelization of the world, God will suddenly set us aside and put some one else in the harness who will carry on the grand work. God is absolutely independent of modern Christianity, and his will shall be accomplished. Although Ephesus is destroyed and Laodicea spewed out of the mouth of an angry Christ, God is able out of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham, and some of these days he is going to destroy those old fossil churches which spend half the day in hearing unsanctified men render excuses for church absence, but never spend a moment in prayer for the conversion of the world, or discuss as a church the awful condition of those nations destitute of the glorious gospel of the Son of God.

Modern Christians do not dream that there is a possibility of being cast aside by Jehovah as a miserable failure in the conquest of the world. At one time in Jewish history a decree went forth that the whole nation should be destroyed. It was a time of great mourning among the Jews and fasting and weeping and wailing, and many lay in sackcloth and ashes. There seemed to be but one ray of hope for the terrified people. A beautiful Jewish woman was queen, and it was her privilege to go in before the king, touch his golden scepter, and make supplication to him in behalf of her people. Mordecai said unto her, "For if thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, then shall there enlargement and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place; but thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed, and who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?" We who profess to be God's people can learn a lesson from this. If Queen Esther had neglected the grand opportunity and refused to touch the golden scepter, she and her father's house would have been the only sufferers. God in a way not known to us would have delivered his ancient people, but Esther would have lost the grand honor of delivering her people. We who claim to be Christians may neglect to touch the golden scepter. We may refuse to utilize the grand and splendid opportunity which God has given us for the evangelization of the world, but this will not change the plans and purposes of God. He is going to save an innumerable company which no man can number, who are to be gathered out of every nation, kindred, tribe and tongue. And if we are not willing to act as his instruments in the salvation of men, he will out of the very stones around us raise up children unto Abraham. It is a positive fact that we are not sending the dying nations the men and means at our command. We are not giving to the foreign work but a small fractional part of what we ought to give. In arranging for the work of the present year, our Board at Richmond has made an apportionment for each state, and North Carolina is asked for the modest sum of $9,000 as her part in sustaining the work upon the foreign field. When we place all things in the presence of the great judg-

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 18, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

IT SEEMS to us that a perusal of Brother Smith's article in other columns of this number would re-kindle the fires of missionary zeal, such as made Paul's career glorious, in every reader's heart.

It is high time for the world to be stirred up to the importance of sending the gospel to every creature. It is high time to persuade Christian men and women to forget themselves for a moment and contemplate the heathen darkness and the heathen doom. It is a duty of every Christian that cannot be postponed an hour both for the sake of the heathen and for the sake of Christianity. Our present attitude is a reflection on Christianity and a sin upon our own hearts.

The Christian's duty is to glorify the Father even as Christ glorified him. Can a Christian afford not to give money and time to this end, if the Son of God could give his life? Supporting and furthering the gospel to the redemption of the lost is the means; and there's not one, so little nor so great, who can escape this duty and make account for it to God.

IF A member of a Baptist church is not a member of a society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, we have a mistaken concept of the province of a Baptist church. Certainly no Christian can evade the conclusion that cruelty to any of God's creatures is ungodly and unchristian; certainly no Christian can evade the conclusion that it is one's duty to shield God's creatures from cruelty. And yet some people in our State are asking Christians to join societies for prevention of cruelty to animals. Christians who do so, reflect on their church life. And more than this, we are free to say, a Christian who will not do what one may to prevent cruelty to animals as a humane being and a Christian, will not try to prevent such cruelty as a member of any organization.

If it be averred that Christians should join outside organizations in order to influence non-Christians to prevent cruelty to animals, we have only to say that the Christian's first duty is to show non-Christians the way of eternal life, to persuade them to become Christ-like.

A RECENT advertisement of a new edition of the Bible states that the appended notes make the Book a new book. This is a striking epitome of the times. All things can be made new by enterprise, even unto God's perfect Word. We protest against the statement, though we know full well that the writer of the announcement merely meant that it was a new book so far as notes were concerned. We really fear, however, that men will eventually conclude that all things, heavenly and earthly, may be improved by the proper enterprise. The advertisement was repulsive to us rather than attractive. We would not have a Bible that human work could make new. We would not exchange the old Bible, the Bible that has been the light of ages, for all the new ones on earth. Notes by human beings may be new, but they are mere changeable opinions at best; and are worthless so long as men enjoy the divine right to interpret God's Word according to their consciences. They may enlighten, and they can confuse; they are never absolutely beyond question, however valuable they be as exponents of learned and consecrated minds.

IN VIEW of the general misunderstanding in these parts of the duties of citizens, Bro. Poteat's article on our first page is peculiarly timely. It is full of saving common sense, even though it is concerned with a very deep science. No Baptist can be a Baptist and a citizen,—he can never be more nor less than a Baptist citizen. When you approach the ballot do not feel that you are not a Baptist any more than you would have one think that you are not a citizen. Being a Baptist, however, doesn't prevent one from voting directly contrary to all other Baptists any more than being a citizen determines your choice.

We have heard of "Christians" who put their religion aside with their Sunday clothes. They were of the world worldly, and the spiritual had no part in them on Sundays or in the week. Once a Baptist one cannot get in a position where one is not a Baptist, except one depart from one's principles. A Baptist cannot go to church as a Baptist and to the polls as a citizen. We despise the duplicity that prompts some men to say they can. If you are a Baptist you are a Baptist citizen, and as such are accountable for everything you do. They who name themselves "Several" are not far removed from him who called himself "Legion."

THE ASSOCIATIONS

Beginning the last of the present month and ending near the middle of next November the Associations of North Carolina Baptists will meet in annual session, after which we come together in Convention,—at times and places indicated in another column.

These bodies represent nearly two hundred thousand people, and are therefore a mighty power under God. They labor under the leadership of Christ, and are therefore most responsible bodies. Their strength is strength only as their influence is properly directed; and it increases only as they are active in the Lord's work. They exist as organized bodies for the one purpose of maintaining and increasing this strength in order to more fully serve God. Without such organizations Baptist work in North Carolina would not advance in any degree comparable with the present rate.

It may be well to note in passing that since the associations met last three others from the Western Convention have joined us. We have heretofore expressed the hope that these were harbingers of a general union in one Convention. They may not be. But it seems to us that it is desirable from an economic point of view that there be no division among us. This, however, is a matter that can be settled only by the will of the individual churches as expressed by individual members; and we know that the God gave Baptists this freedom will direct them properly.

Our associational meetings have always been of great interest and importance. And while we would not disparage past meetings, it seems to us that there is a broad and indefinable feeling that those of this summer, autumn and fall will be of extraordinary interest. We are assured that the central representatives of all the objects of the Convention are more active than ever, and are consequently determined to infuse their zeal into the individual representatives of them. The need of activity on the part of each individual Baptist in the State, always great, was never greater than at present. The support of the gospel at home and abroad is being urged upon us as it has not been in years. Debts are weighing down and threatening to seriously retard the work; but we assure every reader if the Associations respond to the moderate calls that will be made upon them that there is nothing to discourage us. The Orphanage, the Ministerial Relief Board, the Board of Education, State Missions, and other objects, must not be overlooked in our zeal for outside work.

And here we are reminded that a great question will be presented to the Associations which will appeal very strongly to all Baptist citizens. The educational question deserves our attention; but let us be sure that it does not overshadow the work of the Associations. There are other matters of greater importance. By no means should conflicting views, if there be any, be permitted to embitter one moment of the meetings. It may also be timely to remind the brethren that in considering this matter they should consider it as a question of public policy that concerns all citizens; and the fact that one is a Baptist should not prejudice one pro nor con, and alone should not determine one's position.

Happily the question of mission methods is being put aside. We have all of us had enough of controversy; and we earnestly hope that whatever may wisely be done to prevent controversy will be done. Our views are well known. We have only to say to those who differ with us that God will bless them if they do the best they can according to their consciences; and we can say no more for ourselves. Certainly God does not approve bitterness and dissension among brethren at any cost.

Such opportunities for mingled good-fellowship, edification and enjoyment as associations afford are seldom presented upon other occasions. Such a spirit as prevails at these meetings is never found at others. We hope this year to be able to report the largest attendance at all the associations in our history and the most enthusiastic efforts for the work. And more than this we hope the enthusiasm will last throughout the year. It is a duty and a privilege of every Baptist to attend them; and we are sure enthusiasm cannot be prevented if they are attended.

Whatever we North Carolina Baptists do is dependent on every Baptist in North Carolina. No one is without a duty, albeit some seem to be. We may all have differences as to what should be done or how to do; but we cannot escape the conclusion that each one must do one's best. And if each of us does his or her duty there will be such a rejoicing in God's name at the Convention at Charlotte as has never been experienced in our State. There is work for all, work that is common in that it is in the name of the Saviour of us all, and work that is imperative for the same reason.

We suggest that pastors begin now their efforts to incite interest in the coming meetings; to talk of the work that concerns and needs us all. It may seem early, but it is not too early. If the churches can be lead to look forward to the associations, there will be greater activity and greater interest when they meet. And we hope that as many as can will come, and that each one will be ready to do his part in advising how and in doing what each thinks the Master would have done.

IF YOU would have your boy or girl educated, begin when they are young and bring them in daily contact with wholesome literature. They will be educated with great difficulty, if when they are young you do not cultivate in them a desire to read, and interest in general matters. A good wholesome newspaper and a good book, history, narrative of adventure or story, will do more toward laying a broad and lasting foundation for education than all the schools. One must love to read before one can read advantageously; and your child will never love to read if text books are the first he looks into. A good wholesome periodical—two or three of them, if possible,—and a modest, well-chosen library, are more essential to a home where there are children than anything save religion and the bare necessities of life.

TOO MANY of us are "would-bes:" we so often forget the destination of those who deal solely in good intentions. We daresay there are pastors and other brethren—and sisters, too—who are intending to do many good things when thus and so has been done. When times get better one is going to give more money; when there is less work, another is going to give more time,—and so we are always "going to." Now is the time; Christ has given us no other. He distinctly bids us "take no thought for the morrow." We are not so foolish as to lament yesterday. To day is the day for good intentions; and their achievement to-day will do more good than at any other time. They who wait for the morrow to do well will never do well save by accident. Do to-day, and take no thought for any other day. Present duties are the only duties. A mortal has no right to try to postpone the accomplishment of God's will.

A BROTHER asks us the following questions relative to State aid:—

(1) Does the State University offer free tuition to ministers and sons of ministers? Yes. (2) If so, would not Baptists furnish the institution one thousand students, were they sufficiently weak in the knees to do it? We do not know. Certainly they would send it about two hundred. (3) If it is right for the State to educate preachers, is it not right for it to build houses for them to preach in? Yes, if we comprehend the fundamental question of right. Does the State appropriate $100 per head for the higher education of students to about $1.00 per head for the free schools? The figures are so nearly correct that they can always be used for the sake of "round numbers" without fear of contradiction. The State pays a teacher about fifty dollars to instruct fifty boys or girls two months in the year, while it pays $5,000 to instruct the same number of able-bodied young men nine months.

WE HOPE the Union Meetings to be held the latter part of this week and the first part of the next will be largely attended. They seem to us to be slowly growing in favor, and we anticipate the time when they will be as popular and as useful as the Associations. There is so much business at the latter that not much opportunity is given to spiritual instruction. But at Union Meetings there is a minimum of business; hence, they may largely replace the Associations in this respect.

Nothing can be more helpful to pastors and people than such gatherings. If the meetings are conducted well, they always exert an uplifting influence. We need more good fellowship, and such meetings as these are most conducive to this result. And moreover, the practicable nature of the questions set for discussion cannot but tend towards instructing all who hear.

Another matter which we have desired to mention for a year, but have withheld for good reasons: As this RECORDER manifests, considerable space that should be devoted to articles and news is occupied by Union Meeting programs, each of which concerns but a limited number of readers. We think the space may be more wisely used without detriment to the meetings. Suppose our brethren have the programs of the next meetings issued in circulars, and merely send announcement to us of the time and place of the meeting, and to whom application for programs should be made, in order that it may be demonstrated whether so much RECORDER space may not be wisely given to other matters. If, however, any Union doesn't desire to incur the expense of circular announcement, we will be very glad to print its program in full.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

MOREHEAD.

From all I saw there was one of the largest gatherings of teachers ever had at Morehead. Most of these had left before I got there, leaving, however, plenty of people to carry on the boating and fishing by day, and the courting and dancing by night. This is the best time to work for the RECORDER at Morehead. Many of our brethren are boatmen and fishermen, and this is their harvest, which was a good one; and it seemed a pleasure to them to remember in a substantial way their religious paper.

Bro. Hiden is succeeding well with his work, and day by day grows stronger in the affections of his people. Many brethren in our State remember Bro. Hiden's father, Dr. J. C. Hiden, with great pleasure, especially the brethren in Wilmington, where for many years he was pastor of the First Baptist church. The son is "a chip off the old block" possibly with some interest added. I do not know a young man better equipped for his work. With a mind trained to think, with a desire to know and do the will of the Master, and with a purpose to go quietly on and do his work, at no distant day he is to take his place among the first workers in the State.

I was sorry to find Bro. Leary in such a low state of health. He was one of the first to preach the gospel as we hold it in this section of the State, and now his work is done and his rest and reward are near at hand.

NEWBERN

Here I found Bro. Ford just recovering from what was thought would result in a serious attack of fever, but now he is on the way to his usual health, and expects to take a month off for rest. If any church in the mountains now vacant desires some good preaching for a month, it could probably secure it by writing to Bro. Ford.

I do not know a better town in the State, nor one that has made more progress in the past five years than Newbern, and the same safe and conservative spirit of progress is going on now.

The mission work which is supported by the church at Newbern and conducted by Bro. Rose is very encouraging; and now that the church has come into possession of a considerable legacy, we may hope for yet more mission work to be done in this section.

KINSTON.

The finest crops I have seen in the State I saw growing on the magnificent lands around Kinston. There is no finer section of country to be found anywhere. The land is rich and adapted to the growing of a great variety of crops.

Bro. James McDaniel has recently built a splendid residence (I think Bro. Pritchard would allow this word) a mile from Kinston, and is giving considerable of his time to farming.

Bro. Stough and his brethren have just completed a nice chapel a few miles from town. To those who know anything of the Kinston brethren, it will be no surprise to learn that every dollar of the money has been paid. These brethren intend to have a new house in Kinston in the near future, and for years they have been collecting and putting by money for this purpose. Many other churches could profit by this example. Bro. Stough had just returned from assisting Bro. Vernon in a series of meetings. He gave me a most encouraging report of Bro. Vernon and his work.

Dr. Lewis is teaching some young men during his vacation. He had an excellent school the past year, and I learn that his prospects are fine for next session.

....Rev. J. Q. Adams of Wadesboro assisted in the dedication of a church at his old home, Rock Hill, S. C., last Sunday.

....Rev. H. C. Moore's moving into new quarters at Monroe was made the occasion of a pounding and a general good time last week.

....Some Northern churches are using individual cups for communion. Another advancement of these progressive days, we suppose.

....Prof. Jno. Mills, son of Bro I. R. Mills of Wake Forest, was in Raleigh one day last week. He will teach at Franklin, Va., next year.

....Efforts are being made to organize the alumni, old students and friends of Wake Forest College all over the State. It is a worthy movement.

....Prof. W. B. Royall of Wake Forest College has returned from a short trip to Jackson Springs for his health, which we hope is much improved.

....Revs. Rufus Ford and J. W. Jones began a series of meetings at Cove last Sunday. Bro. Rose assisted Bro. Carroll at Fort Barnwell last week.

....The anniversary of the departure of the "Gospel Mission" party last year for China was fittingly observed at Wells' Chapel, July 7th and 8th.

....Series of meetings for the development of the young people are being held in Kentucky under the auspices of the State Mission Board at various places.

....Improvements costing about $750 have recently been completed within the High Point church, of which Rev. R. W. Weaver of Greensboro is pastor.

....Rev. N. Maynard and wife of Tennessee will sail as missionaries for Japan this fall under appointment of our Board. Bro. Maynard attended the Seminary.

....Rev. S. F. Taylor, who, the Baptist and Reflector says, is a member of the widely known Taylor family of Virginia, has become president of Stevens College, Mo.

....On account of the number of Union Meeting programs in this issue, an article on the Foreign Mission Board and several valued news letters remain over till next week.

....Rev. J. O. Alderman of Concord had a splendid article in the Concord Standard on the educational question. It was endorsed by the ministers' conference of Concord.

....Dr. Beckley of Philadelphia has accepted a call to the Epiphany Baptist church, New York. This is the pastorate to which it was reported that Dr. H. M. Wharton was called.

....Rev. W. H Edwards of Wake Forest and Miss Minnie Seymour of near Louisburg were married on the 10th inst, Rev. W. R. Gwaltney officiating. We extend our best wishes.

....Rev. J. H. Lamberth, says the Richmond Dispatch, will be absent from Greenville until the last of August. He goes first to Person and Granville counties to hold meetings.

....Rev. J. M. Bridges changes his address from Spartanburg to Pelham, S. C., and writes: "We are in a good meeting here; four have joined the church up to date, July 13th.

....Dr. A. T. Robertson of the Louisville Seminary is visiting his father at Cool Spring, Iredell county. We hope he will find time during his vacation to let our readers hear from him.

....Work on the improvements at Wake Forest College is progressing very well. Most of the professors are still there, expecting to travel later on. Prof. Carlyle is at his home in Robeson county.

....Rev. Jas. I. Kendrick resigned the Mt. Airy pastorate after holding services one Sunday. He goes to a country church in Kentucky. We hope the church will succeed in securing a pastor immediately.

....Prof. M. O. Carpenter of Reepsville, N. C., who graduated at Wake Forest College last June, passed through Raleigh last week on his way to Reynoldson, to take charge of the excellent academy there.

....About twenty thousand Christian Endeavors assembled in annual meeting at Cleveland, Ohio. About 12,000 or 15,000 Baptist young people are expected at Toronto, Canada, the latter part of this week.

....Rev. J. A. Brunson has resigned the pastorate of the French Broad Baptist church, Asheville, on account of doctrinal differences. He believes, an exchange states, in Saturday as the day of worship.

....Drs. B. H. Carroll and G. W. Truett of Waco, Texas, having been granted vacations by their churches, will spend this summer canvassing their State for the State Mission Board. This is a worthy way to rest.

....Dr. M. B. Wharton of Freemason St. Church, Norfolk, has been granted a leave of absence, during which Dr. Thames of Danville, Va., will supply his pulpit. Dr. Wharton is visiting relatives at Graham, N. C.

....We know we have a good many unrenewed subscriptions on our list that are waiting for personal reminders. It will save us great expense if you will send your renewal as soon as you can, after it has expired.

....Rev. J. A. Smith says there are no saloons or distilleries in Robeson county; and as a matter of course the county is in excellent condition. We would rejoice if this could be said in every county in the State.

....Rev. L. G. Broughton writes that there were about one hundred professions of religion in the meeting recently conducted by him at Rocky Ks, Va. Bro. Broughton has been granted a month's vacation.

....The increased attendance and interest at Trade Street Church since the arrival of Mr. Pruitt is gratifying to the church people. Mr. Pruitt is alive and progressive and has worked up the church considerably. —Charlotte Observer.

....The Wake Forest Student for June is on our table. It contains an unusual number of meritorious articles, one by J. D. Hufham, Jr., on the Pitch Lake of Trinidad being especially so. It shows deep research and careful preparation.

....Dr. Luther A. Nowell of Colerain, who attended Wake Forest College some years ago, and has since taken the doctor's degree, and Miss Cleo Britton were united in marriage at Powellsville, June 27th, Rev. C. B. Williams officiating.

....Dr. J. W. Carter returned on the 10th inst. from Carthage, where he had been preaching ten days in a meeting of the Baptist church, Rev. C. J. Anderson pastor. There were eleven conversions, and the church was greatly uplifted.

....Revs. A. W. Curtis, A. Cree and Dr. T. T. Speight took prominent parts in a recent enthusiastic meeting of the Bertie Teacher's Association. Dr. McIver of the Normal and Industrial School, made two speeches, says the Patron and Gleaner.

....Miss Delia Dixon, daughter of Rev. Thos. Dixon, Sr., is visiting her father at Shelby. Miss Dixon has pursued the study of medicine in New York City for some years and has taken the M. D. degree. She will begin a tour around the world shortly.

....We are grieved to learn the sad news that Dr. Felix, who lately gave up the pastorate of the First Baptist church, Lynchburg, on account of failing health, is also suffering from probably incurable mental troubles, and is now in a sanitarium at Cincinnati.

....Last Sunday morning Dr. M. M. Marshall, rector of Christ church, this city, completed the twentieth year of his service there. The long pastorate is a testimony to the Doctor and to his flock, and we congratulate both and wish them many returns of the day.

....The Baptist church near Coinjock, Currituck county, is beginning to assume the appearance of a very handsome edifice, says the Economist-Falcon. Bro. Watson of Norfolk will assist the pastor of this church, Bro. N. P. Stallings, in a meeting early in August.

....The Pope of Rome is out in an encyclical letter asking for Christian unity. He is kind enough to recommend union with Romanism as the only means. We don't blame him for desiring that kind of unity; but in the name of all that's good let it not be called Christian.

....Rev. J. H Lamberth of Greenville is holding a protracted meeting at Concord church, Granville county. Meetings are also being held at Brassfield, Tally Ho and Bethany, says the Ledger. We presume that both Bro. Marsh or Bro. Stradley are engaged in these meetings.

....Imitation, it is said, is the sincerest flattery. If the saying is true, Judge Winston, author of "Talks on Law" for the RECORDER, is being sincerely flattered, as several of our contemporaries are publishing such talks now. Our readers will be glad to know that Judge Winston's talks are being revised for publication.

....Rev. W. P. Fife writes from Charlotte: "Please send paper to Thomasville, N. C., instead of Charlotte, until further notice. God wonderfully blessed us at Cynthania, Ky." We have heard that there were more than two hundred professions of religion under Bro. Fife at Cynthania. He is now holding a meeting in Millboro, Virginia.

....Dr. C. E. W. Dobbs has purchased an interest in the Indiana Baptist, and will give up the pastorate at Guthrie, Oklahoma, in order to devote his time to work on that paper. Dr. Dobbs spent some years of his life in North Carolina, and is well known to many of our readers. As a Bible scholar he has few equals in the South, and as a writer his services have been in demand for many years.

....The RECORDER recently carried off the palm for the oldest subscriber; and now Rev. O. C. Horton sends us a new one, which we think will take the premium for the youngest. He writes: "Miss Winona Massey of Selma is probably the youngest subscriber on your list, being just two and a half years old. She wants to see the paper every week as soon as it comas. The prophecy 'a little child shall lead them' is fulfilling."

....The Western Recorder recently stated that "there is nothing in our religion that is not eighteen hundred years old." The Examiner takes issue, and asks biblical authority for Sunday-schools. The Recorder is right. If there is one new thing in our religion, there may be two or more; and when these things come to pass the authority of the Bible will be of only secondary importance. The Christian religion is the religion of Christ; and Christ's religion is perfect: it cannot be improved. It permits no additions.

....Several brethren have brought us under great obligation to them for new subscribers recently. Our list is growing. We desire to have it greatly extended this fall, and to that end want the brethren and sisters to help sow seeds now. If you think you can distribute a few sample copies wisely, send us your name. As the Associations draw near, we take this means of reminding the brethren that we would be very glad to have them meet us or our representative at their Associations with renewals and new subscriptions.

....Rev. Jno. C. Hocutt sends us the following good news from Burlington, July 11th: "Since I recovered from my illness, the cause here is advancing. Last week, we had a meeting of much interest at Glencoe. We baptized two here last Sunday-night, and expect to baptize several others next Sunday-night. Two days work at Haw River this week makes it possible for the brethren there to buy a very desirable lot for seventy five dollars. They will get the deed and pay for it next Saturday. Within the next twelve months, we expect to build a house of worship to cost not less than fifteen hundred dollars."

....Efforts are being made to organize a "temperance association" in North Carolina. A Baptist church and all Christian churches are nothing if they are not temperance organizations. Let us fight the traffic as Christian people. Let us express in trumpet tones our Christian obligation not to vote for any candidate who is unwilling to declare for temperance, say, on the Mississippi plan, or something better. In our opinion the saloon and the distillery can be overcome only in this way. Every man you vote for is your representative; be sure, in representing you, he does not misrepresent the religion that you profess. If this is narrow, make the most of it.

The $5 Proposition.

I have noticed that some pastors have collected from their churches five dollars or more for the debt, others have given the whole amount, and others have united with their churches in the effort to aid the Board in this time of need.

Some understood Dr. Ellis to mean that each pastor should try to get five dollars from his church for this work. I know the pastors have many calls, and they are liberal men; often they wish they could do more, but there are necessities which demand a sacrifice, and I think this is one of the times. Some pastors get larger salaries than others, and they have many and larger demands. When we remember that Dr. Ellis and his church expect to give $2,000 on the debt, we can appreciate the fact that a big salary often means big calls.

I want to thank every pastor in North Carolina that has made any contribution to this debt, and say to those who have not, come, brethren, help in your own way to pull up this hill.

By unity of effort we paid the debt on our State Mission Board last winter. We can pay this debt that is now a burden to our Foreign Mission Board if we will all come to the help of the Board.

R VAN DEVENTER.

Henderson, July 9, 1894

From Washington, N. C.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I have been here now nearly a year and a half, and my constant effort has been to raise a building fund, and to get our people to the point to commence the building; and it seems now that we will succeed Plans have been presented through our building committee and adopted by the church. All who have seen the drawings are very much pleased with them, and say if carried out, will make a beautiful church.

The saw-mills here have responded very liberally to our appeal, and have donated about 6,000 feet of lumber. Some of our members who cannot give money, will contribute work. We also have a hundred dollars in cash, which is about enough to start the work, but will not carry it very far along. Sometime since our building committee had a meeting, and after discussing the matter, decided to commence the work at once, and instructed me as chairman of the committee to push it forward as rapidly as possible, but not to incur any indebtedness. I am now putting the lumber on the lot, and expect to commence the work at once. Now if the brethren and friends of the cause here at Washington, will come to my assistance, I can soon have the work well under way. We greatly need now some cash contributions to enable us to utilize the lumber and labor that has been given. Please say to the friends throughout the State that Washington is in great need just now, and that even a small contribution will be a great help and thankfully received. Contributions can be sent to me or to T. L. J. Latham, Esq., cashier of the bank of Washington.

May the Lord bless you and the RECORDER. If you are improving as much as the RECORDER you are doing well.

Yours in the work,

DUNCAN MCLEOD.

Facts and Figures; or, Side-lights on the Educational Discussion—No. 2.

BY REV. C. DURHAM.

4. It is a fact that the words of our Lord to the blind man, "according to your faith be it unto you," have had a striking fulfilment in the history of the University. Dr. Caldwell, on whose shoulders the University rested for thirty years, believed in self support, and his administration was a demonstration of his faith.

Gov. David L. Swain, who guided the University through so many years, believed in self-support, and under his administration self support was not only attained, but partly out of the income, and a wise management of the University's finances, an endowment of about two hundred thousand dollars was secured. No appropriations for the support of the institution were asked for while these wise and great men guided the public policy of the University.

Dr. Kemp P. Battle, the smiling President of the University, believed not in self-support but in State support, and he became known, therefore, for many years as the lobby member to the Legislature in behalf of State aid.

Dr. Geo. T. Winston, the present head of the University's new policy, believes not in self-support but in State support, through the Legislature, from the taxes of the people, and under his administration the University, if we are to believe those who oppose the voluntary system, has become a helpless parasite on the State Treasury. They say it will die if it is made to take its hands out of the State treasury. Gov. Holt, in his message to the Legislature of 1893, said it was then worth "more than half a million of dollars"; and the report of the joint sub committee of education on the condition of the University to the Legislature of 1893, said it was worth "a half million dollars."

But to say nothing of this "half million dollars" partly in an invested endowment, let us see what the income would be if all the students paid only the charges put in the University Catalog for 1893-94. Page 57 says:

"EXPENSES.

Every effort is made to reduce to the lowest point the necessary expenses of an education at the University. The annual charges are:

Tuition	$60 00
Registration	10 00
Medical fee	5 00
Gymnasium fee	2 50
Library fee	4 00
Total per annum	$81 50."

The number of students is put down in the same Catalog at 388 the past year. This would give the University an income from the students, if each paid the $81 50 per annum as stated in the Catalog, of $31,622 00. This, with the income from so much of the "half million dollars" as is interest bearing, gives the University such an income yearly, as to make it independent of State aid.

The land, buildings, library, and endowment belonging to Wake Forest College, will not reach on a liberal estimate more than two hundred and fifty thousand dollars; but here is the University (worth, says Gov. Holt, "more than half a million dollars," and, as the Catalog shows, with 388 students from whom, if all paid just the charges stated in the Catalog, the Institution would receive a yearly income of $31,622), saying, "I'll die if you make me take my hands out of the State treasury." Nonsense. No, it isn't good nonsense. If there is any danger to the University, it is because the present President has sown to the wind, and if he shall reap the whirlwind, all will see that the seed sown by him have only brought their legitimate harvest.

The doors of the University were ordered to be opened on the 15th of January, 1795; but the first student of the Institution, Hinton James from Wilmington, did not arrive at Chapel Hill till Feb. 12, 1795, and up to 1875—eighty years out of the ninety-nine years of its entire history—not a dollar of annual appropriation had ever been secured from the State.

Since the election of the present incumbent to the Presidency of the University, changes in many respects have been made in the public policy of the Institution. Some of these changes have perhaps been wise. I will name some which have not been wise.

5. It is a fact that in no respect has the change been so great as in its attitude towards the law of the State. Before his election its authorities obeyed the law, but since then they have persistently ignored or evaded it. Wherefore? I will give the reasons for it later. Look now at the facts:

Chap. 143, Sec. 4, Laws 1885, is as follows: "It shall be the duty of the Trustees of the University to cause annual reports to be made to the Governor, to be transmitted by him to the General Assembly, showing the receipts of the Institution from all sources and the expenditures therefor, with the objects for which said expenditures are made."

The reports required by this statute were made in full and with regularity to the Governor, and by him transmitted to the General Assembly, and published in the "Public Documents" up to and including the Legislature of 1891. But for the past four years this statute has been evaded or ignored, and all efforts to secure reports even by the Legislature, so far as the "Public Documents" show, have failed. There is in these Documents for 1893 no report from the Trustees, nor the Treasurer, nor the Bursar of the University. The reports required by law from these officers for 1891 and 1893 should have been in the hands of Gov. Holt and transmitted by him to the General Assembly of 1893. In the Governor's message to the Legislature of that year, there is not an allusion to the reports of the Trustees, Treasurer, nor Bursar of the University. Why not? He did not have them. The following correspondence bears on this subject:

"RALEIGH, N. C., June 16th, 1894.

EX-GOV. THOS M. HOLT, Haw River, N. C.

Dear Sir:—Please see Chap. 143, Sec. 4, Laws 1885, and let me know if the reports for 1891 and 1893, therein required, were made to you, and transmitted by you to the General Assembly of 1893.

With great respect,

I am very truly yours,

C. DURHAM"

My letter was forwarded to Gov. Holt in Virginia. He did not there have access to the statute, and could not remember what it was, and asked me to quote it. I did so, and received the following:

"BUFFALO LITHIA SPRINGS VA., June 21st, 1894

REV. C. DURHAM,

My Dear Sir:—I have your favor of yesterday. In reply have to say that when I began work on my message to the Legislature, I thought I would be very brief; but when I got down to it, I found it would necessarily be long. I tried to cut it down by eliminating all I could, but even then it was long and was accompanied with an arm full of reports from the different institutions. Since the reception of your letter, I have tried to remember whether the report you spoke of was made to me or not, but I find it impossible to remember. Mr. R. H. Battle was the Secretary and Treasurer of the Board of Trustees, and it may be that he can give you the desired information. As before stated, there were so many reports, and some of them very voluminous, that I do not really recollect whether the Trustees made the report or not. I am sorry I cannot give you a positive answer.

Yours very truly,

THOS M. HOLT."

On Jan. 16th, 1893, Mr. Henry L Cook of Fayetteville introduced in the House of Representatives the following:

"Resolved by the House of Representatives, the Senate concurring: That the Bursar of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill be and he is hereby requested to furnish the General Assembly with a statement of the receipts and disbursements of the University for the past two years, beginning Aug. 15th, 1891; the number of students receiving free tuition under Sec. 3, Chap 233, Laws of 1887, relating to the admission of ministers' sons, candidates for the ministry, young men afflicted with bodily infirmity, and students preparing themselves for the purpose of teaching; the number of students receiving free tuition on scholarships established at the University by private philanthropy; the number and amount of notes taken for tuition and the amounts now due on said notes; and all other information concerning the finances of the Institution at his earliest convenience, and to make similar reports biennially hereafter to the General Assembly."

After a delay of almost a month, it was passed by the House and Senate, and the same is printed in Laws of North Carolina, 1893, page 486. This is now a law which the Bursar will be required to obey in the future. If the Trustees had reported to the Governor, according to the requirements of the statute, Chap. 143, Sec. 4, Laws of 1885, and he had transmitted the same to the Legislature of 1893, where was the necessity for Mr. Cook's resolution? If there had been a willingness on the part of the authorities of the University to report, why the amendment, substitute, delays, and opposition to this resolution? If they were willing to obey the law of 1885, where was the necessity for this resolution? If they were not willing to obey it, wherefore, except in the facts which would be revealed?

But the House Journal for Feb. 18th, 1893, the fortieth day of the session, page 518, says: "Mr. Holt submits a report from the Bursar of the University of the State, which is referred to the Committee on Education." Why was the report referred to this committee, and not, as is usual with such reports, ordered printed in the "Public Documents," if it was not in order to smother it in the committee? After all of the efforts of Mr. Cook and others who desired the facts called for by his resolution to be put on record, there is no report of the Bursar in the "Public Documents" for 1893. Is not this enough?

6. It is a fact that representatives of the University assume improper authority over public documents by construction in the hands of the Governor, and a citizen can see them only by permission of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees of the University.

The following correspondence shows for for itself:

"RALEIGH, N. C., June 7th, 1894.

HON. R. H. BATTLE, Secretary

Bd. Trus. University, Raleigh, N. C.

Dear Sir;—Please see Chap. 143, Sec. 4, Laws 1885, and let me know if the reports therein named have been made; and, if so, where I can see them.

Very truly yours,

C. DURHAM."

"RALEIGH, N. C., June 8th, 1894.

REV. C. DURHAM, Raleigh, N. C.

Dear Sir;—Yours of the 7th is before me. The reports required by Sec. 4, Chap. 143 of the Laws of 1885, were made to the General Assembly at its last session, and I suppose they can be found among the records of one of the Houses. [I think Mr. Battle will now admit that this was a mistake.—C. D.] I made my report as Treasurer at the annual meeting of the Trustees of the University in February last, as also did the Bursar at Chapel Hill, and these reports, along with annual reports to be made next winter, will doubtless go to the General Assembly. The appropriations made by the State to the University came into my hands as Treasurer, and the moneys, together with such as are paid me by the Bursar and come from invested funds or otherwise are disbursed by me upon vouchers, which are examined by the committee from the Board, who audit my accounts. The Bursar pays for ordinary repairs and smaller current expenses of the University at Chapel Hill, and turns over to me the balance of tuition fees, &c., which he collects. His accounts are audited by a committee of the Faculty. I have copies of my reports, and most of his, since I came into office, and with the consent of the Executive Committee, I have no objection to showing these to you at any time.

Yours truly, R. H. BATTLE."

Mr. Battle says that I can see these reports "with the consent of the Executive Committee." Does not the language imply the right of the Executive Committee to refuse access to the reports? What authority has this Executive Committee to say that any citizen cannot see these public documents? Do we not all know if the authorities of the University had obeyed the law of the State, that these reports would have been printed in the "Public Documents" in the early part of the year 1893?

That the men managing the new policy of the State University have ignored or evaded the law of 1885, Chap. 143, Sec. 4, made void the statute of 1893, resolution, Laws of 1893, page 486, and claimed the right to refuse a citizen access to public documents (see Mr. Battle's letter above) seem serious and well-founded charges.

We are pleased to learn that Oak Ridge Institute has had another successful year in spite of the hard times. There were 287 students enrolled in the various departments of the school. Diplomas were awarded to twenty-six young men at the recent closing exercises. The buildings are commodious and well equipped; the location famous for beauty and health, the faculty young and aggressive, the community one of the best in the State, and the expenses extremely moderate. It has the unqualified endorsement of its patrons, its more than 2,000 students, leading college men of all denominations, and the business public generally. See advertisement in another column.

The 93-94 catalog of Southwest Virginia Institute shows an enrollment of 122 young ladies, 97 of whom were boarders, representing thirteen States. We are glad to know that this excellent institute is growing into the favor which it deserves.

ment which is to come, and we all stand to gether to be judged, what are nine thousand dollars for the Baptists of North Carolina to raise? How paltry and insignificant the sum of one hundred thousand dollars, when we hear Christ in tones of mighty rebuke saying, "For I was an hungered and ye gave no meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me not in; naked, and ye clothed me not; sick and in prison, and ye visited me not." Some people may be so blind that they are unable to see any reference to the Foreign Mission work in these solemn and impressive verses which I have just quoted; but these verses constitute one vivid terrific flash of light from the great white throne which teaches us personal duty, not only with reference to the hungry, shivering tramp knocking at our door for a morsel of bread, but it also speaks to us of the dying heathen who have never heard the story of the Cross and the wonders of redeeming love. I have in my study the gift of a deceased missionary. It is nothing but a piece of cotton canvass bound with black. It has an inscription and a place in the center for a small clock. As I write this article, I see in big letters upon the canvass the following solemn and suggestive words: "This clock strikes the death knell of 3 500 souls' passing into eternity every hour."

While those of us who are living in this gospel land are eating, drinking, sleeping, and enjoying all the pleasures of this life, these 3 500 souls are passing every hour into vast eternity unsanctified by the grace of God. While some old fossil churches in North Carolina are in conference on Saturday to hear excuses and preserve the peace and harmony of the church, 3 500 unsaved heathen souls are going down to the gates of hell. While some miserable covetous man in the church is "squeezing the eagle till he screams" and saying he cannot give to missions "because we have the heathen at home," 3 500 souls are rapidly passing into eternity to mingle with the groans and tears of the lost and damned. This is no fanciful picture, but one drawn by the pen of inspiration which tells us that the wicked and all the nations which forget God are to be cast into hell.

While serving the church at Moulton, his second charge, Carey was seized with the idea that the Christian world was blamable in not uniting to give the gospel to the benighted pagans. The people of God in different parts were praying for the coming of Christ's kingdom. When Carey was eleven years of age a Welsh Methodist preacher wrote a hymn beginning "O'er the gloomy hills of darkness," and the prayer began to go up in song:

"Kingdoms wide that sit in darkness,
Grant them, Lord, the glorious light;
Now from the eastern coast to western
May the morning chase the night,
Let redemption freely purchased win the day."

I make this quotation just here from Chute's Life of Carey for the purpose of asking the Baptists of North Carolina to sing as they have never sung before those grand old missionary songs which stir and inspire the soul. Let us get rid of all the deadbeats and unworthy members of our churches, and let us have churches full of apostolic fire and zeal which will spend the time of church conference in discussing methods of bringing the world to the feet of Jesus. Let us discuss heavenly politics more than the earthly and prepare ourselves to participate in the glorious triumphs of the gospel. There is a triumph ahead, and it will surely come, for the great God himself has promised it. And when it does come, such a triumph it will be! It will be the grand jubilee of the church triumphant. The visions of Patmos anticipate this grand jubilee, for John says: "And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude and as the voice thundering, saying Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth." In view of this coming triumph, has any professor of religion in the State of North Carolina even a faint hope that they will share in the mighty triumphs of the Cross, unless precious time, talents and golden opportunity is at once given to the grand work of evangelizing the world and bringing it to the feet of Jesus? The belief of a great many Christians is that the whole race of man on earth is to be gathered into the fold of Christ and all nations be converted before the long-predicted millennium. A great many interpret the predicted millennium as a spiritual reign of Christ—a reign of such tremendous power that Satan shall be bound and nations learn the duty of war no more. If the post millennial theory of the second coming of Christ be true, it is our bounden duty as Christians and true patriots to do everything in our power to bring about this glorious state of affairs. It is our duty to support the gospel and its agencies at home and abroad as we have never done before, and oppose every device and agency of the Devil which would destroy the principles for which Christ died. We ought to take Achan out of the camp of Israel and stone him in the presence of the great congregation. We should vigorously oppose the saloon, Sabbath desecration, and everything which in the slightest degree militates against the church and its mighty conquests.

When we see moral forces arming themselves in all directions against the cause of truth and holiness, we should put on the whole armor of God and challenge the rebel armies which dare defy the armies of the living God. Referring again to the spiritual reign of Christ, we believe it has actually begun in the Robeson Association. Not a whiskey-still or saloon in the whole county! Magnificent schools and institutes springing up all over the county and fostering those sentiments which are the salvation of both church and state!

A great many good people and distinguished ministers of the gospel believe that only the personal presence of Christ will usher in the millennial glory and prepare the way for his kingdom to come and his will be done on earth as it is done in heaven. It makes no difference which view of the second coming of our Lord may be the correct one. No one knows the day or the hour. It is a divine secret unknown to even the angels which surround the throne. But his commands to us are very plain. He says to us, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." We may not be able to interpret unfulfilled prophecy and unveil the future; but we all can understand this plain and positive command, and we never can obey this command in its grandest and sublimest sense until our hearts are so filled with the Holy Ghost that we desire to see the gospel preached to every creature under heaven.

I hope that the brethren can by this time plainly see why in the preceding articles I have used such strong language in regard to the support of the gospel at home. The proposition is as plain as the noonday sun that the gospel will never be preached as Christ designed it to the lost nations until it is properly appreciated and supported at home. I desire to see the brethren come to the front this year in cordially supporting the gospel in all heathen lands; and I am fully persuaded that when our churches are full of the Holy Ghost, there is going to be no clash or conflict of opinion as to the best methods of sending out men and money to convert the heathen. The truth of the matter is simply this: when the heavenly fire come down again as it did on the day of Pentecost, the local church, the association and the several boards will have just as much as they can do in looking after the King's interests.

If the theory of the Baptists is true (and I for one believe it is), that they have the truth pure and unadulterated, just as it was preached by Christ and his Apostles, fearful must be our responsibility as a denomination. With a shout we ought to rush with the old battle flag upon every heathen rampart, and as the old apostolic banner waves amid the gentle zephyrs of the heathen shores, let China, Japan, Italy, Mexico, Cuba and the distant isles of the deep blue sea be inspired and aroused as they read upon the old battle-flag the grand inscription, "One Lord, one faith and one baptism." I am not just here using gush or running into a sentimentalism, but I am speaking the sentiments of an inspired man who eighteen centuries ago exhorted the church to contend earnestly for that form of faith once delivered to the saints. The true church of God is a conquering church, and one of its infallible attributes is the fact that it is missionary both in principle and policy. Let us see to it that we are referred to in the ancient Canticles, when the question is asked, "Who is she that looketh forth as the morning? fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners."

Several Matters.

Dear Recorder:—I have been at Mocksville about two months, and have learned enough about the churches, work, schools, &c., of the county to give your readers a few items which may be of interest.

THE PEOPLE.

are very much like the people of the East in many respects. They are noted for their kindness, hospitality and generosity. The members of my churches have been exceedingly kind to me and my family in many ways. The sisters have made me a present of a nice suit of clothes, a hat and a pair of shoes. The whole people have shown us every courtesy and kindness, and their favors are most highly appreciated.

CHURCHES.

There are eight Baptist churches in Davie county with an aggregate membership of about 1,000. Mocksville, Jerusalem, Farmington, and Eaton's constitute my field. Jerusalem and Eaton's are numerically strong; Mocksville and Farmington, rather weak. United, they are financially able to support a pastor and to help all our denominational enterprises. Mocksville and Jerusalem own a parsonage located here in the same yard with the church and occupied by the pastor of these churches. These churches are in very good working order now, and the outlook is hopeful. Congregations are large and attentive. Each church has raised a small fund to buy literature to be distributed by the members of the Sunday schools who agree to visit and work up the territory covered by the membership. It has just taken shape, and we hope for good results. Each church has a weekly prayer-meeting—Sunday evenings at the other churches; Thursday evenings here.

Eaton's has three mission Sunday schools.

Fork church has a very large membership and large financial ability. It is doing well under the pastoral charge of Elder S. F. Conrad. It has a very large Sunday school and three mission schools. The church is numerically and financially strong enough to settle a pastor and have preaching every Sunday. It ought to do it at an early day.

Advance, a station on the railroad, has an organized church, but no house. The church has a lot and will build. Elder J. B. Newton is pastor.

Yadkin Valley is a small church near the Yadkin, east of Farmington. Elder Moses Baldwin is the pastor. He is pastor, too, at Bear Creek, a church with large membership, located near the Yadkin county line. Both churches have good Sunday schools.

ORPHANAGE WORK.

These churches, aided by Cross Roads, Yadkin county, and Society, Iredell county, hold an annual Orphanage and Sunday-school picnic at Mocksville for the benefit of the Orphanage at Thomasville. Elder Cashwell, the pastor at that time of the first four named churches, and the brethren inaugurated the picnic four years ago. Three picnics have been held, netting enough to help the Orphanage some, and to pay for the grounds and an elegant arbor worth about one thousand dollars. The next picnic will be held the 26th of next month, when all the net proceeds will be turned over to the Orphanage.

The Baptists of Davie county provide for the Baptist picnic, only a few others helping. Many of the good people patronize it. The Oxford Orphan Asylum is aided by a like picnic held annually about the second Thursday in August. Davie county does more for Orphanage work than any other county in the State.

SCHOOLS.

There are a number of good Academies and High Schools in the county. The Fork Church Academy and the Cana Academy are under Baptist auspices. The latter, Prof. Millsaps, Principal, was burned some months ago. I am glad to say that it will be rebuilt this summer. Elder J. B. Newton, Principal of Fork Academy, closed a successful term, June 13th, with a very creditable exhibition which was attended and enjoyed by a very large audience. Prof. B K Mason and the writer talked to the people. Prof. Mason delivered in excellent style a finished oration. All enjoyed the occasion till after the close, when a terrific storm swept over the place, doing considerable damage to wagons and other vehicles and property, and injuring one person severely and another slightly.

The school will open again in the fall and will doubtless continue to be a great blessing to that community and surrounding country.

The Academy at Advance closed a successful session under Prof. Rockley, one week before the closing at Fork. Prof. Rockley, who was a most excellent Christian gentleman and teacher, has died within a few days.

Prof. L. H. Cash, County Superintendent of Public Instruction and Principal of the Academy at Farmington, closed the best year of that institution about the last of May. The school has grown steadily under the wise management of this excellent Christian teacher. The writer addressed the thousand or more who attended the splendid exhibition at the closing of this excellent school.

Prof. Barnett, Principal of Mocksville Academy, closed a successful year without an exhibition.

Misses Eaton and Clement had the annual closing and exhibition of their popular and efficient school, "Sunny Side," at the Arbor of the Baptist Orphanage on the evening of May 31st. The Arbor, capable of seating over 2 000 persons, was well filled. The exercises were very good, showing skilful training and earnest work. All were delighted.

Prof Oates closed without an exhibition a successful session at Augusta Academy a week or so before.

There are other high schools in the county about which I know nothing. Davie is a small county. The large number of academies, all well patronized, speak well for the people. Most of the children have excellent advantages to secure education, and are availing themselves of the same.

YOUNG CANDIDATE FOR THE MINISTRY.

It affords me great pleasure to state that Prof. B. K. Mason of Fork church has decided to enter the ministry, and that Bro. S. J. Beeker of Jerusalem, for the two years past a student at Wake Forest, is exercising his gifts, feeling that the Lord has called him to this work. Both of these young brethren give promise of great usefulness. Bro. Mason graduated at Wake Forest several years ago and has taught since his graduation. He is a man of solid attainments, good talents, and earnest piety. Bro. Beeker is a splendid young man every way, and will make an earnest, able minister.

CROPS.

The weather is very dry. The crops which have matured are very poor. The prospect for corn is excellent, if rain comes in the near future, and no storm freshets destroy the bottoms.

Yours fraternally, J. N. STALLINGS

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA
M. Hammerly, a well-known business man of Hillsboro, Va., sends this testimony to the merits of Ayer's Sarsaparilla: "Several years ago, I hurt my leg, the injury leaving a sore which led to erysipelas. My sufferings were extreme, my leg, from the knee to the ankle, being a solid sore, which began to extend to other parts of the body. After trying various remedies, I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, before I had finished the first bottle, I experienced great relief; the second bottle effected a complete cure."

From Reidsville.

Dear Recorder:—Well, I have changed my work since last I wrote you.

The brethren at Monroe have, I think, acted wisely in two things at least: first, they had no interim between pastors. As a rule these intervening periods are hard on the churches. In exceptional cases they are best, but they must certainly be exceptional indeed; second, they have called a good preacher and a most excellent pastor, and a first-class man all round. I have known Bro. Moore for some time and of the good work he has been doing ever since he has been in the ministry. The church was fully united in their selection. They will stand by him I am sure. They stood by me nobly during my pastorate with them. We never could have accomplished the work that we did unless we had stood together in all things. No man can do the work without the full and hearty co-operation of the church. Some churches have a mania for division, and then charge the pastor with their downfall, when an angel of heaven could not accomplish anything with a such a divided set of people. Sometimes it is the pastor's fault that such divisions exist. Then it is to be doubly deplored. However, the same results follow—nothing is accomplished for God as it should be while the division last. They may manage to hold together, and that is almost a miracle.

I am now pleasantly located at Reidsville. Everything looks propitious for good to date. Our congregations are good, and increasing. We have received fourteen by letter, one by baptism, and one awaits baptism now, since I came. They have been kind to more than a remarkable degree. Not only did they furnish a parsonage, but it was put in first class order by the ladies, and a great deal of repairing done by the gentlemen, and the larder well filled besides. A better people it would be hard to find. All these kind tokens of esteem are very gratefully acknowledged by the pastor and his wife, and we truly hope that these relations so pleasantly begun may continue to grow more and more endearing as our acquaintance shall be more extended.

Our work is large. Besides the work in Reidsville we have three mission points from two and a half to four miles from town to look after. Some of the brethren and sisters go to these every Sunday afternoon and conduct a Sabbath-school, and the pastor is expected to call around occasionally and preach for them. I never saw a greater interest manifested in any work than is manifested in these mission points. It costs us about $200 per year to keep up this work, but it is most cheerfully done. Then they are supporting Bro. F. M. Royall in China at a cost of about $450.

One very remarkable feature about all this work is that the money is all raised without appeals or begging.

At our last conference it was unanimously voted that we join the new Association. I do not know whether this is wise or unwise at present. The field is all new to me. At any rate the brethren thought that it was wise and decided to do it. We expect to meet at Greensboro in October and organize. We hope to have live union meetings, etc., by this movement.

Will write more as I see more of the work.

Notes from Rio de Janeiro.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—We have moved from Juiz de Fora, and our home is now in Nictheroy. My work will be in this city and in Rio de Janeiro. We recently opened up work in another part of the city of Rio with bright and encouraging prospects. Last Sunday night I preached to more than one hundred persons who gave perfect attention. After I dismissed the congregation, a big negro man who had been listening at the window called me and asked me what it would cost to be a member of our church and to have the salvation about which I had been preaching. Imagine my feelings! This man is only one of many who are thus concerned. Many are seeking the way, and often are we made glad by conversions and baptisms. The Lord's work is going forward in this land, and we have much to be thankful for. The glorious "morning light is breaking" upon dark Brazil.

Yesterday I had the pleasure of seeing Prudente de Moraes, the President-elect of the Brazilian Republic. He is tall and handsome, with dark complexion, black eyes and beard. He has shown himself very favorable to the gospel, and seems to appreciate the work of our missionaries. His influence will be in our favor.

Bro. Bagby has reorganized the Sunday-school in Rio, and the attendance is good. He is also seeking a lot where we may build our church house—the First Baptist church of the city of Rio de Janeiro.

There is plenty of room for more workers in Brazil. I learn that there is a colony of European Baptists in one of the extreme Southern States, and that they want a preacher to go there and help them in establishing the gospel cause in that part of the country. Is there a man in North Carolina who will come?

Churches will forward their collections for ministerial education.

Pastors will remember the resolution adopted by the Ministers' Conference agreeing to make special preparation to be present at the next Conference and Union.

The Pee Dee Union

This Union will convene with the church at Pleasant Grove, Richmond county, Saturday before the fifth Sunday in July at ten o'clock. The following subjects will be considered:—

1. The church for the times. J. Q. Adams and W. G. Quakenbush.
2. Are country churches declining? If so, the cause and remedy. Archibald Johnson and C. H. Martin.
3. Mission work in Pee Dee Association.
4. Miscellaneous business.

At some convenient hour during the session there will be a meeting of the Executive Committee.

There will be two sessions on Saturday, morning and afternoon. Sunday's services will be arranged for by the pastors and deacons of the church.

It is of great importance that every church within the bounds of the Association be represented. Of course it is expected that all the pastors attend.

Pleasant Grove church is seven miles south of Rockingham. Delegates and visitors who send their names to Bro. J. M. Liles, Diggs P. O., N. C., will be met at Rockingham.

J. F. TUTTLE, Ch. Com.

South Yadkin Union.

This body will meet with Berea church, Iredell county, on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July, 1894. Introductory sermon by Rev. D. W. Pool.

PROGRAM.

1. What is the New Testament teaching on baptism? Speaker, Rev. G. H. Church.
2. What does the New Testament treat on the grace of giving? Speaker, Rev. D. W. Pool.
3. What does the New Testament show to be the duty of one Christian to another? Speaker, Rev. W. J. Hopkins.

Each church will please send a full delegation with its pastor, and in this way we may revive the work that is so much needed to be done in this part of the Lord's vineyard.

A Former Article Noticed.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I see in the RECORDER of June 20, '94, an article headed "Eight Months in Carteret" which I desire to notice in your paper. Like the brother who wrote that article, I am not much for writing. If the Lord please to bless me and my work, to him be all the glory and honor forever; and I should not say anything now if that brother had not taken all my work and given it to himself, Bro. Moore and Bro. Hiden. He says that Bro. Moore, Bro. Hiden and he have charge of all the Baptist work in Carteret. I have no idea but what Bro. Bobbitt thought that statement true. I do not accuse him of any wrong motive at all, but he ought to have known facts before writing. I have been preaching in portions of Carteret county, not only eight months, but for five long years. I agree with him that it is, indeed, destitute as far as Baptists are concerned. Yes, there ought to be more mission money spent in Carteret. All they need is the pure Word of God, and they seem to be willing to hear. I am pastor of Cool Spring and Moore's Chapel Baptist churches, and I am sure they are both in Carteret, though small and not financially strong, yet they are as good and loyal Baptist as there is in Carteret, or anywhere else. I am also preaching to two school houses and at a little town, New Port, and that is in Carteret. I write this with no ill will toward the brother who has taken my work. But as he is young in the cause, I would suggest that when he writes again, that he know the facts. I have been from one end of Carteret county to the other. I have preached to the churches which Bro. Bobbitt is now pastor. They are good people. I traveled over that field several years ago with that blessed old saint and servant of God, Thomas Leary, and I know his work, and I hope the Lord will bless him in it, and as he has but three churches in his field, send him down to Hunting Quarters and let him organize a Baptist church there. Yes, I thank the Lord that my work is progressing finely.

I wish the RECORDER much success.

Ordination.

The Baptist church at Henderson, N. C., invited brethren A. Cree of Jackson, N. C., W. R. Gwaltney of Wake Forest, and J. S. Hardaway of Oxford, N. C., to meet in Henderson, June 26th, 1894, to examine Bro. A. C. Cree, with a view to ordaining him to the full work of the ministry.

The presbytery was organized by electing J. H. Lassiter, Chairman, and R. Van Deventer, Secretary.

After a thorough examination relative to his conversion, call to the ministry, and views of doctrine, which was highly satisfactory, it was decided to have the ordination at 8:30 o'clock.

Bro. J. S. Hardaway preached a most excellent sermon, Bro. Gwaltney delivered a very practical charge, and Bro. Cree, the candidate's father, in a most appropriate and impressive manner presented the Scriptures. The pastor offered the prayer.

Bro. Cree expects to continue his course at Wake Forest. He is a young man of promise, and a bright future is before him.

God has highly honored this church in calling three of its members into the ministry in the last three or four years.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

A railroad will be built from Mocksville to Mooresville.

A 5,000-spindles cotton yarns factory will be established at Laurinburg.

There are but 3,702 foreign born people in our State, says the Messenger.

The Odell Manufacturing Co., Charlotte, is extending and enlarging its plant.

The Odd Fellows' Orphans' Home at Goldsboro will probably cost $12,000.

Aluminum-bronze is now made by electricity at the Leaksville Aluminum works.

The machine shops of the Southern Railway will be consolidated at Charlotte, says the News.

Rev. Dr. Collins Denny has refused the presidency of Trinity College lately tendered him, says the Durham Globe.

Bob. Madkins who brutally assaulted Miss Phillips near Burlington several weeks ago will be hanged August 10th.

The third and fourth regiments of State troops are in annual encampment at "Camp Vance," near Morehead City.

Calvin and Thos. Coley, brothers, were hanged at Louisburg the 13th for the murder of a Hebrew pedler named Tucker.

John Norris, a negro, was shot dead in a row with two other negroes over a game of cards in Caswell county on the 4th inst.

Great crowds are flocking from ten miles around to hear Evangelist Wm. Black in Cabarrus county, says the Mecklenburg Times.

North Carolina receives $9,488 from the Government this year for arms and equipment of its militia. The total appropriation is $400,000.

An addition is being built to the State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, Raleigh, to accommodate the expected increase of the number of students.

Jno. Randolph, night-watchman at an Elizabeth City shingle factory, was recently mysteriously murdered; his body, bruised and cut was found floating in the near-by river.

Col. W. H. Malone of Asheville, formerly of Virginia, fell dead at Statesville, whither he had come on professional business, the 11th inst.

The Winston Sentinel has changed hands; is now owned by a stock company, and Mr. J. B. Whitaker is directing it. It will be the Twin City Daily Sentinel hereafter. It called an excellent paper.

Judge Spier Whitaker of Raleigh has tendered his resignation as Judge of the Supreme Court from the fourth district, to take effect August 20. W. R Allen, Esq., of Goldsboro has been appointed to succeed him.

Efforts are being made to have the city of Raleigh donate a silver service, costing about $1,000 to the new U. S. Cruiser that has been named in honor of the State Capital. It is a useless, uncalled for expense; and we do not see why anyone should feel bad if not a cent is raised. Sentiment is the last consideration these days.

Efforts to secure a quorum of the stockholders of the North Carolina Railroad have failed. A special to the Charlotte Observer assigns as the reason that the stockholders do not wish to surrender the exemption of the road from taxation. The directors have voted for surrender, but the stockholders have yet to agree.

The institution for the blind at Raleigh is desirous of the name and address of every blind child in the State. It has room for a great many more than have been heretofore accommodated on account of the removal of the deaf inmates to the Morganton institution. If you know of a blind child who should be educated, send the name and address to W. J. Young, Principal, Raleigh, N. C.

The Commerce Committee of the United States Senate, Ransom, Chairman, reports the following appropriations for improvements in North Carolina: Roanoke river, $50,000; Trent river, $5,000; Lockwood's Folly river, $10,000; for survey of Dismal Swamp, $5,000. Increased amounts over the sums voted by the House were given by the Senate Committee as follows: Pamlico and Tar rivers, $6,500; Northeastern Cape Fear river, $3,000; Cape Fear river above Wilmington, $12,000; Cape Fear river below Wilmington, $120,000, and the work has also been put under continued contract for this project; Contentnea creek, $10,000; Neuse river, $10,000. The total amount awarded to North Carolina is $334,500. And yet it is said that the Government is "hard pushed for money."

General News.

Another expedition towards the North Pole left England last week.

Sir Charles Russell has been appointed Lord Chief Justice of England.

The virulence of the plague—"black death"—is increasing in Hong Kong, China.

A bill, admitting Utah to Statehood has passed the Senate and House. Utah is the Mormon State.

Cholera is spreading in St. Petersburg, Russia, at the rate of about 150 new cases and 40 deaths a day.

One hundred and fifty persons were recently killed by an earthquake in and about Constantinople, Turkey.

Capt. C. J. Iredell, a former North Carolinian has been chosen Chief of the Norfolk police. This is one of the appointments of the law and order party that recently won such a signal victory at Norfolk.

It is said that the head quarters of the Southern Railway will be removed from Washington City to Richmond, Va.

The new U. S. Cruiser, the Minneapolis, made a record of 23 knots on her trial trip last week, which is the best ever made by our navy.

The Good Road Congress has recently been in session at Asbury Park, N J North Carolina was represented by State Geologist Holmes.

Speaker Crisp of the House being absent last week at the bedside of his sick brother, Hon. J. D. Richardson of Tenn., was chosen Speaker, pro tem.

A bill to restore to the United States about 50,000,000 acres of land granted to railroads during the war, has passed the House and will probably be approved by the Senate.

The personnel of the South Carolina Supreme Court will change the last of this month; and it is thought that the decision against the dispensary law will be reversed immediately thereafter, and the system become operative again.

Police of Rome have discovered a plot to assassinate all the European rulers. The time has come when all good men must unite for the extermination of anarchy. The governments of Europe are taking decisive steps toward that end.

The House of Representatives will investigate the causes of the late Strike and endeavor to remedy them. It is a pity that such grave matters as the individual rights of American citizens cannot be brought to the attention of the law makers until there has been bloodshed and insubordination. If Congress can act, it should have acted a month ago.

Latest advices from Korea state that the Korean army has been defeated, Japan being the victor. China, however, has an army on the scene and will not permit Japan to make undisputed conquest of the land. Russia is also expected to interfere. Thus the jealousy of the greater powers is a saving protection to the small and helpless ones

The University of Chicago held its seventh convocation recently. The President's address states that during the past year 951 students were enrolled, 180 being in the Divinity School. The total number of instructors is 156, including 15 head professors, 24 professors, 2 professional lecturers, 20 associate professors, 26 assistant professors and sixty-nine instructors, tutors, etc. In addition to these there are 33 officers. The endowment amounts to about $8,000,000; but the President appeals for more, saying, "We have made a beginning, a good beginning, a large beginning, but only a beginning." If this is true, we may not expect Southern institutions to make a "beginnidg" for half a century or so.

The greatest strike in the history of the new world has culminated—favorably, as we predicted last week, to the railroads and law and order and unfavorably to the strikers. It began as a small "boycott;" the sympathy of the American Railway Union, which seems to control through its president, E. V. Debs, more than 200,000 laboring men, transferred the theatre of action to Chicago. Thence it extended to San Francisco, New York and New Orleans, making its unwelcomed effects felt in every city in the United States. At its climax there were half a million strikers. And it was necessary for the President to proclaim martial law (practically) and order out about 10,000 soldiers in addition to the extra police, State troops, etc. At present the affair is subsiding as gracefully and as speedily as could be expected; and no further trouble is anticipated Trains are running on regular schedule. The loss cannot now be estimated. Not less than several millions of dollars worth of property was destroyed, and about thirty lives lost. The cost of maintaining the law runs up into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Another Report on Cancer.

214 Kinsey street. ELKHART, IND., May 23, 1893.

My wife has been afflicted with cancer for over a year. In December, 1891, we had an operation performed at the hospital at Lafayette, Ind. It did no good. We had cancer doctors from Indianapolis and Chicago, and they did no good. She kept growing worse all the time In October, 1892, she was carried to her sister's to use the Electropoise. When she returned home, after two months' treatment with it, she jumped off the coach without assistance. She is sewing to day and able to use the treadles of the organ, something she has not done in three years before. She says the poise is going to cure her; whether it does or not, it has already helped her a great deal

I myself have found great relief from lumbago and a stiffness in my knees produced by three attacks of la grippe, after using the Electropoise two weeks.

REV. Z. C. TAYLOR.

A WALL OF PROTECTION

Against Disease in Far-off Brazil.

Rev. Z. C. Taylor, Missionary of the Southern Baptist Convention to Brazil, writes of Germetuer: "I consider it a wall of protection against disease, and a sure guarantee of health and happiness. Since I first took Germetuer three years ago my health has been almost perfect. I work incessantly, and can stand it well as much as a native."

Rev. Mr. Taylor's location is at Bahia, almost under the equator, on the Atlantic coast. It is the home of Malaria and all those malignant forms of disease that are born of it. Here, as in all other places of like character, Germetuer has signally triumphed. It is the Great Conqueror of malaria in all its forms and in all places. Will break any fever in less time than Quinine or Antipyrine and leave none of their unpleasant effects, such as nervousness, nausea and prostration. And then it is so good to take that even little children soon learn to cry for it.

$1.00, 6 for $5.00. Sold by Druggists.

South Yadkin Union.

The South Yadkin Union Meeting will meet with Berea church, six miles west of Mooresville, on Friday before the fifth Sunday in this month. Brethren wishing to come by rail will be met at Mooresville, if they will write to M. P. ROGERS,
July 9, 1894. Doolie, N. C.

Sandy Creek Union.

The Union Meeting of the Sandy Creek Association will convene with the Mt. Zion church, Alamance county, N. C., on the fifth Sunday in July, 1894.

Introductory sermon on Friday 12 m. By C. J. F. Anderson.

QUERIES.

1. Which is the greater sin—that of omission, or that of transgression? James Jordan, D. R. Sears, G. L. Merrill.

2. Why do so many of our churches fail to maintain an interesting and ever green Sunday school? Geo. Harman, E. L. Fox, W. N. Straughn.

3. Can a person live a Christian life and not test the promises of God's Word? J. L. Smith, W. H. H. Lawhon, H. M. C. Strowd.

4. Whose duty is it to see that the pastor gets his Salary? Dr. A. J. Patterson, L. R. Dixon, S. Gilmore.

We hope that all churches will send delegates and those coming by railroad will stop at Liberty, and previously notify Bro. H. M. C Strowd, Oakdale, N. C.

O. T. EDWARDS.

Let us have a full delegation and a contribution from every church for our mission work. O. C. HORTON, for Com.

Hollins Institute.

Hollins Institute, announcement of which appears in another column, is the best institution for the higher education of women in the Southern States; and it is believed by many that it is not excelled any where.

The register of the institution for 1892-'94 shows an attendance of 171 students from nineteen States, 154 being boarders. The institution pursues the eclectic system, whereby pupils may graduate in single departments, of which there are thirteen, each giving diplomas. Four of the latter are required for a degree; seven are required for a full course degree.

It may be interesting to know that the standard of full graduation corresponds to that of the better class of colleges for males in the B. A. course. Post graduate courses are arranged for those who desire to protract their school life. In a word the Institute affords the broadest facilities and seeks to give the highest culture.

Hollins is situated in the most wholesome section of Virginia; and without advertising has become well known as a health resort. Several people from Raleigh are there this summer seeking quiet and rest.

From Hendersonville.

Dear Recorder:—Dr. Mitchell is here shaking hands with his many friends who are always glad to see him. He is also looking after the interest of the Education Board, in which we all should be interested. He preached at the Baptist church last Sunday morning to a large and attentive congregation that was glad to hear hm.

At night, Rev. Mr. Detwiler, President of Judson College, gave us another very interesting discourse on "Christian Culture." The congregation at night was composed of members of the different churches, all of whom were delighted. Mr. Detwiler seems to be deeply interested in the education of the young, and says he is going to use every effort to build up a good school in Hendersonville. We very much feel the need of one. Mr. D. has been filling the pulpit of the Baptist church during Bro. Glenn's absence, who is away visiting his native county. Yours, &c. J. A. M.

Hendersonville, July 3, 1894.

The News and Observer newspaper, type, fixtures, &c., were sold at public sale by the receiver, Mr. Holman, on Monday evening last, and Mr. J. N. Holding was the purchaser at $6,810. For the next ten days until the sale is confirmed by the court, Mr. Holman will continue to publish the paper: after that time it will be conducted under the control of a new management. As heretofore, the paper will continue to be a sterling Democratic journal.

The New Association.

The Reidsville church, the strongest in the Beulah, has unanimously voted to go into the new Association. For years Reidsville has been burdened with the destitution which has so weighed upon Greensboro, and now she takes the lead in entering this work. If the churches situated in the midst of this destitution will throw aside prejudice and sentiment and study this field which we desire to occupy, they will see the importance of this new movement.

If the churches surrounding will act in this new movement, we will have a strong missionary in the field within sixty days, something which has been talked about for years, but has never been done.

A layman from one of the churches said a few days ago, "The more I think about this matter, the more I am impressed with its importance." Let our brethren think about this matter, pray over it, and then act for God's glory.

This movement means great things for this whole section, and much for the whole Convention. CHAS. A. G. THOMAS.

DIED.

BOYLES—Etta May, aged thirteen months, daughter of Rev. I. S. Boyles, died July 7th, after a protracted illness.

My soul is bleeding in bitter pain, but I submit to God's will, which is always right and wise. I. S. BOYLES.

LYON—In Winston, N. C., June 11th, 1894, little "Clair," son of Z. T. and Rosa Lyon, aged six years, nine months and seventeen days. He was an unusually promising child, affectionate, dutiful and intelligent. He was the joy of his parents' hearts. He seemed to feel before his sickness that he would not stay long in his earthly home, and sometimes made remarks about his death that filled his mother with wonder. Was it the voicing of a revelation made to his child-life! His sufferings were intense for a few days, then he was unconscious of pain, and his life went out like a little star going down in the night. Very bitterly do the loved ones mourn his loss.

"There is a world above,
Where parting is unknown;
A long eternity of love
Formed for the good alone;
And faith beholds the dying here
Translated to that glorious sphere."

H. A. B.

WESCOTT—Bro. Frank M. Wescott died suddenly at his home, three and a half miles from Southport, on June 27th, of heart-failure. He was buried on the 28th with Masonic honors in the cemetery at Bethel church. He had been an invalid for a number of years, but for the last two years he had so much improved in health he could attend to his farm work. He was about sixty-three years old, and had been a member of Bethel Baptist church for years. He was the father of twelve children, three of whom preceded him to the good world. He leaves a wife and nine children, and J. L. Wescott, his only surviving brother, to mourn their loss, which is his eternal gain. As a man he was unassuming, kind, obliging, energetic, and persevering. As a husband and father he was kind and affectionate. He leaves to his children a priceless heritage, that of a good name and reputation.

As a Christian he was humble, zealous, faithful, and always punctual to attend his church when his health would permit. He was a great sufferer, but he bore his afflictions with a calm resignation scarcely paralleled. He lived a great part of his time next door to heaven, and it afforded any true Christian a great pleasure to converse with him, for his conversations were always based and hinged on eternal things. None of that evil communication which corrupt good manners flowed from his mouth. J. H. HILDRETH.

CLARK—Mr. Hugh Clark, son of Archibald and L. E. Clark, was born June 24th, 1869, and died at Manly, N. C., July 2d, 1894, aged twenty-five years and eight days. He was a member of the Missionary Baptist church for about six years, and was a devout, conscientious Christian. He was a model young man, never spoke evil of any one, and always had a kind and cheerful word for all. He was a devoted son, an affectionate brother, and a kind friend, always willing and ready to aid in sickness. Though a sufferer for many years, yet with patience and fortitude he bore them all, trusting that relief would come, that he might be spared to his parents and remain in the turpentine and mercantile business with his brothers, but when he realized that death must come he bowed in submission to the will of God and went to join kindred spirits on the battlemented heights of the city of God. The last six years of his life were spent in Troy, Montgomery county, and there in the Methodist cemetery he was buried July 4th, 1894, in the presence of a large concourse of his friends. His funeral services were conducted by Rev. W. M. Bostick. At the time of his death he was surrounded by all his family except two sisters and one brother. During his sickness he was attended by able physicians and everything was done to alleviate his suffering, but nothing did him any good. We extend our sympathy to the parents, brothers and sisters, and may they have the consolation of knowing "the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

The Home Circle.

From the Shore.

Within the islands sheltering the bay,
The ripples flash upon a summer sea;
All blue and full of life and sparkling light,
Touched by wild breezes from the ocean free.

Gliding and dipping on its surface, dance
The snow white sails of many a tiny boat;
Now here, now there, all aimlessly and gay,
Like butterflies in June, they seem to float.

But from the harbor, hid behind the point,
There moves a vessel gray, her sails all dark,
Storm stained and dull, her course direct and straight
Across the bay, beyond the islands' mark.

A purpose clean hath he who holds the helm,
From port to port, with steady flight, she tends,
Alike through summer seas and winter gales,
On service bent, until her voyage ends.

So help us, Lord, to be
The vessels on life's sea!

—By H. K. M., in The Congregationalist.

A Sea-Dragon's Scales.

The war galleys of the Norsemen, long and slender, with the shields of the warriors lining their gunwales and their prows adorned with the outstretched heads of serpents or birds of prey, and propelled by sail and oar at a high rate of speed, were often compared by the fierce old bards to dragons. The comparison was an apt one, especially when the cruel trade of the Norsemen was taken into account, and it is not difficult to understand in what terror these ships were held by the people along whose coasts they plied their work of pitiless ravage.

But the armored battle ship of the closing decade of the nineteenth century may be much more aptly likened to a dragon. The mythical monster thus referred to was, it will be remembered, clothed with scales, which the equally mythical champion who fought it found impenetrable, so that, if he prevailed in the fight with his horrid foe, it was because his sword or lance had found some secret vulnerable spot. Thus the poet Spenser, in his "Faerie Queene," describing the dragon that his Red Cross Knight overcame, says that it

"over all with brasen scales was armid,
Like plated cote of steel, so couched neare
That naught mote perce; ne might his corse be harmd
With dint of sword, nor push of pointed speare"

Think of the "scales" of a battle ship like the Massachusetts! Had you been in South Bethlehem, a few weeks ago, you would have appreciated, if you never had before, what modern naval armor is. There you would have seen thirteen huge plates of steel, standing up on end, edge to edge, and forming a cylinder, the inside diameter of which was thirty two feet, and the height twelve feet. These plates, when placed in position, will constitute one of the barbettes or ramparts of the Massachusetts, and when it is added that they are seventeen inches thick, their protective power will be appreciated. Some of the plates, made at the same place for the battle ship Indiana, are sixteen feet long and seven and one half wide, with a width in the centre of eighteen inches.

The "scales" on Uncle Sam's war-dragons are not made in a day, but are the result of long and toilsome processes. They have to be cast, reheated, hammered—the steam hammer of the Bethlehem Company having a falling weight of 125 tons—or squeezed in tremendous hydraulic presses, trimmed, and, it may be, bent. If the plate is to be Harveyized, it is laid on a bed of sand in a furnace, covered with finely powdered animal charcoal, and subjected to heat for days, or even weeks. Then it is taken out, "quenched" in water, and subjected to "machine" work, "machine" work meaning the removal of all scales and the drilling of holes for the bolts by which the plates are attached to the vessel.

No wonder it takes years to build and equip a modern sea dragon, when the scales that protect it are so laboriously fashioned. —The Watchman.

Where the Shine Comes From.

"Well, grandma," said a little boy, resting his elbow on the old lady's arm chair, "what have you been doing here at the window all day by yourself?"

"All I could," answered dear grandma. "I have read a little and prayed a great deal, and then looked out at the people. There is a little girl that I have learned to watch for; she has a wealth of sunny brown hair; her eyes have the same sunny look in them, and I wonder every day what makes her look so bright. Ah, here she comes now."

"Who, that girl with the brown apron on?" cried the boy. "Why, I know that girl; that's Susie Moore, and she has an awful hard time, grandma."

"Has she, indeed?" said grandma. "Then wouldn't you like to know where she gets all that brightness from?"

"I'll ask her," said Arthur promptly, and, to grandma's surprise, he raised the window, and called, "Susie, Susie, come up here a minute, grandma wants to see you."

The little girl seemed surprised, but she turned at once and came in.

Arthur met her at the door, and said: "Susie, grandma would like to know what makes you so bright all the time."

"Why, I have to," said Susie; "you see papa's been sick a long time, and mamma is tired out with nursing, and baby's cross with her teeth, and if I didn't be bright, who would be?"

And grandma put her arm around the little girl, and said: "You could not have a better reason for shining. Keep on shining, dear little sunbeam."—Selected.

The River's Lesson.

There comes to me the memory of a scene I saw once in the far West. From the summit of Mt. Washburne, in the Yellowstone National Park, I first beheld it, that smooth, celestial bit of water, the Yellowstone Lake. It lay there in the clasp of the green hills, mirroring all the heavens in its quiet bosom. How peacefully forth from its portals flowed the Yellowstone River! How it wound its silver gleam for a little through the level prairie! "I wonder if those waters know to what they are coming," I remember I asked myself; for there, within my sight, was the awful gorge of the Yellowstone, into whose depths, in such a little time, the river fell, with all its peace shattered by the plunge into foam and roar and trouble. And from that leap, the river knows no smoothness for many a mile. It is caught in rapids; it is fretted by cataracts; it is hindered by vast stones, which the forests have wrenched from mountain sides and flung into its channel. "But it gets to the peaceful sea at last," I thought. Yes, it gets there; but along how rough a way! And yet, mastering the roughness, and doing the best it can among the stones, it gets there. God makes a way for it. And God will make a way for us surely. "I will be like the river," I said. "I will do the best I may amid whatever roughness Providence may bring. I will trust God's leading."

Beyond the frost-chain and the fever,
I shall be soon.
Beyond the rock waste and the river,
Beyond the ever and the never,
I shall be soon.
Love, rest and home,
Sweet, Sweet home,
Lord, tarry not, but come
That river taught me much.—Hoyt.

Phillips Brooks' Visit to the Salt Mines

From there [Munich] I took the train to Salzburg where I spent two days. One of them was occupied in a long excursion to the Konigsee, a lake in the Styrian Alps, shut in by snowy topped mountains, with glaciers all down their sides. The lake itself is lovely, with its deep green waters, and picturesque Tyrolese boatman row you up to its head and back again. Then you stop and dine at a little Alpine cottage inn at the foot and after dinner drive to Berchtesgaden where the great salt mines are. Here you dress up in full miner's rig, and walk a mile or two into the heart of the mountain, and then sitting down on two parallel bars with a man in front to hold your legs, you slide like lightning down into the bowels of the earth, and come to a great salt lake (lit up by hundreds of lamps) which you are rowed across by two subterranean beings who looked like fiends; then another walk and another slide bring you to a vast temple nobody knows how far under ground, with a dome of infinite darkness, where some more fiends are drawing up the salt rock from unfathomable depths still below. All the way, as your lamp shines on the walls or ceilings, they sparkle all over with the precious crystals; then some more avenues till you reach the salt grotto where the choicest specimens have been collected, and where you sit down on a little railway car, which plunges along with you through the mountain till it whirls you at last out into daylight, and your visit to the great salt mines is over. It is one of the most unique and splendid things to do in Europe. I wouldn't have missed its interest and beauty for anything.—From Letters of Travel by Philips Brooks.

"But evil is wrought by want of thought,
As well as want of heart."

By want of thought mothers allow daughters to become frail and puny. Over study in girls induces uterine disorders and weaknesses, and blights their future happiness as wives and mothers. Joined to proper hygienic care, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a priceless remedy in such ailments, its value becoming even more apparent every year. Using it, the wan, debilitated school girl gains color, flesh and spirits, losing those deathly headaches, tormenting backaches, languor, dejection, and other symptoms of functional irregularities, and nervous debility. It never harms the most delicate girl.

WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION.
Gentlemen:—I cannot sufficiently express to you my gratitude for the benefit your medicine has conferred upon my daughter. Of late she has suffered no pain whatever. It is simply marvelous. You have just reason to call it your "Favorite Prescription," and to stake your reputation as a physician on it. A favorite prescription it is, indeed, to you and to thousands in this land, and I believe will be to suffering women the world over. Yours gratefully,

The Ancient Waterways of Arizona.

The largest, and likewise the best preserved of these waterways was taken out of the Salt River on the south side, near the mouth of the Verde, and is a marvel of engineering skill. For three and one half miles it passes through an artificial gorge in the Superstition Mountains, cut out of the solid rock to a depth of one hundred feet. After the mountains are passed it divides into four branches, the longest of which measures more than forty miles, while all four aggregate a length of 120 miles, independent of the smaller ditches by which water was distributed over the soil. Except in rare instances, these smaller ditches have been filled, and in that portion of the desert are obscured by the sandstorms that prevail; but the larger one is perfectly distinct, and measures sixty-four feet in width with an average depth of twelve feet. Through this way the water for the support of the cities between the Salt and Gila Rivers was conveyed, and 1,600 square miles of country, now destitute of all vegitation except the Sahuara and an occasional palo verde, was irrigated by it.

This canal reached to within a short distance of the Gila River, and the water was taken from the river Salt for the apparent reason that at this point the north bank of the Gila was so high that they were unable to reach the current with a canal, and they evidently knew of no way to raise the water to the level of the surrounding country. This part of the desert is covered with ruins, and must have been at one time the residence of a teeming population.—R. E. L. Robinson, in Californian.

IT HAS been stated on authority that four-fifths of typhoid fever cases are caused by foreign substances in the water people drink. And if this be true of a disease so much to be dreaded, it seems to us that its partial prevention may and should be effected by proper care. We can keep our water comparatively pure by keeping all filth from the locality of our wells or water sources, which is no more than a respectable person should do for appearances' sake, were there no other reason. In our towns and cities all filth should be carried well beyond the municipal limits and burned or buried, and in country places it should be removed as far as possible from the residences of living beings. If one's neighbor, however, does not pursue this policy, the only means of defence is boiling the drinking water.

Cleanliness, if not next to godliness, is a most desirable human attribute; and filthiness is certainly diabolical: it should be reason for public ostracism, and if this is not sufficient, the law against nuisances may be brought to bear. Proper sanitary measures now will save many a life and more doctor's bills during the "dog days" than can be estimated.

MORE causes of the "present depression" have been assigned and proven than a library of large volumes would describe; and yet a writer has recently discovered a new one, and one that is chargeable to most of us—selfishness. And fearing that after all the other philosophers may have been wrong, it seems to us wise to place this one before our readers.

As popular privileges have multiplied, the people, not being able to comprehend themselves as their sovereign, unable to feel patriotic towards themselves, have smothered the ancient fires of patriotism with a degree of individual selfishness heretofore unknown. Under despots men sung "it is sweet to die for one's country;" the people ruling, the song is one of individual demands for benefits,—not for ourselves as a government, but for each "number one."

If there be an ingenuous doubter who would have evidence, let him contemplate the principle of the proposed tariff bill and then the bill of the House and then the mutilated remains of it as it left the Senate—and let him pray now for it in the joint committee. The people of the United States asked for a tariff for revenue only if they asked anything; but many of these same people compelled their representatives to destroy the principal of tariff for revenue when they realized that such a tariff would wreak them personal loss. The six hundred Senate amendments, from Hill's move to abolish the income tax provision for the sake of the Northern rich to Ransom's puerile, but more successful effort to increase the tariff on mica, bespeaks the selfishness of every State in the Union and cries out against the sacrifice of a great principle by that selfishness. We have further evidence here at home. In this State and in many towns of this State there are men who vote to license saloons because saloons reduce taxation by exacting it from helpless drunkards. Selling life and soul to lessen taxes! And if further evidence be sought we are sure it will suffice to point out the innumerable army of chronic office-seekers, of whom nine in ten seek vainly, of whom 9,999 of 10,000 seek selfishly. The actions of most of us sing that it is sweet to sap support from one's country, sweet to tax one's fellows in order that one may make larger profit, sweet to fill drunkard's graves, if taxes are lessened thereby, and sweeter still to hold office when the exigences of the times compel one to eat in the sweat of one's face in any other occupation.

OUR government would better disintegrate than try to maintain a union of States and sections that seek their own peculiar advantage to the sacrifice of all other interests. We must learn that we help ourselves most in doing what may to conserve the general welfare, though it be inimical to our personal interests. Massachusetts should vote to close the doors of her factories, if it realizes that such action will do the greatest good to the greatest number, whether it be of the latter or not; Louisiana must be willing to compete with alien sugar industries when it is manifest that where tens reap benefits from high sugar-prices, thousands suffer; and North Carolina must realize that her boundless and unspeakably important mica product is as nothing when weighed in the balances against a great principle.

This is not self sacrifice nor altruism. It is not patriotism: it is saving common sense. We must all learn that this is a common country; that its every privilege is a common privilege; that its every law should aim at the greatest good to the greatest number.

SINCE Blaine died we have not heard much of his favorite idea—'Reciprocity.' And now that a determination to abolish this scheme is manifest above the mutilated wreck of the new tariff act, we may not anticipate any more reciprocity for several years.

Mr. Blaine's measure empowers the president to proclaim suspension of free importation of sugar, tea, coffee and hides (these being the chief exports of Central and South America) in case any country exporting these articles to the United States imposes duties on our exports that seem inequitable or unreasonable. It seems to us that the abolition of reciprocity is to be regretted; and the reasons are easy to be named: the system enabled our producers and manufacturers to increase exports to other countries; second, it was a step towards free trade; third, because it tended to unite "All Ameirca;" and fourth, because its abolition increases the price of the four products that are mentioned above.

SPEAKING solely with a view to politics and future political action, we do not know of three more potent hindrances to peace and prosperity in North Carolina than the condition of lower education, the existence of saloons throughout the State, and the operation of a trust within its borders. Whatsoever be our national grievances, these are our local ones; howsoever desirous of national reforms we be, our first duty is to do what we can in a local way for ourselves. No citizen should be reconciled to the state of affairs until well conducted free schools are within reach of every child in the State eight months in each year, and no citizen should cease striving for betterment until he can send his child to school that length of time each year for six years or more. That it would be better for us all were every saloon removed from among us is denied by no reasonable man. And that it is both mortifying and burdensome to good citizens that a trust—the American Tobacco Company—defies our law every day is very evident.

While we are worrying life and valuable time away with ratios of coinage and the percentage of tariffs let us not forget that certain rights are reserved to the States, let us bear in mind that "heaven helps those who help themselves." It would be absurd to try to make new laws before we had enforced those already made; it is ludicrous to attribute all our grievances to the nation when it is patent that we can remove the causes of some of them without consulting any one beyond our borders. Of course we should not lose sight of what we would have the nation do, for we must all have to do with its policy at times; but we are persuaded that our first duty is to do what we can as a State, and that this year is the time of times for doing.

THE BOOKS of our government are kept from July 1st to June 30th. And they are kept just as the books of any other business are. Everything, from the number of hairpins foreigners have sold us to the last cent paid the janitor of the treasury building, is recorded. So far as business is concerned we are sadly behind this year, the books balancing against us to the amount of $75,000,000—one of the largest unfavorable balances since the war. But there are facts of hopeful signification recorded in them; and it is more agreeable to contemplate them.

In the last year the ebb tide of immigration has set; and we hope it may remain at ebb as long as it has been "flood." In the six months ending June 30th one-third more emigrants took leave of us than left other shores for ours. Twenty thousand families aggregating 100,000 persons returned to their respective "old countries" in this time; and this is the first time that this can be said since 1820. Moreover, the larger part of those who left us were from the Pennsylvania mining districts, where strikes have been most frequent. These people, and many more, have been taught a sad and costly lesson. Lured hither with fanciful pictures of suddenly accumulated wealth they have been made to realize that all parts of the world hold good only for those who deserve it with work. They are a good riddance: their absence takes from among us a certain number of selfish citizens; and the emigration of a million or two of others, equally selfish, equally devoid of any vestige of patriotism, would be beneficial.

To the Recorder's Unsaved Readers.

BY REV. JNO. E. WHITE.

I have been thinking of the RECORDER and its readers. There must be a great many unsaved among the large numbers who read its columns. I rarely see anything in its columns, or in the columns of any religious paper, for that matter, addressed directly to them. They see a great deal said to the brethren, editorially and otherwise, and I wonder if they do not feel sometimes that they are not in it. I ask the editor's permission, not that I think he ought to do it, and their permission, to say something to them. In fact, I want to preach a sermon. Knowing the RECORDER'S hold on families as well as individuals, I have an idea that a word fitly and earnestly spoken through it to its unconverted constituency may do some one good.

Let no one laugh at the effort. I laughed at a Methodist preacher once for his awkwardness. But that same man pinned my soul down after awhile to a serious consideration of my unsaved condition. I never got quite beyond his influence. We will omit the hymns and the anthems and the organ. Only let us pray. 'O God, bless this sermon, and bless those who read it, for Christ's sake, amen."

My subject is "Unclaimed Treasure." I take this subject because you know what a treasure is, and because you prick up your ears when you are told it is unclaimed.

My text is found in Philippians 4: 19, "My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus."

Now, my dear unsaved friends, the text,—mind you, I do not say "my" text—preachers don't own all texts as you may have been led to think,—it is "my" God, but it is your text,—the text says something about need. More than that, it says something about your need. It says God will supply it. It then tells you where the supply is to come from and by whom it is to come, "according to his riches in glory—by Christ Jesus."

If some man who had been living in the world for some time could have brought somehow to your attention before you were born a declaration like this, "My God will supply all your physical needs," would you not to day, after breathing his air, drinking his water, enjoying his sunshine, and feeding from his soil, be ready to acknowledge that he told you the truth? Now when a man comes to day and tells you, not out of his own lips and his own knowledge alone, but out of a Book you believe God wrote, that he will supply all your needs, I think you ought to listen to him. For you may be sure that if there are any other needs than physical, God was not one-sided enough to leave them without some means of supply. God never half-did anything. The question, then, with you is, "Are there any other; have I other needs which are not supplied?"

Now, Tom Dixon said awhile ago before a young ladies' college in Norfolk that the more he saw of men the more he loved dogs. I want to say, giving him all credit for the original conception, that the more I see of dogs the more I know I am not a dog. If you are a man or a woman, and not a dog, you have something beside stomach and nose, and therefore it requires something more than food and air to supply all your wants. Ah, the truth is, and it is not becoming a man to prove himself a dog by denying it, you have a soul. You have never seen it, and you are not likely to. The dog has never seen his food apparatus, but what a difficult thing it would be to convince a lean country hound that he was not hungry. And that soul of yours knows what hunger is. Rough treatment and long inattention may have left its cry weak, and seldom it may tell about its famine. But your need is all the greater for that sad condition.

Now what I want to tell you is that God, the same that gave the water and the air and the sunshine, and thereby enriched your physical existence, has provided riches for that soul, man, in you. You might grant me that if he did the one he can do the other. That is what he says—"supply all your need." When he looked at you you may be sure that he did not see just half of you, and the worst and poorest half at that, but all of you—inside and out—body and soul, physical and spiritual. The supply for the body he gave without asking. I don't know that he considered that any great thing. He gave it to the brutes as well. But when he came to enrich that other part of you, he did something. He stretched every divine energy. He compassed all his resources. He gave his only son to purchase the treasure he now offers you. That was a great deal more than the saying "Let there be light, or let there be water, or let there be atmosphere." Therefore he thinks it worth at least the asking. But up to date you have not made a sure enough effort at even asking for it.

A few days ago I ran upon this curious statement in a paper:—

"In the treasury at Washington there is $286,000 interest on government bonds unclaimed, which has been accumulating for years without any one calling for it."

This strikes me as being a wonderful and amazing thing. Does it not seem that as much in love with money as the average American is that the people to whom this $286,000 belongs would call for it? But they do not, it seems, and there it remains idle and useless.

Now if this is strange and contrary to what one would expect, how is this? In God's treasury there is for you untold wealth—wealth absolutely indispensable to your tolerable existence one hundred years from now, and capable of the greatest comfort and happiness to you now. Yet you have never claimed it.

I came to this conclusion when I thought more about that money in Washington—that there were about four classes of people to whom it belonged:

1. Some who do not know about it.
2. Some who do not know how to get it.
3. Some who feel able to do without it—rich enough people.
4. Others still who expect before very long to draw it out, but delay.

It is likely that some poor farmer far from the centers of intelligence and information has had these government bonds deposited there by his father and has forgotten about having it. Nobody blames him. Or likely, that some one having distorted ideas of lawyers, and imagining access to the treasury almost an impossible undertaking, has not the hardihood to apply. Or others, like Rockefeller and Vanderbilt, are rich enough. And still others of loose business methods delay action in the matter.

Now when I turned from this to that treasure of yours in heaven, I saw how it was with you and others, and that all poor, unsaved men belonged to one of these same classes. I know you do not belong to the first. You are not a heathen. Almost from the time you began to walk and talk your mind has been instructed about God and Christ and salvation.

Is it possible that you think this treasure difficult to get, and in some mysterious way hid? If that is so, listen while I tell you as plainly as I can how to get it without trouble. Here is the way: "Go after it, and ask God when you get before him to give it to you at the hands of his son." Do this just as you would at Washington of Mr. Carlisle, through the clerk who had charge of a certain department of the treasury. Is there any red tape about this? But you say, "That's all your talk." Very well. Listen, and look to see if I say it right: 1 John 16: 23, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name he will give it to you."

Oh, my friend, it's all your fault that you have stumbled and stumbled at nothing. The unsearchable riches of Christ are right at your hands. They are unsearchable only in extent and richness. God will supply all your need if you will speak out your need. But perhaps you do not feel any need. You feel rich enough. Last week the mayor of this town felt perfectly well at ten o'clock—but alas for feelings. The next night at ten o'clock he was in the grave and flowers and fresh soil his mantle.

At Raleigh in the insane asylum there used to be a man who fancied he was very rich. He strutted about the grounds with the air of a millionaire. He was shabbily dressed and unclean. Yet he felt very rich. The trouble was that he had no sense.

And do you know, my friend, that there are a great many men in this world who think they are rich when in fact they are paupers. That there are a great many men, maybe just as you are, who think that their souls are amply provided for when they have accumulated some bit or more of morality and education, while the great heaven-known fact about them is that they are bankrupt before God. And when they come to die the devil will administer on what little morality and learning they had?

Have you reflected that a mistake at this point is an everlasting mistake, and that you have no right to have your soul in jeopardy every hour. Have you ever put your soul off in a corner and let it talk to you and ask you questions. It will show you the rags and gaunt need. Do thou give thy soul a chance, oh friend.

I am in the habit of thinking that financially I am all right; that if I die my debts will be paid and my family have something to go on. I think this way because I have about $5,000 life insurance. If I had not taken this precaution I should feel just the other way—miserably poor—even criminally so, though I might be making a living now. How dare you call yourself rich, then, when you have made no provision for the solvency of your soul? How dare you think all your needs supplied and cared for when if your soul were loosed to day from your body to begin its independent eternal existence it would wander surely pauperized and naked into hell? What a miserable lie the devil has told you? Shall I press the question? Know this, that God will call you into judgment. How, then, oh sinner, will you appear? Ah, I see thee! You are empty now. Terror has seized thee. Your fulness was a lie, a cheat, an imposture. Before him who held open the treasure house for your coming you stand in stark poverty. But the doors are no longer open. It will be too late then. Once lost, lost forever.

No, no; you are not rich enough to do without Christ and his treasure. If the fervent sun could melt all the Goulds, Vanderbilts, Astors and Rothchilds into one man, and their riches into one possession, that man would still be too poor for the society of heaven without Christ.

Are you sure of this and yet delay? "Sometime I'll get the treasure," do I hear you say? Sometime is no time. Sometime is a vagrant which all time repudiates. Sometime neither the present nor the past nor the future will shelter. Sometime is a wandering wretch who murders the hopes of men. My God does not supply all need sometime. He supplies it now. Slowly the treasure gate swings open to your growing soul. Slowly as figures on a panorama you move away from its wide-stretched doors till the grave closes over you and shuts it from your sight forever. Here, now, with opportunity standing by your side and a loving voice urging you to move for the treasure, will you not stretch out your hands and ask him who giveth gladly to give you his riches for your soul's great need?

May the Lord, rich and gracious to all who come to him through Christ, lead you who read this by the power of his spirit and bless you. Amen.

Losing One's Crown.

BY REV. J. L. CARROLL, D. D.

The quotation of Rev. 3: 11—"Behold, I come quickly; hold that fast which thou hast that no man take thy crown"—in Bro. Jones' timely article in this week's RECORDER, has lead me to fear that the passage is liable to misconstruction and a strained application to the judgment of the great day.

In considering it, it is important to observe particularly three things:

1. That the passage is addressed not to individual Christians, nor to the church universal, but to a local organization—the church at Philadelphia.

2. That the coming of the Lord referred to is not his final personal coming in glory to judgment, but to a visitation in an afflictive providence in the midst of this world's affairs. This is clearly shown in the previous verse—"Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth." A period of sore trial was to come upon the people then living.

3. That the crown referred to is not the crown of righteousness and life and glory which our Lord has promised to the redeemed and laid up for them, which they will certainly receive "in that day," and which cannot be taken away from them; but the crown of honor and reputation for faith and faithfulness and sincerity and purity and devotion of this local church at Philadelphia. Hence the admonition—"Hold that fast which thou hast"—the reference being doubtless to the doctrines and ordinances of the gospel which it had received from the Saviour and his Apostles, and had held in their purity and truth. It had kept the word of the Lord's patience hitherto; but there was approaching a season of temptation and trial such as it had never experienced. The Master promised, in consideration of its previous faithfulness, to keep it through this fearful ordeal; but in order it must hold fast itself to all the attainments it had made in his service, lest it should appear, when the sifting was over, that the crown of distinction which it had previously worn was more richly deserved by some other church.

If We Love, We Should Give.

BY REV. SAMUEL J. PORTER.

Christ set a high standard before his people when he said to them, "Be ye perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." But a standard which falls short of this, could not be in keeping with the declaration, "I am in my Father, and ye in me, and I in you." United as they are with Christ and the Father, the children of light should strive to be like their Heavenly Father, and also to follow the Saviour, as he himself commanded. Now we are taught that "God is love," the divine personification of love, and that "he that loveth not, knoweth not God." In order to be like God, we must have him within us, and so we read, "If we love one another, God dwelleth in us." God is love, and love is the test of God's children.

God's love is active and living—that is, it moves to action; for we read that "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son," etc. "In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his Son into the world." Christ the Son also manifested his love by giving his life. God the Father loved and gave his Son. God the Son loved and gave his life. If we would follow their example, and thus be perfect as they are perfect, we must also love. But ours must not be a dead, inactive love; it must manifest itself: and as God has given us the example of love, he also has shown us in what way to manifest this love. He loved and gave; Christ loved and gave; if we love, ought we not likewise to give? The love of the Father and of the Son is measured by the gifts they made. My brother, are you willing to have your love measured by your gifts? What have you given to God? And does what you have given fully represent your love to him and to a perishing world? How thankful we should be that God has given us the opportunity of helping him in bringing men to know the way of salvation. God has made in the gift of his Son his contribution to missions, Christ has given his life, and now we are called upon to give our little mites and thus share in the honor of offering salvation to the lost.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 25, 1894

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

LET every church send delegates to the coming Associations; let them select good and active men who can be relied on to go; and let the churches be well represented with individual members. This year we hope to be able to chronicle as the most fruitful one of our history in building up and strengthening the interest and increasing the knowledge and the zeal of the entire Baptist Zion in North Carolina. Do not put the matter off; begin now.

WE FEEL that a more extensive interest is being awakened in the support of the gospel of the Son of God among the Baptists of North Carolina. Bro. Porter's article in another column is very pertinent. It shows us why we give, or rather why we should give. God gave us Christ; Christ gave us himself. What can measure our gifts in their name! When Christians realize their obligations to God, not to speak of their secondary obligation to man, then we may expect to have the gospel preached to every creature. Let us awaken to duty.

IT IS difficult to make Christians realize many truths. We have spoken heretofore of the many evidences of unfaith in God's promises; and surely there are as many evidences of non realization of duty. We profess so often to be under the command of Jesus Christ; we call him Master, and he has told us that none other can be our master. But we do not execute his wishes as we would execute those of a commander or master in the flesh, one whom we loved or feared. We have commands, and they are incessant. Christ's hosts cannot afford to lose time. We have no right to disobey him or dally with his orders because he is kind and loving. We should love him the more; and we have no better means of manifesting our love than obedience and trustfulness. Our duty to God is measured only by our ability to serve him. We must do our best all the time, else we are unworthy of the ranks. And, moreover, what we do and where and how, are not ours alone to decide. It is ours to do, God's to lead and command. O for more trustful obedience on the part of those who call the Lord Master,—more doing, doing the best, and less calling!

IT IS essential in sending men to preach the gospel that well fitted men be chosen. It is a self-evident truth that the more one knows of God and men the better prepared is he for serving either or both. It is also self-evident that the better one's mind is prepared for comprehending and inculcating knowledge, the abler is one to preach the gospel. We need more and better prepared preachers; and it is a need that grows with the years.

Our State Convention has recommended the Education Board of Wake Forest College as an excellent medium through which young men may be better equipped for labors under God in Christ's name; and, more than this, the fruits of this Board's work bear practicable testimony to its worth. It is now in need of stronger support. Some of last year's bills are yet to be paid, and it is necessary to the degree of work which it purposes the coming year that it begin free of debt. We wish it could begin with a large balance in its treasury, in order that the many worthy young men in our State who feel the call of God, and who are struggling to prepare themselves, might be speedily prepared.

IT IS not unreasonable that an unchristian person will not believe that one can happily live a Christian life. How can such a one know? The examples of others may be taken as particular cases; and what is said of them may not be said of all persons.

An unsaved person knows nothing of the joy of faith in Christ; knows nothing of his love; does not love God; and being in this condition cannot comprehend the blessings of a Christian life. After all, experience is the only means of positive truth; and positive conviction of the happiness of working for God's glory, bringing souls to salvation and helping the poor and sick and sorrowful, is best arrived at through practical experience. One must be Christ-like before one knows the joy of salvation: it cannot be imagined; and they are few who can describe it.

Here, too, another lesson may be learned. There are probably some who read this that are not experiencing the joy of salvation, and at times, perhaps, they are on the brink of doubting their conversion. Let them ask God about it. Let them try to be the means of bringing joy to some unsaved soul without delay; let them occupy themselves more in God's service, and we assure them the old joy and assurance will return.

TO MITIGATE AND REMOVE A CURSE

The curse of which we purpose writing in order to remove is the liquor traffic—greater than which is no modern evil. Great, and growing greater still; and threatening to secure a hold from which it cannot be shaken.

Good men have been striving to mitigate and destroy the liquor evil all these years. Their efforts seem vain now; but they will bear fruit. They seem vain, they have not been successful, because the strivers differed in methods. A concerted effort has never been made against the liquor traffic in our State. While a few have endeavored to form a party for the purpose, a party that would assume control of all other public affairs, the majority of church members in our State have conscientiously held aloof. Others have held to moral suasion as the one means. And as a result of it all nothing has been accomplished. And failure will be our portion again if concert of effort is not attained; and every failure strengthens the hold of this curse.

We do not wish to go into politics. We would not become partisan for all the world. But a public question, a question of making or removing a law, cannot be settled save through the votes of the people. And this resolves into the question—assuming that every one agrees that this curse must be removed—is it our duty to vote against liquor selling? Surely every one will agree with us that it is, if we can do so without organizing another party, or in any way compromising our political or economic principles. We need not have any machinery, if we are careful in the selection of men for whom we would vote. Certainly every one has the right to know whether or not he who represents him will vote in favor of anything which one does not approve. Certainly no one wishes to be misrepresented. One would be mortified to know that his chosen representative had voted for liquor-selling, if the voter opposed it. To vote only for men who will represent you is no less than any one can ask, if republican form of government means anything. And one who does this certainly does not enter politics in any unwholesome sense of the word.

As to the relative importance of the question, little need be said. So far as our State is concerned, so far as what our next legislature will do is concerned, there is no greater question. It seems to us that one cannot be the embodiment of any great principle and at the same time an advocate of liquor selling.

But arguments are not needed; for were they of avail the existence of the liquor traffic would long since have proved fatal to itself. The great need is a plan for effecting our aims that will meet the approval of Christian people. And we believe there is such a plan—one that is not perfect, but which has had practical demonstration and which can be completed. We need first to gain the battle. The local option plan, as incorporated in the laws of Mississippi, first advocated in this State by the N. C. Christian Advocate, seems to us most practicable in the present circumstances. And we wish to present its chief features, that some idea of it may be obtained.

In Mississippi the people of each county are empowered to decide whether liquor-selling shall be permitted at all in their county. If they vote in the affirmative—"for the sale"—the question is by no means settled; for it may be referred to each community, town or district. This is the prime feature of the plan. A set of evil men who may be in the majority in some localities and even generally cannot impose saloons on a community that opposes them. This makes the question a question of home; it is brought to the door of each citizen. And, moreover, it is the most democratic political measure we have seen. Neither State nor county can effect the community. Certain restrictions are also made as to whom intoxicants may be sold, if sold at all, and as to the conduct of saloons. Of course the law is made applicable to distilleries as well as country saloons, which cannot be reached otherwise than by a sweeping State law.

If this plan will not destroy the liquor traffic the votes of the people cannot destroy it. We do not wish to make it a party measure, but a personal one. As we said, we are not entering politics in the unwholesome sense of the word. We are sure, however, that we cannot cast a ballot as all men do, without carrying the question of the mitigation of this curse with us. One cannot vote for men who will approve laws that sanction vice and not be smirched, for they, for whom we vote, represent us.

We have not written of the duty of Christian citizens in this matter, because it scarcely seems necessary. They certainly need not be reminded that as Christian citizens they must do all that they can to remove sinful things from before men. They cannot but know that the sale of liquor in our State is a fruitful cause of destruction of life and the eternal loss of souls. They need to be pointed to the way of removing this cause. And then they need only to join in the battle for the common good. We know that the sale of liquor must be stopped in God's name and for man's sake; and knowing this, our duty is clear, if we can settle the question of "how?" So far as we are concerned that is settled, and we hope to see such a rally to this effort as will redeem our State and us from the shame which it bears.

THE number of misstatements in a recent editorial in behalf of support of the University in the Charlotte Observer is quite amazing to those who admire the many excellencies of that newspaper. As all of them will be corrected in detail, we will notice only one.

The writer stated that no citizen paid taxes for the support of the University unless he owned $300 worth of property. We do not know what his authority is, but we are certain that the exemption from taxation is only $25.00; that the tax which helps maintain the University is a part of the general tax, which every citizen pays except he have but $25 00 worth of property. If it be true that none but those who have as much as $300 contribute to the support of the University, then none but those who own $300 pay any State taxes, which is not the truth.

If it be said that poor people contribute but little, the smallness has nothing to do with it; at least the poor people get less in return than they pay, however little that be.

Moreover, the amount usually paid the University out of the general taxes is less than a fifth of that paid for higher education in this State; and, it may be pertinent to state, we are contending against taxation for higher education, not against it only at the University.

Again, the tax each one of us pays for higher education may be very small—inappreciably so, if you will,—but it amounts a great deal in aggregate. And, to be sure, at the rate the representative State higher educators have been going, there's no telling how long it will be before the individual tax is very great.

THE "laying by" season having come, we anticipate that many protracted meetings will be held in our State, particularly in country churches, before farm duties become pressing again. All our time is God's; but that by no means implies that we should not work in our various secular pursuits. Certain it is, however, that when we do have time to spare it should be given to active service for God.

Bro. White's sermon in this issue to the unsaved comes just in time to help in the work of winning souls, if our readers will only take the trouble to place it before the unsaved. They should desire to do far more than this. Personal urgent work is greatly needed in every meeting, both for conversions and reclamations. And the pastor cannot be relied upon to do it all. The stirring, uniting power of the Holy Spirit among the members of a church is essential to successful meetings. And this means that there must be continuous prayer. If a church will only earnestly pray we have no fears for the result of a meeting, whether the preaching be eloquent or not.

We should bear in mind in this season that persuading sinners to come forward is not saving them. It is a step, but only a step. There must be regeneration. Converts that are converts only while a meeting lasts will hardly be saved. Converts become active church workers and usually remain active. And we should bear also in mind that profession of religion is not a temporary act, but an incessant series of acts that compass life. When we turn again to earth's harvest we should not forget God's whitening fields.

Of the work of revival proper, that is, so far as inciting and increasing interest of professors of religion and in reclaiming backsliders, much may be said. Many churches are to day laboring under great disadvantage because of inactive members. Revivals are of course purposed to reach these; but they often fail to reach many. And we are sorry to say that there comes a time for pruning and purging. Inactive members who persist in indifference have no place in the church. They certainly do not show any feeling of obligation or any love to God or the Saviour; and we do not see how a converted one can but feel and show evidences of these things. If prayerful efforts to revive such members are not successful, it will be better to withdraw fellowship from them. In God's kingdom, as in Gideon's Band, success does not depend upon numbers, but rather, if the latter are worthless, they are impediments to success.

Let us go into this work prayerfully. Let us prepare ourselves before God that we may be more fit for the glorious work that he enjoins upon us. And may the presence of the Spirit be manifest in every tabernacle of the Lord in the land before the season passes.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

KEELEY INSTITUTE.

About three years ago there appeared an article in this paper commending the Keeley treatment to any who might be sufferers from the excessive use of ardent spirits or morphine. So far as we know, it was the first article of the sort to appear in any religious journal. We did not then write hastily, but carefully considered the grounds of the promoters of this new method of relieving the unfortunate and of promoting temperance in the land.

What we believed then has been abundantly demonstrated by the most overwhelming testimony of men who were once sufferers and slaves to drink, but who are now "clothed and in their right mind" in the successful pursuit of their business and enjoying the happiness of a quiet and well regulated home. Passing through Greensboro a few days ago, I was permitted to read a few letters which expressed the grateful appreciation of some of the most intellectual and capable men in North Carolina. It was the reading of these letters that incited me to write these lines.

"Nothing succeeds like success," and theories, however "fine spun," cannot stand before the living, breathing testimony of a human being. The theory of many was that the Keeley Cure would not last, but as the "hog returns to his wallow" so would the patient return to his drink and to his drunkenness. But the facts are different. Over one thousand patients have been treated by this method in North Carolina, and of this number less than five per cent. of those who remained four weeks have gone back to their former habits. Some are expected to fail. The farmer when he plants his corn and sows his grain, must at harvest look for some barren stalks and blasted ears. But the man who has the elements of manhood in him, and who really desires to be freed from the shackles of whiskey or morphine, may come, if human testimony is worth anything, with the assurance that he will be cured and again put on his feet, with another chance in the race of life. In a letter written by one of the finest young lawyers in this State, I notice this expression: "My business is now good and increasing every day, and there is no reason why I shall not succeed. I have had no desire to touch whiskey since I left the Institute."

There are now before me hundreds of letters which have been pouring into this office for the past three years with similar proofs of the good their authors received from this treatment. Many who wish to come are prevented by the scarcity of money, and the friends of humanity and the promoters of the Master's cause could not do a better work than help such to avail themselves of this opportunity.

I found the building, as heretofore, a pattern of neatness and comfort for the patients. It is not a hospital, and yet it has every facility for the sick; not an asylum, yet a place where men and women can regain the lost sense of moral responsibility; not a hotel, yet where the best food and comforts are furnished, and where the inmates lead a daily life of pleasure and rest.

Mr. W. H. Osborn has lost none of his enthusiasm in carrying on this work. He is widely known as one of the most successful business men in the State. The sacrifices which he has made in laying aside a business which was much more remunerative than the place he now holds, and the large amount of charity which he has extended to those wishing to come but were without means to do so, are the strongest testimonials of his desire to impart to others the blessings which he himself has so abundantly received. The treatment only claims to restore a patient to his former normal condition where he was before he ever drank at all, and if he returns to his old habits he does so because he desires to do so.

Provision has been made for the private treatment of ladies for morphine.

Dr. Melton, the physician in charge, treats them at his home; so that any one desiring the treatment can get it without so much as the public knowing of their presence in the town.

....Pray for the revival meetings that are being held and will be held in many places during this season. Many expect that this year will mark one of the greatest conquests of the Lord in history. So be it.

....There were six conversions the first day of a meeting held at Concord, Granville county, by Rev. J. H. Lamberth, says a correspondent of the Public Ledger. The meeting is continued and interest increases.

....Rev. T. M. Honeycutt, president of Board of Trustees of Mars Hill College informs us that Rev. J. H. Yarboro will have charge of that institution next year. Prof. C. P. Sapp has a prominent place in the faculty.

....Bro. W. L. Foushee, who graduated at Wake Forest College last June, has been chosen principal of Roxboro Institute; Mrs. F. A. Harrison, assistant. Bro. Foushee is at present attending the State University Summer School.

....Dr. N. B. Cobb baptized two candidates at Gardner's, Warren county, the second Sunday. He had been preaching a week at a school-house near Gardner's, where the church at the latter place have a promising mission point.

....Rev. C. J. Thompson, formerly of Clay Village and Evergreen Baptist churches of Kentucky, has accepted a call to the College Hill church of that State. Bro. Thompson is a North Carolinian and graduate of Wake Forest College.

....The meeting of the B. Y. P. U. A. at Toronto last week was attended by about 6,000 delegates. The Christian Endeavor Convention at Cleveland, Ohio, had about 18,000 in attendance.

....Rev. J. A. White of Taylorsville has just returned home after a few months' absence. He is now ready for work, and expects to put Dr. Taylor's pamphlets into the homes of the best men in his county.

....Bro. J. M. Henly writes from Rozier, July 19: "I had the pleasure of witnessing a most impressive baptismal service held by Rev. T. B. Newberry at Cumberland Mills the third Sunday. One of the candidates was ninety years of age."

....Rev. J. A. Stradley will have the assistance of Rev. R. Van Deventer in a revival at Push, Granville county, beginning next Sunday. There was a large number of conversions at a meeting held by these brethren at Stoval recently.

....You cannot begin talking and praying and working for your next Association too soon. We are looking forward to the largest attendance and most enthusiastic meetings in years; but we will look vainly unless the brethren and sisters bestir themselves "betimes."

....Bro. T. S. Memory, one of the strongest of eastern Baptists, writes that in the Woman's Missionary column of a recent RECORDER it was stated in acknowledging receipt of $5 00 that Whiteville church was in the Cape Fear Association; it belongs to the Columbus.

....An assembly is to be held at Lake Keuka, Penn Yan, Western New York, beginning August 1. Dr. A. C. Dixon of Brooklyn is to be leader in Bible studies, and will be assisted by other noted Christian workers.—Baptist.

....Bro. D. W. Alderman of South Carolina informs us that the celebration at Well's Chapel recently was much enjoyed, a grand success, and was in commemoration of the inauguration of the Gospel Mission movement, instead of the departure of the missionaries as we wrote it.

....Rev. J. S. Gwaltney has been conducting a very successful revival meeting at Pleasant Hill Baptist church, six miles south of Morganton. The meeting, which closed last Sunday resulted in thirty conversions and twenty-eight accessions to the church.—Morganton Herald, July 19.

....The Central Association will meet next Tuesday with the Hopkins' Chapel church in the northeastern part of Wake county, and the Pilot Mountain Association with the Mt. Olive church on Thursday, Aug. 2-4. Associations will then be in session every week till the 17th of November.

....Rev. B. W. Spilman, formerly pastor at Smyrna, who attended our Seminary at Louisville last year, is again in our State—at Newbern. Bro. Spilman achieved quite a degree of fame in Kentucky as a humorous lecturer. He will supply for Bro. Ford who is at Mt. Airy for his health.

....Rev. W. R. Gwaltney of Wake Forest made us a pleasant visit last week. He had none but good reports of the college. The Wake Forest church has given Bro. Gwaltney the month of August for rest and recuperation; and he will probably spend the time in the western part of the State.

....Rev. J. M. White of Apex and his younger son, Prof. R. B. White, made us a pleasant visit last Friday. Bro. White informed us that the Edenton brethren and sisters have granted Rev. Jno. E. White a leave of absence during next month, which he will spend partly at his father's home.

....Rev. Rufus Ford informs us that a new Baptist church will be dedicated at Maysville next Saturday, Rev. W. B. Oliver preaching the sermon. From the dedicatory exercises Rev. R. E. Peele will protract a meeting. Rev. J. H. Vernon is missionary pastor at this point; and his labors have been greatly blessed.

....Rev. Dr. J. B. Shearer, President of Davidson College, has been secured by the Raleigh local alumni of Wake Forest College to lecture at Raleigh, Thursday night, July 26th, on "Christian Education." We are sure that a large audience will accept the invitation to hear this distinguished lecturer on so important a subject.

....A sister desires the address of Mr. Jno. D. Rockefeller. We suppose a letter addressed to him at New York City will get as near him as most letters do. Mr. Rockefeller's mail, we are informed, is so great that a private secretary is kept employed sifting it down so that he sees only the most important communications.

....Another successful German was held at the Atlantic Hotel, Morehead, Tuesday night. In front of the Hotel at the same time the Baptist church had a festival. The crowd in attendance was immense.—Newbern Journal, July 19. Surely the devil, always unusually privileged at summer resorts, had a field-day at Morehead that night.

....We are deeply grieved to hear of the death of our venerable Bro. T. J. Leary, which occurred at Morehead the 18th inst. A faithful man, an earnest, active worker, a consecrated bearer of the message of God, has finished his course and entered into that rest which remaineth for the people of God. It has been only a few months since Bro. Leary's promising son, a preacher at Wake Forest College, died. May God comfort the bereaved.

....Rev. J. R. Pendergrass of Franklin, Macon county, writes: "The Master's cause in our midst is advancing. We would be glad to have our eastern friends enjoy a few whiffs of mountain air at the Tuckasiegee Association, August 16-18. I thank the Lord for the unusual strength and force and the clear light of truth added to missions and education by Drs. Durham and Taylor through our old torchlight, the RECORDER."

....Rev. J. T. Jenkins writes from Clement, N. C., 18th: "Am in a good meeting with the assistance of Pastor Prevatt and Bro. Autry."

....Dr. Mitchell Carroll, son of Rev. J. L. Carroll, D. D., of Chapel Hill, has returned to this State and is now with his father, after having spent several years pursuing advanced studies at Johns Hopkins University and in Germany. He has won much distinction as a student and promises to become one of our most advanced scholars.

....Rev. J. P. Mason and his wife Mary E., who lived and died near Chapel Hill, bequeathed $11,500 to the State University, in memory of their two daughters who died at an early age. Bro. Mason had been dead more than a year at the time of his wife's death which occurred July 16th. Our brother's library was left to the Thomasville Orphanage.

....Rev. G. H. Church went to Hickory last week to conduct revival services at the Baptist church there. Rev. C. S. Cashwell, pastor of the Hickory church, came down Saturday and filled Bro. Church's pulpit Sunday morning and evening. Mr. Church is still in Hickory, but will preach here as usual next Sunday, says the Statesville Landmark of the 19 h.

....Sister E. V. Howell, the Rocky Mount pastor's better-half, informs us that the brethren are renovating the church at Rocky Mount. The building is to be repaired and painted, a new baptistery has been finished, and a new carpet will be laid. They are not going into debt to do these things. Sister Howell has been a reader of the RECORDER forty-six years.

....North Carolina will change its attitude towards the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.—Kentucky Baptist. Now really, we would like to know what that means, brother. Surely we are not "going back on" our Seminary; and surely we cannot change our present attitude without turning against it; for North Carolina is for it if Kentucky is, if some allowance for distance be made.

....We note in an exchange that Dr. W. A. Montgomery, D. D., LL. D., is at his home, Leadvale, Tenn., and is ready to go out to aid in meetings or supply. Dr. Montgomery is one of the staunchest and ablest of Baptists, and we hope his services may be secured in our State in this season. We are rejoiced to know that he is yet able and ready to serve the Lord under whose direction he has been so long.

....The newspapers that call our opposition to State aid to higher education "a Baptist fight" are whistling to keep their courage up. None in this State know how extensively our opposition is endorsed better than newspaper men. It is of course a base and bootless effort to prejudice citizens. Methodists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Baptists, farmers, merchants, politicians, lawyers and editors are distributing Dr. Taylor's pamphlet.

....Rev. Jno. A. Wray, formerly of Wake Forest College, lately of the Louisville Seminary, arrived in Winston last Saturday and occupied the pulpit of the Broad Street church Sunday morning and night, says the Sentinel. Bro. Wray remained over at Winston until Wednesday conducting prayer-meeting, etc. We are sure his many acquaintances in our State would be glad to know that Bro. Wray had arranged to remain in our State.

....We are proud of the following statements contained in the last issue of the Suffolk, Va., Herald: On July 8, 1893, Rev. J. F. Love succeeded Rev. H. A. Bagby in the Baptist church at Suffolk. During the year, fifty six members have been added, the present membership being 352. The church raised $2,469 last year. The Sunday-school is flourishing. Bro. Love will assist Dr. R. R. Overby in a protracted meeting at South Mills beginning next Sunday.

....The Annual Meeting at the Orphanage occurred last week as announced. The Trustees met the first day and re elected all the officers. The financial condition of the institution is comparatively good. A committee—Hon. J. C. Scarborough, Dr. R. D. Fleming, and Dr. C. Durham—was appointed to arrange the matter of editing Charity and Children. Until this committee acts, the present arrangement holds. There were about 3,000 people present on Thursday. There being sickness in the family of Dr. Mundy of Wilson, he was not present, but Dr. Pritchard gracefully filled his place on the program as preacher for the occasion. After entertainment by the orphans, an intermission, during which a regular picnicing time is had, occurs. In the afternoon, Rev. E. F. Jones, Gastonia, delivered an address on the subject, "God's Thoughts." The effort is spoken of very highly in our exchanges. The occasion throughout was, as these occasions always have been, very enjoyable. We regret that our representative's report has failed to reach us up to time of going to press. The support of the Orphanage for the year cost about $10.000. There was an average attendance of 125 children.

Another Endorsement.

Editor Recorder:—I have just read "How far Should a State Undertake to Educate" by Dr. C. E. Taylor and think it one of the ablest papers I ever saw, without ostentation—logical from beginning to end—he has raised a wall of fundamental truths that will stand with the constitution of our fathers.

The man who gainsays either of his three propositions I think, must ignore the vital principles upon which our republic is founded, and consign to oblivion the deeds of those who gave us religious freedom. Posterity will excuse the man who attempts to answer this argument, for being a crank.

Dr. Taylor has crowned his life work with a glory no man will bedim.

Yours truly, WM. B. SHAW.

Facts and Figures; or, Side-lights on the Educational Discussion—No. 3.

BY REV. C. DURHAM.

In this article are presented the statements of our honored Governor, Elias Carr, on important matters, a fact or two about the system of scholarships at Chapel Hill; facts to be remembered about the income of the University; the voice of the people on educational legislation in the past, and a combination of ideas gathered from the Sunday-school Quarterlies and the United States Senate committee, whose catechism on the Sugar Trust caused some Senators to answer with an explanation.

Is it not a fact that the Governor's statements are hard to explain? On June 12th, 1894, in answer to a note of inquiry about the reports required by Chap. 143, Sec. 4, Laws of 1885, Gov. Elias Carr wrote:

"At the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of the University held in February last, the Treasurer and the Bursar of the University made reports which embraced the matter required in said section, and at the annual meeting to be held next winter, similar reports will be made, and I will see that the reports are transmitted to the General Assembly. For convenience, the Secretary of the Board of Trustees has charge of the reports made at the last annual meeting, and if desired you can have access to them."

Remember, please, I was trying to see the Bursar's Reports, for these alone gave the facts I was anxious to secure.

On June 18th, six days later than the above, in reply to a second note, Gov. Carr wrote:

"Mr. Battle, as Secretary of the Board of Trustees, has the reports since he became Treasurer in April, 1891, and if the Executive Committee will consent, he will have no objection to showing you his reports as Treasurer." (Report of Bursar not mentioned.)

What a change in our honored Governor in six days! On June 12th, he said, "If you desire, you can have access to them" (the Treasurer's reports and the Bursars) On June 18th he said, "if the Executive Committee will consent, he will have no objection to showing you his report as Treasurer." Did the Governor on the 18th think he had overstepped his authority on the 12th? Did the Governor on the 18th think it doubtful what the Executive Committee would do? Did not the Governor on the 18th admit the right of the Executive Committee to refuse a citizen access to these reports (public documents), which on the 12th he had properly indicated belonged in his hands, and to which he had given said citizen full access? Did the Governor on the 18th think that if the Executive Committee should refuse access to the reports, it would be better for a citizen to be deprived of his right to see them, than for the Governor to have to exercise his authority over the reports, and thereby break with the Executive Committee of the University?

Is it not a fact that the system of scholarships at Chapel Hill when understood will be rebuked by the people? A scholarship to run only twenty-five years, based on one thousand dollars of invested endowment in interest-bearing securities at not less than six per cent. per annum, seems to be the only business like, honest scholarships in existence in the colleges in this State. A perpetual scholarship, based on money put into college buildings in the present condition of North Carolina, is a deception, and when done by State institutions, is it not a device by which to evade the law forbidding free tuition?

Let us take one illustration out of many. Some are even more objectionable than the one to be taken. Memorial Hall at Chapel Hill, dedicated June 3d, 1885, was to have been paid for by donations for that specific object. But to finish up the building in time, the donations coming in slowly, Mr. Paul C. Cameron loaned himself, as chairman of the building committee, or advanced eight thousand dollars at eight per cent., for which the Board of Trustees passed a resolution of thanks. The State had nothing to do with it, and was in no way whatsoever responsible for the debt. The President of the University, Dr. Battle, made earnest efforts to get the Legislature to pay the debt, but he did not succeed—thanks to Col. Wm. L. Saunders Mr. Cameron died before he had paid himself the $8,000 which he had loaned to himself. The Trustees gave Mr. Cameron's estate, in lieu of this claim which Mr. Cameron held against himself, ten perpetual scholarships in the University. Of course they had no moral nor legal right to do it. The descendants of Mr. Cameron for five hundred thousand years—nay, till the end of all things, have ten scholarships in the University of North Carolina! The practical effect is that the State, out of the taxes of the people, must pay the tuition, to the extent of eight hundred dollars annually, of the descendants of Mr. Cameron in all the time to come.

A few years ago Mary Ann Smith left an estate to the University, and provided in her will that an equal number of scholarships should be given to the two Literary Societies. More than thirty perpetual scholarships were thus given; but the President, two years years ago through Judge Phillips and others, secured from these societies a transfer, for the time being, of these scholarships to the Faculty—to Dr. George T. Winston,—Dr. Winston's plea being that there was danger, so long as the scholarships were controlled by the Literary Societies they would be used in Society politics among the students. Ahem! Are there no State politics? Have scholarships never been used in State politics? I will return to this subject later. The facts are at hand.

It is a fact that the University has an annual income from the taxes of the people by the Act of 1881, $5,000, annually forever, unless repealed by the Legislature; from the taxes of the people, by the Act of 1885, $15,000 annually forever, unless repealed by the Legislature; from the taxes of the people, by the Act of 1893, $10,000 annually for two years; and from tuition, if each student (388, Catalog 1893-'94) should pay only the annual charges of $81.50 required by the Catalog, an income of $31,622, and from invested endowment (can't find out definitely—the Chairs of History and of Chemistry are endowed, and there is other income) about $5.500—making a total income of $67,122.

If the $20,000 annual income from the taxes of the people should by an Act of the next Legislature cease, the University, according to the above figures, would still have an annual income of $37,122. This would pay—

The President	$ 2,500
15 Professors, each $2,000	30,000
Incidental expenses, and improvements, &c	4,622
Total	$37,122

When it is remembered that the State furnishes dwelling-houses to some of the Professors; that the Professors have recitations on an average of less than three hours per day, and for only about 170 days, less than half the days in a year; that only a few years ago the State spent of the taxes of the people $5,000 in repairs; that in the past two years the State has spent of the taxes of the people $20,000 on repairs and improvements, I think the estimate given above will be considered by most thoughtful men as quite liberal. Where is the need, therefore of any appropriation from the taxes of the people?

It is a fact that the people, the true friends of education, of common schools, of academies and colleges, have had the Legislature with them every time (three times in recent years), they have exerted their influence in opposition to the University's ruinous policy in education in the State.

(a) In the winter of 1884-'85 a tremendous effort was made by the University influence to institute free tuition at Chapel Hill, and thus by one stroke break down the denominational colleges. The retiring and incoming Governors both recommended that tuition at Chapel Hill be free. But the friends of the common schools, academies and colleges saw what the result of free tuition at Chapel Hill would be, and by heroic efforts and united influences they prevented the consummation of this folly.

(b) The free county student law of 1868, so grievously perverted by the friends of the University, as was most abundantly set forth in the public prints of 1886, was by the Legislature of 1887 repealed. Here was an end to this disgraceful conduct.

(c) The Legislature of 1887 took also the land-scrip from the University. This Act took effect June 30 h, 1888; and thus the land scrip, which had been held since 1875, and to which they clung with a death-like grip, and from which the University had received annually, since Jan. 1st, 1875, an income of $7,500, was made a part of the endowment of the A. and M. College. These facts in the past are a demonstration of the position and influence of the people on educational legislation, and not a dim prophecy of what the people fully aroused, as they are likely to be on the question now before them, will influence the next Legislature to do for the education of the 600,000 children of the State.

Some of the Sunday-school quarterlies close each lesson with important questions. United States Senators had to answer some questions a few days ago. I believe in direct questions which go to the core, and in honest answers which do not evade. I have thought it wise to follow the example of the Sunday-school quarterlies and the United States Senate Committee, and propound some important questions for the President of the University of North Carolina:—

1. Did you not threaten to drive Dr. C. E. Taylor out of the State if he persisted in the publication of his articles on "How Far Should a State Undertake to Educate?" Did you not, on or about March 31st, 1894, after reading Dr. C. E. Taylor's first article, significantly remark, "He is getting ready to leave the State"? What was this but a threat?

2. Did you not have under consideration a reply to Dr. Taylor's articles, and afterwards determine not to publish it? Did not friends advise you that it did not answer Dr. Taylor's argument, and therefore would not help your cause?

3 Have you not recently stated that you did not intend to answer Dr. Taylor's articles; that he had answered himself a dozen times, and that the motive and purpose were so transparent and so unworthy of men engaged in higher education, that you did not care to enter the list in such an encounter? Have you not thus ridiculed an argument which you are unable to meet, and call in question the motives of an honest citizen of North Carolina?

Here endeth our first catechism.

School Announcements.

CHOWAN BAPTIST FEMALE INSTITUTE.—Need we commend the Chowan Baptist Female Institute, advertised in this issue? Certainly not to North Carolina Baptists, among whom its name is a household word.

A. & M. COLLEGE.—No institution in the State has ever grown more rapidly than the Agricultural & Mechanical College. Its success shows that the times are ripe for its work, and that our young men need and are seeking such an education as it offers. See its advertisement in this issue.

RICHMOND WOMAN'S COLLEGE.—Our good friend Dr. James Nelson announces in this issue as to the work of the Richmond Woman's College, better know to our readers as the "Richmond Female Institute." Bro. Nelson is an able man, an experienced educator and a good whole-souled Baptist. And his college, from all we hear, is a very excellent one.

THE VIRGINIA COLLEGE, ROANOKE, VA.—The Virginia College for young ladies under the presidency of Dr. W. A. Harris, located in the beautiful city of Roanoke, Virginia, is one of the foremost schools in the South. Its magnificent new buildings with all modern improvements, on a campus of ten acres, and gorgeous mountain scenery in the Valley of Virginia, famed for health, its ample course of study, European and American teachers, make the Virginia College for young ladies one of the most attractive and beautiful college homes in the Union. It is attended by one hundred and eighty pupils, representing seventeen States. For descriptive catalog, address W. A. Harris, D. D., Roanoke, Virginia.

ROANOKE COLLEGE.—The catalog of this successful Virginia College shows an enrollment of students from thirteen States, Indian Territory, and Korea. Roanoke is abreast of the times in facilities and methods of instruction; and this summer is adding an Annex to its fine Library, which doubles the floor space, making the entire length of the building 95 feet and the width through the wings 75 feet. The best moral, social and religious influence prevails in the attractive town of Salem, and the order and discipline of the College are good. For the advantages offered, the expenses are very moderate. The catalog of 60 pages, illustrated circular, and June Collegian will be sent free on application to the clerk of the Faculty, Salem, Va.

Rev. T. J. Leary Dead.

On July 18th, at 9 p. m., our beloved Bro. T. J. Leary of Morehead City, N. C., passed away. Our brother has spent a life of great usefulness in the Master's vineyard. Even when afflicted from a stroke of paralysis he could be seen going with difficulty from house to house visiting the sick and distressed, and collecting money for mission work.

He was a devoted husband and father, and a kind neighbor, a man of strong convictions and fearless in expressing them.

Many warm friends share the bereavement of his family; but believe that their loss is his eternal gain.

JOS. HIDEN.

Ought Baptists to Rejoice at the Success of the University?

BY REV. J. N. STALLINGS.

The President of the University says, "Yes." If he means that Baptists—constituting, as they do, a large portion of the people of the State—ought as good citizens to rejoice at the general diffusion of intelligence and the progress of higher education, I agree with him.

Baptists ought to rejoice, not only as citizens but as Christians, at the success of Chapel Hill and of every other institution of learning, high and low, male, female, and mixed, and of every orphanage of every order and of every denomination. He is a very sorry Baptist who does not pray and work for the success of Wake Forest College and all other Baptist schools, and for the Orphanage at Thomasville; but doing so and rejoicing at their success should not cause him to fail to rejoice at the success of others. Baptists are most deeply interested both as citizens and as Christians. Their principles are heaven-born and God given, derived entirely from the New Testament; hence, of the utmost importance to them and their children and to all men.

And since those principles increase and prevail, intelligence increases and education prevails, of all people. Baptists are most deeply interested in the progress of education. True, they been branded in times past (passed forever, thank the Lord,) as ignorant; but, the masses have always been wise in understanding the Bible and in obeying its plain teachings, while from the days of Paul to the present, they have had some who were masters of their own language and of those in which the Scriptures were written. The Bible, always recognized as their only rule of faith and practice, as they read it out were enlightened by the Holy Spirit to understand it, assured them that every regenerate person—man, woman and child—is a freeman in Christ—no man master but all equal; that earthly governments have no control of spiritual matters; that Christ is an absolute Sovereign and the only King, his laws, as contained in the New Testament, the only authority; that a church is a qualified and called out assembly, subject to no other assembly nor to any earthly power, but under law to Christ alone; that a church has no authority to legislate and that its only business is to execute Christ's laws, and that its officers are, in no sense, lords over God's people; but servants of all, and when set apart, only leaders, overseers, teachers, only honored and followed as they honor Christ's laws and follow him. With these and other similar principles, they have always resisted every usurpation of every civil and of every ecclesiastical body, and have ever been the advocates of civil and spiritual liberty.

After the independence of our country was established, Gen. Washington bore the Baptists witness that they had been "the foremost promoters of our glorious revolution." Since that time they have been the originators and supporters of every movement to secure and perpetuate all civil and religious rights. Every true Baptist is (in principle) a democrat, and every Baptist church is a pure democracy, made such by the New Testament; hence, while Baptists are peaceable and patriotic citizens of every government, they are all democrats in sentiment and rejoice at the overthrow of every form of monarchical and oligarchical government, whether civil or ecclesiastical, and at the abolition of all injustice, oppression and tyranny. Their principles and practices keep pace with the increase of intelligence. This is seen, not so much in their numerical increase as in the adoption by evangelical denominations of many of their fundamental principles and of some of their practices. As "many run to and fro and knowledge increases," it will be more and more so, until all true believers will accept the Bible as the only rule of faith and practice, and so all became practically one—Baptists in faith if not in name. As this must be the ultimate result, Baptists ought to rejoice at the success of the University and of every other institution for the education and training of the coming generations.

Ought Baptists to rejoice at the success of the University? Elder W. R. Gwaltney says "No." I venture to say, however, that Bro. Gwaltney will agree to all I have said above. I certainly fully agree with him as I understand him. We object to the methods by which success is won at Chapel Hill. No true Baptist can rejoice at injustice, oppression and tyranny. To tax the people for anything, however good and necessary, that can be supplied without taxation, is to tax unnecessarily; and to tax unnecessarily, or to tax all for the benefit of a few, is unjust, oppressive and tyrannical. The tax to support the University is for the benefit of only a few, and it is entirely unnecessary; hence, it is unjust, oppressive and tyrannical. That it is for the benefit of only a few needs no argument to show. It is self-evident. Only a comparative few and they of the most wealthy class, can avail themselves of a collegiate education. The masses cannot reach it. Those who can avail themselves of it can find as good facilities as cheaply furnished at other institutions in the State maintained without taxation; hence, taxation is wholly unnecessary.

I do not blame Dr. Winston for his zeal in behalf of the University. Every one must condemn his manner, at times at least of showing it. He ought to push the interests of the institution in every legitimate way. If the State Legislature appropriates money for its benefit, the Trustees, President and Faculty are bound to use it for the best interests of the institution. But Dr. Winston and every citizen ought to desire justice for every one. All ought to oppose everything unjust, oppressive and tyrannical. All ought to rejoice at the highest success of the University if attained by legitimate and proper methods. No one ought to rejoice at wrong and unjust means for obtaining success. Let the friends of Chapel Hill make it all they desire it to be, but let them do it with their own means and not by taxes wrung from the hands of the poor, in some instances at least from women who work in the fields for a bare support.

I agree with Dr. Taylor in his unanswerable arguments lately published in the RECORDER, and more recently issued in pamphlet form. His arguments, both as to the injustice of sustaining any State College or High School by taxation, and as to the religious aspect of the question, are conclusive and unanswerable. The points are not new to me. I have entertained such ideas for years, and four or five years ago stated them in brief arguments in a little College paper published by the Kastalian Literary Society of High Point Female College. But I had no idea that such a mass of authority could be arrayed to sustain them, or such unanswerable arguments used to enforce them. His arguments apply with equal force to any merely educational instruction of high grade supported by taxation. Not one cent should be given for education by the State except for the free common schools, which should be sustained much better than heretofore. The people owe Dr. Taylor a debt of gratitude they can never pay for the service he has done the cause of right and of liberty.

Bro. Adams of Reidsville says he is willing to be taxed if the General Assembly will make Chapel Hill a University indeed. The arguments of Dr. Taylor apply with equal force against that idea as they do against the present status. If its friends will make it a real University, all Baptists will rejoice. So will we if the Methodists will make Trinity a real University, and the Presbyterians, Davidson. I am sure Baptists would make Wake Forest the best University in the land if they could. We will do this if we can, even if Chapel Hill is made a real University. We do not ask State aid. We would not accept it if offered. We would cease to be true Baptists were we to do so. We will not consent that any other College or University receive State aid. If Chapel Hill, the Normal and Industrial (so called) School at Greensboro, the Oxford Orphan Asylum, or any similar institution get aid from the State hereafter, it will be in spite of the votes of so many Baptists and of many others who see the right and will dare maintain it.

If it were a matter of policy instead of principle, all Baptists would not only rejoice at the success achieved at Chapel Hill, but at the methods pursued. They would not only favor sustaining the College by taxation, but would favor larger appropriations. If there ever was a time when Baptists could rejoice at the success of Chapel Hill, surely now is the time. From the foundation of the institution to its reorganization after the war between the States, there were few Baptist Trustees—only one or two Baptist professors and they in for only a short time. Up to 1855 Baptists were very little regarded there. About that time they came into a little notice. Since the organization they have come into more prominence, until now there are a number of influential Trustees who are Baptists, five Professors, one or more Tutors, and soon, if matters go on as they have for the last eighteen years, Baptists will have complete control of the institution. But Baptists are not governed by policy but by principle. It would be just as wrong for the State to support Chapel Hill by taxation if it were controlled by Baptists, as if they were entirely ignored as in times past. I shall rejoice to see Chapel Hill and all other institutions prosper, but only when their prosperity is produced by their own efforts and merits. Henceforth the people will see that no educational institution of high grade nor any mere charitable institution is supported by taxation. Every such institution ought to be sustained only by the voluntary contributions and patronage of its friends.

Dishonesty.

BY R. Q. A. TEAGUE.

This seems to be a day of wholesale fraud, and it seems to be in fellowship generally throughout the world. Public speakers seldom ever say anything about it. Even preachers seem to pass it by unnoticed. Such being the case, as a natural consequence it will continue to grow on in popularity.

Assignments are now in order. While this is the case, an honest man is overtaken occasionally; but thank the Lord he shows his colors by surrendering up all to his creditors. This man wherever found is an honest man—a true man—one after God's own heart.

Now, I am done with fraudulent assigners. The Lord guide me, and forbid that I should say anything that I ought not to say concerning the masses who assign. Do they not assign as a matter of gain to themselves? Do they not in many cases begin years beforehand to prepare for keeping back all they can? Do they not keep back every cent the law allows them besides the thousands concealed from human eye? If the law would protect them, would they not enter corn-cribs at night and carry off the corn found therein? Would they not with the same assurance of protection lay hands on anything and hold it? Do they not as borrowers of money defraud the lenders out of their money? Some, perhaps, are trying to hide their rascality by blowing their horn s in giving liberally of other people's money to benevolence in their own name. Deceived souls whoever you are! The Lord don't want such money. You will get no credit or reward, but will receive condemnation from the Lord, for offering him your fraudulently gotten money in your own name. It may be you defrauded some poor man out of this money. What does God say to you for thus treating one of his poor servants? "Inasmuch as you have it unto one of the least of these my brethren, you have done it unto me."

Farmington, N. C.

As thy days so shall thy strength be.

From Stanly County.

Dear Recorder:—Very little is ever said about the Baptists of Stanly in your columns. I suppose it is because the reis but little to be said. We hope, however, that this will not be the case long.

I believe the time is near at hand when our people here are going to be heard from in every good work. The noble Secretaries will rejoice with us when that day does arrive. A great many of our people are poor, but they are beginning to realize that they are not doing what they ought to in the way of giving of their substance.

I have been on this field since the first of February. I have a plenty of hard work to do; really much more than I can do well. I have charge of six churches, viz, Albemarle, Palmerville, Ebenezer, Anderson's Grove, Popliu's Grove and New London. All of these churches have good houses of worship except New London, and they expect to build this fall.

The Ebenezer brethren have just completed a new house. Our church here at Albemarle has been built but a little over two years. They had twenty seven members when I took charge of the work. Eighteen have been added to our number since. Bro. M A. Adams came over and preached several days a few weeks ago. The church was greatly revived and several were converted. The people of Albemarle will never forget Bro. Adams. We expect him to be with us again in September.

The Palmersville Baptist church requested brethren G. O Wilhoit and J. M. Bennett to meet with the pastor at that church on the fourth Sunday in May to examine and set apart Bro. Haywood Morris to the gospel ministry. Bro. Wilhoit failed to get there. Bro. Bennett acted as chairman of the examination. After hearing his Christian experience and call to the ministry, and his views on the doctrines of the Bible, the presbytery found Bro. Morris well qualified for the work, and proceeded to set him apart. Bro. Bennett preached ordination sermon, delivered the charge and presented the Bible. The writer offered the prayer. We heartily commend Bro. Morris to the brethren and pray God to deal richly with him in all his labors.

"For Years,"

Says CARRIE E. STOCKWELL, of Chesterfield, N. H., "I was afflicted with an extremely severe pain in the lower part of the chest. The feeling was as if a ton weight was laid on a spot the size of my hand. During the attacks, the perspiration would stand in drops on my face, and it was agony for me to make sufficient effort even to whisper. They came suddenly, at any hour of the day or night, lasting from thirty minutes to half a day, leaving as suddenly; but, for several days after, I was quite prostrated and sore. Sometimes the attacks were almost daily, then less frequent. After about four years of this suffering, I was taken down with bilious typhoid fever, and when I began to recover, I had the worst attack of my old trouble I ever experienced. At the first of the fever, my mother gave me Ayer's Pills, my doctor recommending them as being better than anything he could prepare. I continued taking these Pills, and so great was the benefit derived that during nearly thirty years I have had but one attack of my former trouble, which yielded readily to the same remedy."

Alabama Baptists.

STATE CONVENTION—BIRMINGHAM BRIEFS.

Our State Convention, which was held at Marion, has just closed. It was feared the session would not be a harmonious one, but the brethren beautifully preserved the "unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." Dr. W. C. Cleveland of Columbia, who perhaps has done more for Alabama Baptists than any other living man, was elected President by acclamation, a token of the veneration and affection in which he is held by his brethren.

The introductory sermon was from the text, "He that winneth souls is wise," and was preached by Rev. P. T. Hale, the pastor of the South Side church of Birmingham. The idea was that souls should be saved at every service, and not just two weeks in the year. It is hoped practical good was done by the discourse.

Rev. W. A. Whittle, Vice-President and Financial Secretary of Howard College, reported $20,000 raised during the six months he has been in the field on the condition that the debt of some $30,000 on the College property shall be paid. The outlook to pay off this debt is good. Under Dr. A. W. McGaha the College has had a very successful year.

On Wednesday night of the Convention, a collection was taken up for our State Female College, the "Judson" and $4,500 were raised.

Our State Mission work was somewhat changed for this year. Six evangelists were put in the field, dividing the State among them. These able and consecrated brethren are not only to preach but to push all our denominational enterprises, and inform and edify the 9,700 Baptists who are doing nothing in our great enterprises.

Drs. Hawthorne, Tichenor, Harvey, Bell, Sampey and others spoke on the various objects before the body and added much to the interest of the Convention. The addresses of Drs. Eager, Taylor, McGaha, Ward, Bow, Dickinson, Whittle, Harris and Dawson were especially fine.

Marion is of deep interest to all Southern Baptists, because in their church building was born the Home Mission Board, and in this church the polished and eloquent Dr. E. T. Winkler was so long pastor until his death.

We are in a state of seige here in Birmingham. The entire force of State troops, with the Governor commanding, are pouring into the city. The railroad men are out in the great strike, and business is paralysed.

The Lord richly blesses us at the South Side church. Scarcely a service at which some are not added to the church. Yesterday five were received into the church, two of whom were for baptism. The work is large and difficult. Will not every reader of the RECORDER pray for us? The memory of your Rev. J. L. White, who held a great meeting for us in the "Wigwam," is very sweet here. Fraternally,

P. T. HALE.

From Monroe.

Monroe has a population of nearly three thousands, and is quite an attractive town. Its public buildings are specially fine. It is becoming quite a railroad center and a number of railroad men make it headquarters. The hard times have afflicted Monroe less severely than other localities, the crop prospect in the community is good, and a spirit of hopefulness pervades our business circles.

The Baptist cause here is flourishing. Our church edifice is decidedly the handsomest in town. We are about 200 strong and number some of the most influential men in the county. The Sheriff, the Register of Deeds, the leading hotelist, the editors of both papers (Ashcraft of the Enquirer and Beasley of the Journal), and several prominent business men are among the most earnest workers in the church. There seems to be perfect harmony and the outlook is one of much promise.

We have been in our new field of toil just a week and our stay has been delightful. The cordial reception tendered us on the outset appears to be growing in warmth. The ever-welcome "pounders" happily beseiged us last Monday evening. What a large and elegant array of good things they bought! The hearty good-will of the people, thus substantially expressed, fills the heart of the new-comer with inexpressible gratitude.

The work of Bro. M. A. Adams here was eminently successful. He is a fine thinker, a fluent preacher, and a faithful pastor. He had a very strong hold upon his people and was held in the highest esteem throughout the entire Association. His efficient services, specially blessed here, will doubtless be even more fruitful in his wider sphere of labor.

I find that many Union county people are enthusiastic in their advocacy of the educational policy recently set forth by Dr. Taylor. This is due largely to the earnest efforts of Prof. E. W. Sikes, a native of this county. He delivered a religio-educational address at the Baptist church here last Sunday afternoon on the "Rights and Duties of Christian Denominations." He pleased very highly the large audience which packed the church to hear him.

The pastors in our Association are preparing for vigorous revival work next month. They pray and will earnestly toil for a great outpouring of the Spirit and a deep religious awakening throughout our borders.

HIGHT C. MOORE.

Monroe, July 12, 1894.

Unanswerable.

I have given Dr. Taylor's tract a careful reading, and most heartily endorse it. His arguments are unanswerable. So say some intelligent men of other denominations, who sympathize with the University. So surely as principles are eternal, this old principle, for which we as a denomination have always contended, must triumph in the end.

L. JOHNSON.

Children's Day at Holly Springs.

Sunday, July 1st, was children's day at Holly Springs church. A large stand, beautifully and tastefully decorated with flowers and evergreens, had been erected. The decoration was the work of Mrs. P. B. Kennedy and Miss Mary Lee Angle.

The morning was fine and a large crowd was present. At the opening hour the Sunday-school formed on the stand, and after prayer by Pastor W. A. Myers, the children, with Miss Lola Holmes at the organ, gave excellent music in a song of welcome.

Among the large number of pieces rendered, and where all did well, I can mention only a few. Greeting—Miss Lettie Chamberlain. Little Lights—each child holding a lighted taper—Mary Kennedy, Minnie Chamberlain, Pearl Chamberlain and Alice Hayes. Bountiful Giver—Hunter Angle, Lonna Chamberlain, Early Hayes, Jimmie Trivet, Robert Tharp and Sylvanus Trivet.

Harmony Sunday-school was present and took part in the singing exercises. Altogether the music was most excellent. Elder Smith of Harmony delivered a very interesting and touching address to the children, as did also Rev. W. A. Myers.

The statistical report of the Holly Springs Sunday-school is as follows: Organized first Sunday in April, Dr. J. B. Angle, Superintendent; J. E. Tharp, Assistant Superintendant; C. C. Tharp, Secretary. April—average attendance, 72; contributions, 81c.; perfect lessons, 103. May—average attendance, 70; contributions, $1.06; perfect lessons, 140. June—average attendance, 68; contributions, 79c.; perfect lessons 183. Total average attendance, 70c.; total contributions, including children's day, $4.72. As this church is located in the country, this is a very creditable report, and shows that the school, as well as children's day, has been a grand success.

D. P. HEATH.

Harmony, July 2, 1894.

From Augusta, N. C.

Dear Editor:—Allow me, as an humble servant of the Lord, to say a few words about the Sunday-school, also the Children's Day that was celebrated here last Sunday.

About three months ago our Sunday-school numbered only twenty-five, and it seemed it was not moving on as it should. There were many outside who should have been in the Sunday school. So we worked and worked trying to get them to join and make our Sunday-school more lively in the work of the Lord. But it seemed that all our work was in vain.

It was proposed to have a kind of "Children's Day"—that is, a day set apart for the children, and all others who wished to speak. Two weeks from the time set, our school had improved wonderfully, and now we have upwards of eighty.

Not only have we improved in number but in work also, and, I trust, in faith. Now if that "Children's Day" helped our Sunday-schools, which I am certain it did, the same would help other Sunday schools. I would be glad to read in the dear old RECORDER of many other schools going into just such work, or something similar.

Yours in Christ, JESSE C. PACK.

The Foreign Mission Board.

The Foreign Mission Board is appointed annually by the Southern Baptist Convention. As the Convention is composed of representatives from the churches, the Board is the servant of the churches. It is composed of men who belong to some of these churches. These brethren are selected with a view to their piety, Christian integrity and interest in the mission work. No better place than Richmond could be found to furnish these brethren, as there are over twenty Baptist churches here, and no better set of men could be found anywhere than those composing the Board. All give their time gratuitously to the work, with the exception of the Corresponding Secretary and the Treasurer, who receive compensation for their services. The latter, however, for only part of his time.

The Board was organized in 1845, the same year the Southern Baptist Convention was organized.

DUTIES OF THE BOARD.

To these brethren is entrusted the duty of directing our foreign mission work. This includes: (1.) Establishing mission stations; (2.) Selecting and sending out the missionaries; (3.) Settling questions which arise on the field as to the conduct of the work; (4.) Providing for the support of the missionaries.

In all of these points great wisdom is needed, and the Board often feels it necessary to refer questions for decision back to the brethren in Convention who appointed them. Many look upon the Board as a big machine. It would do such people good to meet with them once, and see them earnestly, carefully, prayerfully, considering the important questions which come before them for consideration.

OUR WORK.

We have now employed ninety-four missionaries and nineteen native helpers. We take these figures from our last annual report: In Canton and vicinity (begun in 1845), 13 missionaries, 22 native helpers, 5 churches, with 806 members, 109 baptisms, 10 schools, $1,164.52 of contributions; Shanghai and vicinity (1847), 7 missionaries, 5 native assistants, 3 churches, 104 members. 7 baptisms, 2 schools, contributions $86; Tung Chow and vicinity (1860), 12 missionaries, 3 churches, 149 members, 4 baptisms. For African missions, Lagos and interior (1850), 9 missionaries, 7 assistants, 5 churches, 166 members, 24 baptisms, contributions $123.50. In Italy, at Rome, Florence and fourteen other towns (1870), 3 missionaries from the United States, 27 native preachers and colporters, 17 churches, 372 members, 38 baptisms, contributions $395. In Brazil, at Bahia and vicinity (1882), 5 missionaries, 4 native helpers, 4 churches, 280 members, 69 baptisms; at Rio and vicinity (1883), 6 missionaries, 5 native preachers, 6 churches, 114 members, 17 baptisms, contributions $715; Pernambuco (1889), 32 members, 28 baptisms, contributions $125; Campos (1890), 4 missionaries, 2 native assistants, 1 church, 93 members, 50 baptisms, contributions $390. In Mexico (1880), 25 missions, 15 native helpers, 87 churches, 1,163 members, 277 baptisms, 2 schools, contributions $2,600 25. In Japan (1889), 4 missionaries, 1 church, 31 members, 9 baptisms. Total—churches 84, members 3,328, baptisms 629, schools 15, contributions $5,944 27.

For the current year the work seems to be no where specially impeded, but in every field are continued proofs of Divine favor, and of the power of the Holy Spirit.

Our representatives must not be recalled from the front. It would cost more to bring them back than to support them there for several months.

THE SISTERS.

The ladies in their organizations have done well. Year after year they have given, some by mites, some hundreds of dollars, and they are a power for good in this great work. Their contribution last year for the foreign mission work was $23,514.99. Their headquarters are 9 W. Lexington St., Baltimore, Md., and Miss Annie Armstrong is the earnest, active Corresponding Secretary.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

North Carolina Baptist S. S. Chautauqua.

SECOND ANNUAL MEETING

The second annual meeting of the North Baptist Sunday-school Chautauqua will be held at Mount Vernon Springs, Chatham county, on the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley Railroad, one mile from Ore Hill, beginning on Tuesday, August 28th, at 4 p. m., and continue till Sunday, September 2d, 1894.

Special rates for board have been secured at the Mount Vernon Springs Hotel, as follows: "Per day, $1.00; full week, $6.00; and in private residences near by at seventy-five cents per day, or $5.00 full week. Usual reduced fare will be granted over all the railroads in the State.

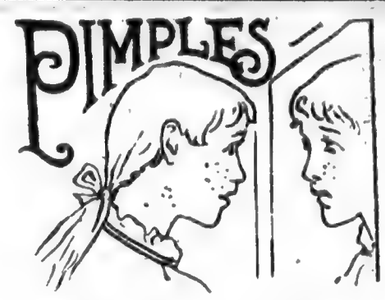
The full programme of exercises will be issued by the Executive Committee during the month of July.

The meeting at this place last August was most delightful and profitable to all the Sunday school workers who attended. From the first to the last day it was a spiritual and an instructive feast.

The object of the Chautauqua is to bring together the Baptist Sunday-school workers of North Carolina in an annual meeting for mutual interchange of methods of teaching and conducting the school in every department, and for invoking special spiritual preparation in same. It will prove a blessing to any officer or teacher. It will aid and stimulate the school represented. It will warm the heart of any pastor.

Our brethren and sister of Mount Vernon Springs Baptist church, and the people of the community generally, will do all in their power for our comfort and for the success of the Chautauqua.

The grove in which Mount Vernon Springs church is situated is a very large one, and parties desiring to do so can take tents or make shelters and "camp" in the grove during the Chautauqua. Several did this last year, and found it very comfortable.



We hope every Baptist Sunday-school in the State will send at least one representative.

DIED.

CREWS—Departed this life at her home in Germanton, Stokes county, N. C., on July 14th, 1894, Mrs. Sue Crews, wife of Rev. R. W. Crews. She was forty-six years old.

Life on earth is a pilgrimage, seeking its goal in some Canaan of rest. Truly the life of Mrs. Crews was a patient pilgrimage toward heaven, and God has taken her into rest eternal. She leaves a husband and seven children who deeply mourn her loss. She was the writer's mother-in-law, and her kindness and motherly love will ever remain deeply engraved on our heart.

Good-by, dear mother, the thread of life is broken,
But thou art not dead, for so the Lord hath spoken.

D. H. PETREE.

BURROUGHS—On the 14th of May, little Emma Laura, daughter of W. H. and C. L. Burroughs, living at Nelson, Durham county, died of scarlet fever, aged five years and two months. She was a most affectionate and lovable child, and her death has cast a deep shadow upon the home where she was the "pet" of all. We thank God for the faith that the parents have in him, and we pray that the Son of Righteousness may rise in their hearts with healing in his wings. May the words of Isaiah 54: 7 comfort them, and the words of the poet be appropriated:

"Good when he gives, supremely good,
N r less when he denies;
E'en crosses from his sovereign hand
Are blessings in disguise."

UNCLE N.

PAGE—Sister Mary Page died July 7th, 1894, at her home in Polk county, in her seventy-eighth year. She was a member of the Baptist church for forty-eight years. For some years before her death she was very much afflicted, yet in all her affliction she complained not, but was very patient, believing that these light afflictions which are but for a moment would work for her a far more and exceeding weight of glory.

In her last moments she was very happy; as she bid her husband and only daughter adieu, with her grandchildren, she told them she was going home. Her house was always a pleasant home for her pastor. She was ready for every good work. May heaven's richest blessings rest on the bereaved husband and daughter and grandchildren in their lonely hours, for surely she will be missed.

PASTOR.

PEDDY—Mrs. Ally Ann Peddy departed this life June 16th, 1894, in Raleigh, N. C., at the age of sixty-six. She was born and reared in Buckhorn township. On Jan. 9th, 1851, she was married to Mr. J. A. Peddy, to whom she was ever a faithful and devoted wife. At an early age she embraced religion and joined the Baptist church at Holly Spring, and remained an honored member until death. As a friend she was kind, sympathetic and steadfast. As a mother, affectionate and self-sacrificing, ever willing to deny herself for her children. Her Christian life was of a quiet and unobtrusive nature; her family and neighbors could always see Christ in her life and knew more of her Christ-like spirit than any one else, and when troubles and misfortunes seemed to troop around her she always bore them patiently without murmuring or complaining. She leaves a devoted husband, five daughters, one son, many relatives and friends to mourn her loss. Her body was brought back to her old home and laid to rest by her former neighbors and friends to await the day when she will arise from her sleep with an incorruptible body in the likeness of her Saviour. May God take the bereaved ones under the shadow of his wings and comfort and keep them to everlasting life and sanctify this dispensation to their good. Look up, bereaved and heart-stricken ones, and trust in Jesus. You will meet her again. She is not dead, but sleepeth. J. D. MARCOM.

Tributes of Respect.

WHEREAS, Our Heavenly Father has called from time to eternity our brother and teacher, Addison Baxter Cashion; and as we desire to record some expression of our feeling, therefore be it

Resolved 1. That while we mourn the sad death of him we loved, we do humbly bow to his will who doeth all things well.

2. That in the death of Baxter our church has lost a faithful worker, both in church and Sunday-school, but we hope to meet him in the blessed home where parting comes no more.

3. That we tender to the bereaved wife and children our heartfelt sympathies, and earnestly pray that God will sustain and be their refuge in their days of trouble.

4. That these resolutions be entered upon the church record, and a copy be sent to the bereaved wife, and to the RECORDER for publication.

Board of Education.

The constitution of the North Carolina Baptist State Convention defines the work of the Board of Education in the following language:

"The Education Board shall, so far as it is able, assist promising and indigent young ministers seeking to prepare themselves for the more efficient preaching of the gospel."

During the past session the Board has aided thirty-three young ministers. From many of the churches contributions have been delayed, and the Board had to close the session $1,000 behind. But we are hoping to be able to meet this, and carry on the good work, giving aid to as many more next session. Shall we be able to do it? Let the brethren answer. The prospect is not very cheering, but, with the blessing of the Lord upon his work, we hope to be able. Let the churches send in their contributions as soon as they can. The year is more than half gone, and a great many of the churches have not yet been heard from. The Associations all over the State will soon meet in their annual session. That would be a very opportune time for the churches to send up their contributions to the Board. Let all the pastors throughout the State see that their churches have an opportunity of making such contributions to aid the Lord's poor ministers as he may put it into their hearts to give. Will you not take one collection a year? See that the brethren have an opportunity to do what they will for the Master. Let them do something for Jesus' sake, and let it be so reported in your minutes.

Hamlet, N. C.

Never before, in the memory of the present inhabitants, has so much interest been aroused in religious matters, as during a protracted meeting which has just been brought to a close at the Baptist church here.

The meeting was conducted throughout by the Rev. Mr. Wright of Peachland and, unassisted, he labored earnestly and successfully, for God blessed his work in a remarkable manner. The services commenced on Sunday, June 24th, and terminated the following Sunday, after morning service. Never before has the church been so filled with persons thoroughly aroused to a true sense of their spiritual needs, and many were converted and enabled to profess their faith in a loving Saviour.

This awakening has put new life into the Baptist church here, and a Sunday-school, prayer meeting and other services have been commenced with every prospect of an increasing interest in religious work. F. R.

At Last.

Dear Recorder:—We are so glad to tell you that at last our church has a pastor, and the one on whom our hearts were fixed from the hour we first heard him preach. On last Sunday we called Bro. W. C. Newton for the second time, with a full and unanimous vote as at first. Then he had reasons for declining, but now God has opened the way for him to accept, for which we give thanks.

Our church is in a better condition now at any time since Bro. Day was taken from us, and we are so attached to our dear young pastor. We have regulated our finances now by the assessment plan, and it works satisfactorily with all. Some little debts have been lifted, and we see smooth sailing for the future.

Our protracted meeting begins on the fifth Sunday in this month, and we expect a glorious revival, for it is already started. On last Sunday night our pastor preached a thrilling and searching sermon from the text, "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." At the close of the sermon, Christians stood up and pledged themselves to work for Jesus, and several of the unconverted asked our prayers. We feel that God is with us, and blessing us with heaped up measure.

Bro. Doughton's Statement Corroborated.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I see in the RECORDER of July 4th a statement from Bro. J. H. Doughton of Alleghany county, N. C., relative to our Baptist work at that place. I can heartily endorse all that Bro. Doughton says as to the needs and prospects of that field.

I lived in that county and preached for that people for four years and must say that I have never found a better people in all my work. When I began my work there, almost the entire people were solid anti missionary of the extreme type. But now more than half of them are very liberal in their views and friendly toward our people.

This is a hard field only in one respect, financially. I would have been on that field now had it been possible for me to have supported my family. If some consecrated young man could feel it in his heart to go to that work and let the Board do what it could for him, the good brethren and sisters certainly would give him a good support, and in a short time he would be gratified at the abundant harvest of souls that the Lord would give him.

Our Baptist brethren there can be relied on. They certainly have been tried. Four years ago it was very unpopular to be a Missionary Baptist in that county. But through all his years Senator W. C. Fields has stood as a beacon light. Bro. J. H. Doughton, father of Lieutenant Governor R. A. Doughton, is full of zeal for our work, and there are the Cheeks, Wagoners, Jones's, and others who are ready to help in every good word and work.

Yes, it is a good place for a good man. May the good Lord send the right man.

D. J. HARRIS.

President Debs of the American Railway Union and forty-three of his associates in the recent great strike have been indicted for their action in the strike. Mr. Debs, declining to give bail, is in jail. The strike is entirely over. We do not think Mr. Debs can be held responsible for the effects of the strike.

For comfort, for improvement of the complexion, use only Poxsoni's Powder; there is nothing equal to it.

Cancer---His Only Hope.

DEAR SIRS:—About eleven months ago I bought an Electropoise from you for treating cancer; I had one of about ten years' standing. It had reached a stage where it was making rapid progress, being about the size of a silver dollar. I knew that I had to do something or my time was about up, and you were the only parties that would give me any assurance of a cure.

I am now happy to inform you that the cancer is no more; the Electropoise arrested its progress perceptibly in a few days, and it gradually and slowly grew less until now there is only a place the size of a pin head, and it is gradually disappearing.

Yours truly,
M. M. LILLIBRIDGE.

AN EXTRAORDINARY OPPORTUNITY!

$4.80 Worth of Sheet Music,
Best Book on Hypnotism,
75 Complete Stories, neatly bound,
Our Monthly for one year,

Transportation all prepaid,

} All for 50c. to every person answering this advertisem't

And also a Fine Watch Free, as a present, to the persons sending each thirtieth answer received from day to day in reply to this advertisement.

IS THIS POSSIBLE? YES, IT IS TRUE!

☞ We repeat: For 50 cents, received from you, we send you the $4.80 WORTH OF SHEET MUSIC, the best BOOK ON HYPNOTISM, also 75 COMPLETE STORIES, neatly bound, and our household monthly for one year; and besides that, we make a present to the sender of each thirtieth answer to this advertisement of a fine watch (ladies' or gents', as desired) of excellent appearance and workmanship (regular price, $7), absolutely free.

THE MUSIC is strictly first-class, new, copyrighted, regular 40 cent sheet music, printed in the finest manner on a superior quality of paper, with engraved title. (Publisher's price, 40 cents a sheet.) It does not consist of old or hackneyed pieces, but of perfectly new copyrighted pieces, which will be sent to our subscribers monthly, as published. As the newest pieces will be included, it is impossible to give the titles in advance, but it will comprise the latest and best vocal and instrumental pieces by the leading composers. When you see this music you will be filled with wonder at our being able to furnish it for less than several dollars. If you want to see it before accepting our offer, a sample sheet will be sent for 10 cents.

THE BOOK ON HYPNOTISM is a complete exposition of the wonderful and mysterious sciences of Mesmerism, Hypnotism, Clairvoyance and Mind Reading, and explains the secrets of these peculiar sciences so clearly and forcibly that those things which to most people have appeared strange, unreal, mysterious and supernatural, are made as plain as the light of day.

THE 75 COMPLETE STORIES, neatly bound, are a collection of the most excellent and absorbing stories of love, heroism and exciting adventure.

Was so much good value ever offered anywhere for so small a sum? Here you have a supply of fresh and splendid music for a year, and an attractive supply of tip top reading for the same period, all for the small sum of 50 cents, and then you may be one of those who will receive the watches as well. That is an important thing for you to remember. We are anxious to double our subscription list within 60 days, and we have realized that a supreme effort is required, in view of the dullness of the times. If you do not already grasp the magnitude of our offer, please read it again and "take it in." Let us hear from you at once. If you can get up a club of thirty persons to join in answering this advertisement you thereby make sure of the watch, as one of the latter is presented to the sender of each thirtieth answer or subscription. The thirty subscriptions can all be sent in one letter to us. Each subscriber in such a club of course receives each and every one of the premiums mentioned above.

You need not cut out this advertisement. Simply state that you accept our offer and enclose 50 cts. Save this advertisement, as it is our contract with you, which we will carry out in every particular.

Reader, we ask you to favor us with your own immediate response. Your particular individual support is worth much to us. Address, HOMES AND HEARTHS PUBLISHING CO., No. 21 Park Row, New York.

REV. Z. C. TAYLOR.

A WALL OF PROTECTION

Against Disease in Far-off Brazil.

Rev. Z. C. Taylor, Missionary of the Southern Baptist Convention to Brazil, writes of Germetuer: "I consider it a wall of protection against disease, and a sure guarantee of health and happiness. Since I first took Germetuer three years ago my health has been almost perfect. I work incessantly, and can stand myself as much as a native."

Rev. Mr. Taylor's location is at Bahia, almost under the equator, on the Atlantic coast. It is the home of Malaria and all those malignant forms of disease that are born of it. Here, as in all other places of like character, Germetuer has signally triumphed. It is the Great Conqueror of malaria in all its forms and in all places. Will break any fever in less time than Quinine or Antipyrine and leave none of their unpleasant effects, such as nervousness, nausea and prostration. And then it is so good to take that even little children soon learn to cry for it.

Two prisoners escaped from the Alexander county jail on the 19th. This thing is becoming epidemic.

A largely attended public meeting in the interest of good roads was held at Chapel Hill the 24th and 25th inst.

The preliminary investigation into the murder of Miss Wimberly in Wake county revealed some sensational facts. It is now suspected that Miss Wimberly's father was a party to her death, and that others of the family were implicated.

The joint committee from the House and Senate, appointed to adjust the differences of these two bodies on that subject in order that some law might be substituted for the now prevailing McKinley act, have announced their failure to agree; and it appears that it will be quite a time before this Congress removes the law, which not long ago it denounced as a robbery. President Cleveland has written a strong and commendable letter to Hon. W. L. Wilson urging speedy action and manfully suggesting that the pledges of the dominant party be upheld; that raw material be admitted free and tariffs levied for revenue only as pledged. On Monday, Senator Gorman of Maryland made an impassioned speech, severely criticising the course of the President in writing the letter referred to, and affirming that the liberty of the Senate had been attacked, but would be maintained notwithstanding. He made public the result of conferences held with the President and Mr. Carlisle, which were not in harmony with the President's letter. He closed his speech by saying that the Senate bill would have to be passed—that or nothing. If Senator Gorman's statements are correct, tariff legislation by the present Congress is doubtful.

From Waxhaw, N. C.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I suppose a few words from the border line will not be out of order. I serve two churches, Waxhaw and Hermon, just on this side the line; one, Pleasant Valley, just across the line, but I never see the line as I go from place to place in the work.

The work on my field is in good condition. I never was more hopeful in my work than at present. At Waxhaw the congregations are large, the church alive, prayer meetings well attended and a general good feeling and spirituality seems to prevail.

We received seven members at Hermon last Sunday. The brethren at this place are hopeful. Large congregations attend preaching service. Hermon is certainly on the up grade. I preach at two mission points on Sunday afternoons and have good congregations at both places. The people seem anxious to hear the gospel as Baptist preach it.

There were two professions at Pleasant Valley on the first Sunday night; both will join the church at our next meeting.

We all regret losing Bro. M. A. Adams from our Association he has proved himself to be a good companion and brother, and a zealous and enerjetic worker among us; his work in Monroe will long be felt and remembered by the Monroe church.

I heartily endorse Dr. Taylor's articles on education, and have ordered a number of them for distribution.

Money is scarce and times are close, but people have ceased in a measure to complain, and are strugling manfully and faithfully trusting in God for deliverance. We have strong opposition in the work at places, the Lord seems to encourage us and bid us undismayed go on.

God bless you and the RECORDER; you have a grand mission before you.

Yours in Christ,

A. B. CAUDLE.

Cedar Rock Academy & Business Institute.
(MALE AND FEMALE,)
is located in Franklin Co., N. C., 12 miles east of Louisburg. Unsurpassed for health and refinement. Situated in the country, it is free from the objectionable features of city and town schools. Good board in 300 yds. of the Academy at $7 per month (28 days.) There are two regular boarding houses, one for young men, the other for young ladies, besides a number of private homes in which board can be had. Girls who board are required to board with the principal, unless otherwise requested by parent or guardian.

A FULL CORPS OF EFFICIENT TEACHERS. Commercial instruction is a specialty. Diplomas are awarded to those who complete the commercial course as prescribed in catalogue. There is great demand for young men of a business education.

MUSIC, both instrumental and vocal, holds a prominent place in our school. We keep posted as to the requirements for matriculation in the different colleges of the State, and so direct the courses of those who expect to attend college that they may take good stands in their classes. For those who wish to prepare for teaching in public schools we arrange a special course looking towards that end. Our school is not for young men who wish to play the dude, nor for young ladies who wish to be society belles and pass their time in idleness, but for those who are earnestly desirous of a practical business education, or of sufficient preparation to enter colleges.

What Time is It?

What time is it!
Time to do well—
Time to live better—
Give up that grudge—
Answer that letter—
Speak that kind word to sweeten a sorrow;
Do that good deed you would leave till to-morrow.
Time to try hard
In that new situation—
Time to build upon
A solid foundation.
Giving up needlessly changing and drifting;
Leaving the quick sands that ever are shifting.

What time is it!
Time to be earnest,
Laying up treasure;
Time to be thoughtful,
Choosing true pleasure.
Loving stern justice—of truth being fond,
Making your word just as good as your bond.
Time to be happy,
Doing your best—
Time to be trustful,
Leaving the rest,
Knowing, in whatever country or clime,
Ne'er can we call back one minute of time.

Rings and Their Symbolisms.

When young Russian girls are anxious to know if they will be married (and what young girl is not anxious to know that?), several of them assemble, each wearing a ring. A large basket of corn is brought in, and each girl drops her ring in carefully, stirring up the corn the while. Then a hungry hen is introduced, and whichever maiden's ring is first discovered will be the first one married.

In the marshes of the North Sea coast it was formerly customary in Germany for the bride-groom to give the bride, on the day of betrothal, instead of a ring, a valuable coin, called "Echle," or genuine, as a pledge that the compact between them was binding. This is also a remnant of the time when wives were acquired by right of purchase; and the custom is still prevalent in some isolated places.

Among un-christianized nations betrothal rings are unknown. For example, a Mohammedan, instead of giving his bride a ring, bestows on her a "Maschkass," or square amulet of pure gold, which the girl hangs around her neck. In India a small amulet is worn by a woman as a badge of marriage. It generally consists of many colored beads, and is about as large around as a bracelet; but there must be some gold in it, however little. An amulet ring of the fifteenth century, discovered some eighty years ago in England, was supposed to guarantee its wearer against all evil. In the middle is the figure of Christ, with the five holy wounds, from which ooze drops of blood. The surrounding inscription are: "The well of everlasting life," "The well of mercy," "The well of comfort," "The well of grace."

Among the Anglo-Saxons the ring was worn only by the bride or wife, on whose right hand it was placed at the betrothal, being transferred to the left hand at the marriage ceremony. The ring adorned with death's heads is a masterpiece of the Italian goldsmith's art in the sixteenth century.—Home and Country.

A Cold Water Story.

Somewhere lives a farmer of such social habits that his coming home intoxicated was once no unusual thing. His wife urged him in vain to reform. "Why," he would say, "I don't like to break off at once; it ain't wholesome. The best way is always to get used to a thing by degrees, you know." "Very well, old man," his helpmeet would rejoin, "see now if you don't fall into a hole one of these days, when you can't take care of yourself, and no body near to take you out." Sure enough, as if to verify the prophecy, a couple of days after, returning from a glorious frolic, the old fellow reeled into his own well, and, after a deal of useless scrambling, shouted for "the light of his eyes" to come and help him out.

"Didn't I tell you so?" said the good soul, showing her cap frill over the edge of the parapet. "You've got into a hole at last, and its only lucky I'm in hearing, or you might have drowned." "Well," she continued after a pause, letting down the bucket, "take hold." And up he came, higher at every turn of the windlass, until, the old lady's grasp slipping from the handle, down he went to the bottom again. This occurring more than once made the temporary occupant of the well suspicious. "Look here," he screamed in fury at the last splash, "you're doing that on purpose. I know you are."

"Well, now I am," responded his old woman tranquilly, while winding him up once more; "didn't you tell me it's best to get used to a thing by degrees? I'm 'fraid if I was to bring you right up on a sudden, you wouldn't find it wholesome."

The old fellow could not help chuckling at her application of his principle, and protested that he would sign the pledge on the instant if she would lift him fairly out. This she did, and packed him off to "swear in," wet as he was.—Young People's Leader.

Plowing.

A writer in an agricultural paper on the subject of "Plowing," says:

"Observations are, that many farmers follow the old custom of plowing around a field, no difference what its size, or dimensions; along the fences will be a ridge of good soil which produces little else but weeds, there will be turning places in from the corners, and a dead furrow in its usual place, and maybe made a little larger by surface water; on the whole, it presents a negligent way of farming. Yes, it has its advantages; one does not have to start new lands or try to make a straight furrow across the field; perhaps but little time is lost in turning, and no thought is given how it will finish up. Here is my way of doing one of the most important pieces of work on the farm: Have fields large as practicable with fences parallel, leave a strip of grass along fence, fourteen feet wide; make it in hay, which avoids a hideous weed row along the fence and leaves room for turning on hard ground. Make back furrows twelve steps from edge, plow till finished; start next back furrow thirty-six steps from edge of plowing; plow till land is twenty-four steps wide, then plow the land left between, keeping furrows straight so that the last round will complete the dead furrow the whole length of field; use riding plow; do not plow across the ends. The widths of lands are sometimes varied a little to fit the field. Then next year, when land is to be plowed, commence with back furrow in the old dead furrows and the land can be finished up in nice shape. The advantages are, land kept in better shape, none tramped down in turning, a good place to turn at the ends on hard ground, and when one adopts this way he will take pains with his work and pride in it if he never did before. Are riding plows harder on horses than walking plows? No, not if properly managed. I do not use a riding plow for the sake of the ride, as I walk a majority of the time, but I can do better work with them, keeping furrows even depths on turning a furrow up hill, or if a hard place, or if trash gathers on shin of plow, it is not affected by it. Keep plow sharp, draw it out cold every day when in use and about once a week take to the blacksmith; keep coulter sharp; use sixteen inch, run it nearly as deep as plow goes, setting it one third inch more land than plow does. Have plow adjusted to turn furrow wrong side up (not merely set it on the edge) then all manure, stalks, stubble trash and weed seeds are put in bottom of furrow out of way of cultivating next crop."

Flowers are Safeguards

I have tried to get men and women interested in them, because I knew how much pleasure could be gotten from them, and what benefit comes to mind and body from a study of them. It affords me great satisfaction to know that I have succeeded in making some lives brighter by what I have said, and I hope to accomplish still more in this direction. I would be glad to see a flower in the window of every home in the land. Where flowers come in bad thoughts and acts go out to a great degree, for the two cannot live happily together. A flower in the window is a safeguard against much of the unhappiness that makes many homes what no true home ought to be. Therefore, I say to all, have a flower in the window. But the main objection of this paper is to urge those who can afford it to have a place—a home—made expressly for their plants, in other words, to build a small greenhouse which shall be attached to the living room, if possible, where the growing flowers may be constantly enjoyed, and in which plants may be grown in larger quantities and greater variety than is possible in the window of the sitting room, and to better advantage in all ways, because in such a place the requirements of the plants may be met, and conditions to satisfactory growth secured as they never can be in the ordinary room.—Central Baptist.

EFFECTUAL.—Charles J. Booth, Olivewood, Cal., says: "I have used Ayer's pills in my family for several years, and have always found them most effectual in the relief of ailments arising from a disordered stomach, torpid liver, and constipated bowels.

A Few Things to Avoid.

Never call on people just at bedtime, nor during dinner, nor before they are downstairs in the morning.

Never stop people who are hurrying along the street and detain them for ten or twenty minutes.

Never, when you see two people engaged in earnest talk, step in and enter upon a miscellaneous conversation.

Never begin to talk about "this, that and everything" to one who is trying to read the morning paper, or a book, or anything else.

Never fail to keep an appointment.

Never inconvenience people by coming in late at church, lecture or concert.

Never delay in answering letters or returning books.

Never tell long stories of which you yourself are the hero.

Never speak disrespectfully of your parents nor of your sisters. People may laugh at your wit, but they will despise you for it.

Never talk when others are singing or doing anything else for your amusement, and never, the instant they have finished, begin to talk upon a different topic.—Baltimorean.

Waiter! Beefsteak, Ham and Eggs, for One.

"God gave us meat, but the devil sent us cooks," is a trite saying. From bad cooking, fast eating and overeating, comes a whole train of diseases—indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness, catarrh of the stomach, dizziness, and the like. God also gave us a brainy man, who compounded the "Golden Medical Discovery," a corrective of all the ills resulting from overeating and bad blood. Dr. Pierce of Buffalo has furnished in the "Discovery," a great desideratum in America, where everybody are in such a hurry to make money, they have no time to eat, and scarcely any time to live. It invigorates the liver, cleanses the blood and tones up the system.

Delicate diseases of either sex, however induced, speedily and permanently cured. Book of particulars 10 cents in stamps, mailed sealed in plain envelope. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Get Sleep Enough

A person may need nine hours' sleep out of the twenty-four without being either lazy or foolish. Indeed, he is a wise man if, feeling that he requires them, he is sensible enough to take them. Goethe, when performing his great literary feats, took nine hours' sleep. A full grown adult, in a healthy condition, will seldom require more than eight. If, however, he discovers that he is not sufficiently refreshed by eight hours, he should take more. It is a pretty safe rule to sleep as long as you are sleepy. "There are people," says a writer, "who are wise enough to eat when they are hungry, but who have never attained that higher reach of wisdom to sleep when they are sleepy." Unless you are a very lazy person, indeed, you are not likely to take more sleep than your constitution requires; for, of course, dawdling in bed is not sleeping.—Scientific American.

A Good Summer Drink.

Good lemonade is one of the most perfect drinks ever devised. I can hardly understand why it is not in daily use in place of tea or coffee, and why it does not drive out every kind of alcoholic drink. Perfect lemonade is made as follows:

For a quart, take the juice of three lemons, using the rind of one of them. Carefully peel the rind very thin, getting just the yellow outside; cut this into pieces, and put with the juice and powdered sugar, of which use two ounces to a quart, in a jug or jar with a cover. When the water is just at the boiling point, pour it over the lemon and sugar, cover at once, and let it get cold. Try this way once, and see if it is not delicious.—Advocate.

It is faith's work to claim and challenge loving kindness out of all the roughest strokes of God.—L. Rutherford.

A WRECK

of the physical constitution often comes from unnatural, pernicious habits, contracted through ignorance or from excesses. Such habits result in loss of manly power, nervous exhaustion, nervous debility, impaired memory, low spirits, irritable temper, and a thousand and one derangements of mind and body. Epilepsy, paralysis, softening of the brain and even dread insanity sometimes result from such reckless self-abuse.

To reach, reclaim and restore such unfortunates to health and happiness, is the aim of the publishers of a book written in plain but chaste language, on the nature, symptoms and curability, by home treatment, of such diseases. This book will be sent sealed, in plain envelope, on receipt of ten cents in stamps to pay postage.

IN A limited experience we have never examined a catalog of an educational institution that didn't make an excellent showing, or that was not written amid most favorable prospects; and we were not at all amazed in a hasty perusal of the 'Second Annual Catalog of the State Normal and Industrial School.' Although the President of the School has, after newspaper "write-ups" of the annual exercises had been freely sent out, declared that the institution is so crowded that he cannot advertise, we hope he will not hold aught against us for thanking him for his catalog and advancing a timid thought or two suggested by the same.

As one contemplates the "history of the institution," how that this body of folks and that petitioned for its organization, and how that wise men composed the legislature in those unfortunate years, one feels the influence of some awful presence, seeing that it overcame great and persistent opposition, and now has reached such a height that the laws of this sovereign State are but flexible words to it, that it may twist them to its will and proudly boast the exploit. The author of the catalog does not hesitate to write in one paragraph the words of the statute, "The objects of this institution shall be (1) to give young women such education as shall fit them for teaching; (2) to give instruction to young women in drawing, telegraphy, typewriting, stenography, and such other industrial arts as may be suitable to their sex and conducive to their support and usefulness,"—and in the paragraph that follows what the institution does do, namely, "endeavors to give such education as will add to the efficiency of the average woman's work in whatever walk of life her lot may be cast * * and to meet the needs (all the needs) of the young women of North Carolina." Does the law quoted above sanction the catalog's statement? Is the president of the school one put above the law, that for this "therefore" and that, and this whim and that ambition, he may pervert it.

There are many interesting statements that we cannot notice for want of space. Of the 391 students, nearly one-third are paying their own way, nearly two-thirds would have attended no other North Carolina college, and four-fifths received their preparation partially or entirely in public schools, if you take the statement of the catalog for it. Of course all these are neither teachers nor are they pursuing the industrial arts: they are there because it is cheap, because perversion of the law costs them nothing; nor is it chargeable to them.

After all the tabulated statements of the character of work the students' parents are inclined to do, and other data, that we can prepare now for the next catalog just as satisfactorily, it is nowhere signified what studies the various students are pursuing: we have to imagine how many hours a day they devote to work, and towards what degree they have worked, or whether they have worked at all. Surely we are not surprised at this omission by one who dares to openly distort the written law, and of whom the student's characterization of the late Oxford professor seems so pertinent—

> Here come I, Professor Jowett,
> There's no knowledge but I know it;
> I'm the master of this college,
> What I don't know isn't knowledge.

We have nothing depreciatory to say of the general work of the school. We have heard many good reports; and evidences of its popularity are numerous. This, however, does not prevent us from holding that its present conduct is contrary to law, and that it is founded on the wrong principle.

IT WOULD be easy to persuade a credulous person that the christeners of our Capital city were gifted of prophecy. The uninterrupted complaisance of all that dwell within hearing of the ceaseless humdrum of its persistent pursuit of the "even tenor," often reminds us of the story of good and gallant Sir Walter pegging away at some doggerel lines on the eve of his execution, with the same mental abstraction that he manifested in a characteristic effort to colonize the United States with men only.

Our little Capital has had to struggle quite manfully to contain itself of late, however, under the proddings of representatives of the criminal, political and social world. There have been several sensational crimes near its gates, and of course the culprits were jailed and their trials held within them. This has been withstood and even a jail breaking besides did not break its even tenor. There has been, also, a monument corner-stone laying, and the usual fuss as to its locality and other particulars. Then, too, an entire colony of folks was fever stricken, but with the exception of a musicale and a lawn-party or so for their benefit, the even tenor was unaffected. A newspaper has failed since, the street cars are running, there are several political conventions and a hanging in the near future, and we would not yet have shuffled off our even tenor had not an infinitely tasteful and blindly subservient tool of etiquette promulged the dictum that it will be 'awfully bad form' if we do not rustle around and raise $1,000 with which to buy a punch bowl for a naval vessel that our government has seen fit to name Raleigh, without even so much as asking our permission. What troublous times! When may not good form demand that we donate another thousand to some one that names oneself after us! When will reasonable people begin to consult reason and rise up against the idiots who follow good form and good taste? The eminent good taste of our punch-bowl donors will be shocked and mortified and their assumed authority over reason defied and reviled if the matter is left to sensible folks; and in the meantime Raleigh will have regained its even tenor, we fondly hope; and the Raleigh will "paddle its own canoe."

THE recent favorable vote upon the matter in the House of Representatives signifies that it is only a question of time that United States Senators will be elected by the people,—about the beginning of the next century, we presume. In this connexion it is interesting to note the lately assumed attitude of the English people toward the House of Lords. The cry for its abolition was very strong in some quarters several months ago, but since the advent of a lord to the head of the ministry not much has been said. That it will eventually be elected by the people as the commoners are now, is, too, a question only of time. And when the time does come the established church will lose its strongest ally and begin its career toward disestablishment.

The human race has never been so full of thinking beings as it is now. Europeans and Americans are reasoning as they never have; and in the enthusiasm consequent upon realization of their ability and freedom to think and do, many are going too far,—a great deal farther than they reason. Hence we have idealists, socialists, and the like. But that the extensive freedom of thought and speech in which men are indulging and in wide realization that any one may dare do what one thinks right, regardless of greatness or smallness, is a most wholesome condition, cannot be denied; for the more possible it becomes the more probably will the people rule. We may not care to think it, but it is a truth that there have been times when people should not have had voice in the direction of affairs because they knew nothing of them and were unreasoning.

IT SEEMS to us that half a dozen land and immigration companies have recently been organized with an eye single to development and enrichment of our resourceful Southland. Surely there will be hundreds of similar organizations 'when prosperity returns,' which is evidence that part of the world thinks that some guileless Southrons are still daft on development. For ourselves we have quite enough of development companies, and, incidentally, all other enterprises that would make us rich in a week or two. Philanthropy has not run wild since history began to be written, and the prophet who hints that it will in the next several centuries, is entirely without honor in these parts. Land companies, howsoever luminous their advertisements, howsoever glowingly roseate the prospects of their paper cities, "corner lots near the postoffice, on the street-car line," etc., are organized in quest of dollars; and their consciences don't keep them 'wake o' nights' if they color the mental picture of their property or sell one some thousands of dollars worth of prospects which somehow never become realty. Land companies are not philanthropic; nor are other companies, so far as we know. Be sure in all your dealings that if you deal with an honest man he is going to get full value for his goods; that if by reason of his poverty you make him sell cheaply, you are oppressive and unjust; and that the man who is going to make you rich "for a song" would sing the song and get himself rich were he not a fraud. Don't expect more than your money's worth, whether the seller tells you "it's worth it's weight in gold," your last chance to get a bargain, or any other of the hundreds of trite falsehoods that mark a man who has something on his hands that he wishes to be rid of.

WE DISLIKE to speak of the tariff matter just now as it may be determined at any time and in an entirely different shape from that which we anticipate; but we cannot refrain from showing how two great trusts, unjust in their inception as they were, are preparing to reap great profit from the law, if it passes as sanctioned by the shameless Senate. By the Senate proposition a tariff of a cent and a half would be levied on all raw sugar imported. Anticipating this, the Sugar Trust is importing as much sugar as possible before the law goes into effect, escaping this tariff, in order that it may sell when the law is operating at an advance to the amount of the tariff, claiming that it had to be paid. That is, instead of going to the government, the tariff on this sugar goes to the Trust. In May 438,000,000 pounds of raw sugar were imported, and a great deal more in June. The operations of the whiskey trust are similar. The Senate bill increases the tax on whiskey twenty cents per gallon. In view of this the trust pays the tax on 100,000,000 gallons of whiskey before the bill is enacted, and saves $20,000,000.

Knowing these things the clear duty of Congress is to prevent their consummation by enacting the Wilson bill or some measure in keeping with the promise and policy of the dominant party. Failing this duty, it will fail of the votes of the people. It is a pitiable thing to be fatal to one's self.

Co-Education.

A Letter Written by Request to Dr. Thomas H. Pritchard, Charlotte, N. C., by R. C. Burleson, D. D., President of Baylor University of Texas.

[ABRIDGED.]

My Dear Brother:—I am glad you request me to give my "experience" and not my theory on co-education, for experience, as old fashioned Baptists and Lord Bacon have taught, is worth a thousand theories and is the only foundation of true philosophy and true religion. And as I am the pioneer co educator in the South, and Baylor University at Waco the second co education University in America, I trust my "experience" will shed light on this great educational problem. I will therefore, a "round unvarnished tale deliver" of my whole "experience" in co-education.

In 1840, at seventeen years of age, I entered Nashville University. I found the learned President and Professors and the discipline all running in the old grooves of the fifteenth century. Hence the idea of a female student in Nashville University would have been absurd.

In 1846 I entered the great Theological Institution at Covington, Ky. Here I learned that the Oberlin College, Ohio, admitted females into their college classes to recite with young men. I exclaimed "Why nearly half the boys in Nashville University were crazy about the pretty girls in Dr. Lapsey's Seminary when they only saw them on Sunday promenading the streets or standing in the windows, and what will they do if the beautiful black curls and eyes are waving and sparkling in the same class-rooms every hour in the day?" But the Ohio students, and especially one who had been educated at Oberlin, declared there was less loving, better order and more hard study in Oberlin than at any other college in the State.

I eagerly asked how such an enormity ever happened, and was informed that the great, wise and practical merchants of London in 1825 became disgusted with the unnatural separation of their sons and daughters during their education in the University. The sons came home often coarse and immoral in their habits. The daughters came home wanting in neatness, modesty and full of slang. And from the entire separation of the sexes during their education and the formative period of life they were fearfully ignorant of each other. All they knew had been learned from novels, ballrooms and theaters; hence many fearful mistakes were made in marriages, resulting often in disgraceful divorces and even worse.

To correct these fearful evils, the London merchants founded London University under the wise leadership of the great Dr. Cox of Hackney. They founded it in the twofold interest of dissenters and co education. Here their sons and daughters being educated together, formed an intimate knowledge of each other and were prepared to form such marriages as would promote a life of harmony and love. I was informed, also, that Dr. Finney, the agent of Oberlin College, visited London in 1833. These London merchants, the wisest men in practical affairs on the planet, promised him about fifty thousand pounds if he would make Oberlin co educational, and let the problem of co education be tested on both sides of the Atlantic.

But I, having been moulded in the old grooves, revolted at the novelty of mixing young men and young ladies in the same University classes. In 1848 I became pastor of the Baptist church in the city of Houston, the same year I visited Baylor University at Independence, with only the preparatory classes then organized. I saw a number of beautiful young ladies, one of whom was Miss Georgia Jenkins, now Mrs. Burleson, reciting Latin, French, and Higher Mathematics in the same classes with young men, all in perfect propriety. In 1851 I was elected President to save the infant University from ruin. I accepted on four conditions:

First: Was that the sexes be separated and placed in different classes and buildings, located on two beautiful hills a half mile apart, with a beautiful little stream afterwards called "Jordan" rolling between. Some of the strong, common-sense Trustees urged that a separation of the sexes would double the expense and the number of teachers, and that the young men and ladies had recited in the same classes for six years, with the greatest propriety and mutual advantage, and they would regret any change, at least till we had more buildings and larger endowment. But I was unalterably wedded to the old monkish medieval theory of separate education. I told them there were but two Universities in the world—Oberlin, Ohio, and London, England—that permitted co education, and that Baylor University would become an object of ridicule if it admitted females after it adopted the University curriculum and regular College classes. That what had been proper in the preparatory schools would be wholly out of place in the University then to be organized. Out of deference to my strong convictions the sexes were separated, and the male and female departments placed half a mile apart. But alas! I soon saw that separation did not separate. Our wall of partition, though vigilantly guarded, proved to be only a brush fence which tore the clothes and consciences of young men and ladies in climbing over. Our "Jordan" was not a hard road to travel by day or by night. Ever hollow stump and hole in the ground was a postoffice box. Every day-scholar, it seemed, was a mail-carrier. As I ever considered candor and openheartedness the crowning jewels of womanhood and essential to the highest purity of heart, I was appalled. I appealed with tears to the female teachers to use greater diligence in preventing these evils, but alas! the teachers who had the greatest experience said, "It cannot be corrected." I felt if this be so, our then policy was well nigh a curse, for whatever impairs the immaculate purity of woman degrades the nation. My wife, witnessing my agony of soul and sleepless nights, said: "When I was a student of Baylor University before going to the Judson Institute in Alabama, we all studied and recited in the same rooms and classes, and there was ten times less foolish sentimentality and love and ten times more hard study than at present. The young men and young ladies saw so much of each other they became usual, and our whole ambition was to stand head in all of our classes. Beaux and fine dresses were never dreamed of. I never saw girls crazy about boys until I went to the great female college in Alabama. There nearly every girl had her 'feller,' slipping notes and exchanging glances with the college boys on the streets and in the church it was almost universal. I was told I must have a 'feller' or I would be out of fashion. I told them I came to the Judson to study, but they replied, 'Oh! it is so nice to have a feller to think about and look at.'"

I saw at once the key-note of the whole situation. I saw, as never before, the truth of Paul's declaration, that law when it cannot be enforced causes sin to abound. I saw in reality that "distance lends enchantment to the view," and common, daylight, intimate association utterly dispels that enchantment and gives a sober, sensible view. I saw that young men and ladies, when in the ardor of youth, only see each other at church, on promenade and on examination, all in full dress, are seized with enchantment.

I remember how few young men and ladies I had ever known to grow up and be educated in the same neighborhood and marry. It was always a new man or new young lady, and in such cases they are usually carried away with pretty black eyes, pretty curls, a mustache or some foolish display of dress and not real character. I found also that the boys and girls that made the greatest display in dress attracted the most attention, hence there was a craze for dress and display, while modesty, intelligence and real worth were at a fearful discount.

I saw the only remedy for all these evils was that adopted by the London merchants. I saw also that the family, the great model school adopted by God himself, was co-education, and that brothers and sisters were educated in the same co-educational school. I realized that if young men and young ladies recited in the same classes, met daily in the same chapel, and heard the daily reports of every student's conduct and scholarship, they would form a perfect estimate of each other's character, and all foolish sentimentality would pass away. I called together our whole Faculty, and laid all these facts before them, also my plan for their removal. I requested them to get all the facts and reflect profoundly on the question, and see if we could not adopt a system of education more in harmony with human nature and for the highest benefit of our sons and daughters.

We had the case under profound examination for months. I wrote to the Faculty of Oberlin, Ohio, for catalogues and historical facts.

In this laborious research we found that the great Bologna University, the greatest in medieval times, in 1525 adopted co education, and graduated young men and young ladies in the same classes, that many young ladies completed the entire curriculum, and some took the degrees of law and medicine. But the Pope of Rome issued a special bull or decree and abolished co education. We found his infallible decree was based on three great infallible falsehoods:

(1) Woman needs very little education, only a little music, painting, "dress and address";

(2) Woman's intellect is too feeble to recite with her brother;

(3) The sexes corrupt one another.

All of which are infallibly false. Woman does need education and high mental training to fit her to be the companion and counsellor of man, and to mould her children to become noble men and women. Woman can compete with man in the same recitation, and when the Bible refers to her as the weaker vessel it refers to the body and not the soul. And as God says, "It is not good for man to be alone," the Pope of Rome is guilty of a libel on God's holy Word in saying, "The sexes corrupt one another." Besides, the experience of the whole world demonstrates that the association of the sexes, under prudent restriction, always elevates man in morality and manliness, and woman in modesty, neatness and loveliness.

Our Faculty, after weighing all these facts, were profoundly penetrated with the conviction that co education was right. And that it was as unwise to follow the bull of the Pope against co education as it would be to accept the decree of the no less foolish and infallible Pope who commanded Galileo to kneel down before the cross and swear that "the earth is flat and the sun runs around it every day."

Our Faculty and I about this time, finding that Independence would become isolated and inaccessible by being left off all the railroads, resolved to remove our educational interests to the flourishing city of Waco. And we rejoiced at the opportunity of adopting and testing co-education and founding the pioneer co-education University in the South.

The Board of Trustees of Waco University were men eminent for strong common sense and readily accepted our plan of co education, but many good citizens of Waco and throughout Texas opposed co-education as violently as the contemporaries of Galileo, Columbus, Newton, Fulton and Morse did at first their grand discoveries. Five of our wealthiest citizens at Waco waited on me and said kindly, "Unless you abandon that absurd and novel plan of co-education, we will erect a new building and commence such a University as Waco needs."

We told them kindly nothing could swerve us from our purpose, and that all grand discoveries and new plans were denounced as visionary, and that co-education would become universal in fifty years. Our friends erected a house, got a learned man to take charge of their school, and for a time drew off many students and did us much injury, but it soon collapsed. They then united their influence on a Military College, which soon went the same way. The Presidents of all the leading Colleges in Texas denounced co education as visionary and full of evil consequences. But we moved quietly onward and upward, and the light was spreading far and wide, dispelling the dark clouds of prejudice. And after thirty-three years we have increased to twenty-seven professors and 859 students.

Of the leading Universities of the world 192 have joined in the grand march of progress. Among them, such Universities as Oxford, Cambridge, Copenhagen, Berlin, Harvard, Cornell, and others will follow as soon as they can remodel their buildings. The great Baptist University at Chicago with her $10,000,000 has, of course, adopted co education. Never has there been such a revolution in thirty-three years. In conclusion, I will state that after forty-three years' "experience" as President of Baylor (Waco) University, ten with separate education and thirty-three with co education, I hold these truths to be self-evident:

(1) Co-education, properly conducted, lessens foolish sentimentality, clandestine correspondence and meetings fifty per cent. The sexes instinctively crave and enjoy the company of each other, for God and nature made them so. Let them understand it is innocent within proper limits and will be encouraged, and there will be no such outburst.

(2) Co-education, by giving young people correct views of true womanhood and manhood, prepares them at a suitable time to form marriages that will promote their highest happiness for life. But I am quite often asked, "Have you no indiscretions, no clandestine correspondence and runaway matches?" I answer frankly, "Adam and Eve were not entirely discreet even in the garden of Eden, and how can we expect perfection in their fallen sons and daughters?"

(3) But let it be distinctly understood that by co education I do not mean the same curriculum should be adopted for males and females. I am a profound believer in the infinite wisdom and goodness of God in creating and assigning woman her peculiar sphere, the home, the heart, the world of the beautiful and lovely; while to man he has assigned the rougher duties of the outside world. In short, I believe God wisely created the sexes different not only in body but in heart and intellect, and both wonderfully adjusted to act in harmony. Our students, male and female, pursue the same curriculum in the preparatory department and also the same College curriculum in Belles-lettres, languages—Latin, French, German or Spanish, and Mathematics, Trigonometry, and Moral and Mental Philosophy. But while our sons are studying Surveying, the higher Mathematics, Greek, and advanced

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 1, 1894

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

AFTER ALL their "discoveries," propositions, suppositions, fancies and inventions, none of the critics or apostles of modern methods dares say the old path is not sure; and that there's no mistaking it, if it is sought faithfully. Certainty it is a very essential attribute. We apprehend that it would be with difficulty that one persuaded us to depart from the old and tested and true for the new, untried and doubtful. Religion is a matter of faith, of the unseen; but it is never a matter for speculation.

IF A young people's meeting for prayer and study and work in a church once a week or twice a month—with no outside machinery, no State nor national officers, no general meetings—will not conduce to all that human things can for increasing the zeal of young people, then there's no new thing that will. The work of young people incited by a "big trip" and abundance of ostentation is unwholesome; it will not last.

It seems to us that it is rather late in the day for Christian people to claim that trips, big meetings and ostentation increase zeal. Faith alone does that.

IT SHOULD encourage us to know that mission work proceeds at a progressive ratio. Convert one heathen, and that one will probably be the means of converting others, who in turn convert others. That is the way Bro. Bryan figures that if we do our entire duty now China will be brought to Christ before some of us die. It is certainly the way we all should figure. A convert certainly lacks zeal if one has not a desire that will promote action to become the means of the conversion of some one. Let us bear in mind that in sending money to the heathen we are promoting an influence that does not cease until the world does—nay, that never ceases

IT IS to be scarcely expected that any but North Carolina editors will be able to account for the promptness with which the Charlotte Observer's erratic editorial in behalf of the University is being published by the papers all over the State as—"pure reading matter, top of column, in type used in regular columns of publication, surrounded by pure reading, marked copy to be sent to the advertiser." But a North Carolina editor knows.

When the errors in that editorial have been corrected, is it too much to ask that the editors who have published it publish the article that corrects it? We brethren all of us love truth; and although some of us may be occasionally induced to publish error, ingenuously, of course, we hope there is no one in North Carolina that will charge to correct it. We shall see.

IF YOU are a Baptist, your Baptist principles should never be overshadowed. Your interpretation of the New Testament is your all-sufficient rule of faith and practice. You know what that means? Not your rule of faith and practice at home, in church or in business, but all sufficient everywhere. Acting according to one's own peculiar interpretation of God's will is all that we expect of any one. But we do despise those who profess one interpretation of it and act according to another, or entirely disregard it upon occasion. Better than this is to profess nothing.

When a Baptist does a questionable thing it reflects upon his rule of faith and practice, that is, dishonors God. And one who can disregard or put this rule aside when convenient, or even for a moment, is not a Baptist; for Baptists believe it is all sufficient everywhere.

"THE PAY OF PREACHERS" is the title of an interesting article in the Forum for August, which we hope to review at more length later. From it we learn that preachers are better paid than teachers; that the Society of Friends has about given up the idea of a successful unpaid ministry; that the Methodist Episcopal church paid its preachers last year, $18,940,832; the Regular Baptists—Northern, Southern, and Colored, $7,986,465; the Congregationalists, $7,140,092; the Presbyterians (North), $11,778,053; the Episcopalians (including benevolent objects), $13,837,000. Some preachers are paid as much as $15,000 a year, a good many as much as $10,000, though one is fortunate to get more than $600. Baptists are most economical in this respect of all the large denominations. No Baptist preacher gets more than $5,000 net annually from his church: $4,000 is the highest salary we pay in the South.

"GOING INTO POLITICS."

There seems to be some apprehension that some of the Baptists in North Carolina are on the point of "going into politics," and that the RECORDER will go with them; and, in consequence, holy horror is vociferously expressed by a few non-Baptists and non-Christians and some church-members who have made a profession of politics—and impure politics at that. They are scarcely to be blamed for crying out against respectable folks entering their domain, knowing that where respectability is they cannot flourish. Darkness represses light, baseness fears exposure, impurity scoffs at purity; and professional politicians repress and fear and scoff at honest men who honor God and the law.

Yes, we are going into politics, and we will carry as many as possible with us, if going to the polls with a determination to turn from them, having cast a ballot according to the dictates of a God fearing Christian conscience, is going into politics. And we do not know any citizen whose conscience is clear that has not done this since he reached majority. A true citizen cannot do less.

The cry that we are going into politics is as vain as it is old. In 1884 '85 it was heard from one end of the State to the other, when we were working—and successfully too, in spite of the recommendations of two governors,—against free tuition at the University. Somehow we have experienced no evil effects from this dip into the "filth and slime," as Senator Gorman expresses it; and we know the public was benefitted. In 1886 '87, when we were exposing the naked facts about county-free-students, the cry was raised again. This system was destroyed, and even some of the University authorities now say we were right, and we know that politics were elevated by our fellowship. One more instance: In 1884 '85 when North Carolina Baptists were preparing to establish their now flourishing Orphanage, the Chronicle, published at Raleigh, persisted in crying out, "The Baptists are trying to break down the Oxford Orphan Asylum!" Another false alarm, as present history testifies,—no falser, however, than the frequent present time wail, "the Baptists would destroy the University." The old Chronicle lacked argument, and appealed to prejudice; the present time papers lack argument and appeal to prejudice. Time will prove us again.

While the RECORDER has advised as to politics, and thrown light upon public questions, it has never been partizan. It never will while the hand that has guided it through all these years, by God's help, is at the helm. It never asks one to vote contrary to his conscience; and it has not appealed to prejudice. May the time never come when it hesitates to expose error and fraud. Its politics are neither partisan nor office seeking—something new in these parts, we think.

"My kingdom is not of this world," said our Master. Surely it would be shameful if it were, in the present time. Not of this world is Christ's kingdom, but it is of every child of God. Christ's kingdom is the kingdom to which every Christian heart owes first allegiance, and which every Christian must recognize here and now. Christ is the Christian's king in public office, in business, at home, before the ballot box—everywhere, here and hereafter. A Christian is a subject of Jesus Christ, and as such it is one's duty to strive to have one's every action accord with the divine will—now as well as forever.

"Thy kingdom come," Christ taught us to pray. It is in us, if we are regenerate; but there are so many in whom it is not. It will not come until liquor-sellers and gambling promoters are excluded from the land, until Christian civilization lives and breathes in every institution of government. We cannot pray Christ's prayer consistently and not act and work and vote for purity in public affairs; for the kingdom will not come in impurity. "Unto Cæsar the things of Cæsar" was also said by our Master. So be it. Unto the State submission, our tributes, and the best vote we have; unto God our duty to better the land he has given us, to hasten the coming of his kingdom.

A recent lecturer—Dr. J. B. Shearer—had occasion to say that the principles of statesmanship and sociology were compassed in the Bible. And he cited the ringing proclamation from on High that authorized and gave character to the first representative government: "choose ye out men approved among you who fear an oath and hate covetousness." Ah, that's what we have failed to do. There is the solution of our sugar scandal and our armor plate and police investigations. Our public officers have had no regard, no reverence, for the oath of office; they are the covetous of the covetous. When God so plainly tells us that "when the wicked beareth rule the people mourn" there's no power that can keep us from striving to our utmost to drive the wicked from the high places.

We will never go into politics, if that means sacrifice of principle for party harmony or glory; but if doing what we can to prevent the wicked from ruling, to better fellowman and ourselves, is politics, then we are in them from head to foot. Can one pray "thy will be done" and vote for a representative whom one knows has no reverence for God's will, who would vote to sanction liquor selling, who would vote directly contrary to one's views of God's interests?

If going into politics is voting according to one's conscientious conviction and striving to encourage all others to do so, we are hopelessly in them, but thank the Lord our religion is with us. Yes, go to the ballot-box determined to chose men approved among you, men who fear an oath and hate covetousness,—go and carry your religion with you.

BEYOND question that is a vigorous testimonial to co-education by Dr. Burleson in this issue. But it is only a testimonial, not being supported by argument. Scarcely less could be expected from an enthusiast, and our readers should be mindful that Dr. Burleson is the enthusiast of enthusiasts among co-educators; and that his opinion is the opinion of an individual whose life has been devoted to the co-educational idea. It would be really marvelous if Dr. Burleson's statements were less enthusiastic.

We have said but little contrary to the co-education idea since Bro. Pritchard began the crusade in its behalf; we were too confident in the saving common sense of the Baptists of North Carolina to fear that any one could persuade them to change their policy in this matter. We have but little to say now that the crusade, so far as argumentative contributions in the RECORDER are concerned, is ended.

On our fifth page is a great argument against co-education. The Baptist University, hoped for, prayed for, worked for, now on the brink of happy realization, should and will be erected and maintained. It is too late now to try to turn the energies of the denomination into another channel.

Naturally opposed to co-education anywhere, we cannot begin to express our abhorrence of such a thing at Wake Forest College. It would lower the plane of that institution, it would be a bar to increasing its endowment from sources to which we now eagerly look. It is very well to talk of the success of the co-educational policy at Harvard and Cornell. But co-education at those institutions is an entirely different matter from what co-education at Wake Forest would be. At the former, female students are so few that they are but incidentals in the college life, while they would become a vital part of college life at the latter. But we haven't space for argument, when the common sense of the Baptist denomination can be relied on. Look around you, and we will give a year's subscription if you will point us to a co-educational institution in this or surrounding States the scholarship and work of which compares with that of Wake Forest in any degree. Co-education is conducive to neither.

IN CONNECTION with his article in this issue Bro. Tucker wisely says: "A matter of as much importance as dividing and possibly destroying an old Association should be viewed from every standpoint."

The question of dividing the Beulah Association and forming a new one comes up next week. We certainly can trust in the conservatism of brethren Gwaltney, Brown and Thomas; and they have all spoken for division. At the same time we suggest to the brethren of the Beulah that they keep in mind the points brought out in Bro. Tucker's article. His position in maintaining that the effect on the old Association should be considered; that regard should be had for the country churches of that body, is admirable.

Every one who has expressed opinion upon this matter in our columns seems to be willing that a new Association may be formed, if it can be without vitally injuring the old and venerable Beulah. Let the matter be considered prayerfully—viewed with a minimum of prejudice from all sides,—for it is a question of the Lord's interests, not men's.

IN HIS sketch of the B. Y. P. U. A. meeting Bro. Van Deventer says of a certain feature, "it seemed to me more like fourth of July fervor than religious ardor." That's just it. Religious ardor is the last thing thought of by a crowd of young people on a great trip to "Niagara Falls, Toronto and New York."

DO NOT hesitate to receive our representative at the Association with a big club—of subscribers. He can stand it, and we will be very appreciative of your efforts.

....If you have a boy or girl to educate, see our school columns. As usual the RECORDER is proud of the best array of the best advertisements of the best educational institutions.

....Twenty-three additions have been made to our church at Cumberland, as a result of a recent meeting. Pastor T. B. Newberry and Rev. J. M. Henly did the preaching.

....Don't wait until your Association meets to renew your subscription: if you can spare the money now, we will pay for the postal order by which it is sent. Let us hear from you.

....A large number of pastors will do voluntary mission work, either aiding the missionaries in protracted meetings, or at new and unoccupied stations, during the next three months.

....Since 1850 the "higher critics" have set forth 747 different theories in regard to the origin of the Bible, and scarcely any of these theories involved anything new. If the rate keeps up, there will have been 849 such theories by the close of the century. So no one need be in a hurry about selecting a theory to adopt.—Western Recorder.

....Rev. W. H. Beamer is considering a call to our East Bend church, says the Winston Republican. Bro. Beamer has also been elected pastor of the Westfield church the coming year.

....It is reported that every bishop in the Southern Methodist church holds views of education in agreement with the views presented in recent articles in the paper by Dr. C. E. Taylor.

....Rev. R. E. Chambers will sail for China this fall under the auspices of our Board, says the Baptist. He is now assisting Bro. Willingham, Corresponding Secretary of the Board.

....Rev. A. W. Crabtree held a good meeting at Oak Grove church last week. He is engaged for ten weeks revival work. "Every one is looking for good things from the Lord," he writes.

....Rev. A. D. Hunter of Raleigh has the assistance of Rev. W. H. Reddish of Wakefield, late of Wake Forest, in a meeting at Inwood this week. Bro. Reddish purposes attending the Seminary.

....Rev. Dr. Landrum will be absent from Richmond, Va., during this month. Dr. J. J. Taylor of Mobile, Ala., will occupy the pulpit of the Second Baptist church of Richmond during the month.

....Rev. Jno. A. Mason has been supplying for Rev. J. I. Allen at his three churches in the western part of the State in June and July. He returns this week to Judson, S. C., where he re-opens his school.

....We are pleased to know that brethren D. M. Prince and C. W. Wilson, '93 graduates of Wake Forest College, have become principals of the Scotland Neck Male School, the fall term of which opens Sept. 5th.

....Rev. J. K. Howell writes encouragingly of the work at Rocky Mount: "Have received one by baptism and many by letter. Bro. Duke is to help us in a meeting soon, and we hope to have Bro. Peele with us, also."

....The Scotland Neck Democrat says that Rev. Jos. G. Blalock will supply for the Tarboro church until October, when Rev. W. V. Savage will probably take charge. Brother Vann has returned to his pulpit.

....The College Hill church, the pastorate of which Rev. C. J. Thompson has accepted, is in Lynchburg, Va., instead of Kentucky, as we have stated. With McConnell and Thompson Lynchburg Baptists will go forward.

....Rev. B. Fay Mills, who was engaged to supply for Dr. Talmage of Brooklyn in the latter's absence on a world tour, has given up the effort. He cannot "draw" as the Doctor did, which, by the way, is no reflection on Mr. Mills.

....Prof. J. T. Alderman has resigned the superintendency of the Reidsville graded schools to accept a professorship at Talladega, Ga. His departure is a loss to the State, and Georgia is to be congratulated upon securing him.

....Dr. J. H. Barrows, said to be the originator of the "Parliament of Religions" at Chicago, has been chosen lecturer on Comparative Religions in the University of Chicago. He is a Congregationalist. This is too broad for our spirit!

....Rev. W. A. Ferrell of Black Creek, Wilson county, was in Raleigh several days last week. He informed us that our people at Pikeville are making preparation to organize a new church. Bro. Ferrell's school will re-open week after next.

....A protracted meeting is in progress at the Baptist church at this place conducted by the pastor, Rev. N. B. Cobb, D. D. This church has recently been much improved by the removal of the galleries and alterations in the chancel.—Chatham Record.

....The Central Association met Tuesday of this week; the Pilot Mountain meets Thursday. The prospect for good attendance at them both is encouraging. Rev. W. R. Gwaltney of Wake Forest represents us at the Central, Bro. Caddell going to the Pilot Mountain.

....The following were elected officers of the B. Y. P. U. A. at the late meeting: President, J. H. Chapman; Vice President, F. H. Field; Recording Secretary, A. M. Brinkle; Treasurer, Frank Moddy. Dr. Wilkins remains Secretary. Rev. Ed. M. Poteat is one of the managers.

...."Conversion—a Series of Lecture Room Talks by Geo. C. Lorimer, D. D.," is an excellent little work for which we are grateful to the American Baptist Publication Society. Conviction, Repentance, Faith, Confession, Obedience, Evidences, are the subjects concisely treated.

....Sister Nannie Britton writes from Soochow, China, June 18th: "The meetings go on. Mr. Tatum has been here and spent some days. While here he preached several earnest sermons, which have been of great help in the work. This week Mr. Britton is preaching three times daily. The work seems hopeful. When will we be reinforced so that more gospel seed sowing may be done, and more people may have the opportunity of hearing? Pray for us.

....The broad statement in the Monroe Enquirer recently that our Arlington church had been led off into the belief that punishment after death is not eternal, is a mistake. The church has a membership of about two hundred, and it has been necessary to withdraw fellowship from but fifteen on account of this doctrine. The statement that Rev. J. E. King is a Baptist, and has a Baptist church in the Mecklenburg and Cabarrus Association, is also a mistake. He does not serve any church in that Association; but has been preaching his peculiar doctrines in some school-houses. As he preaches that the end of time has come, it seems to us that a little patience will demonstrate his claims to authority.

....Rev. J. Hartwell Edwards is getting along excellently with his work at Fayetteville. He leaves this week for Florence, S. C., to spend August.

....Rev. O. L. Stringfield returned from Ashpole, Robeson county, where he has been holding a very remarkable meeting with Rev. A. R. Pittman. There were more than 100 converts.

....Prof. C. D. Graves of Chowan Baptist Female Institute made us a pleasant visit last week. He was on his way to Selma, his home, from Wake Forest, where he has been studying chemistry. Brother Graves will spend several weeks at Nag's Head before resuming his duties at the Institute.

....An enthusiastic educational meeting was held at Lanefield Academy near Warsaw one day last week, writes Rev. C. S. Wells. Dr. Durham and Prof. R. B. White were the speakers, and they made a profound impression. Bro. Wells writes also that the first public discussion of the educational issue was lead by Prof. Joyner of the Greensboro Normal and Industrial School under the guise of a teachers' institute.

....Rev. William T. Jones of Goldsboro writes July 24th: "I closed a week's meeting at Falling Creek church last Saturday and baptized fifteen. More than thirty professions were made, and I expect to baptize again soon. They came from Quakers, Methodists, Free-will and Anti mission Baptists, and Disciple families Rev. J. B Harrell of Mt. Olive did the preaching. He is a tireless, vigorous worker. Except for a few short intermissions, he worked from early morning till late at night. He makes one love him."

....Baptists at Haw River have purchased a lot on which they will erect a parsonage. Rev. Jno. C. Hocutt closed a meeting there on the 25th ult. There were several professions. Four were received for baptism: others will be. Bro. Hocutt writes: "The Haw River brethren expect to build and furnish a good house of worship in the next twelve months. The church is united and aggressive The cause of Christ is advancing in every part of that field occupied by Brother Andrews and myself."

....Rev. A. P. Caudle is the only Baptist preacher in his field, which embraces a territory fifteen miles wide and twenty-five long. He baptized one at Pleasant Valley the first Sunday in July, and three at Waxhaw the fourth Sunday. Twelve have recently been received by him at Hermon. He writes that the prospect is good for organizing a church near Wilson's Store, Union county, where he has been having services once a month for some time. Bro Hight C. Moore and Bro. Caudle are holding a meeting at Oak Grove this week. They go to Pleasant Valley next; then to Waxhaw and Hermon. Waxhaw decided on the 21st ult. to build a new house of worship and arrangements to begin the work are being made. Surely Bro. Caudle is justified in saying his work is in good condition and prospects bright.

"The Place of the Bible in a Liberal Education."

Rev. Dr. J. B. Shearer, President of Davidson College, delivered, by invitation of the Raleigh Local Alumni Association of Wake Forest College, in the Metropolitan Hall last Thursday night, one of the best conceived and most instructive lectures to which we have ever listened. We heartily re echo the speakers wish that he might travel over the world and present the importance of Bible study at every way-station.

Dr. Shearer's subject was the "Place of the Bible in a Liberal Education," and he believes its place is the pedestal, the basis; and he showed the grounds of his belief entertainingly, logically, concisely and conclusively. If every one could hear his application of the Scriptures to the arts and sciences and every-day life, showing that the Bible is the source of truth in all these departments, Christian civilization would receive an unprecedented uplift.

The speaker's appeal to the Local Alumni to hasten the institution of a Chair of Bible Study at Wake Forest College was well taken; and we are sure if the lecture could be made before the Baptists of the State, they would delay in this matter no longer.

The Local Alumni are to be congratulated upon securing so distinguished a lecturer and achieving so conspicuous a success at its first public meeting. We hope that the efforts of the organization to secure other speakers will be as fruitful as this one promises to be.

In behalf of the Association and all who heard the lecture, we cordially thank Dr. Shearer for the pleasureful instruction his effort afforded.

North Carolina Baptist S. S. Chautauqua.

Every mail brings us a letter from some officer or teacher in the Sunday school, saying, "I am making my arrangements to attend our Baptist Sunday school Chautauqua at Mt. Vernon Springs."

The programs for each day's services have been made out and will soon appear in the RECORDER.

The railroads have promised reduced rates. Board at Mt. Vernon Springs Hotel can be had at one dollar per day and in private homes at seventy five cents per day.

Parties are making up to "camp out," and will have splendid grounds in which to pitch their tents or build shelters near the church in which we meet.

The Pastor is as much interested in the Chautauqua as the Superintendent, and we are glad to know that a goodly number of them have already determined to be present.

We suggest that each Sunday school select a delegation to attend; and let such delegates be sure to be present.

The first day's session of the Chautauqua occurs on Tuesday, Aug. 28th.

A week of healthful, delightful spiritual recreation may be safely anticipated.

Facts and Figures; or, Side-lights on the Educational Discussion—No. 4.

BY REV. C. DURHAM.

The General Assembly of North Carolina meets biennially; each Legislature is responsible for all the funds drawn from the public treasury for higher education during the two years immediately following. I give, therefore, the full amounts drawn from the State treasury in 1893 and 1894 for these various schools:

FOR THE UNIVERSITY AT CHAPEL HILL.

1893,	Regular	$20,000
1894,	"	20,000
1893,	Special	10,000
1894,	"	10,000
	Total	$60,000

GREENSBORO NORMAL AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

1893,	Regular	$12,500
1894,	"	12,500
1893,	Special	4,500
1894.	"	4.500
1893,	Loan.	9,000
	Total	$43,000
From Peabody Fund (not the State), 1894		3,000

THE A. & M. COLLEGE.

1893,	Regular	$10,000
1894,	"	10,000
	Total	$25,000

THE A. & M COLLEGE (COLORED).

1893,	Regular	$2 500
1894,	"	2,500
	Total	$5,000

SIX NORMAL SCHOOLS (COLORED).

1893,	Regular	$8.000
1894,	"	8,000
	Total	$16 000

THE CULLOWHEE HIGH SCHOOL (NORMAL DEPARTMENT).

1893,	Regular	$1,500
1894,	"	1,500
	Total	$3,000

CROATAN INDIAN NORMAL SCHOOL.

1893,	Regular	$ 500
1894,	"	500
	Total	$1,000
	Grand total.	$148,000

That is, all these schools take of the taxes of the people, by authority of the last Legislature, one hundred and forty eight thousand dollars. The loan of $9,000 to the Normal and Industrial School at Greensboro is considered by all who have their eyes open as an appropriation under a name by which it could gain votes. It is a gift, as "State loans" generally are.

All this money, had the last Legislature so ordered, might have gone into the common schools of the State. This would have given North Carolina during 1893 94, paying the average salary to teachers, more than two thousand three months public schools, into which might have been gathered, counting fifty to each school, over one hundred thousand children. There are ninety six counties. Giving ten townships to each county, this money would have added two three months public schools in each township in every county in the State.

The Acts of the Legislature ought to be a sufficient guide to the charges for tuition, &c., at the State University, but they are not. The Acts are plain and positive. If properly interpreted and honestly obeyed, the academies and colleges would have less ground for protest against the present administration. The semi-annual reports of the Bursar give the only reliable information about tuition, registration, fees, etc., actually paid to the University. The law in the books, designed to control the action of the authorities of the Institution, seems to be interpreted by them to mean free tuition, free room-rent, free registration, and free servant hire, whenever it is possible.

I copy the Bursar's reports for three years. These are given as the Bursar made them to the Treasurer, the Treasurer made them to the Trustees, and the Trustees presented them to the Governor. Here is abundant material for your county paper, or for a speech to stir the taxpayers of your county on the subject of education.

COLLEGIATE YEAR 1884-'85.

The Bursar reports for the term ending Dec. 24th, 1884, as follows:

201 students in all.

66 paid each in full $42 50	$2,805 00
3 residents of the village paid each in full $37 50	112 50
1 paid	20.00
2 paid $17 50 each	35 00
1 medical student paid in part	10 00
1 excused on account of sickness, paid	28 84
2 paid each in part $37 50	75 00
8 had further time.
3 special students paid $7 50, $15, $23.75	46 25
4 paid in part $22 50, $35, $30, $40	117.50
4 paid by teaching.
1 paid by services as Librarian.
57 were county students.
17 were law students.
9 were preachers and preachers' sons.
3 held B. F. Moore scholarships.
15 failed to settle.
	$3,249.59

[Of the 201 students present this term, 109 seem to have paid the University nothing.—C. D]

The Bursar reports for the term ending August 15th, 1885, as follows:

174 students in all.

69 paid each in full $42 50	$2,935 00
4 residents of the village paid each $37.50	150.00
6 medical and law students paid $37.50, $15, $5, $18.75, $12.50, $15	93 75
4 paid each in full $10, $28 33, $31.88, $14.20	84.41
5 paid $15, $21.75, $17.50, $37.50, $37.50	128.75
7 gave their notes.
6 were allowed time.
10 were preachers and preachers' sons.
3 paid by teaching.
1 paid by services as Librarian.
1 medical student without dues.
2 held B. F. Moore scholarships.
13 failed to pay.
50 were county students.
	$3,091.91

[Of the 174 students present this term, it seems 92 paid nothing.—C. D]

COLLEGIATE YEAR 1885-'86.

The Bursar reports for the term ending Dec. 24th, 1885, as follows:

166 students in all.

63 paid each in full	$2,677.50
2 residents of the village paid each in full $37.50	75 00
2 paid $17, $22 50	40 00
2 paid $30, $25.	55 00
5 paid $5 50, $15 00, $20 00, $30, $31.50.	102 00
23 were allowed time.
13 gave their notes.
1 paid by services as Librarian.
12 were preachers and preachers' sons.
39 were county students.
2 held B F. Moore scholarship.
2 were dismissed early in the session.
	$2,949.50

[Here out of 166 students, it seems 91 of them paid nothing.—C. D]

The Bursar reports for the term ending August 15th, 1886, as follows:

159 students in all.

57 paid each in full $42 50	$2,422.50
2 residents of the village paid each in full $37 50	75 00
1 partial course student paid in full	12 00
1 paid room-rent two terms	10 00
2 paid each in full $21 25	42 50
3 paid in part $4 75. $21 25, $21 25	47 25
3 paid each in full $31 88	95 64
2 paid each in full $29 25, $37 50	66 75
15 were allowed to give notes.
2 held B F. Moore scholarships
8 were preachers and preachers' sons.
1 paid by services as Librarian.
1 paid by teaching.
37 were county students.
24 were allowed time.
	$2,772.13

Out of 159 students this term, 86 of them, it seems, paid nothing.—C. D]

COLLEGIATE YEAR 1886-'87.

The Bursar reports for the term ending Dec 31st, 1886, as follows:

172 students in all.

65 paid each in full $42 50.
3 residents of the village paid each in full $37 50
3 partial course paid $5, $12 75, $21.25.
8 paid in part (2) $21.25, $25, (2) $30, $35, $37 50, $40.
1 paid room rent $5.
14 gave their notes
4 had scholarships.
2 were post graduates.
7 were preachers and preachers' sons.
46 were county students.
19 failed to settle.

[This term, out of 172 students, 92 of them seem to have paid nothing.—C. D]

The Bursar reports for the term ending Aug .15th, 1887, as follows:

172 students in all.

53 paid tuition in full $42.50.
3 paid in full (villagers) $37 50.
1 partial course $18 75.
5 paid in part $42, $29, $21 75, $21 25 $20.
13 gave notes.
17 were allowed time.
45 were county students.
8 ministers' sons, &c.
4 had scholarships.
1 normal department.
2 post graduates.
2 partial course.
13 law students.
84 paid gymnasium fees.

[This term, out of 172 students, 105 seem to have paid nothing except gymnasium fees. Why should the State tax the people to educate preachers? If it can tax the people to educate preachers, can it not tax the people to pay their salaries after they go out to preaching?—C. D.]

TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA.

(1) Did you furnish directly or indirectly, or cause to be furnished, the President of the Senate or Speaker of the House of Representatives of the General Assembly of North Carolina for 1893 the names of members of the Legislature from which one or both these officers were requested or expected to appoint the Committee on Education?

(2) Have you within the past sixty days had a personal interview with Mr. S. Otho Wilson of Wake county, and have you within the past sixty days offered to or through him the use of a scholarship in the University?

(3) An honored alumnus of the University is ready to make oath that you have said of Dr. Taylor just as reported last week, "He is getting ready to leave the State"; and two other well-known citizens are ready to make oath that you have declared "He answers himself a dozen times. The motive and purpose are so transparent and so unworthy of men engaged in higher education," &c. If you cannot show that "he answers himself a dozen times," and the "motive and purpose to be unworthy of men engaged in higher education", is not your motive and purpose, in making such a statement, "so transparent and so unworthy" of the President of our State University that no one can defend you?

Here endeth the second catechism.

To the Baptists of North Carolina.

FOR THE NEXT FOUR MONTHS,

the Associations will be in session every week; and the mind, soul and body must be given to them in the Mission—State, Home, and Foreign—Sunday school and Colportage work of the Convention. With the present prospects of good crops, our churches ought to be able to do more than ever before for missions. It is hoped that the Board will go to the Convention this year without a debt on its mission work. To do this, however, will require the hearty and active cooperation of the pastors and churches in every department of labor. Let us begin in time, and give each object its proper place and the largest possible collections.

EARNEST PRAYER

should be made to God daily that our people may have the spirit of consecration and liberality given them in a large measure; and that they may see, appreciate, seize and wisely use their opportunities to give the gospel to the destitute, and to glorify the name of Him who loved us and redeemed us with His own precious blood. By Him all things consist—held together—upheld—and for him all things were created, and for Him let all things be done.

C. DURHAM.

Two Queries that Answer Themselves.

1. Has Prof. C. D. McIver the right to discuss the appropriations to the University and other State schools before a mass meeting of the citizens called under the name of the County Teachers' Institutes, when the Institute is professedly intended to better qualify school teachers for their work?

2 If Prof. C. D. McIver persists in making such speeches to the Institutes, while paid by the State ($2,500 per annum) for other work, have not the denominational Colleges the right to send a man to reply to him?

Some Notes From Littleton.

My subscription, I see from the label has expired; and, as I preach a debt paying religion, it will be appropriate for me to practice what I preach; lest some one turn to me and say, "Physician, heal thy self." So here it is.

The RECORDER improves with age. I enjoy it all—especially the first page.

SUMMER RESORT.

Our quiet little "city" is fast taking rank among the most famous resorts for those seeking health. The virtues of our all healing Hygeia and Panacea Springs are being proved by many from all parts of southern Virginia and eastern North Carolina, and not a few having experienced these health giving properties are going forth to extol these waters. Among the present guests, we are glad to name our beloved John Mitchel, than whom none is more welcome. These tonic waters, dry, bracing atmosphere and undulating soil giving us natural drainage, and the high, moral tone of our citizens, give an unsurpassed location for

LITTLETON HIGH SCHOOL

Under the management of noble Prof. L. W. Bagley and his worthy wife, Sallie Brewer Bagley, and their competent assistants, we have a high school and business institute second to none in the State. While doing all in their power for the cultivation of the minds of their pupils, they labor with a like singleness of aim to teach them the fear of the Lord. During the past many who have come here to seek an education to fit them for this life have also found the knowledge of Christ, "the most excellent of the sciences," and thus fitted for the life to come.

The Toronto Convention—Some Impressions.

I am conscious that there is much apathy and some opposition towards this movement in our State. When workers go so far for pleasure, and not once look in upon the greatest and most inspiring Christian gathering of Baptist young people that ever met in the North, it argues great indifference I think. I am under the impression that those who are indifferent, and those that are opposed to this work are on the losing side, as they will see in the future. There were 5,500 delegates, 337 of whom were from the South. Texas, South Carolina, Virginia and Maryland have State organizations.

I liked the enthusiasm. The spirit was that of action. There was snap in every move, it was all characteristic of the young life that throbbed in the organization. I did not like the way their enthusiasm manifested itself at times.

The presentation of banners was imposing. the salutation of banners beautiful, but it seemed more like fourth of July fervor, than religious ardor. I did not like the waving of handkerchiefs and loud and prolonged applause, but this ebullition was more inspiring than some of our sleepy meetings.

I liked the great principle upon which the Union is founded. "Loyalty to Christ in all things and at all times." I felt that the Baptists of the South could reach over and grasp the hand of the Baptists in the North at this point. Here we are not divided. At this point we are one in faith and doctrine.

They saw the enervating influence of the the undenominational societies, upon the Baptist young people, and resolved in face of opposition, which still exists, to organize Baptist young people for service along Baptist and Scriptural lines. Is it not time for our Southern churches to take some step in the interest of the young members? Many of them are doing it.

I liked the fact that they were organized for service. Here again no Southern Baptist can take exception. He may object to the way, but certainly not to the object in view.

"The Christian Culture Course" means culture for service. The work done in this course is not for the works' sake, but that the knowledge gained may help some other brother.

I looked at the Rapids as the water rushed with loose rein toward the Falls, each wave trying to overleap the other and out strip in the race, and thought if the power could be harnessed and utilized what a servant it would be. It suggested that we have power undeveloped and unused in our churches, power in the young people being wasted, and the Young People's Societies have come to utilize this force and make it redound to the glory of God. The people in Niagara rejoice over the forming of the "Cataract Company," but there should be great rejoicing over the organization of the young people in our churches.

I liked the emphasized statement that the societies should be under the control of the churches. They have no right to exist in any other way. "Loyalty to the Truth in all places and at all Times" demands this.

I liked the fact that there were no sisters in the program. This was a surprise to me. I do not know why they were left off. I am pleased to note the fact.

I was pleased to see so few things that were objectionable in this great meeting, and so many things that our churches could endorse. If every meeting is to be like this one, I see no reason why our Southern churches should not be committed to it. I expect next year Baltimore will witness two or three times as many delegates in attendance upon the Union. I hope North Carolina will be represented.

The New Association Again.

Last Saturday, the Summerfield Baptist church unanimously agreed to get their letter from Pilot Mountain Association and to come into the new. Buchanan church also determined to ask for a letter from Beulah Association for the same purpose.

Thus the brethren are beginning to see the importance of this new movement. It seems to some of us that this movement is one of the most important steps ever taken by the Baptists of this section, and we believe that God has opened this door of opportunity. Other churches are coming into the new body, and we expect to start with a good working body.

We hope that other churches on the borders of other associations will act in this matter. CHAS A. G. THOMAS.

How North Carolina Stands.

Dear Brethren of North Carolina:—According to an apportionment of the amount needed to pay off all obligations and support our missionaries in the field this year, we should look to your State from May 1st, 1894, to July 15th, for $1,885. In that time we have received $128 05; Western Convention, $10.

"Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come."—1 Cor. 16: 2.

A Prominent Business Man Retires

In connection with the advertisement of "Julius Lewis Hardware Co." on our eighth page it is worthy to be noted that Mr. Julius Lewis, who through nearly forty years of commercial intercourse has built and maintained an unimpeachable reputation for business integrity, now retires from this branch of his occupation and turns it over to hands that have become experienced under his direction and that, we doubt not, will prove worthy to succeed him.

The new firm, composed of the former partner, Mr. N. W. West, and Messrs. C. B. Hart and F. T. Ward have long been connected with the hardware business and we feel no hesitancy in bespeaking for them that degree of success with which the retiring partner has met.

Associations.

The Associations in the Baptist State Convention will meet this year at the times and places named in the list:

August.

Central—Tuesday, July 31 to Aug 2, with Hopkins' Chapel church.

Pilot Mountain—Thursday, Aug 2-4, with Mt Olive church.

Beulah—Tuesday, Aug 7-9, with Kerr's Chapel church, twelve miles north of Burlington.

Flat River—Tuesday, Aug 14-16, with Mountain Creek church.

French Broad—Friday, Aug 24, 25, with Gabriel Creek church.

Brushy Mountain—Thursday, Aug 23-25, with North Wilkesboro church.

Liberty—Tuesday, Aug 21-23, with Holloway's church, twelve miles south of Lexington.

Three Forks—Tuesday, Aug 28-30, with Gap Creek church.

South Yadkin—Thursday, Aug 30-Sept 1, with South River church, Iredell county.

Elkin—Thursday, Aug 30th-Sept 1st, with Macedonia church, two miles north of Ronda.

Yadkin—Swaim's ch, Thursday, Aug 16-18.

BAPTIST STATE CONVENTION.

Metaphysics, our daughters devote the same time to Music, Painting, and advanced Botany, and whatever will develop and refine her æsthetic nature and give her a passion for the beautiful and for making home a paradise of purity and loveliness.

(4) We find that co-education lessens the expense of teaching from one-fourth to one-half, and increases the number of attendance one hundred per cent.

(5) And lastly, let it ever be remembered that by co-education we do not mean "herding" young men and young ladies on the same campus and in the same boarding-houses. We draw the sex line clearly, modestly, and guard it with sleepless vigilance; but we provide, as often as is consistent with study, social meetings and soirees on our national holidays, etc.

I repeat that after thirty-three years "experience," we find that co education thus conducted elevates and refines students, male and female. It elevates the young men in morality and manliness, and the young ladies in neatness and modesty. It also lessens the expenses of the teaching corps about one half and increases the attendance about a hundred fold. It prepares the students to select congenial partners for life and thus secures what our country so much needs, happy Christian homes. And one of the happiest recollections of my long life-toils for Christian education is that God has given me the honor to be the pioneer co-educator in my dear native Southland.

The Proposed New Association (Greensboro).

ITS POSSIBLE EFFECT ON THE ASSOCIATIONS FROM WHICH IT IS TO BE FORMED.

As one's conclusions are largely the result of the point of view from which an object or proposition is seen, I venture with a feeling of diffidence, to state my own impressions from my own point of view with the hope that the best interests of the Lord's work may be thereby promoted. If, by seeming to differ with so able and well meaning a trio as brethren Gwaltney, Brown and Thomas, I shall subject myself to the suspicion of being off my base, I beg the indulgence of the RECORDER readers till further light shall restore my mental equilibrium.

My first criticism relates to the principle upon which the new organization is to be formed, and not to the organization itself, nor to the territory to be embraced. My knowledge of Baptist history would lead me to believe that never before has the proposition been made to organize an Association on so distinctively a railroad and town church basis. In this light it may be considered a proposition to abolish the country and get rid of the unsophisticated country delegate at one and the same time. As in business so in church work, I believe the interests of the town and country to be interdependent and mutually helpful. The spiritually minded of the town membership will be the gainers by contact with an occasional example of old-fashioned country religion; and, if appearances count for anything, the happiest people in the world are town folks at an Association in the country.

Second. The movement is premature. Bro. Brown says: "The passage of railroads through our country necessitates a change in many of our Associational boundaries." In obedience to this necessity the Beulah Association at its last meeting was reorganized and boundaries fixed covering every foot of territory embraced by the proposed new organization. Bro. Brown was in that meeting, spoke on that question, and my recollection is, gave his endorsement to that settlement, which it was hoped would be final. I maintain that less than one year's time is too short to test either the wisdom or practicability of the action then taken. It may be argued that churches relied on at that time to enter the Association have failed to do so, and that, therefore, the reorganization is a failure; that a new Association will be more successful because churches which would not join the old will join the new. If this be true, I can conceive of only one explanation, the Beulah in the reorganization refused to change a good name and to repudiate an honorable history and retained some country churches distant from railroad, though not one of them is more than half a day's journey over dusty highways. The demand is to exclude the country churches in Caswell and Person counties, embody the railroad idea, and to give to the new organization the prestige of a new name. The demand to me seems unreasonable; and while the motive may be right the means relied on to make the Association successful look to human and not to Divine strength.

Third. I protest against the continued effort to cause by indirection that which if done at all ought to be done openly and after mature consideration—the dissolution of the Beulah Association. This brings me to the main question—the effect of the new Association on the life and usefulness of the Beulah, the weakest of the Associations, from which the churches are expected to withdraw. The advantages of the new organization to the proposed territory having been ably and conclusively set forth, three questions present themselves from the opposite point of view: Will corresponding injury result to the country territory in Rockingham, Caswell and Person counties? If so, there will be no gain, and the new Association ought not to be formed. Will the good to the new territory overbalance the injury to the old, or will the change be to the interest of both? In either case the new Association ought to be formed; but what ought to become of the Beulah? The Greensboro brethren's plan, if their letters of invitation are to be taken seriously, looks to the dissolution of the Beulah. Brother Gwaltney's would seem to be consistent with the continued existence of the Beulah, while Bro. Brown's would involve moving to town or getting on alone, though I take pleasure in stating that his practice is better than his theory. Either plan threatens the life of the Beulah, and if it does not result in death will greatly impair her usefulness. However with the continued unwillingness of strong and influential churches to remain in the old Association, and notwithstanding the foregoing criticism, I am in favor of the new Association on Bro. Gwaltney's plan of the 35 mile limit in either direction from Greensboro with the hope that under it the Beulah may continue her existence, or if it can be openly shown that the Beulah has fulfilled her mission, though it is hard for me to believe that the highest interest of the Lord's kingdom in either territory necessitates the death of a body which has remained intact through so many conflicts and has been the instrumentality of so much good. In case the new requires the extinction of the old, what about the future of the country churches which are practically excluded from the new?

This is a practical and important question and must be decided at the Association in August, which is near at hand. If I am rightly informed, brethren Brown and Gwaltney have both canvassed these country churches in the interest of the church buildings at Winston and Greensboro, and these churches contributed liberally by individual subscription as well as through the State Mission Board to the establishment of the Baptist cause in Winston, Greensboro and Reidsville. Not only so, but for fifteen or twenty years during which the Baptist cause has been planted in many other towns of the State, the Beulah sent her State Mission fund direct to the State Mission Board. It would seem, therefore, that the country churches which now form the Beulah are entitled not only to the thoughtful consideration of brethren Gwaltney and Brown, but the Greensboro and Reidsville brethren as well, in the formation of any organization which may affect them even remotely. Certainly they are the last churches in the State to be ostracised by railroad town brethren. We solicit the counsel of unprejudiced brethren at the Association, especially from the country church point of view. In the mean time let the churches pray over the matter and send full delegations to the Association, and in case this shall be the last meeting, let it be the best in her history.

Miscellaneous.

SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION.

It could not be regarded as too hasty on my part if I should say that my trip to the Southern Baptist Convention at Dallas, Texas, was both instructive and profitable, and not devoid of pleasure. By the courtesy of the managers of the Seaboard Air Line the journey was pleasant, and very much less fatiguing than had been anticipated. Our route lay through a beautiful and, for the most part, a fertile portion of the country, and at that particular season of the year when all nature seemed to strive to look lovely and be attractive. The Convention was large, harmonious, earnest, conservative, instructive and inspiring.

Though it may seem a little late, let me return my thanks and extend grateful acknowledgments to Bethlehem and Republican churches for kind and thoughtful aid in the character of small purses from each to assist in defraying my expenses.

THE TIMES.

Things seem to be going quietly in this section. The present indications are that the labor of our people will be rewarded with an abundant harvest if it should be the will of a kind Providence to send upon the fields "the latter rains."

The political atmosphere is getting in a state of agitation. What a good thing it would be if the people could be as much interested in the kingdom of heaven as in the kingdom of this world, and yet I believe the signs of the times are hopeful religiously. The season of protracted meetings is drawing near. O that the people would "attempt great things for God and expect great things of God."

THE AULANDER SCHOOLS

will open September the first, and we shall have to secure a new corps of teachers. Misses S. R. Darden and A. C. Ferrall and Prof. Ed. F. Reaves, our former efficient and faithful teachers for the past two years, will not return to us next year.

Prof. Reaves contemplates entering the Seminary at Louisville, Ky., this fall. Bro. Reaves as an educator is laborious, patient, persevering, faithful and thorough. He greatly endeared himself to our people during his stay among them. His place will be hard to fill. Several of his students will enter Wake Forest this fall. As a preacher he combines rare gifts of solid worth—a close student, a thoughtful and logical preacher and thoroughly consecrated, and above all, a man of deep and earnest piety. His work and influence will abide among us for many years as a power for good. I cheerfully commend him to the confidence and esteem of those with whom his lot may be cast.

I have read Dr. Taylor's discussion of the two theories of higher education: higher education by taxation and State appropriation and by the voluntary system, once carefully, and portions of his articles again.

First, I am impressed with the calm and dispassionate manner in which he discusses this intricate subject. The kindly spirit, frankness and grasp of the subject displayed all seem to be about evenly balanced, and if these are surpassed by any feature of this discussion it is the logical force and accuracy with which he conducts one to the conclusion.

Second, in my humble judgment the only way to escape his conclusion is to deny his premises.

Third, the wide range and fertility of quotations and authorities show that there has been much general and earnest thinking on this question by men of different vocations and various religious beliefs. If these multiplied quotations are not motherless fancies, then Dr. Taylor is not the first nor the only one that has thought and spoken on this subject. Standing as he does in the midst of so large a company, and all facing in the same general direction, I cannot charge the Doctor with waging a partisan warfare against existing institutions.

Fourth. I regard his pamphlet as an able document, containing an earnest, conservative and opportune discussion of great principles.

One or Two Things.

The Pastors' Conference of Norfolk and vicinity is on a vacation until the first Monday in September.

Leaving out the sickness of my wife and child, my recent visit to North Carolina was an enjoyable one. I had the pleasure of meeting many whom I learned to love in "other days." Preached for Bro. Craig at Harrellsville, Bro. Curtis at Aulander, and for Bro Speight at Rosses and Connaritsa. Into the fellowship of the latter church I was baptized ten or twelve years ago. Some whom I knew and loved there are not now, for God has taken them.

I go on Friday, the 20th, to Roanoke Island to aid my father in a protracted meeting.

My work here is in finely good condition now. Occasionally some one added to the fold.

Rev. H. N. Quisenberry, Berkley Avenue Church, aided Rev. P. S. C. Davis in a meeting on Knott's Island last week. There were ten or twelve conversions.

Mrs. W. F. Watson and children are on a visit to friends and relatives in North Carolina.

Help Asked For.

Dear Recorder:—The cause for which I am solicitous is Reddick's Grove church in Martin county, N. C.

I trust the people and churches who made pledges to me in our last Association at Colerain will, as far as they possibly can, help our needy cause, as we are greatly in need of pecuniary assistance.

There is time for all to act in union, and remember that "he that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord." We are in trying circumstances, and we truly trust in our brethren and churches. Let me not be confounded.

Any remittance will be gratefully received.

A Bright Lad,

Ten years of age, but who declines to give his name to the public, makes this authorized, confidential statement to us:

"When I was one year old, my mamma died of consumption. The doctor said that I, too, would soon die, and all our neighbors thought that even if I did not die, I would never be able to walk, because I was so weak and puny. A gathering formed and broke under my arm. I hurt my finger and it gathered and threw out pieces of bone. If I hurt myself so as to break the skin, it was sure to become a running sore. I had to take lots of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has made me well and strong."—T. D. M., Norcatur, Kans.

A WALL OF PROTECTION

Against Disease In Far-off Brazil.

Rev. Z. C. Taylor, Missionary of the Southern Baptist Convention to Brazil, writes of Germetuer: "I consider it a wall of protection against disease, and a safe guarantee of health and happiness. Since I first took Germetuer three years ago my health has been almost perfect. I work incessantly, and can endure myself as much as a native.

Rev. Mr. Taylor's location is at Bahia, almost under the equator, on the Atlantic coast. It is the home of Malaria and all those malignant forms of disease that are born of it. Here, as in all other places of like character, Germetuer has signally triumphed. It is the great Conqueror of malaria in all its forms and in all places. Will break any fever in less time than Quinine or Antipyrine and leave none of their unpleasant effects, such as nervousness, nausea and prostration. And then it is so good to take that even little children soon learn to cry for it.

A China Letter.

Dear Recorder:—To-day I am writing in a native inn west of the mountains in a beautiful valley which is now (May 8) looking like a fresh garden, everywhere, filled with green wheat, young vegetables, and the opium plant. This little cove, or valley, about ten miles wide at its end and gradually widening towards its mouth, is a part of the field selected by the Gospel Mission. It is filled with large towns and hundreds of villages. Several streams run through it and the ground is exceedingly rich, growing some of the finest wheat I have seen anywhere. The water is pure, and the air comes fresh down from the coves of the mountains. The valley opens westward, and at its mouth is one of China's great sacred Mountains, Lai Sam. Thousands come there every year from almost every part of China to visit its shrines and temples. Tai Au Fu City, where brethren Herring and Blalock now are, is at the foot of this sacred mountain. Dr. Crawford and I stopped a few days on our way at Ching Chow Fu with the English Baptists. That city is just on the eastern side of this ridge of mountains. The English Baptists have a fine work there. They have very kindly offered us the use of houses in that city till we shall be able to open up the places in our field. Just outside the city of Ching-Chow Fu is a garrison of Tartar soldiers. As I walked on the wall one day I saw some soldiers down by the wall practicing with bows and arrows! Just think, bows and arrows in this day of repeating rifles and Krupp guns!

The government of China is not Chinese but Tartar. Over three hundred years ago a Chinaman by the name of Li drove the last Emperor of the Ming Dynasty from his throne in Peking. This Emperor was sent beyond the great Chinese wall to the nation of fierce Tartars, who lived in tents and engaged in much war. The Tartar King came down and drove out Mr. Li, and instead of reinstating the rightful Emperor, took the throne himself. He ordered the Chinese men to shave the front part of their heads and plait their hair into a que, and the women to unbind their feet. The men obeyed, the women did not. The Tartar ladies do not bind their feet, and the court ladies and most of the soldiers' wives are Tartars. So really China is a subject nation to an outside power. There is very little connection between the government and the people. The present Emperor has just recently come of age, and some think that he will be favorable to many reforms in China. He is studying English and has intercourse with the representatives from foreign governments. China has no conscience and till the name of Jesus shall teach them to have a conscience no kind of reform or advance in science can help them. They have fine silver mines, find gold mines, fine oil wells, immense resources as yet untouched, and it is impossible to utilize them till China can depend on a Chinaman to do his duty conscientiously. Dr. Crawford was telling how in the war with France several years ago, a shell was shot from a Chinese gun into a French ship, and they expected an explosion which would seriously injure the vessel. It did not explode. They got skilled men to extract the dangerous shell from the timbers of the ship, and after much care and expected explosion the shell was taken out and carefully opened to be found filled with mud! The wily Chinaman, having no conscience, extracted the powder, sold it, and put in mud. The gospel is entering the homes of the people, slowly but surely working its way into the heart of the nation. Jesus is able to save and he alone can save China, no matter how you look at it.

Dr. Crawford and I left Ching-Chow Fu on a wheelbarrow pulled by two men. It took us six days to make the trip across the mountain to our field, a distance of about ninety miles. When we arrived one week ago to-day at Lai Woo City the only place we could find to stop was a very small inn, one dark dirty little room, no ventilation, no room hardly, and with a surging crowd almost wild to get a look at us. One fellow told me we were the first who had come. The very look of the town and shop keepers and inn keepers was, "you foreign Devil, I don't want you here." Yet they seemed willing to violate all sense of politeness, overcome all restraint to get a look at us, and when they did look it was with lower jaw dropped, eyes wide open, gazing, gazing! When we left the town next day, it was to go through the street with all eyes from doors, shops, street, everywhere gazing! We have been going now for a week up and down in this most beautiful valley, in one or two places refused entrance into the inn, in one place actually asked to leave, but to-day we are stopping in a village in a good inn with a kindly landlord, and an expressed privilege of remaining three or four days. We have also made arrangements for a place to stop awhile at another village, so we pass on, asking an entrance here among people who are lost and don't know it, and don't want us to tell them.

To day (May 8) Dr. Crawford passes his seventy fourth birthday, and we two with the help of our faithful servant have made merry over a baked chicken, broth and eggs, nice white rice, and native bread with good tea. The gazers constantly come and are almost mad because they can't get to see the "Foreign Devils." Some boys are now peeping eagerly in at the window as I write.

We are now in truly a heathen place, where ignorance covers these beautiful hills, trees, streams, and fields, God's gifts to man, with a pall of darkness so heavy it can be felt. The difficulty here is not so much physical as spiritual. Jesus was gazed at, was refused entrance, but we are unworthy to walk in his footsteps. Pray for China.

A Minister's Sufferings.

Dear Sir:—Your favor, asking a report of my experience with the Electropoise, reached me to-day; the 21st of June closed two years' service of the instrument in my family.

When I received it I was almost without hope, having suffered fifteen months with nervous prostration and a complication of ills that would seem unbearable if enumerated. Malarial poison, indigestion and overwork had made a wreck of me.

I wore it the night of the 21st, and next morning felt better, and in a few weeks went regularly to work, and have been able to continue without interruption, except some temporary illness, this two years.

My wife, who had been an invalid six years, is now better than at any time since the beginning of her trouble.

During the last two years I have treated all the ailments in my family and many of my friends, and have had no occasion to consult a physician. In most cases I have found it to act more promptly, and in all, more satisfactorily, than any other treatment I have ever known.

I have used it with success in rheumatism, indigestion, nervousness, Bright's disease, bladder trouble, and other ailments.

In intelligent hands I see no reason why it should not be used with perfect satisfaction in any family. Yours truly,

(REV.) FRANCIS JOYNER.

Support of Sister Fannie S. Knight in China.

At our conference meeting of Eureka church, in Gates county, N. C., July 14th, 1894, Miss Mollie E. Knight was appointed treasurer to receive and remit whatever money may come into her hands for the support of her sister, Miss Fannie S. Knight, missionary in China, whose support heretofore was withdrawn at the late session of the Chowan Association for having united with the Gospel Mission Workers. We do not believe, however, that this withdrawing of her support is the will of all the Baptists in the Chowan Association, say nothing about the great Baptist host throughout the world wherever known.

Our child may have done wrong in ceasing to work under the direction of the Board. If she has, the Lord will forgive her; for she never claimed perfection while living with her parents, neither did she deceive us, but was always faithful; and believing her to be one of God's chosen to bear his message to the Gentiles, we shall do what we can for her, and still commit her into the hands of him who hath said "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." And again, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." Yours in Christ,

W. W. KNIGHT.

P. S.—If any person wishes to give any amount to the support of Miss Fannie S. Knight in China they can do so by remitting to Miss Mollie E. Knight, P. O. Wiggins X Roads, N. C. W. W. K.

A Good Meeting at Hopewell.

This place is in Pitt county, and in a destitute section on the northern boundary of the Atlantic Association. It is a mission station, and the brethren of Antioch church, Pitt county, have been conducting a Sunday-school there for three years.

About three years ago Rev. J. W. Nobles began preaching there and continued about one year. Since then the writer has been preaching there in the afternoon on the second Sunday in each month. The interest among some of the people has been gradually growing all the while.

The work there is a kind of an "arm" of Antioch church, so some months ago some of us felt like we ought to hold a special series of meetings there, and accordingly Bro. J. W. Rose of Cove, N. C., was asked to come to our assistance, and on the second Sunday evening the meeting began.

We held fifteen services, closing yesterday evening, July 15th. The interest began to grow and deepen, and the congregations increased from the very beginning There were fifteen professions of faith in Christ, and I am sure as many more were deeply penitent and asked the prayers of Christians. The writer buried seven happy souls with Christ by baptism yesterday morning,—one other is to be baptized yet; and it is hoped that others, still, will follow.

Bro. Rose preached for us twelve times, and did earnest, faithful work. Everybody liked the man and his preaching. We shall be glad to have him come among us again. He has a way of presenting the gospel so the common people can understand it; and yet he preaches with power.

Hopewell is in a section where Calvinistic and anti-mission ideas have prevailed for a long time, but these are beginning to give way to the simplicity of the gospel. There are some people in that section who think it is a sin to have a Sunday-school, conduct a protracted meeting, or educate a child. Poor souls! The Lord show them better. A large part of the better and more intelligent people of the whole section are on our side now, and the outlook is more hopeful than ever before. Everything considered, it was a gracious meeting. The Lord be praised. Fraternally,

R. D. CARROLL.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A State Temperance Mass-Meeting Called.

A State Temperance mass meeting is hereby called to meet in Greensboro, N. C., on Wednesday, Aug. 15th, 1894. The object of the meeting is to organize a permanent State Temperance Association, having for its object the overthrow of the liquor traffic in the State. All members of local temperance organizations throughout the State, and all persons in sympathy with the cause of Temperance, without regard to political affiliations, are earnestly requested to attend. It is hoped that every section of the State will represented. The meeting is to be strictly non-political.

Signed in behalf of the Greensboro Union Temperance Society.

What a Word Will Do.

Byron reminds us that a word is enough to rouse mankind to mutual slaughter. Yes, there is power in a word—Marathon, for instance, Waterloo, Gettysburg, Appomatox. Great battles these, but what a great battle is going on in many a sick and suffering body. In yours, perhaps. Take courage. You can win. Call to your aid Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It acts powerfully upon the liver, cleanses the system of all blood-taints and impurities; cures all humors from a common blotch or eruption to the worst scrofula, salt-rheum, "fever-sores," scaly or rough skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood. Great eating ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influence. Especially potent in curing tetter, eczema, erysipelas, boils, carbuncles, sore eyes, scrofulous sores and swellings, hip-joint disease, "White swellings" and enlarged glands.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure permanently constipation, biliousness, sick headache and indigestion.

Dr. Washington Gladden, under the suggestive title of "The New Evolution," has written for the August number of McClure's Magazine a comprehensive study of Prof. Drummond's new book, "The Ascent of Man," a book which, while accepting evolution, reconciles it with morality and man's highest development, and so, in Dr. Gladden's judgment, has a significance that cannot be exaggerated.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

Rev. Dr. C. M. Payne, Presbyterian pastor at Concord, has resigned.

Capital stock for a roller flour mill at Raleigh has been subscribed.

Work on very extensive cotton mills at Burlington is progressing well.

The Wake county Society for Prevention of cruelty to animals has been organized.

A "Presbyterian Home," a charitable institution, is to be established at Charlotte.

It is authoritatively stated that the crop prospect in this State was never better at this season of the year.

A cotton gin and fifty bales of cotton were destroyed on the 23d by fire in Pitt county originating from lightning.

Car loads of grapes are being shipped from this State to the North. Prices are good, but the crop is poor.

Rev. F. S. Stickney of the Episcopal church at Charlotte has received and accepted a call to Richmond, Va.

The Seaboard Air Line warehouse at Garysburg was struck by lightning the 22d inst. and burned to the ground; loss $2,000.

At the recent meeting of the State Medical Board at Morehead eight applicants passed the required examination, five failing.

Burglars have been operating at Raleigh. The number of capital offenses that have been committed in Wake county lately is quite unusual.

It is stated that illicit distillers' families in Wilkes county are suffering for want of the necessaries of life. They have used all their corn making liquor.

A "Southern Manufacturer's Club," we learn from the Observer, has been organized at Charlotte, that enterprising and promising centre of manufacturing interests.

Congressman B. H. Bunn of the fourth district has withdrawn from the contest for renomination. This places the nomination easily in Hon. Chas. M. Cooke's hands.

Ransom Brodie shot and killed one Wiggins in Wake county the 25th ult. The affair grew out of a dispute about a hound. The parties are negroes and the murderer is under arrest.

The sale of the Raleigh News Observer-Chronicle to J. N. Holding, Esq., has been confirmed. A new stock company will be organized and many improvements in the paper inaugurated.

Strenuous efforts to have Judge Simonton of the United States Court to remove Gen. Gill from the receivership of the C. F. & Y. V. Railway on the ground of incompetency have recently proven vain.

The Asheville Citizen states that the bronze monument to Professor Elisha Mitchell on Mitchell's Peak has been defaced by thoughtless and low minded persons. We suggest that their names be published.

A residence of unsavory reputation in the suburbs of Reidsville was visited the night of the 22d ult. by ten white capped men. The occupants were taken to the woods, whipped and warned to leave the locality.

The Board of Trustees of Trinity College met Tuesday to elect a President of the College. Up to going to press their choice had not been announced, but it is reported that a prominent South Carolinian will be elected.

The Messenger states that the loss by the burning of the South Union Cotton Mills near Rockingham was $35,000 and in the Parmelee Eggleston Lumber Mills at Jacksonville $25 000. The cotton mill fire was started by lightning.

The North Carolinia Florists' Association met in first annual session at Asheville last week. It decided to make efforts to have the Federal authorities establish a large park among our mountains. It meets again in February, at Newbern.

Rev. John Smith's first mass—on the 22d ult.—Rev. John is a Catholic priest, O. S. B.—was the occasion of "one of the grandest and most impressive services ever held in the Catholic church at Charlotte." This is the first time anything of the kind has been perpetrated on the North Carolina public.

Vanderbilt has lately purchased 6,000 acres additional property in our western mountains at a cost of about $40,000. Work on his unrivalled mansion proceeds at a great rate though it will require years to finish it. Vanderbilt owns more of our State than any other man, being the proprietor of 114,000 acres.

Political parties in the State are unusually interested just at this period. The Democratic is debating whether primaries to decide the eastern Senatorship so far as it is concerned, aspired to by Jarvis and Ransom, should be held. The Republicans and Populists are debating the question of fusion, some for, some against. Most of the nominees so far are new men.

General News.

The one-time $100,000,000 gold reserve now amounts to but $58,050,000.

The Atlantic & Danville Railway initiates a reduction of wages and salaries Aug. 1st. No strike is anticipated,

The United States mints have coined $175,000 in silver lately. This does not increase circulation, but retires so many notes or certificates.

Convict miners are again making trouble in East Tennessee. Two men were killed and several wounded in an effort to put down insubordination last week.

The President has appointed C. D. Wright, Jno. D. Kernan and N. E. Worthington to investigate the recent Chicago labor troubles.

The investigation into the police conduct in New York city has so far resulted in the expulsion of one police captain and his aide. It is certain that a general cleansing will be the final outcome, as no one denies the need.

What will be the outcome of the investigation of the sugar dealings by the Senators cannot be predicted, now that a minority of the investigating committee have made charges. The New York Herald claims that there is conclusive evidence against at least two of the Senators. It cannot be denied that at least a dozen of them are covetous.

The Congressional situation is nothing less than deplorable. The President and the House on one side and the Senate on the other are contending over the tariff. The former are beyond question right. The President's manly letter pleading for good faith and honesty and free raw material and reduction of the tariff has incensed the Senate. The majority of the dominant party in the Senate was just a majority. Hill's defection on account of the income tax weakened that and left all the power of the dominant party in the keeping of each individual man, as absolute unanimity was essential to passing the bill. But the Louisiana Senators, Caffery and Blanchard, said they wouldn't vote for the bill unless sugar was protected; and their votes being necessary, a clause protecting sugar must be added. Now the House declares it will stand by principle, and we hope it will; the majority in the Senate is at the mercy of any two "Democrats" who may care to threaten it. A compromise is the only way out; but from the present attitude of Gorman, Smith, and the gentlemen from Louisiana, it seems that we may have to fight it out all summer. Meanwhile, suspense and the "culminating atrocity"—the McKinley tariff—are wreaking evil all over the land—wreaking evil while we hang upon the mercy of two covetous Senators from Louisiana.

Great Revival at Tally Ho.

Bro. Bailey:—It was my pleasure to attend the gracious meeting at Tally Ho church, Granville county, which closed July 26th. The meeting lasted twelve days, and the number who publicly professed faith in Christ was one hundred and ten. I have attended many revivals, but have never seen anything equal to the scene at Tally Ho, the last five days. At times there were as many as fifty persons kneeling at the anxious seat, or as the country brethren say, the "Mourners Bench," and one day there were more than thirty professions. They were nearly all grown men or women. Very few small children among the converts. The joy and gladness of Christians was good to behold. There were not a few who praised God aloud with hallelujahs as they saw their neighbors and friends brought to Christ. The news of the great meeting spread over the country, and people flocked in great multitudes to see and hear. Many old workers from this and other communities declared that they had never seen such a glorious meeting. It was certainly an unusual privilege and joy to be there. The meeting was conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. E. Smith, who did all the preaching the first seven days and was aided only by local and visiting laymen the last five days. This pastor is a young man, young, too, in the ministry, serving his first church as pastor. His preaching and his management of the meeting showed him to be a man of special gifts in the ministry. He had prepared the church for work and they worked. Not a sinner came into that church that some Christian did not go to him and say "come." I have never seen a church do such splendid work. This meeting was one long to be remembered by all who were permitted to take a part.

J. M. BROUGHTON

An Argument that Proves too Much.

In an editorial exhortation for continued support of the University by taxation, the Charlotte Observer employs this argument: The State exempts from taxation all college property, thus contributing about $2,000 to the support of such colleges as Wake Forest; therefore it has a right to contribute $20,000 to the State University. Let us see how this argument will work in another application. The State exempts from taxation all church property in North Carolina. Would the Observer hold—and it must do so if its first argument is serious—that the State can tax the people for the support of a State church? The cause of the University can not be promoted in the present discussion by such careless attempts at logic. It is never safe to presume upon thoughtlessness or ignorance.

SUMMER STUDENT.

Chapel Hill, N. C.

Meeting at Benson.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I want to say to the readers of the RECORDER that the Lord has graciously blessed us with an outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the Benson church. The whole community seemed to feel his mighty power. A good many a short time ago who were in darkness, are now clothed and in their right mind and enjoying the light, the blessed gospel. Our beloved pastor, Rev. A. N. Campbell, commenced a series of meetings here on 7th inst. On Sunday evening Rev. W. S. Ballard from Scotland Neck came to assist in the meeting; also Revs. W. M. Page, N. H. Gibbs, and Bro. G. A. Bain came on Monday. Brethren Ballard and Page did the preaching while they stayed. They preached the word in its purity and power. Very large congregations attended and the Lord was with us from the beginning. The meeting closed on the 15th with thirteen additions to the church, others will doubtless unite with the church at no distant day. The visiting brethren greatly endeared themselves to us by their faithful work that week. They have a great many friends who want to see them come back to Benson. Our highly esteemed pastor has done a great work at this place in holding up God's banner. He is the man to awake the slothful, arouse the listless and indifferent. He is a zealous worker beloved not only by the Baptists but by Christians of every denomination in our town and community. On the last day of the meeting a large congregation assembled to witness the solemn ordinance of baptism which was administered to Jesus, the great exemplar, in the river of Jordan by John. A great many of those that were baptized were members of our Sunday school. The good seed of the holy truth has been sown by our efficient Superintendent, Bro. E. L. Hall, and his corps of apt teachers. This meeting has been a great soul-winning of of those who opposed Sunday schools, for they can now see and know of a truth that they are and will be the means in raising and upbuilding our next generation. May God help them to be convinced and come over on the Lord's side and put their shoulder against the wheel and let us press onward and upward to the prize that is to be reached beyond the skies. This is the time that the Lord has done great things for we know whereof we are glad.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

L. E. REAVES.

AN EXTRAORDINARY OPPORTUNITY!

$4.80 Worth of Sheet Music,
Best Book on Hypnotism,
75 Complete Stories, neatly bound,
Our Monthly for one year,

Transportation all prepaid.

All for 50c. to every person answering this advertisem't.

And also a Fine Watch Free, as a present, to the persons sending each thirtieth answer received from day to day in reply to this advertisement.

IS THIS POSSIBLE? YES, IT IS TRUE!

We repeat: For 50 cents received from you, we send you the $4.80 WORTH OF SHEET MUSIC, the best BOOK ON HYPNOTISM, also 75 COMPLETE STORIES, neatly bound, and our household monthly for one year; and besides that, we make a present to the sender of each thirtieth answer to this advertisement of a fine watch (ladies' or gents', as desired) of excellent appearance and workmanship; regular price, $5, absolutely free.

THE MUSIC is strictly first class, new, copyrighted, regular 40 cent sheet music, printed in the finest manner on a superior quality of paper, with engraved title. (Publisher's price, 40 cents a sheet.) It does not consist of old or hackneyed pieces, but of perfectly new copyrighted pieces, which will be sent to our subscribers monthly, as published. As the newest pieces will be included, it is impossible to give the titles in advance, but it will comprise the latest and best vocal and instrumental pieces by the leading composers. When you see this music you will be filled with wonder at our being able to furnish it for less than several dollars. If you want to see it before accepting our offer, a sample sheet will be sent for 10 cents.

THE BOOK ON HYPNOTISM is a complete exposition of the wonderful and mysterious sciences of Mesmerism, Hypnotism, Clairvoyance and Mind Reading, and explains the secrets of these peculiar sciences so clearly and forcibly that things which to most people have appeared strange, unreal, mysterious and supernatural, are made as plain as the light of day.

THE 75 COMPLETE STORIES, neatly bound, are a collection of the most excellent and absorbing stories of love, heroism and exciting adventure.

Was so much good value ever offered anywhere for so small a sum? Here you have a supply of fresh and splendid music for a year, and an attractive supply of tip top reading for the same period, all for the small sum of 50 cents, and then you may be one of those who will receive the watches as well. That is an important thing for you to remember. We are anxious to double our subscription list within 60 days, and we have realized that a supreme effort is required, in view of the dullness of the times. If you do not already grasp the magnitude of our offer, please read it again and "take it in." Let us hear from you at once. If you can get up a club of thirty persons to join in answering this advertisement you thereby make sure of the watch, as one of the latter is presented to the sender of each thirtieth answer or subscription. The thirty subscriptions can all be sent in one letter to us. Each subscriber in such a club of course receives each and every one of the premiums mentioned above.

You need not cut out this advertisement. Simply state that you accept our offer and enclose 50 cts. Save this advertisement as it is a contract with you, which we will carry out in every particular.

Reader, we ask you to favor us with your own immediate response. Your particular individual support is worth much to us. Address, HOMES AND HEARTHS PUBLISHING CO., No. 21 Park Row, New York.

A Miracle of To-Day.

A STORY THAT EQUALS THE MIRACLES OF OLD.

A LITTLE GIRL SUFFERS TERRIBLE AGONY FOR YEARS—PHYSICIANS SAID SHE WOULD DIE—CURED AT LAST—HER MOTHER SAYS IT IS A MIRACLE.

(From the Taunton, Mass., Gazette)

The following story needs no comment whatever. It is the town talk in Wrentham, Mass., and the child's mother tells it as follows:—Mrs. Fuller said: "My daughter is now eight years old. When she was four years old she had rheumatic fever, and at once she was stricken helpless; she went from bad to worse until we all despaired of ever seeing her about again. I employed at various times physicians of Foxboro, Franklin and Attleboro, but all to no practical benefit. I gave her all sorts of medicines, and this spring I buried over two bushels of empty bottles which she had emptied from time to time. One doctor who attended her said that she had liver complaint and dropsy, and that she was going to die. I had give up all hope myself when last March I happened to get hold of an Albany, N. Y., paper, and there I read of the wonderful cure of a man up that way by a medicine known as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the patient having been afflicted as my daughter was. At that time her legs were drawn up behind her, and her arms were almost helpless. Her head was drawn on her shoulder and she was a pitiful sight, I tell you.

I sent and got two boxes of Pink Pills, and when she had used them up I thought I could see just a bit of improvement. Then I got two more and she began to lift herself in bed, and to help herself in other ways. She kept on taking the pills, and now she is able to go over to the neighbors, and is bright and smart. She was a living skeleton; there was nothing of her but bones, and they were all out of shape. When she was first taken sick she was out of her head, and for three years, if you will believe me, it was an utter impossibility for me to catch more than five minutes' sleep at a time, so much care was she, and such constant attention did she require, and I was the only one she would let wait upon her. But I am glad I did so, and now I am getting my reward," and the fond, patient, faithful little woman glanced with pride and pleasure to the spot here the little girl was playing with her sister in the shade, just outside the window. "I have spent more than $500 on her, and although I never begrudged it yet I did want to see my child improve faster than she did. To day she eats more at one meal than I do in two. When I commenced to give her the Pink Pills she was afflicted with a skin disease which was very annoying. Now that has all gone, and I think the pills are responsible for that. Before I started on the Pink Pills I wrote to a specialist in Buffalo, and described her symptoms; he said she had blood poisoning, due to bad milk, and wanted me to bring her there for treatment, although he said that he didn't believe she would ever get over it. She had been given up by four doctors, who were certain that they could not cure her. Why, she couldn't open her mouth, and I actually had to force the food into it. Her mouth was all sores, and, oh dear, what a looking child she was, and such a care! Nobody but myself knows what a trial we both have been through, for she was too young to realize it. If my statement will do anybody any good I shall be glad to have it published and if those who read it will only come to me, if they are skeptical, I can convince them in very little time that I know what I am talking about. People around here say it was a miracle, and I believe it was."

The neighbors bore witness to the condition of the child previous to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and were enthusiastic in their praise of the splendid work which had been accomplished by them in this case.

Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female, and all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box or 6 boxes for $2 50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., or Brockville, Ontario.

EDWARDS—SEYMORE—On July 10th, 1894, in Franklin county, N. C., by Rev. W. R. Gwaltney, Rev. W. H. Edwards and Miss Minnie S. Seymore.

PARRISH—BARNES—On July 18th, in Rocky Mount, by Rev. J. K. Howell, Mr. J. D. Parrish of Johnston and Miss Mattie C. Barnes of Wilson.

DIED.

SWINDELL—In Rocky Mount, July 20th, at 1:20 a. m., Miss Attelia Swindell, daughter of D. J. and H. E. Swindell, aged nineteen years. She was a member of Rocky Mount Baptist church, a good worker, and much beloved. Her remains were taken to Goldsboro for burial, and I preached her funeral in the Baptist church there, where she first joined. Many loved ones are left behind waiting to meet her on the other shore.

J. K. HOWELL.

MIDDLETON—At her home in Warsaw, June 21st, Susan Elizabeth Middleton, wife of our brother O. P. Middleton, aged fifty-four years. For several months she had been an invalid from paralysis, and bore her affliction with characteristic sweet submissiveness. From a child she was a devoted disciple of the Saviour, always prompt for religious duty. In the church she moved among the noble women, "helpers in Christ Jesus," the pastor's true friend and supporter. In the family circle she was the fond dutiful wife and mother, such as it was her nature to be. As a neighbor she was open-handed, and beloved by all. She came of a family remarkable for its traits of Christian consecration and beneficence.

Two devoted daughters and two sons mourn her loss. Our dear Bro. Middleton and family have the heartfelt sympathy of church, pastor, community, and many friends.

O. P. MEEKS.

ALDERMAN—On June 19th last a sorrow fell upon this community that touched with poignant keenness every heart. A more brutal, cruel, and unprovoked assassination has never occurred within the confines of Marlboro county, S. C., than that which took place at Manderville depot on Tuesday morning, the 19th, between midnight and sunrise.

Some party or parties, yet unknown, actuated by diabolical motives, allured an inoffensive, peaceable, faithful and honored agent of the C. S. & N. Railway, from his room, and in a most cruel and brutal manner murdered him.

The victim of this plot was a native of North Carolina, born of honored and respected parents, who are now represented in their State by several sons and daughters

Bro. J. P. Alderman, the subject of this notice, was born in Sampson county, N. C., February, 1855. At the age of fifteen he united with the Baptist church, and to the time of his assassination was a worthy and consistent member, beloved and esteemed by all who knew him. After earnest and persistent enquiry I have failed to find one word of censure, but instead, words of praise. He was quiet in his manner, punctual and prompt in business, firm and fearless in his stand against sin and evil in every form.

He was physically frail from his boyhood, but within there beat a noble and good heart, prompting to acts of kindness that were never done to be seen of men. The last six years of his life were spent in working for railroad and telegraph, and no small share of his earnings went to contribute to the comfort of a widowed mother and younger sister and brother.

His was indeed a sad fate, and the more so because of his loneliness and life of unselfishness spent in doing good to others. His remains were taken to his native county for interment.

Rest, brother, from thy unknown foes; God thy father, is watching them, and he has said, "Vengeance is mine, I will repay." May the God of all mercy comfort the sorrowing brothers and sisters. The father and mother now rest with the son in the arms of the Lord Christ.

To the Sunday-school Workers of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Dear brethren and sisters:—I am anxious to get the co operation of each one of you in this great work of missions. The Sunday-school Board has kindly agreed to carry on the work begun last year by the Woman's Missionary Union of holding a "Missionary Day" for the special consideration of missions, and the presentation of it to the children all over our land. All of our schools are requested to have exercises on that day, in which they shall study the Scriptural teachings in reference to missions, and what is being done through the missionaries. They are also requested to engage in earnest prayer and liberal contributions for this great work. While the Sunday-school Board will undertake the work of projecting this subject, and will also prepare whatever literature is needed, yet we can only look for great success as we get the co-operation of Sabbath school superintendents and teachers. These who are our leaders and who are training the young of our land, cannot help but train those entrusted to them to take part in missions, God's great plan for the salvation of the world. The great work that God would have us do in this world is to teach the lost of his love in Christ, and lead them to him. He has given his son for this work, and as we are Christlike, we will give ourselves for its accomplishment. Many of those who have grown old will never realize their duty in reference to the sending out of the gospel; we must begin with the young. Let us train them in their duty, and a generation will rise up to recognize God's call, and the world will hear of Christ as never before. Let the new era which dawns upon this world be not the iron, nor the silver, nor golden age, but the gospel age, when as never before the nations learn of Christ and turn to God. Let us mark this "Missionary Day" a memorable day of consecration to the Lord.

All needed supplies of programs, &c., will be furnished free on application to the Baptist Sunday school Board, Nashville, Tenn.

Yours fraternally,

R. J. WILLINGHAM, Cor. Sec. F. M. B'd.

An "Out-of-Date" Couple.

We are "so out of-date," they say,
Ned and I;
We love in an old fashioned way,
Long since gone by.
He says I am his helpmate true
In everything;
And I—well, I will own to you
He is my king.

We met in no romantic way
'Twixt "glow and gloom;"
He wooed me on a winter day,
And in—a room;
Yet, through life's hours of stress and storm,
When griefs befell,
Love kept our small home corner warm,
And all was well.

Ned thinks no woman like his wife—
But let that pass;
Perhaps we view the dual life
Through roseate glass;
Even if the prospects be not bright,
We hold it true
That heaviest burdens may grow light
When shared by two.

Upon the gilded scroll of fame,
Emblazoned fair,
I cannot hope to read the name
I proudly bear;
But, happy in their even flow,
The years glide by;
We are behind the time, we know—
Ned and I.

—E. Matheson, in Chambers' Journal.

Stupid but Valuable.

Major A. G. Leonard of the British Army has published a book on "The Camel; its use and Management," which is the outcome of sixteen years of experience as a transport officer. The major believes that the camel is, all in all, the most useful transport animal for military purposes, but he does not encourage a high opinion of the creature's sagacity. During the last Afghan War, he tells us, a large number of camels perished at the crossing of the river Lora. This was due to their stupidity, camel after camel seeing its companions ahead of it disappearing in the quicksands of the stream, and yet persisting in pressing forward to the same fate. On the other hand, not a single horse, elephant or mule was lost in crossing the ford, they one and all exercising remarkable caution, and demonstrating that they had a proper realization of the perils of the place. This was particularly illustrated in the case of a certain elephant. Says Major Leonard:

"One elephant, which the officer commanding the 6 11 Battery of the Royal Artillery lent to assist in extricating some camels which were being engulfed in the quicksands, showed an amount of sagacity which was positively marvellous. It was with the utmost difficulty that we could get him to go near enough to attach a drag-rope to one camel I wanted to rescue. In spite of our being about fifty yards from the bank of the river, he evinced the greatest anxiety, while his movements were made with extreme caution. Despite coaxing, persuasive remonstrance, and at last a shower of heavy blows dealt upon his head by the exasperated mahout, this elephant stubbornly refused to go where he was wanted, but, with his trunk shoved out in front of him, kept feeling his way with his ponderous feet, placing them before him slowly, deliberately and methodically, treading all the while with the velvety softness of a cat, and taking only one step at the time. Then suddenly he would break out into a suppressed kind of shriek, and retreat backwards in great haste. When the animal had nearly completed a circuit of the ground with the same caution and deliberation, he advanced to within ten yards of the poor camel, but not another inch would he move, though several men were were walking between him and the camel, without any signs of the ground giving way."

But why, it may be asked, is so stupid an animal as the camel so valuable for transport purposes? Because of its extraordinary power of enduring hunger and thirst, and its ability to carry heavy burdens on long and hurried marches. It will, at a pinch, bear a load of between 300 and 450 pounds thirty miles a day for a week or more, and for that reason is the best par excellence for forced marches, especially when deserts are to be crossed.—Watchman.

A "Smart" Country Boy.

The "smart" city boy has countless wonderful stories to tell to his country cousin when he goes to the farm for a part of the summer. The city may not be a good place for him to stay in the warm weather, but it is a good place to brag about. City Boy got "caught," however, when he had pumped Country Boy full of yarns about marvellous things in the metropolis.

"Well, I know," said Country Boy, with an angelic look on his freckled face, "but my uncle over to Cross Roads beats 'em all. He's got twenty hives of bees, and he's got a name for every bee."

City Boy jeered, but Country Boy stuck to his yard stubbornly until City Boy, seeing a chance to get a big story to tell in the city, was convinced.

"Well," he said, "tell me some of the names. What does he call some of them?"

"Bees," said Country Boy, his face as expressionless as a freckled flour sack, "just bees. He calls 'em all bees."—Ex.

A Snake Killing Bird.

The Australian, also called Jardine's harrier, is a serpent killer of no mean ability and is endowed by nature with legs of considerable length covered with strong yellow scales absolutely impervious to any ophidian tooth. Although it does not prey exclusively on snakes, but also kills and devours frogs, newts and lizards, the harrier is of very great service in its native country, which contains many species of deadly snakes, which it searches for on the wing, hawking at no great distance from the ground over the places they frequent and snatching them up in one of its powerful feet, always taking care to grasp the reptile by the neck, then flying upward to a great height and letting it fall, to be killed on the hard surface of the earth or on a stone, if there should happen to be a large one in the neighborhood.

I must confess, however, to a slight amount of incredulity in respect of the snake killing prowess of this very handsome hawk, for it chiefly frequents marshy ground and is more likely to meet with frogs in such a situation than with serpents, which, as a rule, at least in Australia, frequent the hottiest and driest places they can find. Still as the reptiles, or at least some of them, seek the water when they are changing their skins, at which time their sight is dimmer than usual, it may be that the antipodean marsh harrier does fall in with a snake occasionally in the moist places it chiefly affects and makes short of the deadly reptile.—Pall Mall Magazine.

"Mamma, was that a sugar plum you just gave me?" asked little Mabel. "No, dear, it was one of Dr. Ayer's pills." "Please, may I have another?" "Not now, dear; one of those nice pills is all you need at present, because every dose is effective."

"If I Only Had"

There was a man confined a few years ago in one of our insane asylums, and as he walked up and down his cry was: "If I only had!" That was his cry from morning to night in all his wakeful hours. His story was this: He was employed by a railroad company to take care of a swing bridge, and he got a dispatch from the superintendent that an extra train was going to pass over the road and not to turn the bridge until the train had passed. One after another came and tried to have him open the swing bridge, and he refused to do it. At last a friend came and overpersuaded him, and he opened the bridge. He had no more than got it opened when he heard the train coming. There was not time enough to close it, and he saw the train leap with all its living freight into that abyss of death. His reason reeled and tottered upon its throne, and the man went mad. His cry was: "If I only had! If I only had!" I cannot but believe that there is many a man in the other world whose cry is: "If I only had! If I only had!" Memory is at work. They have taken their memories with them.—Moody.

The Largest Spider.

Ceylon is the home of the largest species of spider that has yet been made the subject of entomological investigation. This web-spinning monster lives in the most mountainous districts of that rugged island, and places his trap—not a gossamer snare of airy lightness, but a huge net of yellow silk from five to ten feet in diameter—across the chasms and fissures of rocks. The supporting guys of this gigantic net, which in all cases is almost strong enough for a ham mock, are from five to twenty feet in length (as conditions and circumstance may require), made of a series of twisted webs, the whole being of the diameter of a lead pencil. As might be expected, this gigantic silken trap is not set for mosquitoes, flies and pestiferous gnats, but for birds, gaudy moths and elegantly painted butterflies, some of the latter having a spread of wing equal to that of a robbin or a blue jay. Some extra fine skeletons of small birds, lizards, snakes, etc., have been found in these webs, with every vestige of flesh picked from them. The owner and maker of these queer silk traps is a spider with a body averaging four and a half inches in width and six inches in length, and with legs nine to twelve inches from body to terminal claw.—The Baltimorean.

General Lee and Stimulants.

From an anecdote and personal article on "General Lee After the War," by Mrs. Margaret J. Preston, in the Century, we quoted the following: "He had the gentlest way possible of giving counsel and administering rebuke. I remember hearing him say, in a presence where such testimony was worth more than a dozen temperance lectures: 'Men need no stimulant; it is something, I am persuaded, that they can do without. When I went into the field, at the beginning of the war, a good lady friend of mine gave me two sealed bottles of very superb French brandy. I carried them with me through the entire campaign and when I met my friend again, after all was over, I gave back to her both her bottles of brandy, with the seals unbroken. It may have been some comfort to me to know that I had them in case of sudden emergency, but the moment never came when I needed to use them.'"

Let us be Consistent.

As long as men can be found who love strong drink, so long will money-loving men engage in its manufacture and sale. It is hard to tell, though, which is the more responsible for the vast amount of intemperance, the appetite for drink, or the desire to supply the demand. The two things are mutually helpful, and no reform movement is complete in its plans that does not contemplate and urge total abstinence from drink as well as suppression of the liquor traffic. The movement cannot well be successful in one direction without earnest and successful work in the other. It is just a little inconsistent for men to favor the suppression of the whiskey business in public and encourage it by buying and drinking liquor in secret. They curse the traffic, but press the poisoned cup to their lips. O for consistency among those who profess to love our Lord!—Nashville Advocate.

Napoleon on Napoleon.

In the Memoirs of Baron de Meneval, private secretary of Napoleon, an anecdote is quoted from the "Memoirs of Stanislas Girardin," in which the latter describes a visit that Napoleon paid to Ermenonville, when he was First Consul. Pausing before the tomb of Jean Jacques Rousseau, the conqueror exclaimed that it would have been better for France had Rousseau never been born.

"And why so, Citizen Consul?" asked Girardin.

"It was he who prepared the French Revolution."

"I should not have thought, Citizen Consul, that you had any reason to complain of the Revolution."

"Well," said Napoleon, "the future will show whether it would not have been better for the peace of the world that neither I nor Rousseau had ever lived."

THE educational funds of the newer States are far more adequate than in those long admitted. Utah with a population of but 225,000 will enter statehood with prospect of more excellent educational facilities than some of the "original thirteen" have now. Its funds will be derived from the sale of public lands appropriated by the government, as has become the custom in initiating a new State. In the bill admitting Utah 9,000 acres of land are given for an agricultural college, two townships and 110,000 for a State University, 100,000 each for asylums for various unfortunates. These lands must be sold for not less than $5 an acre; and until they command that price they are rented. Ten per cent. of the proceeds of the sale of the entire appropriation will be set aside as a permanent public school fund. These provisions will yield the people of Utah rich returns in time to come, and their cost is inappreciable.

WE ARE sorry for a party when its policy may be turned by two men, and when, too, there are two self interested men among its representatives. The majority of the Democratic Senators would gladly vote against the high sugar duties; but they cannot pass any law at all without the votes of two men who have said that they would vote for no bill that didn't protect the sugar industry,—and they are Southern men, too. Thus the entire party must yield to the wishes of two men who have yielded to the power of the sugar trust; thus two men frustrate the principles and threaten the life of a great party. And there's no palliation. If a bill favorable to the sugar trust is passed by a Democratic Congress, surely Democracy has itself to blame, yes, itself, and the Republican Senators who made the threatening attitude of the Louisiana Senators possible.

Better than yield a point to a trust we would have the battle for right fought out all summer, fought until the people can elect Senators who will not yield to a trust. No one is more anxious for tariff legislation of some kind than we, no one appreciates the need of certainty more; but rather than make concessions to a trust we would abide several more months of delay. This is the duty of the House: To stand by the Wilson bill—which itself is none too good—and the people's interests and its own pledge, and crush the trusts at any cost; give us free raw material, free sugar, free coal, free wool, in spite of the trust, the railroads and mine-owners, and all other monopolies and would-be monopolies.

WE would be glad to forget that there is a trust in our State; but we cannot. We do not suffer any ill effects from it, but we dislike to have to know that our State has a law that is disregarded; for that means that our State is not worthy of statehood, that our law possesses no majesty, our officers no power. It means more, too; for is it not beyond question that law unenforced causes sin to abound, destroys the power of other law? How then can we citizens of the State having a law against trusts tolerate trusts? For what do we make laws, if they are not enforced? Can we afford not to uphold any law?

But whose duty is it to preserve and enforce the law? Certainly it is every citizen's duty so far as a citizen may; and we wish to say here that citizens are not doing what they may. They can and should cry out. And, to be sure, we have officers of the law—troops of them, but as they don't seem to have much work to do, and do not wear uniforms, they are with difficulty identified. We called upon the Attorney General and the Governor to see to this trust matter in a recent issue, but we have been authoritatively informed that the former is not a prosecuting officer. We didn't know that; and we dare not imagine that the Governor is much of one, if the Attorney General isn't. But we have been informed by a lawyer, whose reputation for honesty and correctness is the best, that the grand juries and the solicitors can attend to this matter; and that any citizen who has evidence may call their attention to it. The tobacco trust operates in the tobacco-buying towns, and we suppose that any one who deals in leaf tobacco can make complaint. Let the matter be brought before the grand jury. Let it not be said that the American Tobacco Company is more powerful than the State of North Carolina. Let it not be said that the menacing power of the sugar trust in the Federal Senate has a parallel in North Carolina.

WHAT a regeneration there would be, if, in the political conventions to meet this month, no voice were heard save that it be prompted by an honest desire to promote the common weal! But, alas, it has been a long, long time since political organizations worked for anything save their own success, and the organizers for anything save their own individual gratification, public office being the chief inducement. An end to it all must come. Selfish politics will destroy any government; demagoguery will ruin any people, for they are the arch enemy to principles. Something must be done, and in the light of this conviction we suggest that about four-fifths of public offices be abolished, and the work so concentrated in the remaining fifth that none but honest men who are used to work may care to undertake to serve the people.

A YOUNG man who reads the Congressional Record or a trustworthy daily paper of the frequent absences from duty of our representatives at Washington, or even sees upon the streets of any seat of government the loafing rotund satiated office-holders—a young man who is conscious of these things will very probably lose all respect for himself and become an office-seeker, or lose all respect for this government of office-seekers, and conclude that public men are either worthless or lazy,—never worthy exemplars.

To one who works fourteen hours a day it must be exasperating to contemplate the easy lives of those whom one pays to care for one's public affairs while one is engaged with matters of more immediate concern. But we never regard public officers as "humble" or "obedient servants" these days; they would rise up against any man that dared call them servants—if election be not near. And they are not servants, for in no sense do they serve the people or the government. We have been so kind as to give them an abundance of clerks for that, and the office-holders have become to think their full duty is performed if they visit the locality of their offices occasionally. Clerks are paid to run the government—and about three fifths of them are superfluous; and the office-holders are paid for having served their party.

The truth is we have made public office too attractive. No man enters one with any idea of working hard, and any man is qualified to hold office if he can get it. He need not fear work, as ample provision is made for clerks, so that he can direct his attention to serving his party and getting his office another term.

We must get rid of the idea of rewarding party workers and pay men only what their labor is worth, and abolish as many clerkships as possible, thus making the duties of office so arduous that only able and worthy men will aspire to them. We must show our contempt for the hireling scoundrel who asks reward for having espoused principles.

The annual expenses of our government are about $425,000,000. About $100,000,000 of this is paid to men who "served the party" and about $50,000,000 to clerks who are of kin to men who served the party. About $180,000,000 are swallowed up by G. A. R. pensioners and pension sharks. This enormous expense makes the high tariff and internal revenue and income tax necessary. So that it may be seen that political parties and the accursed "spoils system" are the great causes of these great matters of dispute, which each party has plans to settle, and which would not exist if the parties were all dead.

If $100,000,000 will not run our government a year, run it well and leave a working margin, then we had better divide into four parts. But it is sufficient, and the other $325,000,000 are devoted to parties and pensioners and charged to the account of the tariff, etc., which means that the public pays it.

The present salaries paid in many departments of our government are entirely too large for the times. If they were proper twenty-five years ago, they are too large now. Office-holders do not have half so much work to do now as then, for their number has multiplied many fold. And, more than this, $5,000 twenty-five years ago would buy about one-third as much of the necessaries of life as the amount will now; and, if one avers that higher rents must be paid, a certain number of dinners given, a certain number of servants employed, a certain degree of style lived up to, or anything of the kind, the people may reply that none of these things are embraced in the duties of public servants, and if they choose to subject themselves to a fashion that demands them, it is none of the people's business, and they are not financially responsible for them.

The servant is not greater than his master, at least, he was not a long time ago. And he must not be now, if our government is to be saved from the hordes of worthless, covetous men, who serve parties at the expense of the public. We need to make a public office a public trust, and one of arduous duties, with reasonable salary and no more clerks than necessary; we need to remove the attractions of public service, treating it as a business matter, which, indeed, it is, and pay no more for it than would be paid in any other business.

Methods in Church Work.

BY REV. J. M. WHITE.

Bro. Bailey:—You will not object to this humble scribe's endorsing very heartily an editorial in the RECORDER of July 11th touching the matter of societies in the churches. I have felt really sorry for some good brethren who have been so perplexed on this subject, and who have been laboring to prove by the Scriptures each his own view of the question. Allow some thoughts that may be helpful.

"In these last days God has spoken to us by his Son," and the recorded words of the Son are found in the writings of the four evangelists. The Lord loved the world and came to save sinners.

"THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD."

He ordained men "to go and preach," and his plan is to save men by "the foolishness of preaching." He has clearly revealed the duty—the work of his disciples—to evangelize the earth. Beyond this he did not go. I mean to say the work is revealed—the methods are not. Only by inference does it appear that Jesus authorized the formation of churches into organized bodies. This was the work of inspired apostles, and as such there is no disputing concerning these first Christian societies. The apostles were led of the Spirit in this matter, and the same Spirit is promised to us to "guide us into all the truth." I think, therefore, that all questions of methods should be referred to sanctified common sense.

METHODS ARE EXTRA-SCRIPTURAL OR ANTI-SCRIPTURAL.

Those that tend to weaken the claims, the authority of the churches by rivalry, usurpation, or what not, are clearly wrong, for no society is to be compared with the church, which is Christ's body and bride.

But if by organizations of many kinds, in the church or auxiliary to the church, the mission of the church is advanced, without countervailing evil effects, I can see no scriptural objection to them. Societies certainly are lawful. They may or may not be expedient. After all, the test is expediency. Will they really and truly hasten the coming of God's kingdom? This is the crucial test. To this question the Bible will give no answer; for it is a question of methods, and not revealed.

It is a piece of folly to demand a "thus saith" for these various methods.

To illustrate: The duty of rearing "children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," of searching the Scriptures, &c., is plainly revealed. But it must be admitted that there was no organization in the history of the church like our modern Sunday-school.

It is said that Robert Raikes originated the Sunday school. Yet if Raikes could visit the earth to day and witness our Sunday-school organizations or societies, he would hardly be able to trace any resemblance to what he put into operation. The truth is the world has advanced, and better methods are now in vogue. The apostles knew nothing of mission boards, mission societies, apart from the simple church, such as we have. Christian intelligence has seen the necessity for these things, and agreeably to the Master's will, I think, mission boards, Sunday school boards, education boards, and—well, I can't mention all these extra-scriptural methods—are with us. Principles never change—methods are always changing. What was best fifty years ago is not necessarily so now. Indeed, the presumption is in favor of new methods. Let us remember, however, that all changes are not reforms. Nothing in methods is either good or bad because it is old or new. The literal injunction covers the ground: "try all things, hold fast to that which is good." The world is progressing; churches are progressing; Christianity is progressive and aggressive. A failure to realize this truth sixty or seventy years since was the fatal blunder of our anti-mission brethren. Honestly, but foolishly, they wanted an explicit Scripture for mission, tract, and Sunday-school Societies. They will die—I had almost said, have died—without the sight. The great command is to go. The how, in its details, is not given.

I am speaking of methods—not of religion nor Christianity nor the gospel. There is, there can be, no new Christianity, no new gospel. We need none. We want none. "The old, old story," is good enough for all the world for all ages. But the way of preaching this gospel has been, and may still be, improved. It will be changed to meet the necessities of an advancing civilization.

I know not the style of Paul's and Peter's preaching. It was adapted to the world as it was then. Possibly it would not suit our age. Fifty years ago the common sing-song delivery of the preacher was all right with the masses of our people. It is a ludicrous failure now. The uneducated preacher, and nearly all were so, was a giant among his uneducated brethren—and there are large fields to-day where the illiterate preacher wields a great and saving influence. But as the people advance in intelligence there must be a corresponding advance in the preachers. Hence arises the necessity for boards of education.

The work of the churches is readily seen, but the "how" is one of the many things to be asked for. Paul's great inquiry was, "What wilt thou have me to do?" Doubtless he often asked how, but it was in "the closet," and has never been recorded.

I may not have succeeded in conveying my thoughts clearly. Yet possibly these thoughts may suggest something helpful to those engaged in discussing "societies," "mission methods," "woman's work," co-education, &c. Our intelligence, guided by the Holy Spirit, will not lead us wrong, if we are men and women with moral backbone enough to put our ambitions selves under our feet.

Apex, N. C.

Notes by the Way.

BY PROF. A. T. ROBERTSON, D. D.

The RECORDER has only itself to blame for compelling its readers to submit to these notes by the way. For its repeated call was almost like an appeal to talk to the home folks. Are not North Carolina Baptists like a big family scattered over a great State with common interests and working towards a common end? I shall always count myself a citizen of North Carolina in feeling, and as a matter of fact I do live in the State one month a year. That is more than some of our present officials do who represent other States while living in New York. Busy men have to devise many ways for finding rest in midsummer. Some try the dissipation of fashionable resorts. I am fortunate in being able to come back home to the country where one can do just as he pleases, drink buttermilk and store up energy for a new session's work. Would not people who live in cities be heartier and happier if they would spend part of the summer in the country?

I find the people complaining much of hard times and much excited and determined, some one way and some another. It is not at all certain that we preachers will be able to settle the economic and social wrongs of the day. We may at least bring gospel principles to bear upon the perplexing questions, when necessary; and, better still, we may take advantage of the awakened condition of men's minds to win them to Christ. Just now is a great opportunity for a revival wave, so far as men can judge such matters. It is easier to turn the mind, when aroused, from one subject to another, than it is to stir it when in lethargy. Witness the great revivals in Lee's armies. Suppose the Baptist preachers of the State push the cause of Christ with unwonted zeal this summer and fall.

I have been doing some special work in the Gospels this summer, and have been again impressed with a subject worthy of public treatment. It is the mental suggestiveness of the Bible. How comes it that the Bible of all books in the world is the one great feeder for human thought, unless we have here the thoughts of God, which, like seed thoughts, germinate in the mind and heart? How many times you have almost been startled as you come in close touch with a great uplifting thought that opened to you so quietly out of God's word. And this by no forced exegesis. It pays to read the Bible slowly and let it soak in as you read. Other books may entrance you for awhile, may strike you with great force at first, but the Bible stirs you more the more you know it. I wonder if the lack of freshness in preaching that is supposed to exist in some preachers is not partly due to a lack of study of the Bible. The mind is not fructified by God's truth and the people languish. I was much struck with a remark one old lady made to another on hearing Dean Stanley's first sermon. She said, "Well, I do feel empty-like." "So do I," said the other, "the young man didn't give us much to feed on." Is this only true of young preachers? What are you feeding your people on? Are you feeding them at all? Stanley did learn how to feed people. His Life makes charming summer reading.

A new way has been found for winning sceptics in some quarters. It used to be the fashion to answer the objections that sceptics made to the Bible. Bible scholars usually felt that the truthfulness of the Bible was of importance, and that statements there made had at least as much weight as those made by sceptics. The battle has been going on this line for many centuries, and the Bible still stands. But now we are told that those infidels and sceptics are too precious to be treated in so rough a way, that they may be conciliated and won over. The way to accomplish this purpose, we are informed, is to admit most of the objections that the sceptic makes, and to tell him that the Bible is a very good sort of a book after all this is granted, and that it all makes very little difference. If this backdown is to win the sceptic he must have been insincere in the objections he has made to the Bible, or his logical faculty must be at a discount. And if the sceptic could be won in this way, to what would he be won? Would he himself be any better off than he was before? And might not many fearful souls who trusted the Bible fling it overboard? Would not the losses more than counter-balance the possible gains? Is not a surrender to the enemy a defeat in every sense? Of course, if absurd positions about the Bible be taken, that is different. But the one question of the Bible's divine origin and authority is vital.

I cannot help feeling some interest in the conflict Wake Forest and the other denominational colleges are now waging. I shall never forget that I am a son of Wake Forest. Dr. Taylor has pitched the argument on a broad plane. It is hard to see how one can read his calm discussion without feeling that here is a man who loves North Carolina and everything that is for her welfare. It has been a painful surprise to me to read in a long editorial in a recent issue of what is by many regarded as the leading daily of the State, certainly in this part of the State, the statement that this agitation about State aid to the University is aimed at the destruction of the University and at all public education. Many other mistakes of a like nature in the article do not make one very hopeful of a calm and dispassionate discussion of the constitutional basis of the question. Is it not possible for our leading papers to argue a cause ably without being special pleaders? Whatever the issue may be, let Wake Forest men see to it that more Baptist boys than ever go to Wake Forest. If more honest, conscientious teaching is anywhere done than there, I do not know where it is. God bless Wake Forest. Surely Baptists have a right to educate their own boys their own way.

Dr. Whitsitt expects to write an article to the RECORDER about the Seminary soon. God is blessing this institution more and more. No similar school has superior buildings. No similar school has near so many students. It is the only Seminary under the control of Southern Baptists. Every professor must sign the articles of the Seminary which are public property. It is unshaken by all the turmoils of scepticism. It still believes and teaches the old faith. There is a greater work yet for this institution to do. Much of its benefits will come to North Carolina, for her young ministers are becoming eager to prepare themselves in the best way for earth's noblest work. Let every young minister, who is done college, settle it prayerfully whether he ought not to spend a year or more in Bible study at Louisville. Write to Dr. W. H. Whitsitt, if aid is desired for board. No charges or fees of any kind. Write for catalog to Dr. Jno. A. Broadus, Louisville, Ky.

Cool Spring, N. C.

Getting Ready the Ammunition.

Gen. U. S. Grant, in his "Personal Memoirs," says: "After some skirmishing on the 17th and 18th (June, 1864), Gen. Hunter, owing to a want of ammunition to give battle, retired from before the place (Lynchburg, Va.) Unfortunately this want of ammunition left him no choice of route for his return but by way of the Gauley and Kanawha rivers, thence up the Ohio river, returning to Harper's Ferry by way of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. The valley was left open to Early's troops, and Washington was also uncovered."

All these things were, in the opinion of Gen. Grant, caused by "a want of ammunition to give battle."

At the last Baptist State Convention a committee (C. E. Taylor, W. N. Jones, J. W. Carter, W. A. Montgomery and C. Durham) was appointed to memorialize the next Legislature in opposition to the State's present ruinous policy towards the denominational Colleges. The Western North Carolina Methodist Conference had already appointed such a committee, and the chairman wrote Dr. Taylor on the subject while our Convention was in session at Elizabeth City. The committees have been getting ready some ammunition. A small part of what has been prepared has been given to the public. Dr. Taylor did his work so well that no man has been found to reply. Men have been urged to do it. The Governorship two years hence has been named as a reward to the man who would successfully answer him. But no one has yet been found to undertake it. I have been greatly pressed with the Convention's regular work, but have taken time, mainly at home at night, to write some bits of information for the brethren who did not have access to the sources of information open to me. These articles will run through some weeks yet, and I hope they may be helpful to some.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 8, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

THE Charlotte Observer should have known better than to say last Sunday that "there is a constitutional requirement that the State shall provide for the support of institutions where higher education may be had." And if there were such a requirement we would like to know how that "would lift the question out of the realm of controversy."

IT MAY strengthen both church and pastor to give the latter a vacation in this season. A change is often helpful. The pastor may use his time holding meetings at other places, or in storing up thought and energy for another year's work. But one should not leave his flock without a leader. Preaching and pastoral work should go on as usual. Well timed vacations may make vigorous, active pastors, and long pastorates.

MUCH to our regret we are unable to give a report of the Central Association in this issue on account of a misunderstanding with our representative. The meeting was far more largely attended than usual, and the speeches, especially those relevant to education, well received. We publish the resolutions of the Association regarding education in another column; a full report will appear next week.

ABOUT this time each year we have been in the habit of sending "reminders" to our delinquent subscribers. It is a very expensive system, and we are trying to avoid it this year. We can do so if those whose subscriptions have expired will take this as a reminder, turn to the label on the first page, and immediately send us a part or all of what they owe or renew for another year. If this is not done, the "reminders" are inevitable. Let us hear from you.

EVEN Rome, the Rome of "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion," that turned the political tide in this country fifteen years ago, has declared against rum selling. The "apostolic delegate," Satolli, has sustained a decree removing liquor sellers, not from Roman Catholic churches, but from offices in Catholic societies, churches, etc. Thus Rome claims to frown upon liquor selling; and even though it is weak and qualified, it is encouraging as a step, for Rome is the great religious (?) refuge of liquor-sellers in our country.

Surely, surely, if corrupt and mercenary Rome cannot afford to unqualifiedly uphold liquor-sellers, the Christian manhood of North Carolina should not tolerate them in any degree. If Rome would prohibit liquor-sellers from her offices, a Christian citizen should not deliberately permit himself to be represented by men who will sanction liquor-selling.

If Christian voters in North Carolina will vote only for men who will faithfully represent Christian voters—and one who does less falls short of duty—there will be a speedy end to liquor-selling in North Carolina.

HOW GRIEVOUSLY faithful is a guilty self-accusing conscience! Only a few weeks ago we had a letter from a good brother who thought that we had "hit at" him, when he had not been in our mind in any connexion of that kind in years. Last week we read in the Western Recorder that three good brethren had written to that journal in reply to certain criticisms upon them when they had not been thought of. One would think that preachers enjoyed immunity here, but it seems not. One who is not ashamed of one's convictions and actions will not fear hints, for such a one has no reason to expect "slaps" or to be "hinted at." How much better it is to stand boldly and openly for conviction so that no one may misapprehend you, and that you need not have to be on a nervous watch for covert "hits" or "hints."

We feel constrained to add that publications have no right to make covert attempts upon one. To be sure, one may avoid using a name when it is clear who is meant, but otherwise such a policy is unjust, and may be vain. Certainly no one need regard anything that is vaguely stated; and one whose conscience is clear will not. All the world would be happier if the human race were more frank, that is, if each one uncovered as many secrets as one could, if each one would try to be as one is and cease "this idle seeming," if that expression may be used to designate vexatious hypocrisy.

ATTEND your Association and be ready to counsel and be counselled. God's work needs your prayers, your interest and your study.

STATE AID'S UNDERHAND METHODS.

So shrewdly insidious is State aid's resistance to the open and unimpeachable opposition to it that but few realize that a desperate defense is being made. But it is very apparent to those in a position to observe that the time is at hand when every friend of popular and Christian education should be aroused.

A recent personal letter—trustworthy—informs us of the "fixing" a legislative ticket in several counties. This is the method of the State-aiders—most to be guarded against. They would seem composed, yea, indifferent, or, as in one well-known instance, quite above the present discussion; but underneath the cloak of serenity and high mindedness the wire-puller—destroyer of popular rights—is at work. The effort is to capture party primaries wherever possible, and then the county conventions. This makes the matter a matter of the moment. It will be decided before the legislators are elected, if determined action is not taken NOW. What to do is plain: Be sure you vote for no delegate who doesn't represent your views. Put to rout the despicable political sneaks.

Reports also reach us that men employed by the State—Dr. McIver and Prof. Joyner,—to do well-defined work, are taking opportunity to plead for State-aid in their capacity as organizers of teachers' institutes! As they come from an institution, the policy of which has been defiant of the law of the State from the beginning, we are not surprised to hear that they are still taking advantage of the law; as they probably fear, baselessly indeed, that making a living would be more difficult if the State didn't pay their salaries, we do not blame them, for they are scarcely more than human, even though they do pervert the law with impunity. But if this work is illegitimate and high handed it is open; and therein is it more creditable and less potent than any that is going on.

In the State press resistance is being made with all the art of consummate politicians. The source of the Charlotte Observer's erratic editorial is known; and it is not the work of that paper's editor; it is not the work of any other honest man. But this editorial is going the rounds with a movement that betrays its motive power—money—and the source of that power as well. Notice that in crediting it to the Charlotte Observer the reader is entirely misled as to its real source. But this is not all. Last week a table of statistics was promulged. It is already on the money-greased rounds. Whence it came is hidden in the sign "X;" but "X" is as well known as if his name and address and photograph accompanied and in consequence nullified the effect of his article.

Thus is State-aid doing battle. Is it worthy of men who mould human minds? Is it high-toned? Is it clean? No; it is barely worthy of the lower class of politicians who have to use the press anonymously because their names impeach the integrity of whatever may be associated with them. This is the kind of resistance we must meet: Wire-pullers, law-perverters, and anonymous falsifiers, who have to buy newspaper space to diffuse their misrepresentations and appeals to prejudice.

Let this be borne in every mind: If an honest man has an honest statement to make he will make it over his own name, and not hide in editorial columns and vague symbols.

As to the article that is just beginning its rounds of the State press, daily and weekly, little need be said, so far as intelligent people are concerned. It appeals for State aid to higher education on the ground that the tax that goes to higher education is very small to an individual, and would not do a great amount of good if given to the public schools; and that inasmuch as some States give a great deal to higher education North Carolina should give more!

As was said by Bro. R. T. Vann not long ago, the smallness of a tax never makes it righteous or easy to bear. Justice is not measured by amounts or weights. We do not know the man who would submit to taxation of one-tenth of a cent for an established church. Admit once that the State has the right to deprive you unjustly of one cent, and to-morrow you will have to admit the same of one dollar. The writer of this article actually becomes so sanguine that he says we are not taxed as highly as we should be for higher education.

Moreover, the question by no means hinges only upon whether or not the money now going to higher education will redeem the public schools from their present degradation. Has any one so quickly forgotten the argument of Dr. Taylor, the many evidences set forth, that the present policy of the State will destroy denominational colleges? While we should rally to the free schools, let us not forget for a moment that every tenth of a cent we pay to higher education is retarding Christian education, while the amount now going to higher education would greatly help the free schools it is destroying voluntarily supported institutions of higher education.

Let the watchword be: For Christian and Popular Education.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

CHAPEL HILL.

I do not know any place that offers to a man who is tired of work and a hot July sun, and wants a drink of real pure water, so cold that it needs no ice, and who feels the need of replenishing his lungs with plenty of fresh and invigorating air from nature's own fans, and who appreciates the privilege of being a while with kind and congenial friends,—I say, I do not know where such blessings can be found in more liberal quantities and in a more perfect degree than in the beautiful little town whose name heads this writing.

For the past several years I have gone to Chapel Hill in the early part of July, and have always been there on the night of Dr. Carroll's prayer-meeting. This, however, was not altogether accidental; for I always feel that it is a great privilege to hear Dr. Carroll even in a prayer meeting service: the truth is, he possesses no moulds for fractional currency; his talks are sermons, and his sermons are always complete. Some of the Professors were away: these I did not see, and others who were there were engaged in special work, and thus escaped an interview. Dr. Whitehead was spending sometime in the mountains for rest: this I was glad to hear; it is a pity that a man of his worth should insist upon wearing himself out so fast.

Bro. Patterson's hotel was well filled with teachers attending the Normal. Brother McCauley was brim full of business, but always has time to talk as long as you will stay. Dr. Robeson—while people are distressingly healthy—will be reinforced by the harvesting of a good crop of corn and other things from his farm. Renewing his subscription, he remarked: "It is strange anybody should want the RECORDER for less than two dollars." The last thing is, to collect a subscription from Capt. Smith. Collecting is generally the other way when a conductor is "in it"; but this time I got the best of him, thanks to Sister Smith.

I make my way to

and will spend the day with Bro Thomas. You see I am handling large stock on this trip. I wish more of our preachers would do as Bro. Thomas does—write sometimes for the RECORDER. The more the preachers, or laymen, or sisters, either, for that matter, tell us, the better will be the paper we send them. I like to talk with Bro. Thomas. I never feel sorry for him in the least. He is always in the best of humor, and has his next sermon down fine on a nice piece of pasteboard.

The new Associaton, with Greensboro as a center, will be formed, and such churches as desire to do so, will join this new body. It may start with only a few churches now; but the course is a wise one and will be a success. There is always more or less opposition to a move like this. Many opposed the forming of the West Chowan out of the old body, but it has only required a few years to show the wisdom of this course. Greensboro is to grow much larger than it is now: there is no reason why it should not very soon be a city of ten or twelve thousand people. No inconsiderable number of these people will move in from the country, and hence may be seen the importance of this work which is now being pushed by the brethren in Greensboro as well as at other points. Richmond, Va., Raleigh, N. C., and many other cities are strongly Baptist, just because the surrounding country was first occupied by our people. I understand that the congregations at the Baptist church in Greensboro continue to grow larger, and even in this hot weather extra chairs are required to seat the people at the Sunday night services.

Brethren Brooks, Darden, Vernon, Keeling, Rowe and others are looking for a revival in business, and these brethren are certain to let the interest of the cause share in their prosperity if indeed it shall come. Some one told me that Bro. Thomas had reduced his salary in order that the brethren might pull over the present business pressure over the country. Many men—preachers and those not preachers—have had to do the same thing, and they have done it like true men, thus becoming partners in suffering with their brethren as well as sharers in their prosperity. This is, however, in marked contrast with what I hear happened at the close of the Normal and Industrial School, which was recently celebrated in this same town—when the Trustees added two thousand dollars to the salaries of the teachers of this Institution. I suppose we would look in vain for another instance of this sort, where salaries have been larger.

The salaries of the teachers at Wake Forest were affected by about the same amount, but these were cut down. I notice in some catalogues that charges in other institutions have been reduced owing to the pressure of hard times. How could it be different in this School, especially when such a large proportion are poor girls and unable to pay high charges. There is but one way to account for it, and this is no exception to the general rule: When men get their heads in the public "feed trough," as a rule, they go in up to their eyes, and then back their ears and kick, if anybody asks to look in upon the proceedings. This is, however, a digression, and is a matter that will be settled once for all when fully understood in the time to come.

CHARLOTTE.

I have not had a better day anywhere than I spent with Dr. Pritchard in Charlotte. It was really the first time I have ever made a real canvass of the town, and now Dr. Pritchard says we are not half through. We "done" the city in good style as far as we went, and got a goodly number of new subscribers. Most of the brethren and all the sisters were ready to listen to the pastor when he urged the necessity of reading their church paper. So the work was more like a day "off" than real work. Then we had such nice horses to drive—regular "high steppers"—"star gazers," furnished by the brethren "free gratis and for nothing." The streets in Charlotte are well nigh perfect, and are fixed for all time. Mecklenburg county has for years led the State in the matter of good roads, and so we would naturally expect to find just such streets in its capital city.

The new Sunday school room is now complete, and the interest in the school was never so great as now. The brethren may count on a good time at the Convention—plenty of room and the best facilities for conducting the business of the meeting.

Bro. Pritchard says he never enjoyed his work more than he does in Charlotte, and the brethren speak of his preaching in the very highest praise. It is a real pleasure to see a man of Bro. Pritchard's age wake up and take a new lease on life, and do better work and more effective preaching than ever before in all his history. Too many of our brethren imagine they are old, when really they have just reached the most useful period of life.

I stepped into the office of the Charlotte Observer for a few minutes. It seemed as if I had made a mistake and gotten into the office of the First National Bank:—floor nicely carpeted, elegant office furniture, library, safe—in fact, everything that goes to the fitting up of a first class office. This had a fine effect on me. Newspaper man as I am, I almost felt like subscribing for an extra copy of the Observer. The history of this paper will be a valuable reference in the years to come. In the midst of a panic, the subscription price was raised from $7.00 to $8 00 and the list has increased every day from that time. After all, it is a good paper, and not one for a low price, the people want.

I only had time to look in upon Bro. Pruitt in his nice new home, and will visit him and his people later.

I was glad to see Bro. W. C. Dowd succeeding well with his paper. He expects to be a candidate for a seat in the next State Senate. If successful, we will give him a royal welcome. J. C. C.

....At Bro. Stringfield's meeting with Bro. Pittman at Ashpole recently there were between twenty five and thirty professions and about one hundred seeking the Lord. Bro. Stringfield says it was the most interesting meeting he ever attended.

....Dr. J. W. Carter has been granted a vacation by the First church, Raleigh, which he will spend visiting his mother and other relatives and friends in West Virginia. He purposes to return to his flock and resume labor the first Sunday in September.

....The Raleigh subscribers to city missions, whose cards were in the hands of Bro. T. D. Watson, will find the cards hereafter at the Sunday-school Supply Store, where they will please call and pay the amounts subscribed as they become due.

....Rev. Wm. J. Sholar recently completed the second year of his pastorate of Noble Street church, Brooklyn. In that time eighty-seven persons have been added to the church, and there are many other evidences of God's blessings. Bro. Sholar is a Wake Forest man.

....Rev. F. H. Martin, the Lumberton pastor, is resting for a month at Gilliamsville, Va. He writes that he took part in a good meeting at Antioch church near Lumberton in July, at the close of which thirteen converts were baptized. The church was greatly revived.

....We were very glad to have Bro. C. H. Cocke, the business manager of Hollins Institute, in to see us last week. Bro. Cocke is on a trip through the South in the interest of the admirable institution over which his father, that venerable Baptist layman Dr. C. L. Cocke, presides.

....Orders for "How far Should a State Undertake to Educate" continue to increase. A recent mail brought eleven order from the State of Arkansas. Orders have been received from nearly every State; and the pamphlet has been sent into every county. The leaven is working.

....Rev. J. T. Riddick informed the Silver Dollar (Virgilina) last week that a Baptist church would probably be organized at Wolf Rock, Person county, where he recently held a meeting. He also reported that Pastor H. T. Williams had just closed a successful meeting at Mill Creek.

....By the opening of the Asylum for the deaf and dumb at Morganton, brethren Goodwin, Haynes, Betts and Matthews, formerly of Raleigh Baptist churches, will be added to the Morganton church. We heartily commend them to Bro. Patton and the brethren and sisters of Morganton.

....The Home Mission Monthly for August (educational number) contains a sketch of the Missionary Training Department of Shaw University of Raleigh by Mrs. M. A. Ehlers, and a history of the institution by President Meserve. We hope the needs of which they write may be supplied.

....The Examiner contains an interesting account of Rev. E. M. Poteat's service as supply in the Mount Morris pulpit, New York City. Bro. Poteat will supply for Rev. A. C. Dixon, Brooklyn, the latter part of this month. Bro. Dixon is at present conducting a Bible Assembly at Keuka, N. Y.

....The recent Orphanage picnic near Mocksville was, as it has been every year since it was started, a great success. Bro. Mills and a chapter of orphans were there and well entertained those present. In addition, speeches by such orators as Profs. Carlyle and Sikes must have made the occasion very interesting. Bro. Mills and some of the orphans visited several localities in Forsyth county after the picnic.

....."Broad Street church is happy. Rev. Jno. A. Wray of Knoxville, Tenn., has accepted a call to its pastorate and will assume charge about August 15th," writes Bro. Wm. J. Martin of Winston. Bro. Wray is a graduate of Wake Forest College and has pursued studies at Harvard University and our Louisville Seminary. We congratulate the church on its prompt action and extend a hearty welcome to Bro. Wray, who, indeed, is more of a North Carolinian than otherwise anyway.

....We regret to learn of the sad death of the venerable father of Rev. M. M. Landrum of Marion at the former's home in Georgia. Bro. Landrum was in his ninty-seventh year and had been a Baptist sixty-four years, throughout which he lived a most exemplary life. Our brother has our warmest sympathy in this affliction.

....Our excellent contemporary, The Landmark, Statesville, N. C., entered its twenty first year last week, and began it well, nearly four columns of its first page being devoted to matter of religious nature, and the rest of the number chock full of news well chosen and condensed. May the Landmark long maintain its present excellence.

....We rejoice with many other friends of his to learn that Rev. S. M. Brown of Kansas City is to visit this, his native State. He is expected at Hamptonville near Statesville this week. Bro. Brown has not been in the State in many years, and in the meantime has become one of the ablest preachers in the Central States. His articles on Young People's Societies in the RECORDER last spring will be recalled by many.

....The meetings at Pittsboro and Rock Springs (old Haw River church) were closed by the rains of Saturday and Sunday. Baptism was to have been administered at both churches on Sunday, but the continuous fall of rain all of Sunday morning prevented. Three had been received at Pittsboro for baptism. Dr. Cobb, the pastor, was assisted in this meeting by Revs. Dixon and Macomson.

....Rev. D. W. Thomason of Belmont baptized nine persons at Independence Hill recently, resulting from a meeting in which brethren Austin and Pruett of Charlotte took parts. Bro. Thomason writes: "Bro. C. J. Black, who has lately been licensed to preach, did good work conducting prayer meetings and otherwise helping. He is a promising young man, and will enter Wake Forest next session."

....It seems that we will have to give up our own Henry W. Battle to Virginia after all. Here's the way he ends a letter in the Religious Herald of last week: "Back to Petersburg (from Georgia)—not the largest, not the most aggressive city in the world, but to me the dearest—home! Hail to Virginia—greatest of States! 'The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places; yea, I have a goodly heritage.'" Well, we are glad Bro. Battle likes it.

....Rev. G. S. Daugherty writes from Waterloo, S. C., 3d inst.: "I have just returned from Union church, where I have been preaching for Bro. H. T. Smith. The Lord was with us. The last night that I was there forty came forward for prayer, and about twenty knelt in the congregation. Great good is sure to come from such meetings. I had to leave on account of other meetings. Bro. Smith will continue for a few days. Dr. Durham is doing a good work in toning up those institutions of learning in your State."

....The Wake Forest Student for July, completing Volume XIII., is before us. A political article, "Politics and Whiskey," by Robert Lide; a reminiscent sketch, "Old Times at Wake Forest," by Saunders M. Ingram; an article relating to education, "Odds and Ends from Johns Hopkins," by J. R. Hunter; a graduate's address, "Wooing Sirens," by R. F. Beasley; a life sketch in dialect, "Uncle Anthony," by J. H. Gore; an essay, "Literature, Its Evils and Rewards," by C. E. Taylor, Jr., with editorial work well up to the usual standard, and the new feature, an index of the volume just completed, make this number very desirable.

Report on Education.

UNANIMOUSLY ADOPTED AT THE CENTRAL ASSOCIATION IN SESSION, AUG. 1, 1894.

One great obstacle stands in the way of future progress in Christian education in our State. The policy of the State in reference to higher education when carried out fully to its logical end means the crushing out of existence of the private and denominational schools. In view of this fact we urge all God-fearing men in all our churches to consider well the position of the State and their own duty in this matter: as a means to this end, we recommend the wide-spread and careful reading of the article, "How Far Should a State Undertake to Educate?" written by Dr. C. E. Taylor, President of Wake Forest College, as being a wise, just, masterly and exhaustive discussion of the whole subject.

While not desiring nor intending in any way to dictate what the State should do, we do not hesitate to express the opinion that the course pursued by the State both in its failure to provide for four months' public schools in each year as provided by the constitution, and by large appropriations for higher education has been hurtful in the extreme, and if persisted in will become more and more injurious to the cause of Christian education, and we suggest to the committee appointed by the Baptist State Convention to memorialize the Legislature on this subject, the advisability of procuring such constitutional amendments as will settle the whole matter in controversy, and best promote the cause of general and Christian education; therefore we recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved, That in our opinion the next Legislature ought to obey fully the constitutional requirement to provide at least a four months public school in every school district in every county in the State.

Resolved, further, That in our opinion the taxes of the people should not be used for higher education in unfair competition with our denominational schools.

Deacon B. F. Mitchell.

One of the best men I've ever known "fell on sleep," Thursday evening, June 28, 1894.

Best, is a strong word, yet it is advisedly used, for whether in the business world, the social circle, the domestic sphere or the church life, the brother to whose memory these lines are dedicated, was pre eminent in true manliness and unswerving integrity, so that eulogistic terms approaching flattery for others are but simple descriptives when applied to Benjamin Frankling Mitchell. A long life was his, extending beyond the exceptional four score years, and throughout it was a strong, a beautiful, an exemplary life for that it was a simple, straightforward life dedicated to fellowman and to God. Now that earth can claim him no more and his kindly presence cheers no longer the people among whom he dwelt, beloved by all, we cherish his memory as a benediction and find strength and encouragement in recalling his virtues and the lessons he has taught us.

Brother Mitchell was born at North Leeds, Maine, December 24, 1812, and in the sturdiness of his character, the firmness of his conviction, there was a something akin to the rugged strongness of the hills—the majestic freedom of the mighty forests—of his native land—yet there was in him, too, the quick geniality, the ready response of tender sympathy, the warmness of eye and hand and heart, which made him as one reared beneath the Southern sky, and to "the manor born" in the city to which he came in 1836, and of which he was an honored citizen till his death.

Soon after his removal to Wilmington, he married Miss Sarah Swann, and on the 20th day of March 1842, they both became members of the First Baptist church, being baptized in the likeness of His death and resurrection. So marked was the earnestness and piety of Bro. Mitchell, and so great the esteem and confidence of his brethren toward him that in November of that year,—'42—he was chosen and ordained a deacon, in which capacity he faithfully served the church for nearly fifty two years, during all which period and for every portion of it, he "used the office of a deacon well," and has purchased to himself "a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus." Not in name only did he serve; could the widows, the orphans, the unfortunate, the wayward reclaimed, speak out in declaration of his charity and sympathy and helpfulness they would say, as will the Master, "Well done, good and faithful servant." Seldom do we find a man so keenly sensitive to distress in others, and so ready and so wise in giving assistance. As a business man and citizen Bro. Mitchell was equally true, faithful and energetic, as in religious affairs, and when prosperous, for he did succeed in a marked degree—he was unspoiled—still simple, honest, steadfast; and when adversity came and circumstances of which he was a victim reduced him in worldly possessions, there was no taint of dishonor, no suspicion of any thought of evil ever touched his name, and conscious of his integrity he bore his cross, still sweet in disposition, earnest in well doing, steadfast in faith in God and love for man. Filling every place of responsibility in his church and occupying several positions of trust in the community—he discharged every duty, as though daily accounting to the King, and lived and died "in Christ."

To the four sons and three daughters who mourn the loss of a true father, there is left the rich legacy of a name on which sets no shadow, an example that points steadily onward and upward, a memory more precious that jewels, more revered than crowns and sceptres. I knew him intimately only during the last months of his life, when disease had preyed upon him and somewhat dimmed his lustre, and the weight of years was heavy upon him, and yet, I am thankful that God led me within the circle of this good man's influence for he taught me the way of the Master as I knew it not before. Looking into his kind face and listening to his words of wisdom, I felt that if the age-worn ship is thus glorious, ah! how precious were the days of strength and activity, and how blessed were the pastors who could fully lean on Deacon Mitchell.

I have "marked the perfect man, and beheld the upright;" and "the end of that man is peace."

A Meeting at LaGrange.

Dear Recorder:—On the fourth Sunday in July the writer began a series of meetings in the Baptist church at LaGrange, which continued until the night of the fifth Sunday. Everything considered, it was a good meeting. It rained so much during the first part of the meeting that people were kept from church.

On Monday after the meeting began, Bro. Stough of Kinston came and preached ten sermons for us. Everybody liked him very much, and were very sorry when he had to leave.

The congregations increased from the beginning to the close of the meeting, and there was considerable interest manifested by several who did not profess religion. Four young ladies joined the church and were baptized last Sunday night. If the meeting could have continued, I think there would have been other additions.

There are about a thousand inhabitants in LaGrange, and yet there are six white churches there. The result is, not many people go to any one church. We have in our church some of the salt of the earth.

When the writer began to preach there eighteen months ago, the congregation was very small, but I am told by some who go to all the churches in the place that our congregations are as large as they are at any of the other churches. The Baptist and Presbyterian churches are open on the same day, and the result is both churches have small congregations, as there are not many church-going people in LaGrange compared with the number that ought to go to church.

We are hopeful that there is a brighter day before us, and we are patiently waiting for it to dawn. Fraternally,

R. D. CARROLL.

Letter from Wake Forest.

I do not think that I have ever seen the campus so beautiful during vacation as it has been this summer. The frequent rains have kept the grass fresh and green, and every year there is perceptible growth in the numerous young trees, deciduous and evergreen.

There is something lacking, however. The absence of the many scores of young men who, before commencement, gave animation to the scene is rather depressing. The quietude and lonesomeness could easily breed melancholy thoughts in a sensitive soul. The restfulness of it all is delightful, but I confess that I enjoy much more the activity when the students are here and the fires are burning under the boiler and the bands are on the wheels and every department of college work is running smoothly, like a well lubricated machine.

And this will soon be. Just one month from to morrow (Wednesday, Sept. 5th), the College will begin its one hundred-and-twentieth term. Students, old and new, will re enliven the deserted buildings and grounds with their presence and enter with zeal and enthusiasm upon their work.

Indications now seem to be good. The loyalty of alumni has been aroused. The interest of many friends of the College has been awakened or freshly stimulated. Applications for catalogs have been unusually numerous and many letters of enquiry have reached me. No man can venture, in these days, to forecast with much accuracy what the number of students will be, but I feel hopeful. And if every Baptist who believes in Christian education will do his duty during these coming weeks, our hopes will not be disappointed.

By recent action of the Trustees, I am authorized to distribute the remaining copies of the "General Catalog." Hitherto they have been sold at fifty cents each. Any one who will send me six cents for postage will now receive a copy without further charge.

The committee on water works and sanitary arrangements are pressing on their work with great energy. The rest of my colleagues are widely scattered,—most of them at work for the College.

I have seen in several secular papers articles in which my position in regard to current educational questions is sadly misrepresented. And mutilated fragments have been reproduced in such a way as to present my argument in such an absurd light as to amuse me greatly. But surely no one who wishes to make just judgments will form an opinion from second-hand statements when he can so easily, by sending a postal card to Dr. Durham, read for himself the articles as they were written and published.

Since writing the above, I have received a good long letter from Prof. Carlyle. His friends—and their name is legion—will rejoice to hear that his health is quite confirmed and that he weighs more than ever before. CHAS. E. TAYLOR.

WHAT OUR CHURCHES DID FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS IN JULY.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I am conscious that all the gifts of our churches do not go through the hands of the Treasurer of our State Convention. I find from the acknowledgments made in the RECORDER that the churches sent to the Treasurer during the month of July, $238 27. This is a larger amount than was sent during the month of June. Let the churches see to it that the sum is largely increased during August.

Let every one purpose in his heart to give as the Lord has prospered him.

A GREAT TRIP NOT THE END IN VIEW.

Please let me say from the great crowds attending the meetings of the B. Y. P. U. Convention, I did not get the idea that "a great trip" to "Niagara Falls, Toronto and New York" was the end in view.

The attendance upon the devotional meetings and the hearty participation in them impressed me that the "crowd of young people" were thinking of something besides a "big trip."

The prayer meetings at 6:30 a. m. with an attendance of 1,500 were of a high order spiritually. It was not all ostentation.

R. VAN DEVENTER.

Ordination.

The Baptist church at Whiteville Grove, N. C., invited brethren J. A. Beam of Bethel Hill, N. C., A. W. Barfoot of Hertford, N. C., and Josiah Elliott to meet June 23d, 1894, to examine Bro. J. Y. Riddick with a view of ordaining him to the full work of the ministry. In the absence of Bro. Barfoot the presbytery was organized by electing J. A. Beam as chairman and one of the deacons present, J. A. Chappel, secretary. After a thorough examination relative to his conversion, call to the ministry, views of doctrine, which was satisfactory, it was decided to have the ordination at 11 a. m. Bro. J. A. Beam preached the sermon and presented the Scriptures. Bro. Josiah Elliott delivered the charge, and Bro. Beam offered the prayer. Bro. Riddick expects to continue at school. He is a young man of piety and promise.

New Subscription Offer—50 Cents.

You can put the RECORDER into your churches from now till after the Convention for fifty cents for each new subscriber. We expect many new subscribers on this offer. The quicker you act, the better. There are a great many Baptists who should have the RECORDER. Send the subscriber now and pay later, if you wish.

Annual Missionary Day—Sept. 30th, 1894.

The following correspondence will need only a few words from me:

"NASHVILLE, TENN., July 25, 1894.

REV. C. DURHAM, Raleigh, N. C.

Dear Brother:—As you probably know, the Home and Foreign Boards' officers have requested the Sunday-school Board to prepare a program for a "Missionary Day" in the Sunday-schools this fall. This we have done, and have fixed on the last Sunday in September as the day. All the proceeds from the collections of that day are to go to Home and Foreign Missions as the givers may designate; but we are anxious to have all the money sent up through the Sunday-school Board, so that we can find out what is really done by the schools, and so also that we may direct the attention of the schools more and more to our Board. I enclose you herewith a copy of the program, and beg that you will examine it carefully, and then, that as Vice-President of our Board for your State, you will write a letter to your State paper, calling attention to it and urging its observance upon the Sunday-schools. Help us to get the children enlisted in this great work. By so doing you will greatly oblige, yours very truly,

T. P. BELL."

I submitted the program to Brother and Sister W. H. Dodd, with a request for their judgment after examination. I know of no higher or more reliable authority in such matters. They have had charge of the infant class of the Sunday school of the First Baptist church in this city for more than thirty years. Here is their opinion:

"RALEIGH, N. C., July 28, 1894.

TO REV. C. DURHAM,
Vice-President S. S. Board.

Dear Sir and Brother:—We have examined the program for the Annual Missionary Day, Sept. 30, 1894, issued under the auspices of the Sunday-school Board, by direction of the Southern Baptist Convention for Home and Foreign Missions. We think it very attractive, well arranged, and can be easily rendered by all the schools. In order to make it more interesting, and to secure the presence of many, if not all, the members of the Sunday school, we suggest that individual parts of the program be assigned to as many of the officers, teachers and scholars as possible.

We would divide No. 8 of the program—'Missionary Farming'—among the teachers, pastor and superintendent.

Nos 6 and 16—'Names of Harvesters in Foreign Lands'—should be read by the secretary.

No. 7—Recitations for three scholars—should be memorized, so that scholars need not read from the program.

No. 8—The answers should be divided among the large and small scholars. Poetry should be read by the pastor.

No. 10.—Recitation: should be divided among five scholars, one verse to each and committed to memory.

No. 12.—Recitation: divided between two scholars and committed to memory.

No. 17.—Divided between two scholars and committed to memory.

No. 19.—Divided as follows: (1) Pastor. (2) Organist. (3) Chorister. (4) Librarian. (5) Secretary. (6) Treasurer. (7) Superintendent.

One or more rehearsals should be had before 'Missionary Day.'

Very respectfully,
MR. AND MRS. W. H. DODD."

Now let every Sunday-school go to work to make this "Annual Missionary Day" a great success. Programs will be sent free. Send to Dr. T. P. Bell, Nashville, Tenn., for all you want. C. DURHAM.

It is a pleasure to us to be able to present the Chautauquan as a supplement to the RECORDER this week. It is well gotten up and is in the interest of a good cause. Bro. Broughton deserves congratulations.

Facts and Figures; or, Side-lights on the Educational Discussion—No. 5.

BY REV. C. DURHAM.

The act of 1866, amended in 1881, which gave free tuition to county students at the University, designed to help worthy and indigent young men, was so perverted and abused as to become a public disgrace. In the Legislature of 1885, before an investigation had been made, there was a proposition to repeal this law, which received only four votes in the Senate and ten in the House. During 1886 the facts were brought out, and the Legislature of 1887, without difficulty and almost unanimously, repealed this statute. See Laws 1887, Chap. 233:

"Sec. 1. That Secs. 2633, 2634, 2635 of the Code be and are hereby repealed.

Sec. 2. That the Board of the Trustees of the University are hereby instructed to reduce tuition at the University to sixty dollars per annum, to be paid in cash, or by good note; and are further instructed to charge and collect from each student at the beginning of each term an amount sufficient to pay room rent, servant-hire, &c., for the term.

Sec. 3. The Board of Trustees are further instructed to adopt such rules for the admission of the ministers' sons, candidates for the ministry, young men afflicted with bodily infirmity, and students preparing themselves for the purpose of teaching, as are adopted by other Colleges throughout the State: Provided, however, That no young man of good moral character shall be denied admission because of his inability to pay cash or give a good note."

Sec. 2 in the above requires certain charges from each and every student at the University in each and every department. This fee is put in the catalog at ten dollars per annum. But you will examine the Bursar's report for it in vain. These charges were not paid.

COLLEGIATE YEAR 1886–'87.

The Bursar reports for the term ending Dec. 31st, 1886, as follows:

173 students in all.
65 paid each in full $42 50.
3 residents of the village paid each in full $37 50.
3 partial course paid $5, $12.75, $21 25.

4 had Moore scholarships.
2 had Cameron scholarships.
14 were preachers' sons and studying for the ministry.
3 paid tuition by teaching.
1 post graduate, free of tuition.
9 law, pay no tuition to University.

[Sixty-eight seem to have lived out of the Treasury during this term.—C. D.]

COLLEGIATE YEAR 1889–'90.

The Bursar reports for the term ending Dec. 31st, 1889, as follows:

187 students in all.

TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNIVERSITY.

I see in the "Proceedings of the fourteenth Annual Meeting of the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association," held in Greensboro, Aug. 9th and 10th, 1893, pages 27, 28, and 29, a most remarkable statement by Dr. George T. Winston about his connection with certain legislation in the General Assembly of 1893.

1. Why did you object to the publication of a stenographic report, submitted to you for correction of your statements before said Association?

2. How many times did Secretary F. W. Hancock of Oxford write you about these matters?

3. Are you willing for Senator Twitty and Secretary Hancock to give to the public their agreement with you about certain legislation, and your representations of it after the adjournment?

Here endeth our third catechism.

Acknowledgments for Coinjock Church.

Dear Recorder:—I am glad to say some of our Baptists are coming to our rescue. Bro. C. J. Woodson has helped me as no other has; two of his churches have contributed as follows:

The July Cosmopolitan marks the close of the first year since the revolutionary announcement was made that the price of that magazine, already low, had been cut to one-half of three dollars a year. All sorts of predictions have come to be unfulfilled during the year—it would be impossible to maintain the rate—the quality would be lowered—the size would be decreased. But even severe critics admit that with each succeeding number there has been a betterment in the quality of articles and illustrations, and the size has remained unchanged, except the always growing advertising pages. The magazine printed, for the six months embraced in Volume xvi, one million four hundred and nineteen thousand copies, an entirely unapproached record, and has doubled its already large plant of presses and binding machinery. The walls of the magazine's new home are rapidly rising at Irvington-on-the-Hudson. Artistically designed by McKim, Mead & White, the new building, with its eight great porticos, will be 279 feet long by 75 feet wide, and one of the most perfectly lighted buildings in the world, having 160 large windows, each nearly double the size the ordinary window opening.

SUPPLEMENT TO "THE BIBLICAL RECORDER."

THE NORTH CAROLINA BAPTIST
Sunday School Chautauquan.

SECOND ANNUAL MEETING
NORTH CAROLINA
BAPTIST SUNDAY SCHOOL CHAUTAUQUA,

Mt. Vernon Springs, Near Ore Hill,

ON C. F. & Y. V. RAILROAD,

TUESDAY, AUGUST 28, TO SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1894.

The Second Annual Meeting of the North Carolina Baptist Sunday School Chautauqua will be held at Mount Vernon Springs, Chatham County, on the Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley Railroad, one mile from Ore Hill, beginning on Tuesday, August 28, at 4 P. M., and continuing till Sunday, September 2, 1894.

Special rates for board have been secured at the Mount Vernon Springs Hotel, as follows: Per day, $1.00; full week, $6.00; and in private residences near by at 75 cents per day, or $5.00 full week. Usual reduced fare has been granted over all the railroads in the State.

The meeting at this place last August was most delightful and profitable to all the Sunday School workers who attended. From the first to the last day it was a spiritual and an instructive feast.

The object of the Chautauqua is to bring together the Baptist Sunday School workers of North Carolina in an annual meeting for mutual interchange of methods of teaching and conducting the school in every department, and for invoking special spiritual preparation in same. It will prove a blessing to any officer or teacher. It will aid and stimulate the school represented. It will warm the heart of any pastor.

Our brethren and sisters of Mount Vernon Springs Baptist Church, and the people of the community generally, will do all in their power for our comfort and for the success of the Chautauqua.

The grove in which Mount Vernon Springs Church is situated is a very large one, and parties desiring to do so can take tents or make shelters and "camp" in the grove during the Chautauqua. Several did this last year, and found it very comfortable. We hope every Baptist Sunday School in the State will send at least one representative.

N. B. BROUGHTON, President.

J. C. BIRDSONG, Secretary, Raleigh, N. C.

WHERE IS MT. VERNON SPRINGS?

Ore Hill is a little village on the Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley Railroad, and Mt. Vernon Springs is one mile from that point. You reach there by way of Greensboro on the one side, or Sanford on the other.

It is a summer resort well known to many people for its delightful shade and mineral springs.

The hotel will accommodate 150 to 200 guests, and a hundred or more can be accommodated in private homes near by.

Ask your railroad agent for a ticket to the Baptist Sunday School Chautauqua from your station to Ore Hill.

WHAT WILL IT COST?

From Raleigh to Mt. Vernon Springs, and return, the railroad fare is $3.20. Board for six days at the hotel $5.50. Total, $8.70. Board in private families $4.50, which would make the total cost $7.70. Other points may be calculated in the same way.

Where can you go and get a week of recreation and pleasure, combined with helpful instruction, for so small an investment? Every Sunday School should have at least one representative, if the school has to pay the expense.

WHAT THEY SAY OF THE CHAUTAUQUA LAST YEAR.

"I was so benefitted by the last one that I don't see how I can afford to miss the next. It proved a great source of inspiration to me for the Sunday School work."—M. A. Allen, Reidsville.

"The Sunday School Chautauqua last year impressed me as a good thing—just what the Sunday Schools of our State need to increase interest in the work, and I know it did great good to this community. The Baptist Church at this place has now a good Sunday School; a thing that has not been here for many years. I am here now holding a meeting. The people are anxious for the Chautauqua to come, anticipating a good time. All are making preparations to attend, and we expect a larger crowd this year than we had last. Let as many come from abroad as can; would be glad to see every Sunday School in the State represented. I expect to be with you from first to last this year. Cannot afford to lose any part of the exercises."—W. H. H. Lawhon, Mt. Vernon Springs.

"While attending the Chautauqua last summer, I felt that a much needed want was being supplied along the line of Sunday School work. It was pleasant and exceedingly instructive, and I was specially impressed with the spirituality of the meeting. I wish that every superintendent and teacher in the State, and others as well, could attend a gathering like the one last year."—E. H. Wrenn, of Mt. Airy.

"I was favorably impressed by several features of the Chautauqua. I was impressed most by the deep spirituality that pervaded the meetings. I felt that this work met with the approval and received the blessings of our Heavenly Father. I was impressed by the enthusiasm, earnestness and thorough preparation of the brethren and sisters. I was impressed by the hearty good feeling which was manifested by all. It seemed to me that everybody, including the proprietor of the Springs and his family, contributed his might to make the occasion pleasant and profitable to all present. When I was ready to leave, I was saying to myself, as I supposed everyone else was, 'I am coming back again.'"—T. S. Sprinkle, Salem.

"As there never was a meeting of the kind held in North Carolina before our last summer convention, of course my feeling of impressions were totally different from those experienced at any other Sunday School gathering. Let me first pay tribute to the deep religious feeling that pervaded the entire session. How we felt the very presence and power of the Spirit at every session. God was with us, and His smile upon us. "He led us all the way." Then the programme was unique, and all who participated did their best—there could be no distinction. Finally, that meeting has been a strength and inspiration to me throughout the year, and I hope to be present again this year."—Walter W. Rowe, Greensboro.

"I have been helped through all the past year by the meeting last summer, and hope to get much good from this one."—Miss Laura C. Boner, Greensboro.

"If I can possibly attend the Chautauqua this year, I shall do so. I believe that good was done at the meeting last year that will tell even in eternity. If I could, I would make every teacher and officer in my Sunday School attend the Chautauqua this year."—J. R. Rodwell, Warrenton.

THE NORTH CAROLINA BAPTIST

Sunday School Chautauquan.

EDITED BY

N. B. BROUGHTON,

RALEIGH, N. C.

Published in the interest of the Chautauqua of August 28 to September 2, 1894.

For any information not found in this paper with regard to the Chautauqua, write to James C. Birdsong, Secretary, Raleigh, N. C.

THE NORTH CAROLINA BAPTIST SUNDAY SCHOOL CHAUTAUQUA.

THE BEGINNING.

The first session of the North Carolina Baptist Sunday School Chautauqua was held August 24th to 30th, 1893, in Mt. Vernon Springs Baptist Church. The meeting was called together by a few brethren who felt the need of an annual gathering of Sunday School workers to consider ways of working, teaching, guiding and management generally, and to pray for a fuller consecration and the aid of the Holy Spirit.

The attendance upon our first meeting was larger than it was really expected to be.

The following were the officers elected:

President, N. B. Broughton, Raleigh; Vice-President, Dr. C. A. Rominger, Reidsville; Secretary and Treasurer, J. C. Birdsong, Raleigh. Executive Committee: President, Vice-President and Secretary ex officio, with Prof. R. P. Johnson, of Mt. Vernon Springs, and E. W. Timberlake, Esq., of Louisburg.

A programme of exercises had been arranged by the brethren who invited the meeting, and it was entered upon on Tuesday and continued through till Sunday with scarcely a single change from its original draft.

Each day the meeting grew in power, and at its close all felt that much good had been secured to ourselves and to the Sunday School work in North Carolina.

It was thought best not to ask free entertainment of the citizens, but to arrange for reduced rates for board. Mt. Vernon Springs Hotel, of which Mr. J. H. Foust is proprietor, offered us accommodations for $1.00 per day, and private residences offered accommodations at 75 cents per day. Most of the delegation stopped at the hotel. Several brought their provisions with them and tented in the large grove surrounding the church.

The expenses of the Chautauqua last year were about $125. Of this amount the citizens of the community raised and paid one-half, and the balance was raised in the Chautauqua.

The Church at Mt. Vernon Springs, and the citizens generally in mass-meeting assembled, expressed themselves as greatly delighted with the Chautauqua, and asked that the meeting for 1894 should be held at the same place. After fully considering the matter it was resolved to accept the invitation, and the Executive Committee was authorized to prepare the programme and make all necessary arrangements for the meeting.

DOES IT PAY?

This question comes to the front whatever we engage in. Now it will cost a few dollars and some time for one to attend the Chautauqua. Does it pay to make such an investment? That depends upon whether we are calculating by dollars and cents or by service rendered. If a teacher prefers efficiency in his work to a few dollars in money, then it pays and pays handsomely. Brother, if you want to be useful in the Sunday School, put out money in exchange for ideas, and you will find that it pays. The few dollars of cost will never be regretted when you go back to school and your class with fresh ideas and brighter hopes and more encouragement than you have before felt.

KINDNESS OF THE "RECORDER."

Through the kindness of Rev. Dr. C. T. Bailey, editor and proprietor of the Biblical Recorder, this sheet is issued as a supplement to his paper for this week. By this means THE CHAUTAUQUAN is sent throughout the length and breadth of North Carolina.

We are sure that our Sunday School people will join us most heartily in returning thanks to Bro. Bailey.

QUESTION BOX.

QUESTION. How many delegates is each Sunday School entitled to in the Chautauqua?

ANSWER. As many as will attend. While the Chautauqua is a Baptist organization it is not connected with any other, either State or national, and is not a body of delegates, but an assembly of workers.

Q. Must those attending bring credentials from some school?

A. No. We have no "red tape" or other obstruction. Look over the programme. If you think such a meeting will help you mentally and spiritually, come and join with us.

Q. Suppose a company of us want to camp out—what about buying provisions in the neighborhood?

A. Bring your tent, frying-pan and "spider," with a few bed quilts or blankets. You can get all the chickens, eggs, hams, butter, flour, meal, etc., in the neighborhood that you want. There is room enough in the grove around the church for two hundred or more camps.

Q. How near are the mineral springs to the place of meeting? Is the water free?

A. The springs are in about two hundred yards of the church, and the water is free to all.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

On Wednesday evening, August 29th, at 8 o'clock, Dr. Broughton has promised to deliver his lecture on "Chow-Chow." The admission will be 25 cents, the proceeds to go toward defraying the expenses of the Chautauqua.

We have never heard the lecture, but a gentleman who has heard it said he considered it worth $5 to him in the enjoyment he got out of it.

Friday is to be "Children's Day," but all the grown folks that can get in "hearing or seeing" will enjoy the exercises. Mrs. Hatcher, of Siler City, will have special charge of the little ones. The singing class of Bear Creek Church will conduct a half-hour service of song at 3 P. M.

"The Crowning of the Year," a Scripture and song service, will be conducted on Thursday afternoon by Prof. Theodore Wood. It is understood that the church will be decorated with the fruits and flowers of the season, and that this part of our programme will not be excelled.

We are pleased to invite all the primary teachers of the State to be present and learn from Bro. W. H. Dodd, who expects to be with us. He is recognized as the leader in Sunday School primary work in North Carolina. On Friday he will give illustrations in teaching the lesson for October 7th.

"Inductive Teaching" is attracting much attention. Bro. Herman H. Horne, who has had experience, will be with us, and give us an example in the inductive method.

SHALL THE SISTERS ATTEND?

As a general thing the sisters are our best Sunday School teachers; that these Chautauqua meetings are most helpful to them, will be seen when we state that one sister told us that the spiritual uplifting she had received in the meetings had opened springs of joy and holy desire in her heart that she had never known before, and that she felt that the whole cost of the Chautauqua meeting would be as nothing in comparison with the help it had been to her.

ITEMS REMEMBERED.

The Chautauqua! Mt. Vernon Springs! Time, August 21st, 1893. Who of those present have forgotten it? Forgotten, did I say? Impossible! As the year, months and days have come and sped away, some lingering thought or inspiration gathered there has been born anew, and as memory lifted the curtain and we glanced back at those halcyon days we felt glad; aye, thrice glad to be there. In the gloomy rainy Sabbaths we have labored in the Master's vineyard since then, have we been cheered by an item remembered? Ah, yes! Some one told of a godly christian teacher and her work in the Sunday School, as she talked to men of their soul's needs, of her prayers in their behalf, of her invitation to her home where, upon bended knees side by side, she poured out her soul to God in prayer for them to be saved; and as I have stood before my class of noble young men I have felt an inspiration, and her example has created a longing desire to imitate her.

An humble home, a sick girl—inside, gloom and poverty; outside, a group of happy children laden with gifts for the sick one—a childish heart cheered by praises borne on the air by youthful voices; an empty larder filled; a picture drawn by a brother, illustrating the children's work in his school—have we forgotten it? And during the cold biting winds have we not remembered by making other homes bright by this example?

Somehow, my superintendent has been more oft remembered in my petitions to a throne of grace, and a sweeter bond of union has existed, as I listened to one who spoke of how he had been helped as superintendent by the knowledge of being prayed for personally by one of his teachers. Helpful? Ah, greatly so!

The music! What an inspiration! Even now methinks some sweet notes linger along the corridor of time, and Heaven seemed nearer than ever before. Looking forward to the Chautauqua of 1894, thrills of pleasure pass through my soul as I anticipate the blended symphony of music that shall lift me on wings of praise to Him the author of all music on earth and in Heaven. So, oft in the past months have visions of new faces seen, of hands clasped, of social gatherings under the grand old trees of Mt. Vernon made bright many saddened hours, and the thought of mingling again in spiritual, congenial work for the Master on this side of the river of life seems but a foretaste of the re-union in the Home beyond, when gathered at the feet of the Great Teacher Himself, we shall sit down in one long grand Chautauqua, as long as eternity, and when "items remembered" here on earth shall be lost in the realization of all that is holy, pure and eternal.

MRS. T. M. TUCKER.

OUR MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

PROF. THEODORE WOOD, OF PEACHLAND, N. C.

This old veteran musician came to our assistance last year, and conducted the song services. His long and broad experience was of much value to us in many ways, but especially in leading the music we were most fortunate in having him with us.

Prof. Wood, with his violin, was assisted by Bro. John W. Cheek, of Raleigh, with cornet, Mrs. M. C. Lane, of Mt. Vernon Springs at the organ, and Miss Kate Burnett, of Wilmington, at the piano. With this orchestra leading, and the great congregation singing, the music was inspiring all the way through.

Prof. Wood has promised to be with us again this year, and it is our hope to have a strong orchestra with him.

PROF. J. H. RUEBUSH,

a graduate of New York Conservatory of Music, and now principal of the music department of Kee Mar College, of Maryland, has also promised to be with us this year and assist in the music.

It is safe to say that our music this year will be a great feature of the Chautauqua.

"THIS ONE THING I DO."

Paul was a preacher, you and I are teachers, and as our work is so like his we also should have oneness of aim. The teacher who can go before his class without careful preparation with an easy conscience ought to ask himself the question, "Am I His, or am I not?"

Christ must be first, or not at all. We must bring the best, or it will not be acceptable. No lame nor maimed were allowed for offerings.

But alas! how many labor diligently and earnestly in the day school and other business affairs of life, and then go before their classes on Sunday morning with an hour's study on Saturday night, or a hurried glance on Sunday morning! Shame on such teachers! Yes, on such christians! Such offerings are an abomination to our God. Such persons may have "This one thing I do" for their motto, but it is dedicated to the wrong god. They are servants to the god of this world; for it is unto him they yield themselves servants to obey.

Our actions should not belie our professions. Our service to God must be paramount. Hence, we need to avail ourselves of every possible help that our service may be a sweet savor unto our God.

The superintendent who loves his school for the Master's sake, and who thinks and plans and prays before he goes to his school, and allows nothing to prevent him, will have the Lord with him, and they two can have a good school. "This one thing I do."

THE SOCIAL FEATURE.

At the session of the Chautauqua of 1893, the hours of each day were largely spent in work of an educational character; and while all felt that these were the profitable hours, yet enough time was given between sessions for social enjoyment, and these were certainly very pleasant hours. The brethren and sisters were as one great family, each vieing with the other in their best efforts to make the others happy. Those off-hour talks in the circle, under those spreading oaks upon the beautiful lawn, will not soon be forgotten, by one member at least. And the return of the time for meeting with that pleasant party will be heartily welcomed.

There are no people who do not need a few days of recreation and rest from work in midsummer. It is from this standpoint that I would urge christian workers to attend the Chautauqua, although this is certainly not the most profitable feature. But for rest and health I know of no place where so much can be had at so small cost as Mt. Vernon Springs during "Chautauqua week." Come, and you will be well repaid for your time and money in the rest and invigoration that you will receive.

IT WAS NEVER SO SEEN IN FORTY-NINE YEARS.

So said an aged brother at the last afternoon meeting of the Chautauqua of '93. The devotional spirit of all the meetings was certainly delightful. On the part of all there seemed to be an earnest desire for a holy zeal according to knowledge.

"The two days which I was able to spend at the Sunday School Chautauqua, were very profitable and delightful to me. The normal work was judicious and helpful. No teacher could fail to receive benefit from the practical suggestions of experienced Sunday School workers. The social features of the meeting were very unusual; best of all was the glow of spiritual earnestness which pervaded all the exercises. The devotional element in the meeting was like that of a genuine revival—as, indeed, the Chautauqua was."—President Chas. E. Taylor.

"The Chautauqua was a success last year. It is a power for great good. No active Sunday School worker should be absent. It did me good as a superintendent."—C. C. Hubbard, M. D., Worthville.

THE VALUE OF SUGGESTION.

We are all creatures of imitation. Many of the best things we say and do are what we have heard and seen others say and do. Some one furnishes us an ideal, and we strive to attain it. The best orators of this day have studied the elements of power in the men whom they have heard, and they have made those elements the ground work of their own oratory. The best writers have studied style and plot and diction from the standard literature of this age, hence their success.

This is what we need in Sunday School work. We need conference with one another. We need to form ideals of teaching. This can best be attained by seeing someone else teach.

A little suggestion has often made a very valuable teacher out of a very inefficient one. Probably there are few of us who could not be greatly helped by seeing someone else doing the same kind of work we are trying to do. It is a well known fact that there are many pious, good people who are teaching in our Sunday Schools, who would be great teachers by a little help, but who, at present, are not far removed from hindrances. Some of the greatest preachers and teachers were not educated men in the popular sense of the term; but they possessed native talent, and by dint of energy and communion with God they overcame the difficulties and accomplished great things.

The Chautauqua is a school of suggestions that many, yea, all of us need. One needs to know how to study the lesson, another how to gather the teaching points, another how to impress them, and another still how to secure attention.

A person can be great and powerful by simply knowing one book. The teacher who goes before her class with the lesson fully indited on her own heart, will not fail to indite others, though she may not know a page of history nor a fundamental law of science.

O, ye teachers of the Word, ye servants of our Lord, would you increase your power? Would you double your rewards? Would you win souls? Then avail yourselves of the best helps, and give to others the suggestions of the valuable things you have learned. We can at least be faithful, and that wins the plaudit, "Well done."

Many a school is greatly crippled by an inefficient superintendent, and he may be the very man for the place; but he needs help—he needs a suggestion that would lift him out of the mud and put him on the up-grade.

Music is very important, but in many schools they need a suggestion on that. If they could hear some inspiring music, they would drawl no longer. Go and see how others do, and then imitate the good and throw the bad away. In a word, we must attend the Chautauqua and help each other.

C. A. ROMINGER.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

At some time during the session Rev. R. VanDeventer, of Henderson, will tell us of his trip to the Baptist Young People's Union at Toronto, Canada, and of that great organization.

A TEACHER'S EXPERIENCE.

I have been trying to teach in Sunday School for twenty years. To me it has not been a pastime, but a most important work. Therefore I have felt it my duty to prepare for the very best I can. For this reason I have generally attended all the Baptist and other Sunday School Conventions and Institutes held in the State. I have never felt that my preparation was sufficient. The work is dear to my heart, and the money and time spent in attending these meetings has been capital well invested. Never have I attended one such meeting that I did not receive help for future work. And I give it as my experience that the Chautauqua of '93 was the most helpful meeting I ever had the privilege to attend. It has helped me in my work all the year. The new ideas and methods I there received have been of such value that I feel I cannot afford to miss the meeting of '94, although this year it runs close on another engagement of a pressing nature. Brethren and sisters of the Sunday School army, we owe it to our classes, our work, our God, to do His work the very best we can. To this end we need the help of God and men. We get both as we commingle with His servants in these annual meetings, where several days are spent in practical talk and work strictly in the Sunday School line. I have not yet met one who attended last session of the Chautauqua that does not think it was the most helpful meeting they ever attended. May the Lord fill us more and more with the desire to honor Him by the best work we can do in His name.

J. M. BROUGHTON.

AN APPEAL TO THE PASTORS.

DEAR BRETHREN:

Knowing the value of our Chautauqua to Sunday School Superintendents and Teachers, we sincerely trust you will do all you can to secure the attendance of as many as possible under your charge. It would be a very becoming act for the school to tender the expenses of the trip to the Superintendent, and no one can manage this so well as yourself.

We need not call your attention to the importance of the Sunday School to your church work. As those conducting it qualify themselves for the best work possible, so you will find your labors more and more successful.

Every duty and department of the Sunday School will receive attention, and an interchange of experiences from those who have had experience must be very helpful.

Come yourself if you can, but certainly do all you can to have a representative from your Sunday School present.

BRO. ROBT. D. CALDWELL, of Lumberton, says: "I attended the Chautauqua last year, and I can safely say that it was one of the most enjoyable and profitable meetings I ever attended. Hope the second meeting will be even a greater success.

Subscribe to and read The Biblical Recorder if you desire to keep abreast with work of the denomination in all its departments.

A FEW DONT'S.

Don't think attendance on Friday and Saturday will be sufficient. Commence with us on Tuesday and remain through to the end.

Don't be governed by the weather. If it is fair and beautiful, come. If it is cloudy and rainy, come.

Don't bother yourself about much baggage—it is not a dress parade, but an intellectual and spiritual feast you are going to.

Don't forget your Bible. You will have much use for the Lamp of Life. Song books will be provided at the Chautauqua.

Don't fail to read the advertisements in this paper. You will find much to interest and profit you.

IF YOU can't attend the Chautauqua yourself, do the next best thing, get some one else to attend and tell you all about it. Notes from the Chautauqua will be interesting for a talk of 20 minutes at close of Sunday School on September 9th.

BRING a pencil tablet with you and take notes Of course you will bring your Bible and Quarterly.

BE NOT DECEIVED,

But see to it that you get a policy on your life in the old Union Central Life Insurance Company, which Company gives you a policy contract that expresses to the fullest possible extent every real advantage to the insured that the law allows any company to express and guarantee. I ask that you read the guarantees of the policy before applying, for the unequalled merits of the policy sells it. ASK FOR OUR CHEAP "20-PAYMENT GUARANTY," which is the very cheapest 20-payment plan given by any old line company, and still it gives the largest paid-up value any company can give, should you want to quit after third year. Should you not ask this paid-up policy, the full face of the original policy will remain in force for years, though you never pay any more. After the fifth year this policy puts the full reserve at your command in cash, and still allows you to keep the policy in force. Cash is the greatest advantage that can be given, and the law does not allow any company to guarantee you more than the reserve in cash. Many companies will not put one cent of cash at your command.

At the end of 20 years either the cash value (as per highest standard) of the policy may be taken as a loan or surrender value, or you have a policy that will never cost you any more.

The law does not permit any company to issue a policy guaranteeing larger amounts, and really this is the first policy issued by any company that does put the largest possible guarantee in the policy.

Read what Dr. Taylor and others say of the Union Central on the fourth page of this paper.

The Union Central has about $12,000,000 assets, and makes for her insured the highest interest rate and lowest death rate of any company.

The Union Central gained 42.60 per cent. in surplus last year, which was a much larger per cent. of gain than any other company made.

Surplus is the true measure of what a company is making for the insured, and is what worked the wonders explained on page 3 of this paper.

Write for cost, giving age.

Men of energy and push are desired for agents in all parts of North Carolina and Virginia, and can certainly make money.

"CHOW-CHOW;"

OR,

"CONGLOMERATIONS IN LIFE."

Rev. Len. G. Broughton, of Calvary Baptist Church, Roanoke, Va., will deliver his very humorous and instructive lecture of "Chow-Chow;" or, "Conglomerations in Life," at Mt. Vernon Springs, N. C., on Wednesday night, August 29, 1894, during the session of the State Sunday School Chautauqua. The proceeds will go to defraying the expenses of the Chautauqua, hence it is hoped that all present, as well as friends in the community, will avail themselves of this opportunity, not only of lending a helping hand to a worthy object, but also of hearing the speaker present in his own practical and inimitable manner the real characters of every-day life.

SEE WHAT IS SAID OF THE LECTURE.

"A large crowd gathered at the Vinton Baptist Church last night to hear Dr. Broughton on 'Chow-Chow;' or, 'Conglomerations in Life.' From beginning to end the people were convulsed with his ridiculous pictures, yet through all these bursting waves of fun, there was much serious thought which could but be of lasting benefit."—Evening World.

"Dr. Broughton's lecture last night at East Roanoke Baptist Church was well received by a full house. It was witty and eloquent."—Daily Record (Roanoke.)

"The writer heard Rev. L. G. Broughton last night. He handled his subject with masterly ingenuity, and drove the nails deep into the understanding and sealed them with eternal truth. He is the Parkhurst of Roanoke City—not afraid to call a dog a dog."—Cor. Charlotte Daily Progress, Charlottesville, Va.

Don't fail to attend. A night of fun and pleasure, when combined with serious thought, will the better prepare you for the more sober reflections of the sessions.

Admission 25 cents.
